We can easily imagine that we hear a sigh of relief rising from almost all civilized lands as 1893 passes into history. We may well be glad that the year is behind us; for it has indeed been a period of most trying circumstances, unusual hardships, and unprecedented severity, not only to the United States, but to all America and Europe. Let us hope that the climax has been reached, and that the future will be more tolerable.

Beginning last winter, signs of financial stringency, accompanied with unusual discontent and agitation among the laboring classes, made their appearance, resulting in the great panic of the summer. Strikes, bloodshed, and crimes of all sorts have been unprecedentedly frequent; storms and disasters have startled us almost weekly; and amid all there has existed an under-current of a discontent more dangerous than the elements. But we are not the most afflicted of the nations. Our neighbors in Brazil have been in the midst of a fierce civil war for five months, and lesser republics have either suffered from unsettled financial conditions or famine and unrest. The Old World has been shaken thoroughly by enormous scandals, menacing international disputes and threatening war. They, too, have not been spared a degree of financial depression, and discontent. But this is not all: we have not been without unusual triumphs. Peace has been made more sure by the manner in which our last international dispute with England was settled; and the nations of the earth have been gathered together in one of our great cities, and made the greatest exhibition of the products of human industry, and constituted and conducted the greatest educational force in the history of the world. The great Fair is in the balance against the weight of hardships that we have endured; and though the index does not point in its favor, we feel that there is great consolation in that so great and so magnificent an undertaking was inaugurated and accomplished in a year so ill fated. There is a lesson from on high through it all: the difficulty is in impressing the lesson on the millions, as it is impressed on a few. We should know by the experience of 1893 how to make 1894 better; and we believe it will be better.

THE year has ended in a very significant peacefulness. It would seem that all the world is taking a breathing spell. We do not believe in new-year resolutions. They have become a reproach to weak and wilful humanity; but we believe there is one resolution, if taken now, if acted on even while its force lasts, the new year will begin its career more brightly for all the world. We are in the beginning of the "long end" of winter, the annual season of suffering among the unfortunate; what we see and hear to-day is only a faint prophecy of the coming weeks. There will be suffering in the land, and the year will be worse than the last for many, if the resolution is not quickly made by the more fortunate to relieve suffering in our cities as soon as possible. This is one resolution that we will be willing to see made now, and suspended for a term, after two months. Our great daily papers are taking subscriptions for the relief of the suffering poor in our greater cities. Clothes, food and fuel must be provided for those who are able to work but honestly out of employment, and those so afflicted that they are unable to earn their daily bread. It is useless to resort to logic in this matter; there is no poverty in our ideal governments, but God has said, "The poor ye have with you always." They are with us to be supported and protected, and they will be always, however advanced our civilization may become. But there are riches in great abundance—far more than commensurate with poverty—and none will deny, God intended them to aid in the relief of the poor. We prophesy new eras, we talk of great futures, and better times, but they will not come for the majority of us until we exercise a more liberal spirit, and a broader charity, in the strongest sense of that extensive term. The Nation, aside from political action, has it within its power to make this a new era of comparative peace and comfort to many, yea, to all its subjects, if it will only take advantage of the opportunity. The key to better times is found in disregard of personal interests, greater liberality, and broader charity; and to these we must resort before the times will be better for many.

DR. CHAS. H. PARKHURST of New York City has for sometime been the subject of wide notoriety, and the object of no small degree of criticism at the hands of the press, both secular and religious. He is only human, and has made mistakes. His ideas and plans of work, his creed and conduct have not been pleasing to many, but he is doing a great work. He is doing, in the name of God, the great Ruler, what the law prescribed for mortal rulers to do. But they have failed, and he is executing their offices. Naturally, having proved that the police of New York City were incompetent or wilfully negligent, he is regarded by them as worse than a criminal. He has to execute the law, in the face of the opposition of law-breakers, law-makers, and executors of the law. But under God's guidance, he has been successful to a marvelous degree. New York's gambling-dens, dives, bar-rooms, beer gardens, and houses of ill-repute have long been a menace to the youth of that city, and numbered thousands among their victims. They are Satan's greatest agencies; and the most dangerous of them were conducted with the passive approval of the law. Dr. Parkhurst went among them, saw their condition, recognized the enormous elements of danger that they held, and organized a "Society for the Prevention of Crime," with the purpose of destroying them, so far as the law allowed. It was unbecoming work for a D. D., some said, still he was the only Christian in the city who could do that work. Dr. Parkhurst has driven many fallen women to the courts, but he is not pitiless, and offers them a chance to reform and become human. He may be seeking notoriety; his methods are indeed unusual; and attract attention; but the charity which he exercises, and the compassion that prompts him to try to save and socially redeem those abandoned beings, is that of a sincere Christian. So long as Dr. Parkhurst's work is as productive of good as at present, he need have no fear of his critics or his enemies.

The Baptists and the Lord's Supper.

BY CALVIN S. BLACKWELL, A. M.

In Christ's great commission are all the facts to be believed, commandments to be obeyed and promises to be received, in order to save man from his past sins, sanctify his soul on earth, and glorify his redeemed spirit in heaven? This great commission is the head and heart of the gospel, and the written constitution of the church. In it is formally expressed the divine authority for the three ordinances of the church, viz: 1. "The Preached Word;" 2 "Baptism;" 3. "The Lord's Supper."

1. In Luke's record of the commission (24: 46, 47) the basic facts to be accepted by all men are stated, "Thus it behooved Christ to suffer and rise from the dead that repentance and remission of sins should be preached among all nations."

2. In Mark's account (16: 15, 16) the primary commands to be obeyed, together with the rewards and punishments, are clearly set forth, "Go ye, therefore, into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." Matthew's statement of the same is, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

3. In Matthew (28: 20) the blessing of God's continual presence is assured to those who "observe" these divinely appointed ordinances; "teaching them to observe all things I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you alway."

So the final analysis of the great commission is that the apostles and the preachers who succeeded them were "ordained" to "preach," to "baptize," and to "observe."

In this united account of the great commission by Matthew, Mark and Luke, the "Ordinance of the Preached Word" appears distinctly in all three. The "ordinance of baptism" appears twice, while the "ordinance of the Lord's Supper" is indicated once only, in the "observing all things."

What is a divine ordinance? "A divine rule made effective by means of material objects through which God reveals and teaches most important spiritual truths."

Now enter a church at the close of the apostolic era with a New Testament in your hand. What do you see and hear?

1. There on the pulpit stands the minister "ordained" to "preach the gospel to every creature," and to "teach all nations." He is "ordained" to "preach the word," by the "foolishness" of which God has "ordained" to save the world. Now if that man and that book, in that church, doing the primary work of saving souls do not constitute an "ordinance,"—the "ordinance of the preached word,"—the first ordinance, too, it will be hard to find an ordinance in the New Testament Church.

2. Behind the pulpit on which the preacher is administering "the ordinance of the preached word," is a pool or grave of water, in which are "buried in the likeness of Christ's death" such as were saved by the "foolishness of preaching," and who had repented of their sins and confessed their Saviour. Such was the place and use of the "ordinance of baptism" in the primitive church.

3. Before the pulpit on which is administered the first "ordinance of the preached word," and behind which is administered "the second ordinance of Christian baptism," stands the table for observing the "ordinance of the Lord's Supper." Those, and those only, who had heard the word of the "first ordinance," and obeyed the commandment of the "second ordinance," participated in this "third ordinance of the Lord's Supper."

Such was the use and manner of "observing" the ordinances, and "all things whatsoever he had command" in the apostolic church, and in every regular Baptist church until this day.

For two and a half centuries the church as a whole was loyal and conscientious in "observing all things" of these ordinances. During this period of her loyalty she gained her grandest triumph over the world, the flesh and the devil. The word of God alone was then the man of her counsel. Where the Bible spoke, she spoke, and where the Bible was silent, she was silent. She felt that the Bible, and the Bible alone, was an all-sufficient rule of faith and practice. She felt that any man-made creed that contained less than the Bible was imperfect; that any man-made creed that contained more than the Bible was presumptuous; that any man-made creed that contained neither more nor less than the Bible was superfluous. In these positions the early uncorrupted church of the three divine ordinances was invulnerable and invincible, because it stood upon the solid rock. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God might be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17).

This position the Baptist church still strives to maintain. But ere long ambitious men began to "teach for doctrines the commandments of men," and thus to pervert and change and destroy "the ordinances of God's house." These perversions and changes resulted in the formation of the many religious denominations of modern times. Each denomination formed a creed and polity of its own, in harmony with the changes and perversions it had made in the ordinances of the New Testament church. All through the centuries the Baptists protested against these perversions and changes, and for their protests were burned at the stake, hunted like wild beasts, driven to find shelter in rocks and caves, legislated against by Senates, outlawed by courts, imprisoned and whipped at the public posts, denounced by ecclesiastical assemblies, and even to this day are ridiculed by every denomination as being bigoted in doctrine and offensively narrow in practice.

The open contention now by other denominations against the Baptists is that the Baptists refuse all participation with others in the Lord's Supper. The contention is admitted. But why the refusal? First of all, because the denominations pervert or change a part or the whole of the ordinances of "preaching the word," or baptizing candidates for church membership, or in "observing the Lord's Supper." Several of the leading denominations utterly ignore that part of the first ordinance of "the preached word" which says, "Go teach all nations baptizing them." They would baptize "every creature," in unconscious infancy, before a single babe could hear the "word of God preached," and "rejoice, believing in God," before baptism, as did the children, (if there were any children) in the jailor's household. (Acts 16: 34)

If the "preaching" of these denominations was accepted by all the adult population of the world during the next six months, never thereafter could there be another penitent sinner baptized; and for the simple reason, all would then have been baptized in infancy.

Thus the fundamental part of Christ's great commission—"the constitution of the church,"—would be made a dead letter. Yet with what an amazing show of injured innocence these persistent perverters of God's "preached word" of the first ordinance come up and say, "You Baptists are so selfish in refusing us participation in the third ordinance—the Lord's Supper!" Our answer is the Lord's answer: "Make your crooked ways straight, and walk in mine ordinances uprightly, and then come to mine altars, I will receive you." "Unless we two agree, touching 'the word of the Lord,' we cannot walk together." We will have to work together in preaching and teaching the same things according to our Lord's commission before we can sit down together at the Lord's table in communion with him.

Second, Baptists refuse to participate at the Lord's table with some other denominations, because those denominations utterly destroy the commemorative character and teaching set forth in the second ordinance of baptism by substituting some other act than immersion for it. In their work of destruction they twist and jugularize with the word of our Lord's command used when he instituted the ordinance in a vain effort to get out of the word its classic and generic meaning "to dip," and to get into it something else. In their destructive work they are pushed to the absurd extreme of changing the very topography of the Holy Land to get away from the rivers, pools, and "much water" in which the penitent believers of the New Testament church were immersed. They silence the universal voice of history which speaks through the first three centuries of the common practice of immersing all candidates into the fellowship of the church. They make ridiculous the solemn act of our Saviour's baptism in the river Jordan by picturing John the Baptist with an oyster shell in his hand sprinkling water on Jesus's head. These denominational changers of divine ordinances grow audacious as they proceed. Not satisfied with the above false positions on baptism they lay iconoclastic hands on the commemorative feature of the ordinance. That the fundamental facts of the gospel are the death, burial and resurrection of Christ all will admit and none will deny, since, (1 Cor. 15: 3, 4) is conclusive on this point. The Holy Spirit was not satisfied to leave the proof evidence as to these fundamental facts solely in the written testimony of twelve apostles corroborated by five hundred brethren (1 Cor. 15: 5-9), but a monument in the form of a symbolic death and burial and resurrection must needs be erected, and so baptism is chosen as that monument; for Paul continues right in the same connection (1 Cor. 15: 29) to offer additional proof of Christ's burial and resurrection by pointing to the commemorative institution of baptism and asks, "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all?" That is, every immersed man in the church of Corinth had borne testimony to the burial and resurrection of Christ by having submitted to the commemorative ordinance of baptism. Else "why are they then baptized for the dead?" if not to testify by baptism that Christ had been buried and had risen again? This is positive proof that Paul used the ordinance of baptism chiefly to keep before the eyes of the world in symbolic form the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. He gives additional proof in Rom. 6: 4-6 of the commemorative teaching of baptism by declaring that every time a penitent believer in Rome was "buried with him by baptism into death and like as Christ was raised up from the dead in the likeness of his resurrection," he bore witness to the facts commemorated. So Rom. 6: 4-8 and 1 Cor. 15: 29 are in perfect harmony, and the one throws light on the other, and both point unmistakably to baptism as the only institution in the New Testament that has on it the great seal of Father, Son and Holy Ghost to keep forever living proof before men by the immersion of believers, that Christ died, was buried, and rose again.

Every time the world sees a minister of one of the denominations sprinkle water on the head of an infant or an adult, evidence is given that even the commemorative sacredness of God's most solemn ordinance cannot restrain the destroying hand of sectarian prejudice and pride of opinion. Such acts of destruction in the present light of learning history and language is nothing short of sacrilege. Therefore, because refusing all light, these denominations continue to wantonly destroy this the most sacred commemorative act in the Bible—the only act in which the apostles attempted to show forth Christ's burial and resurrection, as Baptists we cannot conscientiously commemorate with them our Lord's death and agony in the Lord's Supper. Loyalty to our Master forbids any other attitude.

Third, the Lord's Supper—the third ordinance in the church—was placed there exclusively to commemorate the agony and death of our Saviour. It would seem that the pride of intellect and prejudice of opinion that destroyed the sacred symbolism of baptism would be satisfied to stop; but no. They change this ordinance from a memorial of Christ's suffering and death to a feast of charity and fellowship between men, and then speak most uncharitably of us Baptists because we do not follow them in their unholy perversions. This is the age in which naked truth and stern honesty are sacrificed on the altar of a sentimental and false liberality. Men think they have to lie and be untrue to the Scriptures and to conscience if they would be popular. In harmony with this spirit, many of the denominations desecrate the Lord's Supper by calling it a "communion of saints," and invite all who feel soft and sentimental to sit down together, eat and drink, not "discerning the Lord's body," but seeing only each other's smiles, and then rise up and go out and criticise most harshly the Baptists for declaring that the Lord's Supper was instituted by our Saviour to "show forth his death," and is not, therefore, to be used by his disciples to exhibit their hospitality. "What! have ye not houses to eat and drink in?" "If you want to have a feast to show your hospitality, charity and good fellowship, have it in your own house," is what Paul says, but do not desecrate the Lord's house and the Lord's Supper for such a purpose. The broken loaf and wine on the Lord's table are there solely to help us "keep in remembrance" his agony, and not our amiability.

If a half dozen companies of the United States soldiers were detailed to do guard duty at different places in and about Washington, D. C., and one company, whose duty it was to guard the monument to George Washington, should conclude to put dynamite beneath that granite shaft and blow it up, and then construct of the fragments a big table and seats, and spread on it a feast and invite the other companies to sit down with them in a feast of mutual love and fellowship for George Washington, and thus also to celebrate their mutual loyalty to their common country, think you that the other companies would join the monument destroyers in such a feast? Never. On the contrary, they would say that your feast is a mockery in view of your treasonable acts of destroying and desecrating the chief monument of the father of your country. Our love for Washington and loyalty to our land alike forbid us partaking with you of your perverted feast of loyal and loving fellowship! But suppose, then, the company that had blown up the monument should say of the other companies who had refused to join them in their pretended feast of loyalty: You men are very narrow and selfish and bigoted! This clearly illustrates the relation of the Baptists and the other denominations who have perverted, changed and destroyed every ordinance of the New Testament, and then on the very ruins of those destroyed ordinances, which were monuments to Christ's agony, death, burial and resurrection, spread a feast of pretended loyalty to our Lord and fellowship with his followers, and ask us to join them. Through all the centuries the Baptists have been God's color guards, and have ever stood for his word, pure and simple, as the authoritative rule of faith and practice. They dared to die, then, in defense of his ordinances, and they can well afford now, in these modern days of religious indifference, to be accused of selfishness, narrowness and bigotry by those who have substituted liberality to man for loyalty to God.

These reasons sufficiently satisfy our conscience for practicing what is commonly called "close communion." But there are certain set phrases and stock objections to our practice current in every community which call for brief answers.

1. We are approached by one, not a Baptist, who says: "It is the Lord's Table, and as one of the Lord's people I have a right to partake." At Washington in the treasury of the United States with its [illegible] million dollars in gold in its vaults, a secretary is appointed to [illegible]

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1894

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

AN AIM FOR 1894.

One idea seemed to possess the brethren at the close of the last Convention. We do not know who first promulged it, or how it became so broadly distributed; but we found it the subject for discussion on almost every seat of the returning train. We believe that it started naturally, as we say, and the force of its own worth won its place in the minds of the brethren. The idea is to encourage every Baptist in North Carolina to give something for the Lord's work in 1894, in addition to his or her contribution to pastor's salary, church repair, etc. Truly, it is not a new idea, and, no doubt, to many it appears a small one; still a glance at our average per capita contributions leads us to believe that it is new to some; and that, if its force reaches these, its results will not be insignificant.

Much—too much, we fear—has been said of giving. We have heard pleas for this, that, and the other object, until they have no effect on us, and we can dismiss the promptings of conscience without a reproaching thought. But we are not urging the givers to give more; we seek more givers. We do not need larger branches for the fire, but more branches.

God owns and demands a tithe of our incomes, but we have never heard that he sets a limit to the amount we may give. He has promised to give many times as much as is given, and he has told us in the example of his Son to give all we have, even the world, for his sake. But many prefer to consider a tithe the limit of their benevolence, and disregard the other parts of God's word. We know there are many Baptists who think their duty is done when they have discharged their subscriptions to their pastor and the church—their obligations to God, not free will offerings. This is a selfish view to take: we pay the pastor not for the sake of some one else, but for our own. We should never consider the pastor an object of charity; we should feel obliged to pay him for his work, and not pay him in a spirit of benevolence. We may have to pay far more than our share, but this is not charity to the pastor, but to those who are unable to pay their part. This is a species of State missions at home, and should not be depreciated. But what we want to impress on the minds of our readers is, that paying only our share to the pastor is not benevolence. The pastor deserves his salary. He is devoting his energies to you, as well as his life to God, and is always worth what he is paid, if he preaches God's word, and the fruits of his ministry prove him to have been divinely called. A pastor is worth his salary as a friend and counselor to the troubled, if not as an able expounder of God's word. We believe that something additional to the pastor's salary should always be given by each member of the church to church improvement, relief of the poor, the orphans, missions, education, etc., and to encourage such giving, is the object of these remarks.

But some say they are unable to give more than they subscribe for the pastor's support. This is a common mistake. We may not be able to give much more, but we can surely give something. We believe that a little more can always be given. Even a beggar may save a penny for the Lord. And the family which barely subsists on its income, can spare, with a little foresight and no perceptible sacrifice, a few pennies for God. Those who do not make sacrifices in their benevolence, are unacquainted with the blessings which the widow had when her last mites had gone into God's treasury. Many rich men have made princely contributions for various good ends, but who can say they felt the joy of the giver who has made a sacrifice in his gift! They merely felt relieved of obligations, and, perhaps, of accusations of greed; but they had not the joy of a consciousness that a great obligation to heaven had been discharged. We can find none who do not give now—however poor they be—who cannot give something to the Lord's work besides their pastor's salary; and none who will not be happier, not that they have discharged obligations, but that they have treasures laid up in heaven. We herald the great gifts of millionaires over the land with praise for the giver, but the widow's mites, which none may notice, are a greater treasure on high than all the benevolence of the rich.

The more givers there are in a church, the more spiritual is the church. The more we [illegible] the Lord's keeping, the closer he [illegible] us and the stronger the influence [illegible]. We may consider our [illegible] and it will be found that the [illegible] members interest themselves in the various objects of the denomination is known as the stronger. "Church workers" are now very few in proportion to the total number of members, and the great reason is that many cannot be given church offices requiring church work, and they think their only duty is to pay the pastor. But they have the wrong idea; there are many other offices under God which they can execute—too many to be mentioned in detail, but just enough to employ every Christian in the land.

Pastors should endeavor this year, and all the years, to impress on the minds of their charges that there are other objects and other commissions for their benevolence than in their own churches. There are other churches in this State, in other States, and in other countries, that must be supported by all Baptists; and there are other ministers, at college, and on the fields, that, too, must be supported.

Let this be our aim in the year before us: not to seek greater gifts, but more givers, and more small gifts, so that all of us may feel that each object of the denomination is ours and deserves our personal interest and support. With such a sentiment, retrenchment will be impossible, and progress cannot be prevented.

CHRISTIAN RELIGION THE CONSERVATOR OF EDUCATION.

The action of the recent Methodist Conferences, and the Baptist Convention, in passing resolutions deprecatory to the operation of the present educational policy of the State, was a slight, though significant, eruption from a "ground swelling" of public opinion, that is stirred more deeply in this regard than in the history of the State. And not only in this State are there signs of a desire for change, but in many others, particularly in the South. With the purpose of speaking at length of the causes of this desire, and setting forth our views as to how it may be accomplished, we wish now to make some general observations from history, as a basis of other editorials. In this editorial we shall endeavor to show that religion—eventually the Christian religion—through various denominations has been at once the great motive force, controlling influence, and conservator of educational agencies.

The Old Testament provided family training as the only process of education—a process all-sufficient in a time when moral discipline and practical wisdom, preceptively taught, were the essentials to culture, and when the sciences were unknown, and the necessity for alien communication unrecognized. The children of Israel were prepared for life by precepts from their fathers' lips, and by the examples of their elders. In the Book of Proverbs there are many references to the training (education) of the young, but no mention is made of a teaching class, or educational institutions. In this early period none were necessary, but in later Jewish history the synagogue arose, in which the Hebrew had an educational as well as a devotional centre. Gradually the Rabbi came to hold week-day exercises in the synagogue for the instruction of the young. That these schools were valued very highly is attested by Prof. R. E. Thompson, who says the "Hebrews spoke of the breath of the school children as the life of Israel, and declared that not even to rebuild the temple should the schools be closed,"—an estimate that shames us who are content to appropriate less than $1.50 per capita each year for the training of our children outside the cities, now—as anciently—the life of the nation!

Thus the first organized educational agency was established by the ministers of God in the House of God. Since the Christian era, we shall see, it has had the protection of that same God of Israel, and its great promoter in Christianity, through denominational influences.

But there were other nations who valued education more highly than Israel. In ancient Greece we have the example of two antitheses in methods and aims of instruction. In Athens the effort was to "develop human powers of mind and body to the highest potency"; in Sparta to repress individual desires and propensities by discipline. Each failed to preserve the state or perpetuate the race, lacking that Christian influence which unites the two,—"repressing man's baser nature, and developing that which is higher."

According to the New Testament, home training was the first dependence of early Christianity. In later times the methods and the curriculum of the Hellenic world were incorporated into Christian schools. Under this arrangement what little of education there was to be given was inculcated. But the world, beyond a few scholars, had never known what education meant, or its attainment required. Gradually the Roman church obtained command of the world, politically and socially, as well as religiously. Under it nothing flourished. True, schools, colleges and universities were conducted, but they were not opened to the people. Whatever good influence there was in them was perverted to serve the designs of unholy ambition. But this state of affairs, having held the world in darkness for centuries, came to an end in the sixteenth century. Luther appeared; the Reformation was begun, and the testimony of its history is that the restoration of the truth and the Bible to the schools, and the schools to the people, were the great agencies of its accomplishment.

That Christian education, fostered by denominational enterprise, has been the great instrumentality in the progressive civilization of the centuries since the Reformation is "writ at large" in every chapter of European and American history. Luther's appeal "to the German cities that they set up schools," in which certain fundamental principles of Christianity, as well as general knowledge, might be inculcated, found responses in France. John Knox followed his methods in Scotland. Since that day, with few exceptions, every prominently useful college or university in Europe has been the offspring of Christianity. The fact that of our American institutions, Harvard and Princeton are strictly denominational institutions, and that Yale and many others have never been connected with the State, is sufficient testimony to the work of denominational, and the possibilities of independent, institutions in our land.

Says Prof. Thompson of the University of Pennsylvania: "To the Christian churches of the New World we owe especially that support of the higher institutions of learning, which has kept the Western republic from sinking to the level of the Transvaal, a race of Christian barbarians with no culture above the level of the spelling book." After the difficult part of the work had been accomplished, and the world had seen the advantages of institutions of higher learning conducted by Christian denominations, individuals and commonwealths came into the field as founders of new institutions. That they have been useful is not denied; but that greater and safer work has been done along denominational lines cannot but be evident to the student of history.

THE needs of our Foreign Mission Board are very pressing, and we hope there is not a Baptist in the State who will not respond to the call at the first opportunity. All of us are able to give something, and none of us, as "doers of the word," can afford not to bear our part of the burden of giving the gospel to the heathen. The gospel must be given to every creature, and as Baptists—missionary Baptists—we must do our part now as in the past.

Pastors will do well to respond to Bro. Willingham's request, and take up a collection for Missions as soon as possible. North Carolina, the home of so many consecrated missionaries, should not be behind in this matter.

IT should be understood in the beginning that the Methodist Conference and the Baptist Convention in passing their resolutions in regard to the present system of higher education in North Carolina, have nothing—absolutely nothing—in common with the aim of the Catholics of the North, who seek to destroy the common schools, and have the State appropriations divided among the private and denominational elementary schools.

Neither the Baptists nor the Methodists seek State aid in anything; nor do they ask that any action be taken in regard to the system of lower education. They both request that steps be taken to remove the friction between the institutions of higher education, largely supported by the State, and the denominational and private institutions of higher education.

The question of control or direction of the agencies of elementary institutions does not enter into the issue; and any attempt to provoke prejudice by raising the cry of Catholicism, or church control of education, should not be heeded.

IT is very often the case that a country pastor, who serves four or more churches situated miles apart, necessitating long trips each week, looks abroad to the city, and the pastor of the city church, and envies his lot. He thinks what a blessing it is to serve only one church, and that a wealthy one, and to have a permanent residence. But it is seldom he considers the other side of the question. It is natural for us all to be discontented, and a great cause of this discontent is that we see the evil of our environments, and examine those of others with eyes only for good. The Chinese are the most contented people on earth, though their condition is about the worst. But they know nothing of the out-side world, and hence cannot compare their condition to that of others. But it is not so with us. We see all conditions of life—better and worse—and it happens that many of us always compare the better in the condition of others with the worse in ours. So it is with some country pastors. Let us consider the relative difficulties and advantages in country and city pastorates.

If the country pastor is true to his calling, he is very probably the most esteemed man in his community; he is easily, in the true relation to his flocks, a leader. In the country the spirit of love pervades church members, and though poor, their pastor does not have to deal with abject poverty. They give more freely from their means, and they are not always in search of a new organization to give it to; they stand by the church and the gospel. The country pastor is pastor of a church, and not a lot of organizations. In the country there are no "society" people, on whom the pastor must rely for his salary, and at the same time hold the halter of discipline—a very hard task, and one filled with temptations. Taking all in all the city pastor's lot is not to be envied, though his church building be grand, his pulpit ornamented, and his parsonage handsome. His work is very difficult, and if he is true to his charge he has no time to rest. The country pastor, however poorly paid, is seldom situated so badly as the city pastor; and yet he does more work, and his work is more pleasant to him, and more lasting, because his labors are labors of love. We have often heard occupants of prominent city pulpits say that their best and sweetest work was done in the country, where they were unknown to the out-side world; and we believe it. God bless the simple and humble followers of Jesus in the country, that they may not know, nor care to know the difficulties and the trials that always attend the labors of the pastor of a city flock.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....We were glad to see Rev. W. C. Tyree in our office recently.

....Rev. J. W. Milliard of the Seminary spent the holidays in this State.

....We were glad to see Rev. W. H. H. Lawhon in our office last week.

....Dr. Pritchard makes a strong argument for co-education in this issue.

....The State Mission Board meets in Raleigh on the 13th and 14th instants.

....Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr., will start on another lecturing tour in the near future.

....Rev. A. L. Stough has been called to the pastorate of the church at Kinston for another year.

....We are glad to state that Maj. A. M. Lewis of Raleigh, who has been very sick, is much better.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb has a large supply of Baptist Almanacs on hand. Every Baptist should have a copy.

....Rev. L. R. Pruett, who has served the Mt. Airy church so acceptably for some years, has resigned.

....Rev. G. L. Finch has recently baptized twelve candidates into the fellowship of his church at Biltmore.

....Rev. L. R. Carroll and Rev. S. D. Swaim began a series of meetings at Masonboro church on Sunday last.

....Rev. S. C. Tapp, formerly of Roxboro, N. C., and the University of Chicago, is now situated at Temple, Texas.

....Pastors and laymen will help us greatly this year by sending the news from their churches on its occurence.

....Rev. J. A. Mason, formerly of Conclave, N. C., is now situated at Jefferson, S. C., where he has a good school.

....If any of our subscribers fail to get any issue of the RECORDER, we would be glad if they would inform us of the fact.

....We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to the "china" wedding of Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Barron of Baltimore, Jan. 6th, 1894.

....The fifth anniversary of the American Sabbath Union, was held in the Marble Collegiate church, New York City, Dec. 10th—12th.

....The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools will meet on Tuesday 7:30 p. m. after the third Sunday in January, March and July.

....Rev. D. D. Pernell reports that the work on his field is progressing, and that his ministry among his people is very pleasant.

....Rev. J. F. Green and Miss Ada Reece were married in Reece's church, Booneville, N. C., on Christmas day. They have our heartiest good wishes.

....Miss Katie F. Ferrell has sent us for her Sunday-school class a box of dolls, candy, &c., which will delight many little orphans.—J. H. Mills.

....Rev. C. S. Blackwell's sermon in this issue is one of the strongest on the subject that we have read or heard. It will be published in pamphlet form.

....Our note in our last issue was prophetic. Rev. A. D. Hunter writes that he is coming back to his native county (Wake) and has resigned his pastorate at Carrsville. Bro. Hunter has received a good field near Cary, N. C. We welcome him to his old home.

....Their many friends will be glad to know that Col. J. M. Heck, and daughter, Miss Fannie, are much better. Bro. Heck is now able to sit up and write letters.

....Rev. J. T. Stephens, formerly of this State, has removed from Anthony, Kansas, to Caldwell, Kansas, having recently accepted a call to the pastorate in the latter place.

....Rev. W. L. Grissom has purchased a half interest in the Raleigh Christian Advocate. Dr. D. Atkins will continue as editor, Mr. J. W. Jenkins, assistant editor, retiring.

....A special from Lincolnton to the Charlotte Observer says that Rev. M. P. Matheny has resigned his pastorate at that place. Bro. Matheny's plans have not been announced.

....We were glad to have Bro. R. T. Vann of Scotland Neck in our office a few days before the holidays set in. Bro. Vann, we are glad to know, has completely recovered his health.

....We were pleased to have a visit from Rev. Dr. P. B. Reynolds, President of the University of West Virginia, last week. Dr. Reynolds was a guest of Bro. A. M. Simms while in the city.

....The RECORDER, so far as we know, is the only religious paper, North or South, that shows the amount contributed each week to all objects of the Convention of which it is the organ.

....We are glad to know that Rev. A. A. Newhall is making good progress in his field at Southern Pines. He is situated in a community that will become a Baptist stronghold if vigorous work is continued.

....I greatly need a few copies of a tract sent out last June—"Our Board and its Work"—and will gladly refund postage to any one sending them to me. Please look them up and send them to me.—C. Durham.

....The Broad Street brethren at Winston gave their new pastor Bro. H. C. Moore a royal welcome. Bro. Moore is one of our best young preachers and we predict great usefulness for him in this important pastorate.

....We learn with pleasure that the Wake Forest College law lectures by Bro. N. Y. Gulley, Esq., continue to be very popular with the students. The class is large and enthusiastic, and is making very satisfactory progress.

....Rev. T. G. Wood should be addressed at Belcross instead of Murfreesboro, N. C., as he is now the pastor at the former place. Bro. Wood did noble work at Murfreesboro, and we are sure God will bless him in his new field.

....Messrs. Edwards & Broughton deserve great credit for the excellent "get-up" of the minutes of the late Baptist Convention. The minutes are all they should be, well arranged, clearly and neatly printed, and well bound.

....The various Protestant denominations in the United States, including the Baptists, last year gave for religious objects eighty-five millions of dollars. This is an average of four dollars for each church member.—Western Recorder.

....Bro. H. A. Brown, we are glad to say, is now in better heart than he has been for some time. May the Lord bless and keep Bro. Brown yet many years for his glory and for the extention of his kingdom on the earth.

....The Sunday-schools connected with the three white Baptist churches of Raleigh had appropriate Christmas exercises last week. They were very successful and much enjoyed. The poor were cheered by many substantial gifts.

....Our brother editors of Kentucky should be careful in mailing their flaming red Christmas issues. A brother has called our attention to the fact that they resemble a certain publication whose circulation is prohibited in North Carolina.

....Rev. J. B. Harrell writes from Mount Olive: "I have left Elizabeth City and shall remain here till I enter my new field; where that is I don't know now." We hope Bro. Harrell may not be permitted to go without a good pastorate many days.

....Rev. G. W. Gardner, late of Kissimee, Fla., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the church at Jackson, Ga. Brother Gardner made the change after a short pastorate in Kissimee, because Jackson afforded larger opportunities for work.

....The Western Union of the Eastern Association will meet with Piny Grove church on December 29. Opening sermon by Rev. W. L. Bilbro. Query, Does Modern Evangelism Pay? Sunday, collection for Orphanage.—O. P. Meeks, Clinton, N. C.

....The Seminary Magazine for December attains the dignity and the value of a national periodical. Strong articles by Drs. J. M. Frost, J. B. Thomas, F. M. Ellis, and others, and good departments well conducted make the magazine of interest to all pastors.

....In Henderson county, Western North Carolina, the Baptists have four new churches—Middle Fork and Liberty, finished, and Cove and Refuge, nearly ready for occupancy. We are glad to note these signs of progress, and hope they are to be followed by others.

....We were pained to hear of the sudden death of Bro. James Hunter of Wyatt's, Wake county, on the 26th ult. Bro. Hunter had served many years acceptably as county commissioner, was a good man, and a strong Baptist. We extend our sympathy to the stricken family.

....We are endeavoring to make the RECORDER better with each issue, and we need the co-operation of every Baptist in the State, both in communications and in extending our circulation. We want every one of our subscribers to endeavor to send us a new subscriber during the year.

....Bro. C. A. G. Thomas was summoned by a telegram last week announcing the death of his father at Portsmouth, Va. This was not altogether unexpected by Brother Thomas, as his father has been in feeble health for some time. We extend our tenderest sympathies to Bro. Thomas and the bereaved family.

....Let us begin the new year with a determination to make it better than 1893; better for the poor, for the orphans, for the struggling young ministers, for the heathen, for ourselves, and for the Lord. Let us not look backward; there is no time for delay. The work must be done; we have our part to do, and the sooner the better.

....Two years ago the demand that our papers reduce their subscription price was made. Many papers acceded to it, but now, wiser by experience, they are returning to their former rates. The man who is unwilling to pay $8 00 per year for a good State daily, such as the Charlotte Observer is, or $2.00 for a weekly published independently of a daily, is unjust to his State. Good newspapers do not, and never will, come cheap.

....Rev. A. B. Caudle writes from Waxhaw: "I am arranging plans for the year's work on the border line of North and South Carolina. I have a good field with pleasant people and large possibilities. My churches are Waxhaw, Hermon, and Pleasant Valley; the last named is just over the line, and has just completed a new house of worship. The people of the Hermon church are also building a new house. The brethren are planning for larger work along all the lines."

....We sympathize deeply with the Morganton people in the loss of their church by fire recently. Bro. Patton writes that the organ, lamps, and part of the seats were saved, and that it is expected that a good brick edifice will be erected in place of the old one. At present the town hall is used as the place of worship. Both the Methodists and Presbyterians offered their houses to the Baptist people, with a sympathy that is commendable. We are glad to know that the brethren and sisters are not at all discouraged.

....Rev. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn delivered the dedicatory sermon of the monument of Rev. Drewry Dobbins, long since gone to his reward. Bro. Dobbins was a pastor in the western part of the State, and did service for the Master more enduring than time. He occupied the pastorate of Sandy Run church more than forty years. We are glad that this evidence of appreciation of his work has been given. The monument was erected through the efforts of Rev. Thos. Dixon, Sr.

....We have received No. 1, Volume 1, of the Young People's Leader and are greatly pleased with it. The editorial work by Bro. Van Ness is very appropriate, and shows the the wisdom of the Board's selection. Among the regular contributors are Dr. Lansing Burrows, Rev. C. H. Jones, Dr. W. H. Whitsitt, Rev. E. B. Pollard, and D. H. Allen Tupper. We especially commend Dr. Whitsitt's admirable historical papers. There is no better man to teach our children, and the grown folks as well, Baptist history. The Leader has our best wishes for a broad circulation.

....From the admirable New Year's issue of the Richmond Dispatch, we glean the following interesting information: There are more white Baptists in Richmond than any other denomination of that city. They give more than any other denomination. The same is true of the colored Baptists. Here are the figures: White Baptists, 15 churches, 8,152 members, and contributions, $80,983.30; colored Baptists, 19 churches, 8,878 members, and $30,873 70 contributions. Of 28 churches built in the last decade, 14 were Baptist; of an increase in membership of 8,333, 3,473 joined the white Baptist congregations. These figures convince us that Richmond is the Baptist city of the land, and is becoming more so each year. Bro. Dickinson of the Herald should be proud of this remarkable showing of the Baptists of Virginia's capital city.

Wake Forest Letter.

College exercises were suspended for one week Christmas, and a large number of the students went home to spend the holidays.

The cantata given by the Sunday-school on Tuesday night was a decided success. The programme was in some respect original, having been gathered from several sources and arranged with special reference to our school. With two or three exceptions, the characters, more than fifty in number, were all represented by children. Great credit is due Mrs. P. W. Johnson who arranged and directed the programme, and Prof. Brewer the faithful and efficient superintendent. Miss Hannah Lanneau presided at the piano with her usual skill. A very large audience witnessed the exercises.

Our people showed their appreciation of their pastor on Friday evening the 22d inst. by visiting him in a body and filling his pantry with various articles of use and value; and their gifts were accompanied with the wish that their pastor and his family might have a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous new year.

Maj. J. H. Foote of the class of '53 spent a few days on the "Hill" recently. He expects to arrange for a reunion of his class at our next commencement. Dr. Jno. Mitchell and Chief Justice B. J. Lee of Tennessee graduated in this class. The idea of class reunions is an excellent one and we trust that members of other classes will take the matter in hand and that at our next commencement we shall have the largest gathering of alumni ever seen at the College.

The regular intermediate examinations began on January 1st and will continue two weeks.

The spring term opens January 15, and we hope to have quite an addition to our roll. J. B. C.

Henry Martin Tupper.

ANOTHER GREAT MAN FALLEN.

"Death loves a shining mark, a signal blow,
A blow which, while it executes, alarms,
And startles thousands with a single fall."

In the person of Henry Martin Tupper, D. D., late President of Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C., death has indeed aimed at a shining mark. He has seized and borne away a Christian soldier and hero—has struck a blow which reverberates not only through our own country, but is echoed back from foreign shores.

After a long and painful illness of more than five months, at a little past sunrise November 12th (a beautiful Sabbath morn) he entered upon the rest of the eternal Sabbath.

A large institution is in deep mourning; thousands of colored people grieve over the loss of a true and faithful friend, and numbers of white people in the South who have learned to respect and appreciate his noble character and grand work, truly lament his departure from the field of his labors.

The place and date of his birth were Munson, Mass., April 11th, 1831. Born in humble life of those whose bread is won by daily toil—endowed with an unusual amount of energy and zeal, Henry Martin Tupper in his early years began to desire a liberal education; and with that desire commenced a career of persevering effort and constant self denial. His indomitable will and unceasing industry carried him unaided through Munson Academy, Amherst College and Newton Theological Seminary. Converted while in the academy, in obedience to his Divine Master's last command, he at once engaged in that Christian service which seeks the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, till it shall include as loyal subjects all nations, all races and all classes in the whole wide world—a service from which he never withdrew till he laid down his life, and at the Father's call went up higher.

When in June, 1862, his studies at Newton ended, the civil war was upon us, and a few days later found him enlisted as a Union soldier, in which capacity he served his country till the contest was over.

When discharged in July, 1865, he found awaiting him a commission from the American Baptist Home Mission Society to labor as their missionary among the freedmen South, with the privilege of selecting his own field. That commission had not been sought by him, and he knew nothing of others making any effort in his behalf. But it proved to have been obtained by some of the Newton professors who knew that while a student there his thoughts were turned to Africa as the country in which his life-work might be prosecuted.

Committing the whole matter to the Lord, he soon decided to accept the appointment, and his choice made Raleigh the place in which his earnest efforts should be put forth. The following October saw him and his heroic wife on their way thither—a journey which, in the then disorganized condition of the country, with its broken lines of travel, occupied a week, and was attended with many difficulties and discomforts

Here among a lowly people he began a work which for twenty eight years has been deepening and making stronger its foundations, broadening its base, rearing its commanding superstructure and extending its influence till in reality, at home, and in a far-reaching reputation abroad it has become the Shaw University of to day—an institution that annually numbers over four hundred students in its several schools of, theology, medicine, law and pharmacy, its college, scientific, normal and industrial departments, with its missionary training school.

With all his heart and soul, might and mind, here he has wrought unfalteringly, continually studying for the highest elevation of this people, seeking earnestly the wisest plans and the best methods for developing in them the noblest and truest whole Christian manhood and womanhood. And beyond this he has reached up and pointed to one still higher, that of entire consecration to the Lord's service in Christ-like self denying work for fallen humanity. He has earnestly sought to give the students who have sat as pupils in Shaw University that training which should prepare them thus to follow in the Master's footsteps, which would send them forth equipped to lay hold of their entire race and raise it to the gospel plane. Encountering for years bitter opposition, strong prejudice and forbidding obstacles sufficient to overpower many an average man, he has moved steadily forward, trusting wholly in the Lord, leaning securely upon the Almighty Arm, with the unshaken purpose to perform faithfully every duty as it should be made manifest to him.

Has he succeeded, and to what extent? Questions best answered by a careful review of the radical changes effected in various directions, the transforming power of which was quietly but surely working out from Shaw University. That power and the fame thereof has extended not only through all the Southern States and several of the Northern, bringing back to its source scores and hundreds of students for her several departments, but it has reached on to Africa, South America, the West Indies and Central America, and within the last few years has drawn from these different quarters of the world twenty or more students to her centre, to feel more directly her moulding influence while occupying places in her literary and medical classes. Eleven of these are now in the institution.

Following the many hundreds who have come hither, tarried awhile, and gone away to engage in life's active duties, we find a large number of earnest Christian workers in the home, the teacher's chair, the pulpit, the Sabbath school, the temperance reform, and other organizations engaged in doing good. Several have gone from the medical school, located in various towns and cities in the South, and as Christian physicians are practicing the duties of their profession, a few are Christian lawyers, some are at the head of public schools and higher institutions for their people, and a small number have figured in political life as members of Congress, State Legislatures, Collector of Customs at Wilmington and Minister to Liberia. Four of the students of other years we follow across the ocean, and find two earnest young men in Liberia engaged in the Master's service, one of them having been there about sixteen years, the other twelve; one young lady also has been there in a missionary field three or four years. Another (Lula C. Fleming) went to the Congo six or seven years ago, and after faithful work for four years, failing health compelled her to return for recuperation. She is now studying medicine in Philadelphia with the purpose of going back a medical missionary to practice physical as well as spiritual healing among the benighted on the dark continent.

How Dr. Tupper lived down the early prejudices and neutralized the antagonism that at first was peculiarly strong, has been wonderfully emphasized for the last few years by the respect, esteem and warm friendship cherished and rendered him by many once hostile to him and his work.

The winning to his side as fellow-workers with him of an entire medical faculty of eight from among the best classes of society in the city of Raleigh, speaks volumes. And when this faculty requested the privilege of being the real pall-bearers to carry him to his last resting place, (a duty which was performed by twelve students from six different classes) and as honorary bearers and sincere mourners followed him to the peaceful grave, our hearts were deeply moved. During the four months of the summer and September that he lay such a sufferer at Martha's Vineyard the strong hold which he had with many prominent men in Raleigh and throughout the State was most unmistakably shown by the many tender, touching letters that came to him—letters full of sympathy, kindness, intense interest and earnest prayer for his recovery and return to his chosen work.

And the month that he tarried with us after his coming back to the field he so dearly loved was continually marked by anxious inquiries for his health, offers of assistance in caring for him days and watching nights, and by manifold expressions of heartfelt sympathy. And when death came, none could doubt the loving regard, the sincere mourning that were manifested by unquestionable signs. Beautiful floral tributes of rare and choice bloom came in such profuse showers, these were sufficient to mantle his entire grave again and again. Kind notices in the Raleigh papers and appreciative resolutions followed. And yet more, ere a week had passed, there came a free and voluntary contribution from a prominent white citizen towards erecting a suitable monument over his grave in the grounds of Shaw University,

He was a great man and he has wrought a great work. He was a man with a rare combination of most efficient qualities. Quickness of perception, sound judgment, prominent business and executive abilities met in him. Safe, careful, honest and shrewd as a financier, regarded as a man of strictest integrity, he established for Shaw University an enviable credit, and kept her ever above board where hundreds of others would have quickly swamped her interests. So firm and unswerving in principle that he would never yield one iota of right, yet like the grand old Apostle Paul, where there was no sacrifice of right, no doing of wrong, he was ready to become all things to all men that thereby he might save or gain something of good for God's work for fallen humanity.

Fearless as a Luther, he pressed on in duty's path, and in the strength of the Omnipotent would have swept injustice down before him. Yet, powerful as he was in contest, he fought not men, but wrong,—it was not the individual but the evil he would vanquish.

Revenge found no abiding place with him; he cherished no ill-will. It mattered not how much one might have injured, or how badly treated him, whenever the opportunity came that the offending party stood in need of a favor or a kindness from him, it was as readily granted as if no wrong had ever been meted out to him.

Justice and mercy were in him so evenly balanced that in dealing with disobedient or rebellious scholars he could easily maintain a discipline of high order by stern and unrelenting severity, or a lenience pervaded by forgiveness, as the merits of the case seemed to require.

Such a combination of strong, forceful traits, accompanied by gentleness and courtesy, with a constant spirit of self-sacrifice, a devotion to God's work, and an entire consecration to his service, gave him to the world the man he was—a man among men, and in institutions of learning a President among Presidents.

For the deeply bereaved friends, there are many pleasant and comforting memories connected with this time of suffering. His patience and submission were beautiful—there was no murmuring, no repining heard in the sick room, but instead, resignation to his disabled condition, (one foot amputated) and a willingness, if he lived, to continue his work under added difficulties—then came readiness to depart, if that was the Father's will, and lastly, the triumphant death.

On Wednesday morning, Nov. 8th, four days before the final hour, it became evident that the end was rapidly approaching, and when his physicians came in he enjoined upon them the statement of his true condition; receiving the answer that he had but a short time to remain, he requested the calling in of every teacher, that he might speak his last message while in a conscious state. With peculiarly sad and solemn emotions we passed in, one by one, to take his hand, to hear and say the last good-by.

When this trying scene was over his exhausted state demanded quiet rest. From this hour until the closing one much of the time he was either suffering severely or lying in an unconscious state. And yet there were many lucid intervals when apparently the parting spirit was in Beulah land getting bright glimpses into the glorious realms beyond. At such times, if the voices of dear ones could gain his attention sufficiently to elicit a reply, it seemed to come from far away, as if for a moment he was called backward from the entrancing scenes before him; and at these periods the blessed expressions were heard, "I have gained the crown—all is happy with me—all is well with me—I have gained the victory—I have passed the final examination with thousands of others—I am so happy, praise the Lord—the grave is robbed of its victory—death is pleasant—I am dying, but I am happy."

Gently as the little child falls into quiet slumber, his life was breathed away that last Sabbath morn—that beautiful Sabbath, and he had gone up to the Higher Courts to worship with the glorified assembly there and be forever with the Lord.

Multiplication of Contributors.

Several important results would be seen if the number of givers could be increased. Equality. "For I mean not that other men be eased and ye burdened; but by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want; that there may be equality." 2 Cor. 8: 13, 14. The conscientious Christian will not murmur because he is expected to give, while so many about him give nothing; but he will earnestly wish for the sake of the cause that the brother may see the necessity for each one giving according to his ability, thereby equalizing the work. No Christian should be willing for another to do his work, as no Christian would be willing for another to take his crown. Can every Baptist be a giver? It was so in the church at Antioch. "Every man, according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea." Acts 11: 29.

Is poverty an excuse for not giving? It was not in the church in Macedonia. 2 Cor. 8: 2. A great leader, just before battle, thrilled his men by saying "England expects every man to do his duty." The same can be said to the churches of to-day: The Lord expects every man to do his duty.

Let there be equality in the work.

Contributors multiplied means the number of friends increased. Is it true that our gifts to a cause and our service for the cause are indicative of our interest in the cause? Can our interest in any work be measured by the support we give it?

The work of State Missions is doubly dear to the missionary because of what he has sacrificed for it. The toil, the self denial, the crucifixion of self for the cause and for Jesus, make it dearer.

The missionary feels a deeper interest in the work because he has given his best efforts, the best of his life, to it. The salvation of the people and their spiritual enlightenment are woven into every fiber of his being. Their interests are his, and he cries out like Paul, "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they may be saved."

One hundred and fifty thousand contributors to the Lord's work in North Carolina would mean 150,000 friends. Every new contributor means another sympathizer, another well wisher, another supporter—another partner in the enterprise. A pastor has gained ground when he has induced a brother to become a contributor.

The multiplication of contributors means increase of enthusiasm. As our beloved Bryan said, the more sticks of wood you put in the fire, the more heat you have. Somebody suggested that some institution of learning was suffering because one man had done nearly all for it. It was not in the hearts of the people. It is true that the more people there are interested in an enterprise, the more interest there will be for the enterprise.

One hundred and fifty thousand supporters of the work of the Convention would put an end to the feeling that any part of it is tiresome and uninteresting.

One hundred and fifty thousand supporters of Foreign Missions would make it impossible for a pastor to feel a doubt about a congregation to hear a discussion of Foreign Mission work.

A multiplication of givers will settle the question of enlarged contributions. The amount did not trouble Paul, he received what he wanted and more, it was pressed upon him. The question of amount did not enter into the subject when Moses called for gifts for the Tabernacle. They came, every one whose heart stirred him up. They came, both men and women. Every man and every woman brought of what they had till it was told Moses there was more than enough, and command was given to give no more. "So the people were restrained from bringing." Exodus 36: 6.

How can the contributors be multiplied? Inform the people. If our people are the Lord's people, when they see the need and hear his voice, they will respond.

Writers like Madam de Staël have blessed the world through what they have heard; those like Ruskin and Dickens by what they have seen. Mrs. Browning saw the sad condition of child-life in England, and called the nation to the rescue of children. Charles Dickens saw the system of farming out paupers, and wrote "Oliver Twist." He saw the poor school system, and wrote "Nicholas Nickleby." The Lord says to his people, "Lift up your eyes and see." We do not know the needs, and how can we feel the necessity? We do not see the destitution, and how can we be expected to be enthusiastic?

"The poem hangs on the berry bush,
Where comes the poet's eye,
And all the street is turned into a masquerade,
When Shakespeare passes by."

Why has not somebody connected with our State Mission work, who is competent, given the churches some tracts showing the needs and destitution in our State? Many are as ignorant of the needs at home as they are of the destitution in China. We want to scatter tracts and literature over this field like harvest leaves and let our eyes be opened that we may see, and through our ears hear the mighty calls of God.

We want to let the churches know the situation in China and every foreign field that they may see and be interested. A celebrated traveller said she was converted to missions through seeing missions.

Emphasize individualism. That is the Scriptural idea. The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ by individual salvation. "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying know the Lord; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them."

Let the individual feel that he ought to help to save some of the one thousand millions of earth.

Let the individual realize that thirty millions die yearly, and that he ought to save some.

Let the individual see the vastness of the field, the promise of the harvest, and the paucity of reapers. R. V. D.

Several Meetings.

Since our South Yadkin Associational meeting at Mocksville the first week in September, I have had the pleasure of assisting neighboring pastors in special meetings—with Olivet, New Hope, South River, New Bethany, and Damascus churches; in all of which the blessed Master has comforted his people and won souls to himself. It has been a feast to my own soul, amid the burdens of this warfare along the pilgrimage journey, to be with those noble pastors, and their dear people in those times of spiritual refreshing, and amid the shouts of the new-born souls; but not least among those comforts were the seasons of prayer, and searching out God's precious teachings.

With this, I close the sixth year of my pastorate at Society church, having resigned there the first Sunday in October; and I am much comforted to know that not a single appointment will be missed there, as my beloved brother, Elder W. D. Pool of Alexander Association, will enter upon his work—or, rather, the Lord's work—as pastor there Jan. 1st, 1894. In the mean time, he will delight us all by moving into our midst, serving South River, New Hope, and Society churches.

We held no special meetings at the latter place during my last pastoral year, though much needed. So we hope to hear of a gracious ingathering at that point in the near future.

I thank God for sustaining grace during the years at Society and beg his copious blessings upon those there, who have stood by his word and helped us. Thanks be to his holy name, "by and by," in his own time, we shall step home to glory, and meet them there. W. J. HOPKINS.

Marvelously Low.

The Advanced Quarterly, issued by the American Baptist Publication Society and edited by Prof. B. C. Taylor, D. D., is attractive to the eye, the arrangement excellent, the comments brief and to the point, shedding light on the Scriptures without the perplexing doubtfulness sometimes found in similar helps. The Bible Dictionary, Quarterly Review and music make it complete. One wonders, after an examination, how so much valuable information can be sold at rates so marvelously low as 2½ cents per copy. The remaining quarterlies of the Publication Society for Intermediate and Primary Departments are also first class and are only 2½ cents per copy.

Death of Rev. John W. Gore.

Rev. John W. Gore died at his home in Columbus county, N. C., on Wednesday morning, Dec. 6th, 1893, aged eighty-one years, eight months and nineteen days. He became a member of a Baptist church in the year 1834; was ordained a deacon in Iron Hill Baptist church in the year 1846, and was ordained to the work of the gospel ministry in the year 1866. He was a steadfast Missionary Baptist, a strong lover of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and a bold and zealous defender of the faith once delivered to the saints. He died in peace with God and man, and has gone to reap the reward of his arduous toils. D. N. GORE.

Walter Baker & Co., the largest Cocoa and Chocolate Manufacturers on this continent, have carried off the highest honors at the World's Columbian Exposition. They received from the Board of Judges the highest awards (medals and diplomas) on all the articles contained in their exhibit; namely, breakfast cocoa, premium No. 1 chocolate, German sweet chocolate, vanilla chocolate, cocoa butter.

The judges state in their report that these products are characterized by "excellent flavor," "purity of material employed," and "uniform, even composition, indicating great care in point of mechanical preparation."

money. Suppose you go up there and say, "Mr. Secretary, this is the people's Treasury, and I am one of the people, and I have a right to some of this gold." The Secretary would say, "As custodian of this money I can only give it out to such persons as bring me properly signed and sealed warrants for it." You take out of your pocket a paper with certain signs and seals; this paper looks legal and old. But the Secretary glances at it and says, "Sir, this is counterfeit; it was gotten up many years ago, and fooled many, but it is nevertheless a counterfeit. You can't get a cent of this money under that seal. Yet, you may be a citizen of the United States, I don't deny that." You go off and call the Secretary all sorts of names, and accuse him of being narrow and bigoted. So, as a Baptist I am custodian of the Lord's table in the church in which I preach. When you come and say, "This is the Lord's table, and as one of the Lord's people I have a right to partake of the emblems on it," I ask at once for your credentials—signed and sealed privileges to partake of the same. You reply by saying, "I have repented of my sins, confessed my faith in Jesus, and knowing that baptism is only an 'outward seal of an inward grace,' I was sprinkled with water in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost." I say, as to the "inward grace" I am not the judge; but as to your "outward seal"—sprinkling for baptism—I know that to be a base counterfeit, gotten up many years ago by the Roman Catholic church, and stamped with ecclesiastical authority at the council of Ravenna, 1311 A. D. Many people have been deceived by that old counterfeit "seal." But as custodian of the Lord's table in this house I cannot, and be loyal to the New Testament, accept it. Though I do not deny that you may be a citizen in the kingdom of God.

2. The "Disciples of Christ" practice immersion strictly and exclusively, why then do Baptists refuse to participate with them in the Lord's Supper?

For the reason that the "Disciples" pervert the ordinance of baptism, not in its form, but in its design. Every loyal Disciple teaches and believes just what Alexander Campbell believed and taught in his "Christian baptism, with its antecedents and consequents," written about the year 1850, when Mr. Campbell was in his ripe maturity and far removed from the excitement of debate which characterized his earlier years. In that work he deliberately says, "While, then, baptism is ordained for remission of sins, and for no other specific purpose, it is not as a procuring cause, as a meritorious or efficient cause, but as an instrumental cause in which faith and repentance are developed and made faithful and effectual in the changing of our state and spiritual relations to the divine persons whose names are put upon us in the very act."

So, then, "baptism is ordained for remission of sins and for no other specific purpose," according to the Disciples' standard book of doctrine. But still more baptism is necessary to make both "faith and repentance" effectual "in changing our state and spiritual relations to the Divine Persons," Father, Son and Holy Ghost, "whose names are put upon us in the act."

From this teaching Baptists are convinced that when the Disciples immerse an adult "for the remission of sins and for no other specific purpose," they pervert the ordinance of baptism just as much, if not more, than the Pedobaptists do when they sprinkle an infant. With the Pedobaptists, only the administrators are deceived, but the Disciples deceive the candidate into the belief that his immersion is "an instrumental cause" or condition of remission of sins, and is "effectual in changing his spiritual relations" to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

3. Why do the regular or Missionary Baptists refuse to participate with the Primitive Baptists in the Lord's Supper? For the reason that the Primitive Baptists pervert and make void by their deadly doctrine of fatalism the very first clause of Christ's great commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." When our king bids them go and administer the first ordinance of the "preached Word" in every land, they stand still and spend enough time, means and effort in preventing others from going, to carry the gospel themselves to "every creature" in "all the world."

How can we consistently observe the all things, including the Lord's Supper, commanded in the last clause of the commission with those who so persistently refuse to carry out the first clause of the same, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel?"

The conclusion, then, is this: It were as sinful for Baptists to invite or accept invitations to the Lord's table from the other denominations whom they know to be perverters, changers or destroyers of any one of God's ordinances, as for Moses to have accepted Pharaoh's invitation to sacrifice to God in Egypt (Ex. 8: 25, 26).

Moses' position is our position: "It is not meet for us so to do. If we do, we shall sacrifice the abominations of the perverters, changers and destroyers of God's ordinances. "To come out" and "be separate" was the only thing left for Moses to do. It is the only thing Baptists can conscientiously do.

Be merry, but with modesty; be sober, but not sullen; be valiant, but not venturous; let your clothes be comely, but not costly; your diet wholesome, but not excessive; mistrust no man without cause, neither be thou credulous without proof. Serve God, fear God, love God, and God will so bless you as either your heart can wish or your friends desire.—Syly.

Co-Education—No 3.

BY T. H. PRITCHARD, D. D.

Dear Recorder:—I had the honor to organize the first woman's missionary society of modern times in the State—there were women's mite societies in North Carolina as long ago as 1817—and in doing so encountered determined and vigorous opposition on the part of many of our leading brethren. The first report of the executive committee of this organization, submitted at Durham, sixteen years ago, was so sharply criticised in the Convention that the good women who composed that committee were wounded and discouraged, and for a few years women's work was almost suspended. Now, it is received with favor almost everywhere, and at the late session of the Convention the women reported nearly $5,000 raised for various objects.

Still later, I had the honor to introduce in the Convention a resolution calling for the establishment of a society for the relief of our aged and infirm ministers. That was opposed in at least two sessions of the Convention, and came near being killed at Shelby two or three years ago. It is now seen to be a beneficent and timely institution, and hence, I was not at all discouraged that the resolution I introduced at the late session of the Convention found little favor with the majority of the body. The truth was, I was greatly surprised to find so many who were in sympathy with the idea, and many more who seemed to be undecided on the matter. I accomplished all I expected to do in being permitted to address the body on the subject. I only wanted to bring it prominently before the brethren, and withdrew it without a vote. My point was gained in getting our people to think about and talk about it, for I am well assured in my mind if they will investigate the subject, they will be converted to what seems to me to be the true theory of education. Remember that it is not a question to be settled by prejudice, or physiological, social, or psychological theories. In a matter of this sort facts are worth all the theories in the world, and I submit that practical experience has settled this question beyond any reasonable doubt. It is not an experiment; it has been put to the test, under every variety of circumstances, and for years, and the testimony of a large number of competent witnesses in this country and in Europe, at the North and in the South, give the strongest assurance of the practical wisdom of this plan of education.

I repeat that a few years ago, I was the uncompromising opponent of this system. I talked with him about it, and he gave it his uncompromising support. I regarded it as a Yankee invention that ought never to be introduced into the South. The first person who shook my confidence in the wisdom of my position was Dr. J. L. M. Curry, the Agent of the Peabody Fund. I learned also that Dr. H. H. Harris of Richmond held views similar to those of Dr. Curry, and I knew that these two men had been acquainted with the whole science of education for many years, and I had great respect for their wisdom. Then, at the instance of Dr. Curry, I went to the Peabody Normal College in Nashville and saw for myself. I talked with the young people there. I consulted Dr. Payne, the President, and Prof. A. D. Purinton, who was once a Professor at Wake Forest, and here is what they told me then, and have since written me. Dr. W. H. Payne said:

"First, in various high schools, then in the University of Michigan, and for the past seven years in the Peabody Normal College, I have observed the results of co-education in all its phases, and the result of this wide observation has impressed me with an unwavering confidence in the practical wisdom of this policy. Schools conducted on this plan are more easily administered, the general type of deportment is higher, the boys are more manly, and the girls more womanly. We have had here the past year over five hundred students, and the discipline of this college has not cost me two hours' anxiety. If I were free to organize a school in the way that seems to me to embody the wisest policy, I would resort to co-education without a moment's hesitation."

Dr. Purinton says: "As for myself, I believe co-education is right education. At this college, with more than five hundred students, the experience and observation of nearly five years have left me in no doubt of its pronounced success. I have never seen a school which would compare with this one in the admirable deportment of its students, and in the general disposition to study. The work of government is nothing, and the only difficulty we have with our students is to restrain them from overwork, to the injury of their health. At Denison University, of which my brother is President, they have two colleges, one for boys and one for girls, under the same management, and in the higher work, both boys and girls are in the same classes. It is practical co-education, but not technically so called. It works excellently well, but I think it rather inferior to our plan of out and out co-education."

H. L. Stetson, President Des Moines, Iowa, College, says: "In answer to yours of the 11th inst., I would say that in this institution co-education has always worked very satisfactorily. I do not suppose it would be possible to induce the trustees to consent to any change which would exclude either sex, and I am sure that it would be the most unpopular movement which could be started. I know of but one institution in this State which excludes women, and now that is practically dead. The benefits to both the young men and the young women more than offset any disadvantages."

Dr. Rufus C. Burleson, President Baylor University, Waco, Texas, says: "I have received a similar request to yours from our distinguished brother, Dr. Noah K. Davis, of the University of Virginia, and from two or three others of the most eminent educators in other States. I will answer in a pamphlet, giving my experience and observation of thirty years on co-education. Baylor University is, as you are probably aware, the second in co-education in America, the first in the South, and the third in the world, that is, since the Pope abolished co-education in the University of Bologna, nearly a thousand years ago; but now one hundred and ninety of the leading Universities of the world have adopted co-education, and many others would gladly follow the example if their buildings and other environments would permit. You are aware Baylor University is now the largest in the South. We hope to matriculate one thousand students, male and female, by the end of the forty-third annual session, and co-education has been a grand factor in our success."

President D. B. Purinton of Denison University, Granville, O., says: "I am heartily in favor of the system. * * * My decided opinion is that co-education, rightly conducted, makes young ladies more lady-like, young gentlemen more gentlemanly, and both more natural and sensible."

Jno. F. Forbes, President John B. Stetson University, De Land, Fla., says: "My experience is unqualifiedly in favor of co-education. * * * Both sexes are benefited by working and associating together. We have seen no injurious effects whatever, and have had no trouble of any kind. Prof. Farriss of the Florida Baptist Witness was opposed to the system before he became familiar with our work, but has become an earnest advocate of the co-educational system."

John Howard Harris, President Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Penn., says: "The results with us in co education are favorable. The men are more manly, and the women more womanly, and both study better than when separate."

President W. T. Scott of Franklin College, Indiana, says: "We have had co education for twenty-five years. We advocate it on several grounds. The one institution made strong is better than two weak ones. The effect is good on both the young men and the young women. * * * After the first novelty passes away, there is no longer any conduct calling for special attention. We talk of the equality of men and women, and of the great responsibilities of woman in wifehood and motherhood, so let us give the young women a fair chance."

Only last week at staid old Brown University, President Andrews, in an address of welcome, briefly reviewed the history of the Woman's College connected with Brown University, and said that, so far as advantages for education were concerned, a woman could get the same degree as a man at Brown.

See how the thing grows; at Harvard, the oldest college in this country, they had what they called an Annex for Women. The last issue of the Examiner says: "The Overseers of Harvard University have decided that hereafter the women graduates of the Annex—which has been renamed Radcliffe College—shall be eligible to the same degrees as the Harvard graduates." Radcliffe College has become an essential part of this great University.

And these are but a small part of the many experienced witnesses who all testify to the wisdom of co education.

The truth is, we are behind the times and in a hopeless minority in not adopting the system of co education. The Bureau of Education reports 384 schools and colleges of highest grade in the United States: 220 of these, that is, 55 majority, have adopted this system. There are 35 Baptist schools among this 384, and more than half of them (21 out of the 35) are co-educational; and so far from its being an importation from the North, the second school in all the land to adopt it was Baylor University in Texas, where it has been in operation for thirty years. These are facts, and facts are stubborn things. Brethren, revise your opinions: listen to the voice of those who are prepared to speak, for they know whereof they testify.

BY JUDGE R. W. WINSTON.

PACKAGES BY EXPRESS.

When a law-abiding citizen orders a dozen pretty cut glass tumblers as a Christmas present for a friend; they come by express; he opens the package; three are crushed—he—well he wishes to know whom to sue!! Strange to say we have few cases, in our State, if any, upon the subject of Express Companies. In many other States it has been held by the courts that they are common carriers; and as such are fixed with great care and responsibility in the conveyance of goods.

With express companies, as with telegraph companies, many regulations are made for the protection of the company. Some of these are reasonable and valid; some unreasonable and invalid.

We all recall the fact that when we deliver a package to an express agent and demand a receipt, he asks, "What value?" Sometimes, to have the package go cheap, the sender will take his chances and say five dollars.

If the package is lost, even by the negligence of the company, in these circumstances the loss recoverable would not exceed fifty dollars, or perhaps not exceed the value fixed.

This regulation, that the value shall be given, is hence reasonable, because the company ought to know what degree of care to exercise in transporting and guarding the package.

A celebrated case arose in New York some years ago of this kind. A French company of importers sent by express a package of watches worth $2,500 to a Memphis firm. When the watches were sent, nothing was said as to their value, nor could the character of the contents of the parcel be discovered from its outside appearance. The watches were lost or stolen. In a suit against the express company for damages, the importers contended that they were entitled to recover full damages. "Not so," said the court, "it was your duty to tell the company that you were expressing so valuable a package. You did not do so, and it is your loss." So the plaintiffs recovered only fifty dollars, the limit beyond which recovery cannot be had unless the value is fixed above that sum.

So, it is the duty of one sending a package, easy to break, to communicate this fact. If the sender practices any fraud by concealing the value of the article, or its fragility, it is his own fault if he do not recover damages.

But if no fraud is practised and the company are made acquainted with the contents of the package and undertake to deliver it safe and fail to do so, they are doubtless answerable in damages for loss and breakage.

Some years ago a man shipped by express a dangerous explosive to San Francisco. It began to leak. The agents of the company in attempting to stop the leak, caused the substance to explode, killing several men. Suit was brought against the company, but they were not liable, as they did not know and had no reason to suspect that the package was a dangerous one.

Then suit was brought against the shippers for not disclosing the contents of the package, and they were made to pay heavy damages.

As to the measure of care required of express companies in delivering packages, this varies in different States. But it is generally held that a simple notice by mail is not sufficient; but that the package ought to be delivered to the place of business of the consignee.

Benjamin Vaughan Abbott has collected in a readable book called "Judge and Jury," the law on this and kindred subjects.

New Year's Wishes.

From all this New Year's precious store
Of wishes, as I scan them o'er,
I choose for thee but three; no more.

These three shall more than thousands prove,
For they shall draw thy heart above,
Their names are Service, Trust and Love.

Trust God, and trust will gain God's best;
Love God, and learn how love is blest;
Serve God, and find in service rest.

Mental depression, wakefulness, lost manhood caused by errors of youth or later excesses quickly cured by Magnetic Nervine. Guarahteed by Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C.

We are only called upon to live by the moment. Christ does not bid us bear the burdens of to morrow, or next week, or next year. Every day we are to come to Him in simple faith and obedience, asking help to keep us, and aid us through that day's work; and to-morrow, and to-morrow, and to morrow, through years of long to-morrows, it will be the same thing to do; leaving the future always in God's hands, sure that he can care for it better than we. Blessed trust! that can thus confidingly say, "This hour is mine, with its present duty; the next is God's, and when it comes, Christ's presence will come with it." This is the rest of faith, whose heavenly calmness no storms disquiet.—Selected.

A Good Recipe.

"We have noticed that the ministers who give themselves to distinctively pastoral work are not apt to follow vagaries of doctrine, or to be enraptured with the latest results of criticism—latest, until the next results appear. There is something in the engagement of a man's soul in the attempt to make the gospel a controlling force in the lives of tempted, sinning, suffering men and women, that keeps his brain clear and his heart in touch with Christ."—The Watchman.

Lincolnton Observatory.

M. P. M., DIRECTOR.

It is the business of the man in charge of this observatory to observe—that is the prime object of its establishment, and for that purpose he will try to perpetuate it. He may not always see things as others see them—in fact, he shall not attempt so impossible a thing, but he will always try to represent things fairly as he does see them, but will always be glad for any correction from the editor, or any brother, who sees that his observations are not in accordance with the facts. It is his purpose to turn his telescope upon every part of the field, and note his observations regularly for the benefit of the RECORDER.

In expressing the conviction on the report of periodicals before the late Convention that "the leaders" were not using the RECORDER as much as they should, he but expressed a truth for all who in any way may add to the efficiency of the paper. The observer is frank to say that he has not always agreed with the positions of the RECORDER, but he does not appreciate the paper any less on that account. The same may be true in the future, and yet he hopes always to have enough of the spirit of the Master to differ from his brethren and at the same time appreciate all the excellencies in them.

The last meeting of the Convention was a demonstration so clear of the value of discussion—not of acrimonious, but brotherly discussion—there was more discussion with less bitterness of personalities than I have ever seen, and to me this was the most hopeful sign for the future. It is clear that no one in our great Baptist ranks is going to have "a collar" on his neck and be led around by anybody. More and more does the wisdom of our church polity appear. So long as discussion, full and free, exists—this safety valve of the denomination—there can be no danger to our churches or their interests.

GRACEFUL ACQUIESCENCE.

One of the commendable things which any observer must have seen at Elizabeth City was the gracefulness with which advocates of certain measures accepted defeat, or the elimination of a part of what they desired should be accomplished.

The irrepressible Cade never stated a greater truth than when he said, "The man who is in the right can afford to wait, and he is the only man who can afford to." This quiet acceptance of the inevitable was manifest in no connection more than in connection with the young people's movement. It was earnestly desired to secure during the next year a "State organization" of our young people's societies, but some of us were to be disappointed along this line. If it is right to have such an organization, then it will come, because we can trust the majority of the brethren to see the right thing at least. If it is not for the best interest of the Master's kingdom, then we ought not to want such organization. So far as I am concerned there is not a shadow of doubt as to the wisdom or desirability of such organization, and yet three years ago I was just as much on the other side. The discussions which were had in connection with the Baptist Young People's Union in Chicago, at which I had the pleasure of being present three years ago, revolutionized all of my ideas on that question. As I saw the mighty hold that such undenominational organizations as the Christian Endeavor, and other undenominational societies, had upon our Baptist churches in the North, and how such societies were sapping the very foundations of their denominational life, and when I heard the plea made by those brethren who had come to see the condition and realize the danger from the situation as they plead for a distinctively Baptist organization, I was forced to say that we ought not to wait until such conditions obtain in the South before we organize our young people.

"THE BAPTIST CONGRESS."

This—what shall I call it?—organization? institution? Well, call it what you please—has held a meeting recently in Augusta, Ga., and, judging from reports, seems to have had a good time, although Bro. Vedder of the Examiner says that our Southern men were not easily provoked into a discussion. Such a statement seems rather strange to a man who was with "Aunt Betsy" at the late Convention and saw how ready the brethren were for "a spute," as the old negro said when he joined the Campbellites in the West.

One question discussed, and some positions taken, were new in the South, at least to a large extent. That was "alien baptisms." On this question the North and South are far apart—the brethren of the North taking the position that it is not a question of valid or invalid baptisms, but regular or irregular, and that an immersion performed on a scriptural subject in the name of the Trinity is scriptural baptism; while the brethren from the South, at least a part of them, held that the question of the administrator was also involved. I should have been glad to have heard the discussion as there were giants on each side, but I am constrained to believe that the scriptural position is, first, authority; second, subject; third, design; fourth, action. The trouble with these Ephesian disciples was twofold—first, administrator; second, design. Apollos had no doubt been baptized by John, but John had no right to authorize any one else to baptize, and hence his want of authority; and as to design, it was legitimate for people to be baptized with reference to the coming of Jesus Christ before he came, but such design was certainly not legitimate after he came. I think we are forced to the conclusion, therefore, that the question of authority, as well as design, enters into the question of baptism as well as subject and action.

Letter from Winston.

Dear Recorder:—Having returned from a five months' stay in the mountains of Alleghany, I will give a short article.

I did not go to church often while there, from the fact my folk (the Baptists) did not worship close to me. I did worship occasionally with the Methodist brethren.

I attended a revival conducted by a Mr. Johnson of the Northern Methodist faith, who is a good preacher. There were several conversions, and the church was much revived—was revived myself.

The people seem to have the right conception as to baptism, though in that particular the way is so plain no one need err therein. Of those who joined the church, every one went down into Laurel Branch and was plunged under its swift and sparkling waters. It was plainly to be seen they had no thought as to what body of Christians they really ought to connect themselves with. There are some good people through that section, but they are twenty-five or thirty years behind in some of the customs.

Young girls are glad of the opportunity of riding on horse-back behind their beaux to church.

Our Missionary brethren up there don't seem to know just who they are. They keep up old custom of foot-washing, and have great gatherings on these occasions, reminding one very much of our Primitive brethren. I could have attended one of those gatherings, but I had never witnessed anything of the kind, and I did not care to. I know the Scripture is very plain on that subject. I did not look upon it as a church ordinance, but rather a lesson of pure and deep humility that Christ intended to teach. At the same time I think the church, from pride and selfishness, is losing sight of some important lessons along the line of humility. Some one has said, speaking of form connected with worship, "Where there is so much formality, there is little sincerity." Equally so, where there is so much pride and selfishness, there is little humility. Nothing short of an humble and contrite heart can worship God acceptably. Therefore, let us pray that we may overcome all pride and selfishness and be willing to humble ourselves in the very dust of humility.

What the Psalms Say About God.

The heavens declare his glory.
He gives strength to his people.
He is light and salvation.
He will be a refuge in time of trouble.
He will teach the meek his way.
In his favor is life.
He will redeem our souls from the power of the grave.
He is a sun and shield.
He is worthy to be praised.
His mercy endureth forever.
He knoweth our frame: He remembereth that we are dust.
He satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.
The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him in truth.—Ram's Horn.

If He who knows the road, and knows our capacities and our needs, is but with us, would we wish to take the guidance out of His hands? I trow not. And so welcome to the beautiful New Year; and may we welcome all it may bring us of joy or sorrow, and learn the lesson hidden in each.—Caroline Fox.

"Disfigured For Life"

Is the despairing cry of thousands afflicted with unsightly skin diseases.
Do you realise what this disfiguration means to sensitive souls?
It means isolation, seclusion.
It is a bar to social and business success.
Do you wonder that despair seizes upon these sufferers when Doctors fail, standard remedies fail,
And nostrums prove worse than useless?
Skin diseases are most obstinate to cure.
CUTICURA REMEDIES
Have earned the title Skin Specifics,
Because for years they have met with most remarkable success.
There are cases that they cannot cure, but they are few indeed.
It is no long-drawn-out expensive experiment.
25c. invested in a cake of CUTICURA SOAP
Will prove more than we dare claim.
In short CUTICURA WORKS WONDERS,
And its cures are simply marvellous.

Sold throughout the world. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston.

Notes from Lenoir.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—At our last church meeting we decided to ask the State Mission Board for no further help. The Board has very kindly helped at this point for the past seven or eight years, while it was impossible for us to help ourselves. Our number has grown during the past year, and while we are financially very weak, yet we feel like we should make an effort to take care of ourselves. There are only a few male members who are able to do a little, but with the best efforts of this few put forth, we hope to pay our good pastor one hundred dollars, and also not to fall behind on the amounts heretofore contributed to other objects of our Convention.

We are carrying a small church debt even yet, but thought best, rather than seem to be imposing on the goodness of the Board, to defer this indebtedness until future development of our church enables us to pay off. We have been able recently to put in a beautiful chandelier and pulpit lamps at a cost of about thirty dollars, thus supplying a long-felt want. We are now in shape for night services under more favorable circumstances.

Our progress has seemed very slow, but has been steady. Since the meeting of our Association with us three years ago, we have completed our house, put bell on, painted, put up blinds, and now have lighted up nicely. This has cost money, and but for the fact that we have taken little at a time, we could not have done it. Our house and lot, as it stands, is worth about $1,500. With gratitude we make our bow to Bro. W. A. Pool and other brethren who, with such commendable zeal, instituted the work here. We feel that under God we have more reason to thank Bro. Pool than any one else for this planting, and may the time never come when he will have cause to regret the large financial sacrifices he made for this work in its beginning, but may we in our future development prove the seal of his good judgment and liberality.

We feel sympathy for the Morganton brethren who have sustained the loss of their house. We hope the brethren there may be able to sell their present lot and secure a better location, the present being much more suitable as a business lot than for a church. Church building now, while money is so hard to obtain, is difficult, but we hope for them rapid progress.

We hope to secure, at an early day, the services of Bro. E. F. Jones of Gastonia to aid in a meeting of days.

Bro. Thomas, aided by Bro. W. R. Bradshaw, has just closed an interesting and helpful meeting with his church at old North Catawba. This is one of the best churches in our county, and yet it belongs to the Catawba River Association. I wish the brethren would come to our Association. In fact, I wish the Caldwell County and Catawba River would all come together.

Fraternally, J. V. McCall.

It Pays.

It pays to read the papers, especially your own family paper, for often in this way good business opportunities are brought to your attention. For instance, B. F. Johnson & Co., of Richmond, Va., are now advertising, offering paying positions to parties who engage with them, devoting all or any part of their time to their business interests. It might pay you to write to them.

Baptist Female University.

The Trustees of the Baptist Female University met in the Mission Rooms Dec 19, 1893, and after full and free discussion unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved first, That it is the sense of this Board that the Baptist Female University be opened September, 1894.

Resolved, second, That a committee be appointed to correspond with and nominate a suitable man for the President of this Institution, to be elected by this Board, Jan. 16, 1894, 4:30 p. m. S.

Items Personal and Otherwise.

Well, Dr. Bailey, I find myself this bright, breezy Christmas day, taking my bearings in this new home in the old "Tar River."

Hitherto the Lord has helped me; and, judging from the past, I involuntarily exclaim, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

I have decided that during the year 1894, the Lord permitting, I will practice "ecclesiastical polygamy," giving half my time to Littleton, and dividing the other half between Warren Plains and Enfield.

Littleton, my home, a town of one thousand inhabitants, is situated on the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad, twenty two miles south of Weldon, and six miles from the Roanoke river. It is a famous health resort, being the location of the popular Panacea and Shaw's All healing Springs. These springs are largely patronized, so much so, that the number of visitors for the past season, about two hundred, was only limited by the hotel accommodations. These, however, have been enlarged for the coming summer. Not only do we have these health-giving springs, but the atmosphere in these hills of the Roanoke, is high and dry, and as bracing as that of High Point in Guilford county.

This is the seat of that excellent institution for boys and young men, "Littleton High School and Business Institute," under the wise, systematic management of Bro. L. W. Bagley and his cultivated, consecrated, Christian wife, and their proficient assistant, Frank Gibson. Prof. Bagley is a modest man and says but little about his work.

I find the church here in a gratifying condition, under the wise, godly training of the beloved John Mitchell, whom I have the honor to succeed.

Warren Plains, sixteen miles south of this, on the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad, planted by the elder Purefoy of blessed memory, and tended by those consecrated men of God, Glenn, Taylor, Cullom and Day, is the live st church I know. Last Sunday, Christmas eve, at our afternoon services, after crowding the house, pulpit and every available space with the people, more than a score, were compelled to stand in front of the door and listen while the pastor talked for thirty minutes, about "God's Christmas Gift to the world." A collection was taken amounting to eight dollars for the poor and afflicted ones of the community; and then, Monday morning, all hands joined in sending Deacon Weldon and the pastor with money and substantial good cheer to the fatherless and the widow. They are in need of a larger house, which is in process of erection, and it is hoped will be ready to accommodate our Union Meeting in March.

I have not yet visited Enfield, but felt it in my heart to say this much about Littleton and Warren Plains. I must add that these churches furnished the wherewith and insisted that their pastor should attend the late session of the State Convention in Elizabeth City.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

I am heartily in favor of these. When pastor of a country church, the young members were organized into a society under an agreement like this:

"I will try to be a better Christian; I will try to help others do the same.

"I will try to attend all the meetings of my church and try to induce others to come.

"I will try to do whatever the pastor asks me to, and encourage others to do likewise."

When present, the pastor was leader of the meeting; in his absence, a prudent deacon would lead. These meetings were quite informal; everybody took part, and more precious meetings I never attended. They were held in the homes of the brethren on Sunday afternoon.

Fraternally, J. K. Fant.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, that the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. This will serve to prevent mistakes in the acknowledgment, and save the time, correspondence and printing to correct them.]

EPILEPSY OR FITS
Can this disease be cured? Most physicians say No—I say, Yes; all forms and the worst cases. After 30 years study and experiment I have found the remedy.—Epilepsy is cured by it; cured, not subdued by opiates—the old, treacherous, quack treatment. Do not despair. Forget past impositions on your purse, past outrages on your confidence, past failures. Look forward, not backward. My remedy is of to-day. Valuable work on the subject, and large bottle of the remedy—sent free for trial. Mention Post-Office and Express address.

A freight train on the Norfolk and Carolina railroad, ran into a landslide at Kelford, Bertie county, on the 23d ult., wrecking the engine and nineteen cars. Engineer William Barlow was killed, and the fireman and two brakeman were slightly injured. The damage done to the engine and cars was considerable.

A Raleigh special to the Charlotte Observer says: "In the future no news as to pardons of convicts, etc., will be given out at the executive department. Gov. Carr says the law requires that this information shall be given the Legislature bi-annually, with the cause of clemency, etc. He says he sees no reason why, when a convict is pardoned, notice should be given all over the State that he is a criminal; but that punishment should cease when the pardon is issued and the man be given a chance to make something of himself."

The funeral obsequies of the late Consul-General, A. D. Jones, were held Thursday, December 28th, at Cary, the home of the deceased. The attendence from that section and from Raleigh was very large. Brief but impressive services were conducted by Revs. B. C. Allred and M. A. Smith in the Methodist church and at the grave, Masonic services were also held at the grave. Mr. John W. Thompson acting as Master, and Mr. B. R. Lacy as chaplain. The floral offerings were numerous and of the most beautiful designs ever seen in the State. The reports that Mr. Jones became violent and uncontrollable, and was ill treated on board ship, are positively stated to have been sensational. It is also learned that his sickness dated almost from the time of his arrival in China last August.

DIED.

AUSTIN—Mrs. Martha Ann Austin died on Nov. 14th, 1893, at her home in Middle Creek township, Wake county, aged sixty-four years. She leaves a husband and nine children to mourn their loss. She was a good companion and a kind mother, and beloved by all. Her every duty seemed to be a pleasure. It can be truthfully said that she faithfully stood at her post.

J. H. AUSTIN.

SIMONS—Mr. Charles W. Simons, a highly respectable citizen of Cary, and member of the Cary Baptist church, died after a short but painful illness on Dec. 1st, 1893. He was about thirty-five years old, and gave promise of much usefulness as a citizen and churchman. He leaves a devoted wife to cherish his memory and await the Master's time for their final reunion. Many friends in Cary, Durham and Raleigh, as well as his church and pastor, are saddened by his death, and extend prayerful sympathy to the bereaved.

C. W. BLANCHARD.

BROWN—Died, in Murfreesboro, November 17th, 1893, in the thirteenth year of her age, little Effie Estelle, youngest daughter of Frank and Elizabeth Brown. How incomprehensible are the ways of God!

Effie was the light and life of the household. Bright, engaging, lovable, and yet God took her. We cannot fathom the mysteries of divine providence, but we can rejoice in the thought that he is too wise to err, and too gracious to be unkind; and that he it was who, taking the little ones in his arms, said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not." God comfort the sorrowing ones.

W.

DAY—Miss Maud Day died Nov. 29th, at the early age of seventeen. The parents have one child less, but heaven has one jewel more. She was beautiful in spirit and in person, for the lovely spirit moulded the body into its own image. Her presence was a ray of light in the home and in the church. How beautiful she must be in her spiritual body now in her angelic home. What a glorious change! The death of one so young and beautiful, so well fitted for usefulness, seems sad; but her mission here is ended, and the Heavenly Father has a mission for her to fill in the spirit world, and has called her home. She is free from all the infirmities of the mortal state, and still lives in the conscious exercise of all her intellectual, social and spiritual powers. Somewhere in God's beautiful universe she still lives, and will find employment and happiness in the service of the dear Master she loved so much. Heaven is nearer and sweeter to us because she is now there. Heaven is cold and distant until we have friends there. Till then, we feel concerning it as we do of a distant land where we have no friends; but the emigration of friends to that country invests it with a new interest and makes it more real to our minds. We knew this dear girl well, having taught her in early childhood.

The burial services were conducted in a very impressive manner by Rev. J. A. Beam, her pastor. Many friends followed her body to the last resting place. May Our Heavenly Father comfort the hearts of her parents, aunt, brothers and sisters.

"Another hand is beckoning us,
Another call is given;
And glows once more with angel steps
The path which reaches heaven."

T. A. HARRISON.

Tributes of Respect.

"'Tis hard to break the tender cord
When love has bound the heart,
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the words,
Must we forever part?
Dearest loved one we have laid thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished,
Till we see thy heavenly face."

Joseph Napoleon Ellis, aged twenty-eight years, died at the home of his father and mother, in Raleigh, N. C, November 26th, 1893.

For more than a year Joseph had been suffering with that fatal malady, consumption. In November, 1892, he went to Florida, hoping to gain strength amid the summer flowers and orange groves; but alas, no help came, and in June he went back to the old home scenes to die, watched and nursed by the same loving hands that first ministered to his childish wants, for his sick heart yearned to be at home and with mother. Then for six months longer the fight for life went on, till on Sunday evening, Nov. 26th, at 9:30 o'clock, he went home to glory and to God.

Long before death came the patient sufferer knew that he must soon pass over the river. Some times his enraptured eyes would see an angel band hovering on white wings about his couch, and the music of heaven beat upon his ravished ear. The peace of God that passeth understanding filled his heart, and he was ready for the call.

The funeral services were held at the grave in Oakwood cemetery on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 28th, Rev. O. L. Stringfield officiating. Tender hands placed lovely flowers on his grave, and many a tear fell upon the sod that covers his noble form. The aged father and mother are a second time called upon to mourn the loss of a manly son. And no one but them will know the sorrow and woe his untimely death brings to their desolate home and hearts, for the aged parents had fondly hoped to feel his strong arm as a rod and a staff in their declining years. But God willed it differently, and we bow to his mysterious dispensation humbly and reverently. May we so live that, one by one, as we join the silent army that camps upon eternity's fields, we may strike hands again with the loved one gone before. D.

Bro. A. L. Ferrell, a member of our church and a member of, and teacher in this, the First Baptist Sunday school of Raleigh, N. C., died on Thursday morning, November 9th, 1893, after a brief sickness. Bro. Ferrell was a good citizen, and from his early manhood gave his active work and influence to every movement for the prosperity and moral advancement of his fellows. He was a good neighbor, kind and helpful to the extent of his ability. To his friends, he was always true and loyal, and never turned his back upon a friend in the hour of his need. He was a good husband, a kind, patient and gentle father, giving his best thoughts and constant energy to the promotion of the welfare and happiness of his family. As a man among men, recognizing his duties and responsibilities to his friends and to the general public, he was loyal to the convictions of an enlightened conscience and did what he believed to be right, regardless of the consequences to himself. In his intercourse with his fellows, he was brave, candid, courteous, honest and faithful.

When only seventeen years of age he volunteered and entered the Confederate army as a private soldier. He was brave and true to the cause for which he fought, and came out of the struggle with a bright, honorable record as a soldier and with a character for high and manly virtues, without a stain upon his good name and with a life made purer and brighter by the trials through which he had passed.

Early in life he professed religion and connected himself with a Baptist church. He was a good working member of every church with which he was connected during his Christian life, faithful to every duty and true to the cause of Christ and to his brethren.

As a member of our school, his attendance on its exercises was as regular and punctual as his health and circumstances would permit.

The committee recommend the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. A. L. Ferrell, this Sunday-school has lost a faithful member, a good teacher and a worthy brother.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved wife and children our sympathy in their sad affliction and point them to our heavenly Father who has promised to be husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the school in token of our remembrance of Bro. Ferrell as member of the school, and one of our teachers.

La Grippe Again.

The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.

ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.

In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe. L. STUART.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 13, 1893.

About two years ago I had a severe spell of 'grip,' and was induced by my relatives to try Royal Germetuer. It soon cured the 'grip.'

MRS. GEO. TISDALE.

SWEETWATER, TENN., June 23, 1893

My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health.

J. T. BARROW,
Pastor First Baptist Church.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of Germetuer relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

Rev. J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 31, 1893: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

will be without question America's

LEADING FAMILY PAPER.

The reputation that the WEEKLY HERALD has enjoyed for many years of being the best home newspaper in the land will be materially added to during the year 1894. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in every department the most reliable, interesting and instructive of all weekly newspaper publications.

It will be improved in many ways.

A number of new features and departments will be added. The latest development in all fields of contemporaneous human interest will be ably discussed from week to week by accomplished writers will be given in a concise but complete form. Every important or interesting event, either at home or abroad, will be duly described in the columns of the WEEKLY HERALD.

In politics the HERALD is absolutely independent and sound. It tells the rights and wrongs of all sides without fear.

Farmers and stock raisers cannot afford to be without the WEEKLY HERALD during the coming year. It will contain a regular department each week devoted exclusively to subjects of timely interest to them, and giving many valuable suggestions and new ideas.

The women and children of the land will find in the WEEKLY HERALD a welcome visitor. The household and children's pages will be both instructive and entertaining. They will abound in hints and receipts which women so much value.

A brilliant array of novels and short stories by the best writers in America and England has been secured, so that fiction will be one of the most attractive features in the WEEKLY HERALD during 1894.

In fact, the WEEKLY HERALD will be a magazine of the highest order, combined with a complete newspaper.

The Sweet Old Story.

Tell me about the Master!
I am weary and worn to-night,
The day lies behind me in shadow,
And only the evening is light!
Light with a radiant glory
That lingers about the west,
But my heart is aweary, aweary,
And longs like a child for rest.

Tell me about the Master!
Of the hills He in loneliness trod,
When the tears and blood of His anguish
Dropped down on Judea's sod.
For to me life's seventy milestones
But a sorrowful journey mark,
Rough lies the hill country behind me,
The mountains behind me are dark.

Yet I know that whatever of sorrow
Or pain or temptation befall,
The infinite Master hath suffered,
And knoweth and pitieth all.
So tell me the sweet old story,
That falls on each wound like a balm,
And the heart that was bruised and broken
Grows patient and strong and calm —Selected.

Burdette's Message to Boys.

My boy, the first thing you want to learn—if you haven't learned how to do it already—is to tell the truth. The pure, sweet, refreshing, wholesome truth. The plain, unvarnished, simple, everyday, manly truth, with a little "t." For one thing, it will save you so much trouble. O, heaps of trouble! And no end of hard work. And a terrible strain upon your memory. Sometimes—and when I say sometimes, I mean a great many times—it is hard to tell the truth the first time. But when you have told it, there is an end of it. You have won the victory; the fight is over. Next time you tell the truth you can tell it without thinking. Your memory may be faulty, but you tell your story without a single lash from the stinging whip of that stern old taskmaster, conscience. You don't have to stop and remember how you told it yesterday. You don't get half through with the awful sense upon you that you are not telling it as you did the other time, and cannot remember just how you did tell it then. You won't have to look around to see who is there, before you begin to tell it. After Ananias told a lie, his wife had to tell another just like it. You see, if you tell lies you are apt to get your whole family into trouble.

And then it is so foolish for you to lie. You cannot pass a lie off for the truth, any more than you can get counterfeit money into circulation. The leaden dollar is always detected before it goes very far. When you tell a lie, it is known. Yes, you say, God knows it. That's right; but he is not the only one. So far as God's knowledge is concerned, the liar doesn't care very much. He doesn't worry about what God knows—if he did, he wouldn't be a liar; but it does worry a man, or boy, who tells lies to think that everybody else knows it. The other boys know it; your teacher knows it; people who hear you tell "whoppers" know it; your mother knows it, but she won't say so. And all the people who know it, and don't say anything about it to you, talk about it to each other, and—dear! dear! the things they say about a boy who is given to telling big stories. If he could only hear them, it would make him stick to the truth like flour to a miller.

And, finally, if you tell the truth always, I don't see how you are going to get very far out of the right way. And how people do trust a truthful boy! We never worry about him when he is out of sight. We never say: "I wonder where he is! I wish I knew what he is doing! I wonder who he is with! I wonder why he doesn't come home! Nothing of the sort. We know that he is all right, and that when he comes home we will know all about it, and get it straight. We don't have to ask him where he is going, and how long he will be gone, every time he leaves the home. We don't have to call back and make him "solemnly promise" the same thing over and over two or three times. When he says, "Yes, I will;" or "No, I won't," just once, that settles it. We don't have to cross examine him when he comes home, to find out where he has been. He tells us once, and that is enough.

We don't have to say, "Sure?" "Are you sure now?" when he tells anything. But, my boy, you can't build up that reputation by merely telling the truth about half of the time, nor two-thirds, nor three-fourths, nor nine-tenths of the time. If it brings punishment upon you while the liar escapes; if it brings you into present disgrace while the smooth tongued liars are exalted; if it loses you a good position; if it degrades you in the class; if it stops a week's pay—no matter what punishment it may bring upon you, tell the truth.

All these things will soon be righted. The worst whipping that can be laid on a boy's back won't keep him out of the water in swimming time more than a week; but a lie will burn more than fifty years. Tell the truth for the sake of the truth, and all the best people in the world will love and respect you, and all the liars will respect and hate you.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The divine purpose of our lives—let us think of that as we change the year-dates on our letters and ledgers. Let us consecrate ourselves to that purpose. To be better is to be more useful. To be more useful we need the transforming grace. Let us begin the new year right. Let us pray a prayer of penitence, of consecration to God and his sublime work. Yet a little while, and we shall be done with changing dates. One last one will be made for us on the stone above our heads. Make haste, for the time [illegible] an end—and to eternity.—Western Christian Advocate.

Pshaw! Pshaw! Take Beecham's pills.

The Small Obligations of Friendship.

I wonder if the majority of people realize the full necessity of meeting obligations to friends. Those of us who gladly break our costly boxes, giving our all in some supreme moment of adoration, may be great sinners when we meet the small demands of friendship. Do we comprehend the need of the steady purpose to show the one for whom we have a real regard that she is not forgotten?

It is a fact that the mere withholding of expression works often toward delicate, sensitive natures a greater disaster than some sudden seemingly cruel act unpremeditated would. Perhaps the greatest danger in neglect is related to those who are far away, beyond the reach of our voice or sight of our eyes.

A little lapse, if they were close at hand, might be explained, and the shadow which flitted above the relationship dispelled by a look of love; but distance bars out these signs, and so, for the friend who must depend upon the letter for communication, there needs to be a careful purpose and a steady loyalty to fulfill the obligations of correspondence. It happens often that one of the two friends is more happily situated and more favorably conditioned with respect to general social life than the other. It is sometimes the case, too, that the one with the greater social opportunities finds herself pressed by numerous duties, and, naturally, she seeks excuse for little neglects in this fact.

Let this one, however, try to realize the situation of the one at the other end of the line, who waits and trusts, but who at length, as the weeks pass, finds her heart sick through hope deferred. It is not necessary that full sheets, with recrossed pages, should be sent. A few lines penned frequently might hold the reassuring message. The letter would cost little to the writer, and would save the aroma of the friendship.

The letters we intended to write, how many they are! The letters we might have sent, if we had possessed the true sense of obligation to a friendship, stand against us upon the record of unfulfilled pledges.

But we say, if love is worthy its name it will trust on and always. Yes; it will. But does there not come a time when the weakening effects of neglect force away the barriers which love has built against the tide of loss? There comes an hour when self respect, too, clamors for its rights, and insists that the one sided relationship is essentially lost. Ah! the blessed aroma of friendship! This is what sweetens life, giving to the weary heart new strength, offering inspiration, helping almost to create power in service. To some of us the friend is lost when this is scattered. Through it soul may meet the emergency of soul, and heart may sing to heart safe in the blessed secret of love.

What care, then, should be taken to preserve it! And if signs of regard are of any use—as they must be until we pass into that domain where we shall know as we are known—should we neglect to offer them?—Harper's Bazar.

Secrets of Snake Charming.

A snake charmer can by a simple motion of his hand make a moving snake stop instantly. The reason is this:

The snake is a most timid animal. His eyes, while dull to color and form, are quick to motion, especially if it is rapid. If any large thing moves very quickly too near him, he gets frightened and scurries off, while at certain distances the motion stops him if he be moving.

He stops from astonishment, fear, or the wish to see what it is that moves. Hence, he glides on, unconscious of the charmer's presence near him so long as the latter remains perfectly quiet; the snake doesn't know him from a tree or a rock.

But when he gives a sudden evidence of life, the snake is astonished and immediately remains stock still.

In India and Africa the charmers pretend the snakes dance to the music, but they do not, for they never hear it. A snake has no external ears, and perhaps gives evidence of sound only through its skin, when sound causes bodies in contact with him to vibrate.

They hear also through the nerves of the tongue, but do not at all comprehend sound as we do. However, the snake's eyes are very much alive to the motions of the charmer, or to the moving drum-sticks of his confederate, and being alarmed, he attempts to strike.

A dancing cobra (and no other snakes dance) is simply a cobra alarmed and in a posture of attack. He is not dancing to the music, but is making ready to assail the charmer.—Selected.

The Modern Jack Horner.

"Little Jack Horner sat in a corner,
Eating a Christmas pie;
He put in his thumb and pulled out a plum,
And said 'What a good boy am I!'"

But little Jack Horner became a deep mourner
When older he grew and a glutton.
For his liver, I'll state, was like a dead weight,
As he drank wine and ate too much mutton.

Poor Jack's time of grief, however, was brief,
And of sickness he ceased to be fearful;
For a boon friend said "Well, let's try Pierce's Pellets,"
And with good livers both are now cheerful.

$500 reward offered for an incurable case of Catarrh by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Remedy. 50 cts.; by druggists.

ALL OVER THE GLOBE—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are known. Pills of American manufacture easily lead. Why? Because they're smaller; the vegetable extracts are concentrated. There are many liver pills, yet there must be a reason why Dr. Pierce's Pellets give the best satisfaction. Probably because they're sugar-coated, small as grains of mustard seed, therefore, easily swallowed. Most of all—they act in a natural way, and are effective in result. Then, too, after they're taken they can't be felt—so different from the old-fashioned pills, with their griping and violence.

For indigestion, pain in stomach, costiveness and habitual constipation, as well as sick and bilious headaches, these "Pellets" bring such a lasting cure, that they can be guaranteed. Your money is returned, if they do not give satisfaction.

The stepping-stone to Consumption—is Catarrh. It don't pay to let it go, when the makers of Dr. Sage's Remedy will give $500 if they can't effect a permanent cure of your Catarrh.

HAGEY'S KING HEATER,

A WOOD STOVE,

CHAMPION OF THE WORLD.

The NEWEST of all Heating Stoves! The CHEAPEST of all Heating Stoves! The BEST of all Heating Stoves!

The MOST ECONOMICAL Heating Stove ever invented and placed on the world's market!

We call your attention to our patent HAGEY'S KING HEATING STOVE, made of the best American Russia iron and best wrought sheet steel and lined with charcoal iron, ornamented and suitable for bedroom or parlor. We do not hesitate to say it is the best, cheapest and safest quick heater ever offered.

It is KING HEATER because it devours the whole woodpile, burning knots, chunks, chips, trash and anything that will go into the 13-inch opening at the top.

It is KING HEATER because it will warm the whole room in five minutes.

It is KING HEATER because no fire can fall from it.

It is KING HEATER because the ashes do not need removing but once a month or six weeks.

It is KING HEATER because one or two knots or chunks will run it twelve hours in cool weather.

It is KING HEATER because the fire is everlasting.

IN THE Forum for January, Mr. D. A. Wells contributes an unusually valuable article, entitled "The Teaching of Recent Economic Experiences." Naturally his attempt to show the significance of the financial depression (from which, we have reminders, we have not yet escaped), by statistics, is inadequate. The figures are too great to be grasped by the unaccustomed mind. We do not know what it means to say that there have been 16,000 business failures in the United States since January 1st, 1893; what it means to say that between January and October, 1893, 585 banks suspended payment with liabilities of $169,000,000; what it means to say that during the same period railroad property to the valuation of twelve hundred million dollars was placed in the hands of receivers; or what it means to say that the producing classes, factory owners, farmers, factory-hands, and wage workers, have lost one thousand million dollars in the same period. None can conceive of or appreciate results so enormous; but there are lessons, dearly bought, which they teach, that are within the comprehension of every school-boy in North Carolina. Learning these lessons is our only means of compensation. Mr. Wells says that we have been living for a quarter of a century in political conditions that in other countries would have long since ended in revolution and ruin, and that under these conditions we have prospered, ignorant of impending danger, on account of the marvelous resources of our soil and situation. We are now passed the stage where our welfare can be insured by nature. Our country no longer protects us, and we must rise to the occasion and preserve the country. The remedies are simple, and easily suggest themselves, but the problem of their application can be solved only by the coming years. We must begin now and teach the rising generation political economy, the science of government; we must learn it ourselves. The ignorant must not make our laws; knowledge of affairs and mental capabilities must replace the present qualifications of legislators—personal popularity, party strength, private pulls, etc.—which in many instances place men who know nothing of political science, and care less, in responsible offices. It has been a costly lesson at best, but if the country is awakened to a sense of its need of intelligent voters, and learned and broad minded law makers, and executors of the law, nothing will have been lost.

MR. WELLS' statement that our panic was local in cause and effect, is rather surprising. He concedes that England had been more or less in distress sometime before the United States was affected; that Australia, India, and other minor countries, preceded us in the throes of financial depression; but he finds that the United States suffered far more, and differently, than any country which preceded it. He holds that the immediate cause was our own uncalled for distrust in our financial system, which of course was communicated to foreign nations. We have much food for thought in that Canada, separated from us territorially only in imagination, politically, as greatly as England three thousand miles across the Atlantic; and that Mexico, territorially as close to us as is Canada, but hardly nearer politically,—that these countries, situated as they are, have prospered, while we, between them, territorially, and in a manner politically, have suffered as never before. Certainly our trouble was not due to climate, situation or soil, else Mexico or Canada would have been affected also. We must take the other alternative, and lay the blame to political conditions. But the dilemma is none the less difficult here. Canada is an exponent of the advocate of the gold standard monetary system, and has not been troubled by the panic; Mexico, equally an exponent of the advocate of a silver currency, is prosperous. Certainly the relative conditions of these countries are various; still they are not so widely different that they may not throw some light on the problem, with which the great nation lying between is struggling. Canada, gold standard, monarchical (provisional) government; Mexico, silver currency, republican form of government; both prosperous internally and internationally; the United States, between them territorially, a republic, with a varying and experimental monetary system, in the throes of financial distress; which should we follow, Canada or Mexico? A problem greater than the best of us!

THE situation in North Carolina as regards public education has become very interesting, and promises to increase in interest for—quite a time. There are some citizens who request that the State withdraw all aid from its agencies of higher education, in order that there may be no "friction" between the State and the private and denominational agencies of education. There is principle in the question—by no means new—which is worth considering. It is an undisputed fact that the State is unable to afford all its youth the advantages of higher education. It is impossible for the State to aid an institution, which only a small number are able to attend, without favoring that small number. Can the State discriminate in this matter of education? The State cannot so favor every student; some are unable to attend State institutions, while it is within their means to attend a private or denominational institution permitted by law to award the same degree; what right has the State to favor an already fortunate minority? By what right, for what purpose, does the State assist in educating any one beyond enabling him to exercise intelligent franchise, or to perform the functions which intelligent citizenship demand? Does the State educate for the general good or for the individual? If for the latter, then the spirit of equal privileges demands that the same opportunities be given to all. Have denominational institutions a raison d'etre here, beyond preparing students for the ministry? If the State does all else for the few, there is no reason why, as a just State, it should not do the same for all; if impossible to educate all, why do those, for whom higher State education is an impossibility, an injustice? These and many other questions make this matter very interesting.

On the other hand, we have heard the Superintendent of Public Instruction of North Carolina say that he has received not a few letters complaining that there was "friction" between the private and the public agencies of lower education, and requesting that that friction be removed. Where shall State aid begin, and where end? Is there room in our commonwealth for all our institutions of education, higher and lower? Surely we hope so; and surely we cannot afford to destroy any. But this doesn't dispense with the underlying principle of the question.

THE argumentum ad populum in political discussion is now all that is left of that period of forensic political disputations in the school in which Webster, Clay and Calhoun flourished. The logician on the platform is disregarded as being too learned and abstract, and the logical editor is an extinct species. We wish to speak especially of the methods of the class which has replaced the latter, and think one instance sufficient for our purpose.

In the unparalleled discussion, provoked by the financial depression, the subject of finance was studied with greater ardor than any subject, not excepting the tariff, which has confronted the Nation. Yet in the presence of all this research and development of facts, the value of logical deductions was totally disregarded. The effort was to reach the people and excite their emotions by the quickest means. A most flagrant instance of this appears in the statement that our financial system, just as is our central government, must be independent of foreign nationalities; else, we are a subject nation. In the plea for an "honest dollar" it was held that we must have a currency that will be accepted at its face value in Europe. The advocates of free silver at a low ratio contended that as we were not subject to foreign powers our finances could be ordered independently of other nations—a statement that might have been made safely a century ago, but now out of date, and false to the core. We are about as independent as any nation on earth, but we have not and never will reach that stage where we can enclose us with a Chinese wall of unrecognized currency. The conditions of our civilization have brought the nations into closer relations; "steam and electricity are making the world a neighborhood and every man a neighbor." Such are the exigencies of our international commercial relations that depressed conditions in South America are of vital concern to England and the United States. If it were possible for us to prosper without regard to foreign credit, and foreign commerce, it would be unwise. Nations progress by contact, communication and contrast. We are not slaves, we are not subject, we are not individually dependent, but as a nation we must have commercial exchange with other nations, whereof the basis must be one of honest dollars. We believe in a bi-metalic currency, but we have no sympathy with those who claim that our financial system can and should be regulated without regard to foreign relations. We have in Thibet of to-day, and China and Japan of a decade ago, examples of absolutely independent nations, and we may very advantageously learn a lesson from them, and not be too patriotic in our demands for "independence."

A Layman's Studies in the Life and Letters of Paul.

III THE GOSPEL VS. JUDAISM: THE GREAT CONFLICT.

In a previous article I have said that Paul's controversy with the Judaizing teachers of the primitive church was the central fact of his career. That controversy, therefore, deserves some special study. In the present article I shall seek to sketch its origin and development.

The most important revolution in the history of human thought is that which resulted in the substitution of Christianity for the Mosaic economy. It was effected in comparatively few years, and in its beginnings, at least, without violence. The method of it is the highest possible witness to the tenderness and wisdom of our Lord. "The kingdom of heaven," said he, "is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till it was all leavened." He knew that any permanent change in the religious beliefs of a race must take root in its existing beliefs; that the new plant which was to take the place of the old must first spring from a seed in the same soil and prevail at last, not by assaults upon decrepitude, but by absorbing into itself the supports and the elements of that which was passing away. And hence, he did not formally abrogate the law. On the contrary, he said, "I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil." Note his habit of appealing to the prophets of Israel and presenting himself as the realization of their visions. He did not deny his lineage and cut himself loose from the history of his people. He gave that history a new complexion. In him it took a new direction and found its justification. The stock of David put forth a new shoot.

And so it came to pass that, after the death of Jesus, his disciples maintained their former relations in the Jewish community, some of them for years. They observed the national feasts. They took part in the temple and synagogue worship. They observed fasts, the hours of prayer, and the rite of circumcision. In a word, like Ananias of Damascus, they were "devout men according to the law." They did not perceive that their attachment to the person of Jesus involved secession from Judaism. Indeed, the question was not so much as raised at first. In these early days Judaism and Christianity co-existed so peacefully that they seem not to have been apprehended as distinct, much less as mutually exclusive.

But this tranquillity could not last. Very soon the first Christians discovered that they were bound to one another in a closer fellowship within the national family, and the temple ritual must needs be supplemented by the exhortation and prayer of the "upper room." And it is not long before Peter is proclaiming that Jesus is the head stone of the corner, and in none other is there salvation. Only a few hours later, Peter and John, in words practically identical with those of Socrates to the Athenians, formally broke with the leaders of their people and opened the inevitable conflict, saying, "It is better to obey God than men." Stephen the deacon perceived yet more clearly the incompatibility of Judaism and the Gospel of Christ, and, worthy predecessor of Paul as he was in spiritual insight, in courage, and in zeal, he set the two sharply over against one another, and carried the war into the enemy's country. The issue was accepted and his martyrdom was the result.

It is in the individual experience of Paul, however, that we find this antithesis drawn with a distinctness and intensity not to be looked for elsewhere. From the first he had seen that the Gospel and Judaism were radically opposed. Hence the vehemence of his persecutions. And that deep revolution in his nature which we call his conversion did not obliterate in his mind this essential opposition; it merely forced him from the extreme of one side to the extreme of the other. He had felt the galling yoke of the law and the vanity of formal obedience to its code of ceremonies, and in that supreme moment the living power of faith in Christ dawned upon him, the new principle of righteousness triumphed over the old. Henceforth, reversion to Judaism was for him an impossibility, and the protection of his converts from its outworn thraldom was at once the care and the crown of his life.

Paul's work lay outside Palestine, and for probably seventeen years after his conversion the Palestinian church developed unaffected by his influence. During this period, after the subsidence of the first fury which followed upon Stephen's attack upon the national party, the question of Moses or Christ gradually ceased to disturb the external relations of the Christian community in Jerusalem. Indeed, leaving aside the temporary diversion of Peter's experience at Cæsarea, they appear to have settled back into Judaism, regarding themselves merely as a new sect of that time honored cult. So inveterate was this attitude that it has been questioned whether the news of the conquests of the new faith among the Gentiles did not cause in Jerusalem more embarrassment than joy. The Mosaic party could not but ask, How can these Gentiles be one with us unless they first become Jews? The very name Christian is Gentile in form and was first employed in a Gentile city,—a striking indication that Christianity had passed beyond the pale of Judaism. But Judaism would not yield without a struggle. A zealous propaganda was organized within the Judean churches and maintained with unwearying missionary fervor. Paul's first collision with it occurred at Antioch, whither "certain men came down from Judea and taught the brethren, saying, except ye be circumcised after the custom of Moses, ye cannot be saved. And when Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and questioning with them, the brethren appointed"—probably at Paul's suggestion—"that Paul and Barnabas and certain other of them should go up to Jerusalem to the apostles and elders about this question." The so-called council at Jerusalem was the result.

Among Baptists the significance of that conference is often obscured by the prominence given to a matter wholly incidental and subsidiary, namely, the countenance which it can be made to give to the tenet of the independence of the local church. A far more vital question was at issue. A crisis was reached in the development of Christianity. None so transcendent has occurred in all its subsequent history. The question was, whether the Gentiles must become Jews in order to become Christians. Must Christianity be restricted to Jewish legalism, or assume its spiritual and universal character? Does that righteousness which is salvation come by the deeds of the law, or by faith in Christ? As was to be expected, Paul was the champion of the Gospel freedom, and after earnest private conferences with those who were of repute among the apostles and sharp debates with the Judaizers in the public assembly, to whom, as he says, "he gave place, no, not for an hour," he gained what was in reality a triumph for his great cause, though it wore the guise of compromise. (Acts 15: 22—35; Gal. 2: 1—5) He secured his essential aim; his mission and message to the Gentiles were approved by the authorities of the mother church.

But the attitude of the Twelve still remained quite different from Paul's. While they approved Paul's Gospel, they showed none of Paul's enthusiasm. They did not require the circumcision of his Gentile converts, but, in their eyes, the Gospel was primarily for the Jews. "The part played by them in these keen debates was, and could only be, that of conciliation. All their efforts were directed to bring about through these deliberations such a compromise as would preserve unity among all divisions of the church, without placing the new evangelical principle in peril. Hence the equivocal position in which they were found throughout, and the minor part they played in the history of these great struggles."

A compromise may supply a modus vivendi, but it does not settle principles. We are not surprised, therefore, to find that the resolutions of the council at Jerusalem, so far from putting at rest the conflict between the Jewish and the Christian principle, became in reality the starting point for still fiercer conflict. The issue thus formally raised passed, as a line of cleavage, through the church. The serpent of discord established himself in "the paradise of the regenerate," and we have the sad spectacle of one wing of the Christian community seeking to cloud and to destroy the saving work of another. The emissaries of Judaism, who held themselves to be the only genuine Christians, founded no churches of their own, but were content to follow in Paul's track and, stealing into the churches which he had founded, to "undermine his authority, seduce his disciples, and destroy his work under the pretense of rectifying it."

And they were not without success. The churches of Galatia were deeply disturbed by them. So were those of Ephesus and Corinth and Rome. Indeed, the defection at some time or other appeared everywhere, and Paul began to fear that he had labored in vain. The crisis aroused all his energies and put all his resources in play. To some of the threatened churches he hurried in person; to others he sent messengers; to some he wrote letters. It is these letters which show the apostle at his best. One hardly knows what to admire most in them, the overwhelming torrent of his passion, or the keenness of his sarcasm; the skill of his dialectics, or the tenderness of his solicitude.

His anxiety is our gain; in that great conflict his great letters were born.

Opportunities for doing greatly seldom occur; life is made up of infinitesimals. If you compute the happiness in any given day, you will find that it was composed of small attentions, kind looks, which make the heart swell, and stirred into health that sour, rancid film of misanthropy which is apt to coagulate on the stream of our inward life as surely as we'll live in heart apart from our fellow-creatures. And remark, too, these trifles prepared for larger deeds. The one who will be found in trial capable of great acts of love, is ever the one who is doing considerate small ones.—F. W. Robertson.

Talks About Law—No. 22.

BY JUDGE R. W. WINSTON.

TELEGRAMS.

If a person orders any goods by means of the telegraph wire, this authorizes the seller to reply by wire. It is the agency of the purchaser.

The question often arises, "When is a contract, which is made by letter or by telegram, closed?" "Is it when the letter or message is received, or when the one is put in the office and the other is delivered to the agent?" It is the latter.

Some years ago a New Orleans house wished to sell some Mexican dollars. A New York house, wishing to buy, asked the prices by telegram. The New Orleans house replied, "Sell $50,000 at 74." At once, the New York house, by wire, accepted. But the wires were down, the message was delayed four days, and the New Orleans house sold all the dollars to another party.

Mexican dollars advanced in price; so the New York firm sued the New Orleans firm for damages, in not complying with the terms of the contract. The courts held that it was a proper case for damages, because the bargain was struck when the last message accepting the offer was delivered to the agent in New York.

Telegraph companies usually have a rule that if a mistake is made by the company, in the delivery of a message or in its proper transmission, suit must be brought to recover damages within sixty days. In a recent case our court have said that this regulation was reasonable and parties dealing with the company were bound thereby. "It is not a statute of limitations," say the Court, "but a reasonable requirement enabling the company to enquire into the nature and circumstances of a mistake in, or of the delay or non delivery of, the message while the matter is still within the memory of witnesses."

Some regulations made by telegraph companies are held to be unreasonable and hence void. For example, one company had a regulation that upon a message, unrepeated, no damages were recoverable, even for delay in delivering the message. Our Court say, in a late case, that such a regulation is not reasonable; and the plaintiff, the husband of a wife in a delicate condition, had heavy damages because he was kept away by the carelessness of the company in not delivering this message, "Father, come at once, mother is sick." "Because," said he, "the physical pain, mental anxiety and alarm of the wife were greatly increased."

For quite a while in our State, and under various discussions of our courts, it was thought that a regulation that no damages could accrue upon a mistake made in an unrepeated message was not unreasonable. By such a message is meant one not repeated over the wires to the sending operator for correction. On such messages extra charges are made. But, in a very recent case, in which a tobacco firm named Brown & Knott in Oxford sued a telegraph company, it was held that even that regulation was contrary to public policy and void.

In that case certain Richmond commission merchants telegraphed the Oxford firm that an offer of "twenty-seven" cents had been made on the tobacco in Richmond. The message, as delivered to the Oxford firm, read "forty seven" cents. The Oxford firm at once wired to Richmond to sell. The sale was effected at "twenty-seven," and the plaintiff sued the company for damages and recovered.

The companies often attempt to shield themselves against liability by setting out in the printed matter, on the blank telegram, that the company is not, in any way, responsible for the mistakes of its agents, and by attempting to limit its liability, in any case, to fifty times the cost of the message. It is needless to say that these regulations are invalid as against public policy. If answerable in damages at all, the company is responsible for all the proximate and immediate damage flowing from the negligence and carelessness,—though the amount may depend upon whether the importance of the message is known to the company. If the message, on its face, fail to disclose its importance, that fact ought to be communicated to the telegraph operator at the time he takes the message.

A very interesting case against a telegraph company is now in our courts. A young gentleman sued a telegraph company for not delivering, as he claims, a message tendering him a nice office at Wilmington. The company denied all the above allegations. The Judge below held that the measure of damage under the circumstances was the cost of the telegram.

One of the pretty points argued was the measure of damages. The defendant contended that the damages were speculative: how long would the office last? How long would the plaintiff be able to hold it? he might die, &c. The plaintiff contended that the damages were not speculative; that the office had continued two years at least; that he was still alive and fully competent, &c.

Lawyers and doctors often speak of a pretty case. This is one. When decided I will append the opinion to some future article.

"NOT ALMS; BUT A FRIEND."

Last week we wrote of the definite action of giving. In this editorial we shall try to impress our readers with the importance of a more indefinite, though none the less urgent and essential, part of benevolence,—that of giving love and sympathy, without which Christian charity does not exist.

We have said that too much has been said of giving, but we had reference only to the giving of money. We are sure too much cannot be said of the necessity of combining love and sympathy with our gifts, two elements that are often subordinated to the third, the act of giving, which, though important, has no place in comparison to the other elements. Our Christianity is not judged on High by our actions so much as by the spirit which prompts and governs them. Christ was not an almsgiver, nor did he ask alms; he gave love, and he sought love. He did not measure by amounts, or numbers, or frequency. His criterion was the intention and the spirit of the action.

Many, very many, are unacquainted with that charity which consists of the love as well as the gifts of the giver; and here we think is a great denominational weakness. God demands not only a tithe of our incomes, but a part of our time. We cannot do all his works with money—good enough in its place, but inefficient in making Christians, strengthening weakened members, comforting the afflicted, unless there is something of faith, hope and charity in the spirit which prompts the giver. We have seen many Christians give freely who knew nothing of the objects to which they gave, and we are assured they lost a great part of the joy in their benevolence. Some of them eventually lost that freedom and liberality which characterizes the benevolence of those who give, not automatically, but because they are so well acquainted with the objects to which they give that a personal interest is felt in them. In giving alms to the poor, we should not lose sight of the importance which Christ attached to visiting the afflicted. We may be busy, but business, although it may enable us to give more money, cannot excuse us from Christian duty. But, say some, we cannot all be missionaries. True, but we can make ourselves so thoroughly acquainted with the Boards, their works and needs, the condition of the unsaved, that we will feel a personal interest in them. Just so we can learn to sympathize with the orphans, with the struggling ministers, and all other denominational objects through the great amount of literature published in their interest. If we know the needs of a worthy object, and give to that object, it is needless to say that in every respect we will give with more joy, knowing that we are aiding something near and dear to us. God will be responsible for the time consumed in visiting destitute fields, listentening to the representatives of our various boards, and studying their objects, and in efforts to comfort the poor and afflicted about us; we have no fears but that God blesses these actions as well as that of giving alms.

In this way, and only in this way, can our churches be made to feel that interest in the work which they should feel—a broad, loving interest in every object of the Convention, whether we are able to give to all the objects or not. We should know that these objects are ours, ours to rejoice in and ours to support, ours in the name of Jesus and his kingdom of love and peace.

Of course some will say they cannot spare the time, just as others say they have need of all their money. We have only this to say: The time, if not the money, must be spared, if we would "do his works." Christ and the apostles didn't worship on the Sabbath and forget their cause in the week. "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his works." As Christians we cannot afford to sing and pray and worship on Sunday, and, to all appearances, lose our religion through the week. True, we must make a living, but we hope no occupation of Christians is so low that God's works cannot shine in them. We deplore the modern greed which kills men physically and spiritually, and we sympathize with him who labors so hard that Sunday must be given to indolence. But even if all the week days are thoroughly occupied, we can give part of our Sundays to teaching, visiting the poor, the sick, as well as [illegible]. Attending church services is [illegible] daily, but learning how to do Christ's work and preaching his word in its fullness must not be overlooked. Remember, "he that gathereth not with me, scattereth," was not spoken to a class, but to all Christians.

There are many of us to whom these words are applicable. Few, indeed, do their whole duty. We may be great alms-givers, and that is well enough so far as it goes, but we must be friends, else our duty is not finished. We cannot discharge our offices under Christ, in Christ's way, without personal visitation, and sympathy and love, no more than a business man can conduct business without personal contact. We cannot be foreign missionaries; we should be home missionaries; and do what we can by reading and hearing addresses to cultivate an interest and a sympathy in the foreign work.

Such a course stimulates liberality, and were it now a part of the life of each one in the denomination, we would have no doubt of the result. We would be willing never to say a word about giving money, if we were assured that every Baptist in the State would give part of his time, sympathy, and love to the objects of the Convention. And which one of us can say that these things are not Christian duties?

THE PROVINCES OF THE FAMILY, THE STATE, AND CHURCH IN EDUCATION.

We are aware that in discussing the subject of schools, State, private and denominational, we are dealing with a matter of no small concern, and, therefore, are determined to take no hasty steps. We purpose exploring all the phases of the question now before the State, but we have no hope of doing so much, in addition to other duties, in a few editorials. We wish to set forth fundamental principles thoroughly before we consider the main question. In our last issue we showed that the great educational agencies of this and other centuries have been supported and directed by the various sects of the Christian religion. In this issue we shall set forth our views in regard to the disposition of the control of education at the various stages of the process, and we hope to strengthen our position in future issues.

Sociology is said to be concerned with "three normal forms of society,—the family, the State, and the church." To which of these does the school belong? (We use the term "school" in its broadest sense—embracing all organized agencies of education, from the university to the primary school.) The question is answered differently in different countries. In Iceland the entire school system, which is not extensive, is identical with the family; in many countries it is in the hands and control of the State; in others it is controlled by the church. We believe that the wisest policy is to distribute the control of education, at different stages of the process, throughout the three, for it is obviously dependent on them all.

Where the youth has to depend on the family for instruction and direction of studies, we need not say, education is very limited. Parents have livings to make. But the State cannot direct the entire system wisely and justly for many reasons. States haven't consciences. Moreover, such a course tends to paternalism and centralization. It would destroy our individualism. The power in the hands of the State government would be too great. Some one has well said, "Give me the schools of the land, and I care not who make the laws." To place the control of education in the hands of the State is to place the agency for all that is good among men dangerously near politics. But we meet with fully as great barriers to the proposition to leave the matter to the church, using that term in its broadest sense. There are too many kinds of churches, and some are unable to educate their children, while others are able to educate their own and those of others. To leave the matter solely in the hands of either State or church would be giving too much power to certain influences and agencies. Were we "all one," church, State, and the school would be one, but as long as there is a reasonable difference in belief among men, church and State must be kept separate and independent. We think it obvious that there are just objections to placing the entire system in the hands of any of the three branches of society; we hold that it is dependent on them all, and, that while no one of them is equal to, or worthy of the task, each has a part to do; and in doing that part will subserve the greatest good.

We believe the influence of good parents, and the presumption is that all parents are good, on the conduct of their children should be maintained as long as possible. We know the time comes—when the youth leaves home for college—when the direct influence of the parents must be dispensed with; then, as Christians, we believe the youth should be placed under the influence of the Christian religion, or, at least, the religion of his parents. We cannot, as citizens believing in the wisdom and justice of our Constitution, expect the State to favor even the Christian religion. Our Constitution acknowledges a God, but goes no further; in justice to the Hebrew tax payer, it cannot teach Christian principles; in justice to the agnostic and the infidel, it can incline to no definite doctrine, belief, or religious principles. Thus it is manifest that the Christian religion can have no influence in public education, if that justice is done, which our Constitution insures. For this reason, if there were no other, it is not only wise, but an imperative religious duty of Christians to support their denominational institutions.

But we have said the State has a part to do in educating the children of its citizens. We have declared our opinion, and set forth the reasons therefor, that college or higher education should be left to the direction of the family and the instrumentality of the church. We hold that elementary education should be left to the State. The child between the ages of six and twelve is directly under the influence of the parents. The school has no influence over him beyond that of broadening his mind and enlightening his intellect. Whatsoever of dangerous tendency the school might impress, being a public school, non religious, though confessedly moral, can be destroyed by parents. Moreover, elementary instruction is obviously indispensable, and therefore should be placed within the reach of all citizens, and required of all. We may add that teachers cannot afford to make a profession of elementary instruction, for the reasons that in many cases their pupils will be very poor, and their youth always makes the remuneration small. They can easily make the instruction of the very young their profession, if the State assures them of a competence.

We believe the academical—if we may use this term to designate that stage of instruction immediately between the elementary and the college, or higher, as we call it—the academical should be reserved for the private schools, academies and preparatory schools, conducted independently of church and State, but closely allied to the family. Students who enter academies are usually able to compensate the professor; the State is unable to give this degree of instruction to all its children; the private individual may teach as the parent bids; these and other reasons are clearly in favor of this arrangement.

In conclusion, let us say we believe the family should have to do with rudimentary instruction, and, as we have made apparent throughout these remarks, should influence the conduct of their children as far as possible,—which is ordinarily up to the time when the youth enters a higher educational institution.

It is said that certain ministers are using their exalted calling dangerously. We hear the complaint very often that preachers don't preach the gospel as they used to; we have read various review and magazine articles on the decline of the pulpit. What is the matter? The power of the gospel cannot decline. It has lived through the ages, and God has sustained it when everything on earth was under the heel of the oppressor. We don't think the power of the North Carolina pulpit is declining. We know the number of Christians in our State is increasing; we know our contributions are comparatively encouraging. The trouble, in our opinion, is with those who spend their days splitting doctrinal hairs, instead of saving souls; those who seek to find out all God's mysteries, and all mans fallacies, instead of telling the Story. Preach the gospel, and God will answer the question as to the decline of the power of the pulpit.

In a recent issue of the Religious Herald Bro. R. T. Bryan proposes a watchword for 1894. It is, Every Baptist do something for the Lord's work in 1894. This is along the line of our suggestions in our last issue, and we hope it will impress itself on the minds of our readers.

As Baptists we are expected to do something for the Lord's work each day of our lives; we have professed to love Christ who said, "If ye love me, ye will do my works." We want to see a more active spirituality in Christians all over the world, and we wish North Carolina Baptists would set the example. The day is passed—it should never have been allowed to come—when preachers are expected to do the Lord's work. They may do a great part in leading, guiding and directing their flocks, but it remains for the great body of the professors of religion to do the work.

The watchword may be rather indefinite to some. It means that every Baptist, young, old, rich, poor, should not let the year pass without a consciousness that he has done something, by word or deed, to forward Christ's cause. If we can't give money, give words, work, love. Do something for the Lord, the best you can, whenever you can.

"I am going down into the pits; you hold the ropes," said Carey a hundred years ago. There are thirty Careys who are waiting to see if we will hold the ropes for them, when they go down into the pits of heathendom; surely we cannot refuse them. Carey expressed the relation of the Baptists to the missionary as well as it can be expressed. There are many ropes, of many threads, and their strength is in the prayer, faith and works of each individual Baptist. Are you feeling the weight? If not, you haven't a firm hold on the ropes.

It is well known that in the North many ministers have introduced politics into their pulpits, and many objections have been raised. We do not believe that politics should enter God's house; but we do believe that the preacher, being a voter, and in some respects a leader, should be allowed to express his opinion,—not in the pulpit, however. The time has come when preachers must themselves learn, and teach their flocks the difference between "the things of Cæsar and the things of God." A preacher should not deal in political theories, or political questions, carelessly. When he has certain knowledge, let him give it to the people; but otherwise let him confine his efforts to what he knows.

If a preacher is acquainted with political science—the science of government—he may do a good work by teaching it in lectures. But he should never gather a few newspaper theories and give them to the people as coming from a man of God. The people already lose too much time in politics, but they have never given enough to political science—something that is found in books, not newspapers, or in political speeches. Let politics go, but learn the principles of good government is something we all, preachers, editors, citizens, must do.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

... The Florida Baptist Convention meets this week.

....Rev. W. F. Watson of Norfolk spent the holidays in North Carolina.

....Rev. E. M. Poteat contributes an interesting article on the fourth page in this issue.

....Rev. L. P. Vaughan of Virginia recently held revival meetings at Elkin, Iredell county.

....The next session of the Eastern Association will meet with the church at Lisbon, Sampson county.

....Dr. Skinner and Bro. J. D. Boushall of Raleigh are suffering with the "grip," we regret to learn.

....The Baptist Union is the new name of the organ of the B. Y. P. U. A., formerly the Young People's Union.

....We are very anxious to receive as many renewals as possible this month. The books must be put in shape.

....The Trustees of the Baptist Female University meet in this city on the 16th to consider very important business.

....There is religion enough in the world. It is Christianity, the religion of Christ, that the world needs.—Journal and Messenger.

....A Kentucky church had a Ferris wheel Christmas entertainment instead of the usual Christmas tree. The world moves!

....Rev. J. J. Taylor of Mobile, Ala., has been called to the pastorate of the church at Greenville, S. C., resigned by Rev. Dr. J. A. Mundy.

....Dr. T. H. Pritchard baptized several candidates at the night service of his church—Tryon Street, Charlotte, N. C.,—last Sunday.

....With brethren Brown and Moore at the helm, the work in Winston-Salem cannot lag. We do not know of two more energetic pastors anywhere.

....We regret to announce the serious illness of the wife of Rev. W. B. Harrell. Her son, Bro. Eugene Harrell of this city, has been called to her bedside.

....Rev. G. W. Coppedge of Wakefield called in to see us last week. Bro. Coppedge has recently accepted the pastorate of Pleasant Grove church, this county.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter is now one of the Raleigh preachers. He has accepted work near the city, and makes his home in Raleigh. We extend him a hearty welcome.

....Rev. G. H. Church began a series of revival meetings at Statesville last Sunday with a sermon on revivals, showing what they are, and what they are not, says the Landmark.

....Brother Caddell, our agent, has been quite unwell for the last two weeks. He is better now, and has his eye and his book and his hand open for delinquents and new subscribers.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews has changed his address from Gertie, Va., to Moyock, N. C. He now preaches to Mulberry Street church, Portsmouth, and Lake Drummond church, N. C.

....Bro. J. A. Covington of Blackwood's Chapel writes us appreciatively of the work of Rev. H. M. Ingram, who has served as pastor at Blackwood's Chapel for the last five years. The church has now called Rev. D. S. Morton of Stanly county. Bro. Ingram has been very successful at this church in the face of unusually adverse circumstances.

....We are glad to know that Rev. O. C. Horton of Selma, who was taken ill at the Baptist Convention, is now convalescent. He is able to get about very well, but has not fully recovered.

....We were glad to see Prof. F. P. Hobgood in Raleigh last week. He was here in attendance on the meeting of the executive committee of the Teacher's Assembly, of which he is President.

....In a recent letter from Soochow, China, Bro. T. C. Britton writes: "We are all in good health, hard at work, and enjoying fine weather." We will publish a letter from Bro. Britton in a few weeks.

....Rev. W. D. Powell, one of our missionaries to Mexico, has baptized eighty candidates and organized five churches since June. Bro. Powell's visit to the 1892 Convention is very pleasantly remembered.

....We welcome Rev. J. A. Brunson to Asheville and our Convention, and trust that he will, under God, be a valuable addition to our working forces. He comes from the Palmetto State.—W. N. C. Baptist.

....We have received a copy of The Indian Helper, an unique little paper published and mailed by the Indians of the Industrial School, Carlisle, Pa. It has a circulation of 11,000, published weekly; price, ten cents a year.

....Rev. A. M. Simms baptized the first candidate in his new pastorate—the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle—on the night of the 2d. Several others have been received for baptism, and the prospect for church growth is very bright.

....We have received the first issue of the American Baptist Publication Society's latest publication—The Calporteur. Its objects are to publish reports from the colporteurs, home missionaries, and encourage their work. Published monthly.

...."The strength of a chain is in its weakest link" is as true as gospel. The Baptist denomination is to us a chain from earth to heaven; how important it is that every church and every church member put on the full armor of the Lord!

....Rev. C. H. Durham, the new pastor at Bryson City, Tenn., was ordained at Asheville recently. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. G. L. Finch; the charge delivered by Rev. J. L. White. Bro. J. A. Brunson offered the prayer.

....We scarcely remember more pleasant weather for this season of the year than that which prevailed from the 20th ult. to the 6th inst. There was no suffering from cold in this part of the land during the Christmas season, and we should be thankful for it.

....We regret to learn that Rev. Jno. B. Marsh of Piedmont, S. C., is sick. We are glad to know that his first year's ministry in South Carolina has been very successful. Recently his people made him the very appropriate and suggestive gift of a gold watch.

....The Orphanage is now in a better condition than it ever was before, and we ask the friends of the orphans to continue their contributions in order that the Orphanage may never again be compelled to repeat the struggles, sorrows and sufferings of 1893.—Charity and Children.

....Rev. P. S. C. Davis' postoffice is now Fentress, Va., instead of Shiloh, N. C. All of Bro. Davis' work is on the other side of the line, except on one Sunday each month. He occupies the pulpit at Roanoke Island, N. C., each fourth Sunday. The remainder of his work is divided among Centreville, Northwest St. John's, and Bethel, all near Norfolk, Va.

....Rev. Geo. Warton retired from the staff of the W. N. C. Baptist, January 1st, and also gave up his pastorate at Waynesville. He enters on his duties as pastor at Corinth, Miss., immediately. Bro. Wharton has done noble and lasting work for the Lord in this State, and it is with regret that we lose him.

....We were glad to have Rev. R. W. Weaver of High Point with us a few hours last week. Bro. Weaver recently baptized his first candidate, a Methodist brother, who enters Wake Forest College this month to study for the Baptist ministry. Brother Weaver's church recently gave him a handsome gold watch.

....We have received an interesting communication from Rev. J. A. Campbell which will appear in our next issue. We are very glad to hear that Bro. Campbell's school—Buie's Creek Academy—is in excellent shape. Several new students entered at the opening of the new term, and the total number is now one hundred and fifty.

....Bro. Simms of the Tabernacle of this city was treated to a very happy surprise on New Year's. His people lay seige to his residence from fortifications of the most appetizing kind. Of course, Bro. Simms and family were captured soul and body; and, of course, he desires to express his appreciation of the kindness and good will so effectually shown by his members.

....Our many readers will be very glad to know that Miss Fannie Heck is very much better, and that her complete recovery is expected in the near future. Col. J. M. Heck is still in the hands of Philadelphia physicians, and, we are happy to know, is doing as well as could be expected. His condition is still precarious, though there are grounds for hope of his recovery.

....The Tarboro church was dedicated the last week in the Old Year. This church, built in the face of circumstances that would have discouraged less able brethren, is a monument to Bro. O. C. Farrar who began it, and Bro. Hufham who finished it. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Dr. J. A. Mundy, Wilson's new bishop, in the presence of the Tar River Union Meeting, which held its recent session in the new church. We learn from the Scotland Neck Democrat that brethren Hufham, Vass, Mundy, McLeod, Powell, Biggs and Hillard took part in the meeting.

....Attention is called to Bro. Gwaltmey's communication in regard to the Board of Education. Help is needed, and needed now.

....The next issue of the Wake Forest Student, which will come from the press about the 15th inst., will be of especial value to ministers. In addition to the usual admirable features, Rev. E. M. Poteat of New Haven, Mass., contributes an article on "The Minister."

....An apology is due Dr. N. B. Cobb of this city. We stated that in the educational discussion at Elizabeth City he offered a "couter resolution" to the one then under discussion. This is a mistake; Bro. Cobb simply read the original resolutions as amended, for the enlightenment of the Convention.

....The parents of Abraham Lincoln were Baptists of Kentucky, and, though he was never a church member himself, he attributed all that he was to his Baptist mother. It is interesting to note in this connection that the parents of Jefferson Davis were also Baptists of Kentucky.—Western Recorder.

....The three white Baptist churches of Raleigh recently held joint services to discuss the advisability of appointing and sustaining a city missionary. There is a committee on this matter, and it is thought that Rev. A. D. Hunter will be employed. Bro. Hunter occupied the pulpit of the West End mission on Sunday night last.

....Prof. Geo. H. Ross of Durham, N. C., more recently of Elloree, S. C., and Miss Essie Johnson of Oakdale, Alamance county, were married at the residence of the bride's father on Dec. 27th, 1893, Rev. T. M. Johnson of Henderson officiating. Bro. Ross graduated from Wake Forest College last June. The couple have our best wishes.

....We have received the report of the "Proceedings of the Third International Convention of the Baptist Young People's Union of America," held in Tomlinson Hall, July 13–16, 1893, at Indianapolis, Ind. The pamphlet is very interesting to our State just at this time. The model, constitution and methods of the organization are set forth in the report.

....The Leigh Street Baptist church, Richmond, Va., of which Rev. W. L. Wright is pastor, has just put in improved steam-heating apparatus at a cost of $1,450. The church is in excellent condition. Bro. Wright writes: "The Virginia brotherhood are an united, affectionate and noble fraternity,"—just what we already knew.

....Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Owen of Portsmouth, Va., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Sallie Hall, to Joseph E. Britton, which will occur at Court St. Baptist church, Portsmouth, Jan. 11th. This is the third time in four months the genial and generous Doctor has been called on to give away a daughter.

....A Pedobaptist preacher said recently: "I find that to get people to church we must please them." Then his people have been trained in a Sunday-school where the children's pleasure was consulted. Duty and the desire to please and glorify God should be made the sole motives with children, and when they are old they will not demand to be "entertained."—Western Recorder.

....The following from Dr. J. J. Hall of Norfolk is very encouraging: "We have abundant reason to thank God for the work here. We would not boast, but rejoice in that some seventy-five persons have recently joined the church; and God has blessed us with a united and hopeful people. Already pledges are being made for our new church, and we ask the prayers of our many friends."

....It is a pleasure to us to note that the holiday edition of the Colorado Springs Gazette contains a portrait of Bro. Jno. E. Ray, with a sketch of his life appended. Bro. Ray was for some years instructor in the Raleigh Institution for the deaf, dumb, and blind; afterwards Corresponding Secretary of our State Mission Board. He is at present at the head of the Colorado State Institution for the deaf and blind, which has made great progress under his administration. Bro. Ray is an honor to Wake Forest, the denomination and the State.

....Dr. Jno. Mitchell is now situated at his old home, Wake Forest College. We regret to learn that he has been very unwell for the last two weeks, and hope he may be speedily restored. Bro. John will succeed Bro. Gwaltney as agent of the Ministerial Relief Board, who retires on account of pastoral duties. Under Bro. Gwaltney's direction the Board has done great work as is attested by the fact that even in the last year more money was raised for this object than ever before. Bro. Gwaltney leaves his duties in good and worthy hands.

....Rev. N. R. Pittman, one of Wake Forest's most worthy sons abroad, being pastor of Patee Park Baptist church, St. Joseph, Mo., and recently of the editorial staff of the Central Baptist, has been very sick with pleurisy, but is now fully recovered, and is visiting North Carolina. He will go to his father's at Renvert, N. C., and later on we hope to see him in Raleigh. Of course he will visit Wake Forest. Bro. Pittman has been at St. Joseph, Mo., for almost nine years, and has one of the best churches in that State. Bro. J. P. Haymore will accompany him on his visit.

....With the new year two of our more prominent papers make changes in their form and composition. The Baptist, of Baltimore, is now a sixteen page paper, and while not improved in appearance, begins the year with an unusually good programme of contributors. The Standard, of Texas, appears as a seven column quarto, with new head and a number of improvements. The Standard announces that its subscription has almost doubled in the past year. We have wanted for sometime to commend Dr. B. H. Carroll's weekly sermons published in the Standard. They are a feature any paper might be proud of.

Co-Education—Dr. Pritchard Indorsed.

I indorse Dr. Pritchard's statement, in an article in last week's RECORDER—"Co-Education, No. 3"—which declares "facts are worth all the theories in the world." This statement ought to be impressed on all young men. Facts should be known. Facts should impress, teach, and guide us. In presenting his argument for "Co-Education," he uses the following hitherto unknown, but, if true, important statement of facts. He says:

"I had the honor to organize the first woman's missionary society of modern times in this State."

Just what this statement has to do with "co education" is not, I think, fully developed in said article. But he uses it as part of his argument and doubtless, with him and others, it has force. And, if so, how much stronger the argument, had all the facts about female missionary societies in this State been brought out. Look at them:

1. It is a fact that Baptist female missionary societies existed in this State before Dr. Pritchard was born, and they have existed through more than seventy-five years. Dr. Pritchard was born Feb. 8th, 1832, and the "Raleigh Female Missionary Society" sent to the Baptist State Convention, held April 15—18, 1831, for State Missions, $8.00, and for Education, $4 00, and was represented by Rev. P. W. Dowd; the "Bethel Female Missionary Society" sent that year for State Missions, $8.00, and for Education, $2 00, and was represented by Wm. King; the "Cape Fear Female Missionary Society" was represented by Charles McAllister and Samuel Mimms; the "Neuse Missionary Society" sent $30.65, and the "Newbern Missionary Society," with some sisters, from Newbern in their own names, sent $9.04.

In 1832, six societies sent funds to the Convention; in 1833, two; and in 1836, the "Union Foreign Missionary Society" sent for State Missions, $5.00, and for Foreign Missions, $15.28; the "May's Chapel Foreign Missionary Society" sent for State Missions, $10.08; for Foreign Missions, $10.08, and for Education, $10 09; and the "Charlotte Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society" sent for State Missions, $10.00, and to Foreign Missions, $10.00.

The origin of female missionary societies in this State may go back to the work of Elder John Gano in 1754—1760; but certainly, without reasonable doubt (just as the inception of many Baptist colleges, North and South), the existence of such societies can be traced to the advice and personal work of Luther Rice in 1815—1825.

The "Minutes of the Hyco Female Missionary Society" show its formation to have been at Lynch's Creek meeting-house in Caswell county in October, 1816, and in March, 1817, and in 1818, its annual meetings were held at Bush Arbor meeting-house, in 1819, at Grave's meeting house, and in 1820, again at Bush Arbor meeting-house. At these meetings, Elders R. Dishong, J. Landers, Barzillai Graves, S. Chandler and Abner W. Clopton preached. Female missionary societies have existed in this State, with fluctuating interest, but never extinct, from the times of Luther Rice, named above, to the present day.

If Dr. Pritchard will tell when and where he organized the Society referred to by him, I will look up all the facts; and, if the organization of "the first woman's missionary society of modern times in this State' by him is an argument for co education, how much stronger becomes the argument when all these facts are added to what he did in these matters!

Again, Dr. Pritchard, in presenting his argument for "co-education," says:

"I had the honor to introduce in the Convention a resolution calling for the establishment of a society for the relief of our aged and infirm ministers."

I am not now concerned to know how this argument favors "co education," but I am concerned about the large number of facts which might have been added.

2. It is a fact that at the Convention of 1878, "C. Durham, C. M. Cooke, W. B. Clement, L. R. Mills and J. S. Bridges" were appointed a committee to report on ministers' relief. It was found there was no constitutional provision for this object, and the committee had no authority.

In 1882, N. L. Shaw introduced "a plan for ministers' relief." This plan is published and covers more than a page of the minutes. It was referred to W. H. Pace, J. M. Heck, John Watson, N. L. Shaw, J. E. Ray and J. C. Scarborough. But there was yet no constitutional provision for this work.

In 1883, at Edenton, some of us outside of the Convention organized for this work with "C. Durham, President, and C. T. Bailey, Secretary and Treasurer." This organization did splendid work for about five years. It aided a number of aged and indigent Baptist preachers and their widows and children.

At the Convention in Edenton in 1883, in addition to the above organization outside of the Convention, J. D. Hufham moved in the Convention that "C. T. Bailey, C. Durham, J. C. Scarborough, W. R. Gwaltney and C. F. Farris" be made a committee to revise the constitution and report at next session.

In 1884, the committee reported, and the Convention adopted the revised constitution, which named the orphans and aged and indigent ministers as objects of the Convention.

In 1889, Dr. Pritchard presented his resolution referred to by him, asking for a committee to report a plan for the relief of aged and indigent ministers. The committee, with Dr. Pritchard as chairman, reported a plan; and, while it was being discussed, Dr. C. E. Taylor offered, as a substitute for the report of the committee, the following:

"1. That a Board of nine Trustees be annually appointed by the Convention, whose duty it shall be to collect, appropriate, and invest funds for the relief of aged or indigent Baptist ministers.

2. That the Board be located in Wilmington."

This substitute was adopted, and has become the basis of our present operations for the relief of our old preachers.

If the introduction by Dr. Pritchard in 1889, of a plan in the Convention to aid our old preachers (which plan was rejected), is an argument for "co education," how much stronger its presentation becomes when all of these facts are added to what he had the honor to do!!

BUT SERIOUSLY.

Dr. Pritchard gives 384 as the number of co educational "schools and colleges" in the United States, but why did he not tell us that more than thirty such institutions are now in this State? He gives the opinion of professors in seven co-educational colleges from Iowa to Texas in favor of this system. But there is not a word given from a professor in such colleges in our own State. Why go away from home for such facts when they are all around us? Why ignore them? How different his argument had he pointed to the fifteen chartered, living co-educational colleges for white youth now in this State! Here this system has been tested longer, perhaps, than in any other State in the United States. Dr. Pritchard seems to write and speak like this is a new system, and that he is now, for the first time, introducing it to the attention of his brethren. But this is the oldest system of the States. It has existed in "Catawba College, Concordia College, Elon College, Fairview College, Floral College, Gaston College, Guilford College, Hayesville College, Judson College, Kinston College, Lenoir College, Mar's Hill College, Rutherford College, Weaverville College, and Yadkin College"—all co educational colleges and all in this State for more than a quarter of a century. It has been here in about this number of institutions now extinct, and such as have, after years of trial, given up the system for something better.

If there is any one thing the State seems not to need, it is (judged by the number, position, and influence of those it has) an enlarged number of co-educational colleges; and, if there is any one thing the State does seem to need, it is better equipped and endowed distinctively male, and distinctively female, colleges.

Co education has always, and everywhere, so far as I know, been the system adopted when the people could do no better.

But we should not let this discussion, so inopportunely thrust upon us, divert our thoughts or efforts from the work before us. More must be done by the Baptists of this State in the next five years for education than has been done by them in the past twenty years, or they will, for many years, lose their opportunity, if not their possibilities, for enlarged influence and usefulness.

Side tracks are certainly, here and there, needed, but the man who mistakes a side-track for the main-line in denominational work, at a time like the present, is not wise.

Facts are worth all the theories in the world, and hence I have filled this article, not with theories, but with facts.

C. DURHAM.

From China.

Dear Recorder:—I will only write now to inform your readers that we have landed at Shanghai. We left Vancouver, British Columbia, Nov. 18th. We were in a terrific storm, and it lasted for many days. We could not see the sun nor stars for a week. It was the worst storm this vessel ever encountered. Every one was glad when we came in sight of land after being tossed about by the waves out in mid ocean a thousand miles from land.

As the vessel stopped at Yokomama for a day, we saw something of the Japanese. One is impressed at first that they are a race of pigmies. They are quite small; but, after studying them for awhile, you discover that they are very ingenious and robust. Their streets and homes are models of neatness. But it makes one sad to look into their temples and see the images of stone, and then to watch the people as they come and kneel down and worship them, how terrible! It staggers me that I am in a land where there is no Sunday. It has been nearly two thousand years since Christ "came to seek and to save that which was lost," and these people have never heard of him.

I passed by a school in Japan where there were several hundred black-eyed boys, and my heart sank within me as I thought of their condition—in gloom, darkness and despair going down to Christless graves, and they are not aware of it. Let me ask you, who will be responsible for them when we stand at the judgment? Have you done what you could to tell them of Christ?

When one looks out over a heathen land, he cannot but think that the field at home is a small garden spot compared to the great untouched fields here. Only think, just hundreds and thousands of people who have never heard any "glad tidings"! They don't know what "glad tidings" are.

Our voyage was stormy, but God controls the wind and the waves. I will write again when we get located.

Fraternally, F. M. ROYALL.

The Board of Education.

The question with the Board of Education soon is how many of those who want help can be aided? Can the thirty-five already here be helped next term, or shall some of them, yea, more than half of them, go home? With the present outlook, there seems but one way open, and that is to greatly reduce the number. This ought not to be done. It need not be done if all the churches and brethren who have promised us help will send some of it very soon.

Rev. John Mitchell has taken the work now as Corresponding Secretary, and all communications concerning it should be addressed to him at Wake Forest.

W. R. GWALTNEY.

Some articles have been crowded out of this issue. They will appear in our next.

From Bro. Cashwell.

Bro. Blackwell's sermon on "The Baptists and the Lord's Supper" is good. I like it. I am glad it is to be put in pamphlet form.

Nothing strange or unusual has taken place among the Baptists of Hickory for the last three months. We are trying to work on in regular, simple, Scriptural form.

The regular services on the second and fourth Sundays are very well attended, as are also the Sunday-school and the Wednesday-night prayer-meetings. We are trying to preach "the Word" every time, and are praying that the Spirit will bless it to the salvation of souls. We believe he will.

We need a new house here, not because the pastor is drawing such crowds we have not seating-room, but because our old house has served its day, and the Master's cause needs that it give place to a better one.

AT NEWTON.

We are put to great disadvantage. I found the brethren meeting in the Methodist house, when they met at all. We have an excellent house on the way. If we had the floor, doors and windows in, we could use it. There is considerable debt, not against the property, but two of the brethren are responsible for it, and they feel that so long as this debt hangs over them, they can't do anything toward finishing the house. We are doing what we can to get it so we can use it in February. I have labored in some of the most destitute points in North Carolina, and I am satisfied that there is no more important destitute point for the Baptists in the State than Newton. I seldom ever write through the papers, and still less frequent do I beg away from home, or among my own people; but if there is any reader of this who can and will send me a contribution for this much-needed work at Newton, it will be thankfully received, and acknowledged through the RECORDER.

MOUNTAIN GROVE

is a church of about seventy-five members, six miles southwest of Hickory. They have a good house and no debt. I found them in "peace and harmony"—agreed on doing nothing. But congregations are increasing, and we made a fair beginning on collections. I think the prospects are very encouraging for a good work.

SOMETHING TO EAT.

On the night of the first, brethren and sisters came to the parsonage with almost all manner of eatables. The Book says it is more blessed to give than to receive. There are times, however, when, to say the least, it is blessed to receive. Their coming was seasonable. God bless them; and whatever of earthly goods he may deny them, may they be "rich in faith."

C. S. CASHWELL.

Hickory, Jan. 5, 1894.

Here and There.

SOME DURHAM BAPTIST HISTORY.

I am sojourning in Durham during the inclemency of winter, and perhaps a note from a visitor may be of interest to the brethren at large. I worship with the first church where I held my membership for more than six years while Durham was my home. This church has a history. I knew it when it worshipped in an ordinary wood building located in a beautiful oak grove on the east side of the Red Mountain road between a quarter and a half mile from the depot, with old Bro. Jesse Howell, now over eighty years old, as pastor. It has been my pleasure to see this dear old saint since I have been here on my winter sojourn and listen to him recite his labors and triumphs in the Lord's kingdom when he was able to do efficient service. I have had pointed out to me the spot where he first preached the gospel in this section. It was at a common log school-house about three miles west of the depot. This was perhaps fifty years ago or more. The Lord blessed his labors; the work of conversion and baptism began and continued, and resulted in the organization of the Rose of Sharon church, located as above described. After the war, when Durham became a center of the tobacco trade and developed into a town, it became necessary for the church to adjust herself to the demands of the situation. Bro. Howell's modes being adapted to rural life, he retired from the church. After his retirement for some years several brethren held short pastorates of the church, and in 1874 Bro. C. Durham was called and accepted the pastorate. He soon took in the situation and induced the church to arise and build. The result was the erection of the present meeting house of the First church, located on the comb of the ridge that divides the waters flowing into Eno river from those flowing into the tributaries of the Cape Fear river, and fronting Mangum street. When this was done, some of the brethren who lived in the country and whose residences were not taken into the corporate limits of the town, were organized into another church about six miles north west of the town, retaining the old name of Rose of Sharon, the town church taking the name of the town. Very soon Yate's church, three miles south west, sprang up. After a few years the Second church, in the west end of Durham, was organized; then a little later on the Third church, in East Durham, came into existence, and recently a church has been organized about four miles north east of Durham, and are now engaged in building a house of worship.

Thus the good work goes on from the foundation laid by that veteran of the cross, who still survives to witness the results of the pioneer work done by him reaching back fifty years or more.

It was my privilege to attend the Union Meeting of the Mount Zion Association, held with the first church of Durham Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the last three days of the year 1893, where I learned much of the progress of the work in the western part of the territory, Burlington and adjacent points. Bro. Hocutt seems to be the bishop of that section, and the right man in the right place. It is inspiring to hear him speak of the progress of the kingdom of Christ within his bounds of operation. If things goes as they have started, in ten years that whole section is bound to be Baptist. And why not, Jesus Christ was a Baptist!

Bro. Carroll's sermon Friday night on "Christ the same, yesterday, to-day and forever," made the Lord's people feel that their faith rests on a sure foundation, one not affected by the mutations of time. If shouting had been the order of the day, I dare say a dozen more or less who heard the sermon would have been in for it.

The discussions of the questions propounded seemed to give a great deal of satisfaction, and I doubt not did good. Everything passed off most pleasantly, with one exception, and even in that no bones were broken so far as heard. One of the brethren appointed to lead the discussion of one topic—a topic of much importance—arose and excused himself by calling on a visiting brother to make the leading address, and so the visiting brother had to do the best he could or back out squarely. Well, no matter who may have been taken by surprise, it was a method adopted by the brother of showing his respect for age, a quality or grace not extensively cultivated in this age of rush and bustle and glitter and parade.

Bro. Carroll's speech on the question, "Does indebtedness to men excuse us from giving to the Lord?" was so masterly that the Union called for its publication in the RECORDER. So nothing more need be said of it here, for if published it will speak for itself.

Bro. Hocutt stated that the Baptist cause (which is the cause of Christ) is 500 per cent. in advance of what it was in the bounds of the Association when the Association was organized some seventeen or eighteen years ago.

Bro. Tyree, holds a high place in the estimation of the First church, as do also the pastors of the Second and Third churches.

Young People's Societies.

There is a demand for them. It is seen in the existence and prosperity of Associations and societies that are undenominational.

The question we have to face is, shall we let these organizations take our young people from this legitimate church work, and lose their much needed aid? A glance at the good work they are doing in other places through organization is an earnest of what they can do in our State and in our churches. In New York, they number 108,000 members, and gave $31,861 to missions last year. In New Jersey they gave $10,716. Properly organized they would help fill our empty and overdrawn treasuries. There is a larger blessing than the good their money may do, it is the moral force derived from such organizations. We feel it in our Associations and Conventions. Why would not an organization of our young people have the same kind of result.

I will feel under obligations if any pastor having a young people's society, or prayer-meeting, or social circle, or any kind of organization will inform me of the fact. I hope if this request meets your eye that you will drop me a postal at once.

I would like to commend the Young People's Leader. The first copy is excellent. Subscribe at once. Price 40 cents.

Resolutions of Ballard's Bridge Church.

The Ballard's Bridge church, Dec. 9th, 1893, adopted the following resolutions of respect to their retiring pastor, Rev. A. W. Burfoot:

WHEREAS, Rev. A. W. Burfoot, after having served this church as pastor for the past six years, has tendered his resignation, to take effect with the close of the present year; be it, therefore,

Resolved 1st. That we have found in him a faithful exponent of the gospel; ready at all times to cry down evil in all its forms, and exalt virtue and righteousness above all things else.

Resolved 2d. That we believe him to be an exemplar in daily life, who may be followed with safety by all who may be thrown in contact with him in the battles of life.

Resolved 3rd. That we will cherish his memory with fond recollections, and that our prayers shall follow him wherever his lot may be cast, hoping that he may be continuously successfully in winning souls to Christ and in the general upbuilding of the kingdom of the Master.

Resolved 4th. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our church record, and that the same be presented to our worthy retiring pastor in token of our appreciation of his faithful services for the past six years, and that a copy be forwarded to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Adopted by the church in conference on Saturday before second Lord's day in December, 1893.

$200 in Debt—Plan to Pay It.

Dear Recorder:—At a meeting and re-organization of the Executive Committee of the Eastern Association at Burgaw, on the 28th of December, we found that we are indebted to our missionaries about two hundred dollars for services already and faithfully performed. To cancel this obligation, to meet the needs of the laborers, and enter upon the new year free from debt, we decided to divide the field among the members of the Committee and visit each church in the Association during the month of January, and if possible, raise the amount aforesaid. We affectionately ask the pastors to receive the member of the committee cordially and help us in the work.

Of South Carolina.

THE ANDERSON CONVENTION—PUBLICATIONS—BAPTIST CONGRESS AND DR. BURROWS—AN UNKNOWN BROTHER, &C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Well, our Convention at Anderson is over, and the smoke has all cleared away, so that one can view the field without any discomfort. This meeting was a great surprise to many, and possibly a greater surprise to your correspondent than to any one else; for from all that I had seen and heard I supposed that we were going to have times and times and half times. I confidently expected to see many of the Lord's host lying slain upon the field of battle, but I have been unable to see or to find a single wounded man. Every fellow escaped without injury, and there is now rejoicing in the camp over the wonderful turn which things took. I think that we have in this a practical demonstration of the fact that we South Carolinians are great fellows to make a noise, and, if possible, we would set the whole course of nature on fire with our tongues, and have all the ends of the earth behold our ways.

THE PUBLICATION BUSINESS.

The fact was clearly demonstrated that the brethren are nearly all in favor of our own Sunday-school Board. The American Baptist Publication Society men, as it seemed to me, were in a woeful minority. For years our State Board has been having some kind of co-operation with the Society which was of great advantage to the latter, but of very little, if any, to the Board and to our work, when everything connected with the transaction was taken into consideration. The Board was informed that if this co-operation was not discontinued they would have a big fight on their hands. The Board very wisely accepted the suggestion, and recommended as a closing item of their report, that it be discontinued. The friends of our Convention series were so confident of success that when a motion was made to strike out this recommendation they let it go without debate. The result was a vote of about five to one to let it stand. It seems to me that the Publication Society has seen its best days in South Carolina, and it will do far less in the way of supplying literature for our Sunday schools than it has ever done. I rejoice to see that old North Carolina at her last Convention took high ground in favor of our series, and I learn from a friend, who has made the matter a subject of close study, that there are good reports from the whole South along this line. So we have a solid South in more things than one. I cannot see how it is possible for us to fail to support our own publications, for it is our work, and we cannot leave our work and go out to help other people. I have no fears since South Carolina has practically settled the question, for I am sure that brethren everywhere were holding their breath to see how she would do it, and that they were waiting to know on which side of the fence they had best fall.

BAPTIST CONGRESS.

Just now the tune in our State has been struck to a new song, and it has been raised in a very high key. A goodly number of the saints crossed the Savannah, and in the city of Augusta saw for the first time in their lives a Congress in session. Now you never heard in all your life such a noise as the little fellows are making who went over there. It almost takes one's breath to hear them, and the screaming is so loud that I am nearly deaf. Such bragging on mortal men, and puffing and blowing was never heard before. Dr. Lansing Burrows has my profound sympathy, for I know the great shower of taffy which has fallen upon him from our side of the river will weigh his big frame down, and I fear that he will not recover in time to attend our Convention next May. The thing was presided over by a Governor, and I suspect, from all that I hear, that most of our brethren never saw such an animal before, and they were surprised to know that he was human, and especially to learn that he was a Christian. The whole business closed with a big supper, and this filled the brethren to overflowing. I have always heard that the way for a woman to reach a man was through his stomach. I suppose that good Dr. Burrows acted upon this principle, and captured the the hungry saints, and now leads them captive at his will. It must be a great thing to eat supper at a big hotel with a high sounding name in a big city with a lot of big men, Congressmen, Governors, &c. It would run almost any set of corn-field preachers wild. At least, this is the inference I draw from the noise that the brethren are making who were at one a few weeks ago.

PALMETTO TWIST.

Some fellow, I believe his name was Brown, had something to say about a Palmetto with a twist in it. Now, I do not know, but I think this palmetto is pretty straight, and that it will continue to survive even though it may receive a few chops with a hand axe ever and anon. However, as I am not much acquainted with Mr. Brown, I will not make many remarks to him. I do not think any such man lives in our State. If so, I am unable, just at this time, to locate him. Ah! I have it now. He is writing over a nom de plume, and striking his brethren in the back. Naughty fellow so to do!

I am yours with everlasting good will, and to be heard from again,

PALMETTO.

Church Annexes.

The writer was not present at the close of the late Baptist State Convention, but it is evident from reports that the craze for multiplying organizations and annexes for church work has struck some of our Southern brethren.

The church is the only organization that our Saviour assumed the head and leadership of when he was contemplating the needs of men, and I am inclined to believe if he were here to-day arranging for the evangelization of the world, and the relief of all suffering humanity,—with due deference for all benevolent institutions,—the church would be his only institution for this work.

I thank the Masons, the Odd Fellows, and allthe charitable institutions, for what they have done for the world, and are doing. And especially that they have done it as they have as entirely human institutions, but I still believe that there is no good that they purport to do that is not comprehended under the design of the church, and if the churches had been all the while actively engaged in performing their function as the saving and uplifting power of humanity, mind, soul and body, as the designer intended they should, there never would have been provocation for the establishment of new and unsanctioned societies.

That there is great and imminent need for the training and better development of Christian people in all the evangelical graces is manifest, but why not do it in the name of Christ, i. e. the church, which is his only representative on earth? Can we conceive that the platform of the church is not broad enough to give scope to ample development and benevolence? What need is there to man except the need to please God? Since the organization of the church, and the apostolic interpretation by precept and example, of its functions, has new discoveries or revelations brought new duties and obligations that transcend the pales of the church? If not, then, why not better conclude that a present necessity is development of our churches, and not titled annexes or societies?

When the Grecians complained that the Hebrews neglected their widows in the daily ministrations, the apostles did not say that it was work without the bounds of the church, and make it incompetent to serve this demand, but they called upon the church to supply this need, and recognized its ability to do the work.

Now, some of our astute and nervously aggressive brethren may take occasion to say that I am too old fashioned and narrow in my views, but they can't accuse me of being out of harmony with the Bible and the abiding duty of the church.

I do not believe in running in ruts or holding to belief or practice because it is one of the landmarks of the fathers, but the rather I would have us correct their errors, taking advantage of their good examples, and go on to a more perfect state.

Our fathers largely neglected to encourage or work in the Sunday school, which is not an appendage, but the church itself in the exercise of its most potent function for good. Now, let us, one and all, oil up this piece of machinery, and put it to work for all it is worth. No better field can be opened for the development of both old and young in their full Christian capacities than here—such as cannot be afforded in the best of societies. The trouble, we think, is that this part of the church work is so neglected. We have not yet used the wisdom of "the children of this world" in preparation for Sunday-schools. Nor is our best talent employed to make this failure a success. But more about this some other time.

Again, our fathers were not systematic in their church work, and woefully lacked in method. With civilization and the multiplied phases of evil running riot with each other in a single era, our churches need to systematize and concentrate all their forces to combat with the enemy, and not to scatter their energy in a multiplicity of societies to do the same work. Here is one of our biggest failures as pastors. We lack method and tact in the management of our churches to reach the very best and most speedy results. Our Saviour was methodical and systematic. He had the multitude to sit down in fifties to be waited upon by the disciples, and I suppose each disciple had his part allotted to him in the service. They went out to preach, two and two, and in the order of the arrangement in the plan of salvation he had a well-defined method. Now what I want to show is this: If the churches themselves are duly organized and developed, there will be no time nor need to organize or run other societies.

Let us magnify the church of Jesus Christ, and do what we do "in his name." If the pastors would give the benefit of their experience in church development through our church organ, and every one would vie with the rest in practical application of the best methods to do the work, I think we would note great progress without expense to the church. Made Happy at Christmas.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I want to say through the RECORDER that two of my churches, East Bend and Shiloh, made my wife and I easy and happy during Christmas, and for days to come. The box sent by the brethren and sisters of East Bend church contained flour, meal, ham, beef, lard, sugar, coffee, eggs, butter, apples, dried peaches, and other articles. The box sent by the brethren and sisters of Shiloh church contained all the good things of the season, for which we are thankful. We greatly appreciate the kindness and sympathy of the brethren and sisters. I feel greatly encouraged, and mean to be more faithful during the coming year. Other nice articles were presented by our neighbors and friends. The Lord be praised for it all.

The Question of Higher Education.

Dear Recorder:—Apropos of the educational discussion in North Carolina, I mention a conversation which may be of interest.

The gentleman with whom I conversed was brought up in Boston, and is a graduate of Harvard. I asked him if there were schools of high grade in Massachusetts supported in whole or in part by the State. He said he knew of only one—the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. And he added that State support of colleges or of a university was contrary to the settled policy of his State from the beginning. "The business of the State," he went on, "is to foster and perfect the public schools. Here is a field for all the wisdom and all the money the State can command. And we leave to private enterprise the founding and equipment of schools—like Harvard and Wellesley—which in the nature of the case can reach only a small proportion of the population. Moreover, Harvard and Wellesley and the rest would instantly oppose the founding and support by the State of a State University, believing such an institution to be wrong in principle and unnecessary in fact."

One other word. There is just now in this latitude an acute disturbance in educational circles due to the so called Spelliesy bill which is pushed by Roman Catholics for introduction into the New York legislature. This bill provides for a division of the public school fund among religious denominations. It has raised a storm of opposition. The gist of the opposition is in this proposition: Public money for public schools. School money collected by taxation from all the people must be devoted to the education of all the people in schools which the people control. The diversion of such money to another purpose whatsoever contravenes the educational policy which by distinction has come to be known the world over as American.

It would be strange indeed if by the blinking or confusing of this principle, North Carolina should be found in the company of their highnesses Cardinal Gibbons and Apostolic Delegate Satolli and of his supreme Highness the Pope of Rome!

Yours cordially,

EDWIN M. POTEAT.

From South Carolina

Dear Recorder:—We have greatly enjoyed your accounts of the recent Baptist State Convention, and among the number of interesting items, three struck us as exhibiting in a large measure, the spirit of independence and progress that pervaded the Convention. Matters of local interest were relegated to the proper authorities, the local churches. The brethren do not believe in the retrenchment policy in missions. Their purpose is enlargement. Circulation must be kept up in the extremities. "The light that shines farthest shines brightest at home." They were willing to discuss so unpopular, and yet so important and living a question as co-education. We honor the brother whose head and heart are set for the defence of this system. We are among those who believe this will be the prevailing system, even in so conservative a State as North Carolina, before a great many years shall have passed. We are glad the Convention comes within our reach next year.

We shall soon close our fifth year on this field, and there are few pastors who have enjoyed more constant expressions of appreciation from their people. Thanksgiving, Christmas, or the visiting brother have never yet come without their sharing in our entertainment in a substantial way. A neat extension dining-table, together with a number of nice edibles, constituted Mrs. Dowell's Christmas present from the ladies of our church.

Our hearts and sympathies are with you in your efforts to lead the people up to a higher plane of usefulness and Christian living.

Hoping for you still larger usefulness and increased prosperity in your responsible work, I am, fraternally,

C. L. DOWELL.

A Superior Lesson Help.

Very many of our teachers and superintendents feel sorely their need of capacity to intelligently teach the lessons of the Sunday-schools. They cannot have, at so little cost, any better help to prepare them for successful teaching than The Baptist Teacher, published by the American Baptist Publication Society. Its "Expository and Practical Notes," "Lesson Topics," and "Hints on Teaching the Lesson" for the different classes, if well studied, are very helpful.

Out of the Sunset Sea. By Albion W. Tourgee. Merrill & Baker, New York. Price, $1.75.

We are glad that the distinguished author has found another and a wider field for the basis of his last fiction. "Out of the Sunset Sea" is an admirable historical novel based on Columbus and his search for a new world. It is peculiarly interesting just at this period, having to deal with a subject recently so prominent in our minds. Tourgee has lost none of his powers of description in narrative,—in fact we have found "Out of the Sunset Sea" more interesting, and stronger in plot and execution than any of his former works. North Carolinians and Southerners should read this book, and judge Tourgee's powers by it rather than by his former works. The illustrations by Aimee Tourgee are strikingly vital and very appropriate.

The Ladies' Home Journal for January is fully up to its former high standard. The second instalments of "How Little Lord Fauntleroy Really Occurred," by Mrs. Burnett, and "My Literary Passions," by W. D. Howells, and Pomona's letters are of great interest. The various departments are, as usual, interesting and instructive.

We have noticed a decided improvement in our College magazines this year. The improvement of two—the University Magazine and the Wake Forest Student—is especially gratifying. In the University Magazine for December appear several articles of marked interest, among them the conclusion of Dr. Venable's sketch of Student Life in a German University. The influence of the Chair of English is plainly apparent in the occasional excellent discussions of Shakespeare's works.——The Wake Forest Student for December is unusually attractive. Prof. Lanneau's admirable articles on Electricity in the November number is followed this month by "The Science of Fairy Tales" by Prof. Sledd, which would be a credit to any of our national magazines. This series of contributions by the Faculty adds greatly to the value of the magazine. Of the other contributions, all of which are creditable to their authors, the "Religion of Cicero," by the late R. R. Day, gives new insight into the life of our lamented brother. The editorials and departments are as strong as usual. We hope the Student may maintain the present high standard of its contributions.

Current Topics for December is before us. It is replete with valuable articles by distinguished writers on the topics of the time. "The Parliament of Religions," ably discussed by leading divines; Prof. Henry Drummond's "Three Things that Make up Life"; the "Assassination of Mayor Carter Harrison," and "The Mighty Dollar" by Jno. M. Stahl, are among the more valuable contributions.

The Old Testament and its Contents. By Prof. James Robertson, D. D., of the University of Glasgow. Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., New York. Price, 30 cents.

In this book we have a concise discussion of the Law, History, Poetry, and Prophecy of the thirty-nine books of the Old Testament. The author shows deep research, and has crowded the rich results of his investigations in a volume, the price of which puts it within the reach of all. It is a valuable addition to the Bible class system.

The Pentateuch. By Rev. A. J. Rowland, D. D. 16mo, 96 pages. Price, 50 cents. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

On the title page of the little book we are told that it belongs to the series of Bible Handbooks which have been provided for by the Publication Society. It marks a worthy beginning of the series. It is small as the number of its pages, but it contains a vast amount of information, and points out to the student the means whereby much more may be obtained. Following the Introduction, the books are taken up in order. They are thoroughly analyzed, and difficult points as to the authorship, composition, and interpretation are explained. The general make up and appearance of the book are very attractive, and it would seem that this series, if carried out as begun, will be of very great service to our young people and to others who may be led to use the books. This first volume of the series cannot be too highly recommended.

The Columbia Desk Calendar, which is issued annually by the Pope Manufacturing Company of Columbia Bicycle fame, is out for 1894, much improved in appearance. It is a pad calendar of the same size and shape as those of previous years, having a leaf for each day, but its attractiveness has been heightened by the work of a clever artist, who has scattered a series of bright pen-drawings through its pages. It also contains, as usual, many appropriate and interesting contributions from people both bright and wise.

Three Roman Girls. A Tale of the Catacombs. By Mary E. Bamford. 12mo, 253 pages. Price, 1.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

This is a story of Rome during the reign of Diocletian and connected with the terrible persecution of Christians with which his name is associated. The three Roman girls who give the title to the book are sisters and members of a family driven from home by the remorseless edict of persecution. They and others were hunted like wild beasts, and many lost their lives in the arena and throughout the provinces under the unspeakable cruelties of their foes. The volume is one of the young peoples' series of select fiction, and will be most serviceable, not only in giving a vivid picture of the life of those early days, but also in teaching what at times it has cost to be a Christian.

The Reasonable Christ. By Geo. E. Merrill. 220 pages; cloth. Price, $1.25. Silver, Burdett & Co., Boston.

The author of the Reasonable Christ has fully attained his "one desire in the preparation of this book;" that is, "to present the Christ of the gospel as one who satisfies the reason as well as the hearts of believers. We have greatly enjoyed the book, and place it among the most valuable philosophical contributions on the life and words of Christ. Chapter VII, on the "Questions of the Times," in the light of our knowledge how Christ met the questions of his time, is both interesting and instructive. The book is well and strongly written, and thoroughly logical, and strengthens the cause, where its enemies claim it is most weak.

What Baptists Stand For. By Lemuel Moss, D. D., LL. D. 16mo, 23 pp. Price, 5 cents. Philapelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

The special excellence of this pamphlet largely consists in that it deals with current conceptions and misconceptions in relation to Baptists. The subject is treated negatively and positively. On the one side it is said that Baptists do not stand for the opprobrious doctrine and polity which some have charged against them. On the other hand they do stand for certain distinctively New Testament, and hence, vital principles, as they have always stood.

The twenty-seventh volume of The Homiletic Review opens with a comprehensive article by Prof. Wm. C. Wilkinson, on "The Attitute of Christianity toward Other Religions." Dr. Robert Balgarnie follows with an article dealing with some of the difficulties of prayer consequent upon the doctrine of the Trinity, as held by those who maintain the evangelical view. The Rev. Wm. C. Schæffer discusses the subject, "Emotion in Religion." Dr. Wm. Hayes Ward tells of the light that has been thrown by recent discoveries upon the life and character of Belshazzar. The Sermonic Section contains several timely sermons for the beginning of the new year. An interesting description of the social and religious customs of the Ainu, by Rev. A. H. McKinney will be found under the head of Sociology and Comparative Religion. In the Miscellaneous Section are two helpful papers, one by Rev. E. P. McClintock on "Fellowship with Christ in His Sufferings an Essential Qualification for the Work of the Ministry," the other by B. B. Loomis, D. D., on "Ideal Worship." This number augurs well for those that are to follow. The Homiletical Review is almost indispensable to those engaged in the work of the ministry. Published monthly by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York, at $3 00 a year.

The late Dr. James A. Delke.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I desire to express through the columns of the RECORDER the sentiments of admiration and affection entertained by my family and me toward Dr. James A. Delke, who recently passed to the heavenly land.

Bro. Delke came into our home in June, 1885, when I was in charge of Thomasville Female College. He remained with us while there and went with us to High Point when we removed our school to that place and remained until last April when he went to his nephew's at Conway, S. C., where he died as you have already announced. He was fully employed in teaching for the first four years and partially for the greater part of the remainder of the time, being one of our family. We greatly admired him for his profound erudition, his versatile talent, his genial nature, and his warm and true heart. We loved him for all these, and still more for his devotion to the Lord Jesus, and his high ideal of character and devotion to duty.

James A. Delke, A. M., LL. D., the scholar, poet and christian, is no more, and earth is poorer; but he is happy, our loss being his gain. There are few with such varied and extensive scholarship and talent, and gentle, kind, loving hearts.

With a heart full of love for our departed friend and brother, I pen this tribute to his memory. Yours fraternally,

J. N. STALLINGS.

A Barrel Clothes Hamper.

A very satisfactory receptacle for soiled clothes can be made, says the Country Gentleman, by covering a barrel with what used to be called furniture calico, but now is sold under the name of comfortable print. The barrels that pulverized sugar comes in are of good size for this purpose. Carefully break off all nails that project, both on the inside and outside. Line the inside of the barrel with smooth brown paper, or remnants of wall paper can be used, using flour paste to fasten the paper in. Measure four pieces of print the depth of the barrel, allowing four inches extra for the frill at the top. Join the pieces and run a strong thread around the lower edge to draw it on; fold over two inches at the top and gather at the bottom. Draw this cover over the barrel, even the fullness, and secure it in place with small tacks. Place a two inch band of silesia around the top to hide the tacks. Cover the lid of the barrel, inside and out, with the print. Make a knob in the center of this lid by putting a screw through the medium sized spool and screwing it firmly in place. Cover the spool with silesia like the bands on the hamper. This makes a neat and handy place to keep soiled articles, and each week when they are removed the hamper should be given a few hours' exposure to the sun and air.

Giving Cheer or Gloom by our Words.

Words of cheer are words of help. Words of gloom are words of harm. There is a bright side and a dark side to every phase of life, and to every hour of time. If we speak of the bright side, we bring the brightness into prominence; if we speak of the dark side, we deepen its shadows. It is in our power to help or to hinder by a word any and every person whom we are with. If we see a look of health or of hope in the face of an acquaintance whom we casually meet, and we tell him so, he goes on his way with new life in his veins. If we see a look of failing strength and of heaviness of heart in one to whom we speak, and we emphasized the fact that he looks poorly, we give him a push downward as our contribution to the forces which affect his course. A look or a word can help or can harm our fellows. It is for us to give cheer or gloom as we pass on our way in life; and we are responsible for the results of our influence accordingly.—Sunday-school Times.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

The Society Woman as a Failure.

The life and occupations of a society woman, in failing to awaken her to her full development, fail also in rendering her companionable to the business man, who has little time to indulge his taste for æsthetics. It is the wife's over valuation of sentiment, and the lack of sympathy and comradeship between husband and wife, which lead to the well-worn statement that marriage is a failure; but may not the truth rather lie in the fact that marriage is a failure in just so far as woman is a failure? Can she ever grow to her full status and stand on the same plane with man as long as she continues a creature of cramped and undeveloped energies?—Bertha Monroe Rickoff.

Are There Many of Them?

"But, alas! there are many Christian parents who neglect to provide good reading for their families; and when asked even to subscribe for their church paper, object because they say they cannot afford it!—yet they subscribe for sensational secular and Sunday newspapers, and thereby often the tastes, the morals, and the character of their children are ruined. There is a fearful responsibility upon parents in respect to this momentous source of moral corruption."—Lutheran Observer.

Does Indebtedness to Men Excuse Christians from Giving to the Lord?

Outline of an Address made by Dr. J. L. Carroll at the Union Meeting at Durham, Dec. 30th, 1893, and requested for publication by the Union.

Many seem to think so. When appealed to for a contribution to the Lord's work, they often reply, "I am in debt, and I must be just before I am generous." What they owe to men they regard as a matter of justice; what they give to the Lord is a matter of generosity, pure and simple. They do not sing:—

"O to grace how great a debtor, Daily I'm constrained to be."

They do not regard God as one of their creditors at all; and yet he is one of the highest dignity—a creditor to be preferred, whose claim should be met first. He evidently thinks so. In accordance with this view he gave the law under the old dispensation concerning the first fruits of the flocks and fields and other products of human labor, which were to be devoted to his service. To the poor widow of Zarephath, who said—1 Kings 17: 14—"As the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but a handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse; and behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it and die." God's representative said, "Fear not; go and do as thou hast said; but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and thy son." And under the new dispensation the Lord himself has laid down the law—Matt. 6: 33—"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." The interests of the Lord's kingdom are of primary importance; food and raiment are secondary in character. According to the Scriptures, then, men ought to make God a preferred creditor; and the considerations which usually prompt the preference of debtors would make him such also. For instance, some prefer to pay,

1. Those most able and willing to help them afterward. This is a mercenary motive, but it is none the less powerful. Some men will have an eye to future business operations, and the best way to get help in time of need. But who is more able and willing to assist than God is? Ps. 75: 6, 7—"For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge; he putteth down one and setteth up another." Prov. 3: 9, 10—"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase. So shall thy barns be filled with plenty and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Prov. 10: 22—"The blessing of the Lord it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it." Prov. 11: 24—"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Prov. 19: 17—"He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord: and that which he hath given will he pay him again." And so taught our Lord—Luke 6: 38—"Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together and running over shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again." And so did Paul—2 Cor. 9: 7, 8—"Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you, that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." From this point of view is not God the one to prefer?

2. And some their kinsfolk. Those who are bound to them by the closest ties, and who love them best. Then let Christians pay God first, for he is their Father. Gal. 3: 27—"For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." And never had children such a father—one who loved them with such infinite wealth of affection, and who—Rom. 8: 29—"did predestinate them to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first born among many brethren." And surely they ought to prefer Jesus Christ, their Elder Brother, who loved them and gave himself for them. John 15: 13—"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." He graciously recognizes his brotherly relation to them—Heb. 3: 11—"He is not ashamed to call them brethren." And he loves them as such—Matt. 12: 50—"Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother." Observe he does not say brother, or sister, or mother; but brother and sister and mother. They are as dear to him as brother and sister and mother combined. If affection is to determine the preference, ought he not to have it?

3. Others prefer to pay those whom they have owed longest. If any must wait, let it be the latest creditors. They want to give age the preference in the payment of debts. Nor is it a bad rule. There seems to be much of equity in it. But by this rule God will come in first, for he is beyond question the oldest creditor. Our debt to him runs back to the beginning of our existence. Every one of us may say to him as did David—Ps. 139: 15, 16—"My substance was not hid from thee, when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect: and in thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them." Then he opened account with us, and it has been running ever since. Acts 17: 28—"For in him we live and move and have our being." How clearly David recognizes this in Ps. 30: 3—"O Lord, thou hast brought up my soul from the grave: thou hast kept me alive." Hence his exhortation in Ps. 66: 8—"O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard, which holdeth our soul in life." During life he has never failed to do us good. Ought not this life long creditor to have the preference?

4. And others still prefer to pay first those they owe most. And this suggestion savors of equity also. But it, too, brings God's claim to the front to be settled first. For whose debt can be compared with his in point of magnitude? What mind can undertake to estimate what we owe him as our Creator, Preserver, Benefactor and Redeemer? By what arithmetic may its immense proportions be calculated? It is simply incalculable, inconceivable. Eternity alone can reveal it.

"When this passing world is done;
When has sunk yon glorious sun;
When the pearly gates we gain,
Never to go out again;
Then, Lord, shall we fully know—
Not till then—how much we owe.

When we stand before the throne,
Clothed in beauty not our own:
When we see thee as thou art,
Love thee with unswerving heart;
Then, Lord, shall we fully know—
Not till then—how much we owe.

When the praise of heaven we hear,
Loud as thunders to the ear;
Loud as many waters' noise,
Sweet as harp's melodious voice;
Then, Lord, shall we fully know—
Not till then—how much we owe."

"In the Observatory."

BY M. P. M.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL SERIES.

The Examiner has a timely and forcible editorial on the coming conflict between the present series of Sunday-school helps and the new method proposed by many of the best Bible students and Sunday school workers in the land, known as the "inductive method of Bible study." That there will be a mighty contest over the question, every thoughtful Sunday school worker must see. The International Series have done a great work, but they have been so abused, that there has arisen a strong conviction that we need a strong reform along this line. Your "Observer" had occasion to call attention to this subject in the report on Sunday-schools before the late Convention. The conviction has been growing with him for some years that the abuse of the International lesson helps would compel some reform and the introduction of some new methods. He is now convinced that the time has now fully come in which we must change. So far as my observation extends, great numbers of our teachers and scholars do not study the lesson worthy the name, and I am convinced that they will not until they are compelled to do so by some method which will not permit them to shirk as they now can.

"THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S MOVEMENT."

No more interesting or important question is before the Baptists of the South than the question of our young people and how to use them. I have been much interested in a discussion going on among the Baptists of New York State, led by Clifton L. Anderson on one side and Dr. W. C. Bitting on the other. The controversy is not "whether the churches shall have young people's societies or not," but whether these societies shall be Baptist or undenominational. Mr. Anderson is at the head of the Baptist Young People's Union in the State, while Dr. Bitting is a prominent pastor in the State. The controversy is one that ought "to speak loud" in the ears of North Carolina Baptists. It may be argued that such is not the question before our people, but "shall we have any sort of young people's organization in our churches?" True enough, and as for the "Observer," he would rather have no "society" in the churches than to have undenominational ones. A great and mighty effort is already being made to take our young people from us, and such effort is much more effectual when made through these undenominational affairs. If it was simply a question of whether we would have a society or not, I could understand and appreciate the position of those pastors in the State who oppose "the innovation," but that is not the question which confronts Baptists of to day, but "shall we have Baptist young people's societies and train and control our own young people, or shall we "stand in the road" and let the undenominational wagon run over us?—and when it is almost too late, find ourselves, as in New York, trying to organize our young people as a matter of self defence. Let us learn by the experience of our brethren "other wheres" and keep along "with the procession" rather than try to go in the opposite direction or stand still.

RESIGNATION

Your "Observer" has resigned the care of the Lincolnton church after twenty-seven months' labor. The work has been done under many difficulties, but with many evidences of the Divine favor. We have had twenty-five additions to the church, seventeen of whom were by baptism. This is gratifying to the retiring shepherd, inasmuch as there had not been so many additions to the church within the past ten years.

We have had some sad deaths during the time. Only to day Bro. J. W. Loyd passed to his reward. In August last, Bro. L. T. Wilkie, our senior deacon and treasurer, was called to his home on high.

The workers die, but the work goes on. The work here is very dear to me, but we had a situation on hand, and that situation was the cause of disturbances between the membership. Perhaps your readers are not acquainted with a situation, but they may rest assured that it is a troublesome affair, and as ours expressed itself as determined to remain, your Observer thought it best to go. The church has not yet decided upon a successor, but whoever comes will have the privilege of preaching to as noble a people as the sun shines on.

Florida News and Notes.

Baptist affairs are standing the pressure of the hard times remarkably well; pastors' salaries are kept paid up pretty generally, there is but little shifting from church to church, our University at De Land has 194 students, a dozen or more of which are young preachers. The De Land people are getting ready to erect a costly meeting-house, our State Mission work has moved on vigorously and the debt on the Board to be reported at Plant City at the Convention on the 10th of January, will not be much, if anything, the people are hopeful, but few pastorates are vacant, and we propose to stand the storm, for we are satisfied it won't be very long. The Baptist Witness, our Baptist organ is standing the storm too, it is the best paper the Baptists here have ever had, and commands greater respect and confidence; if any paper has a "hustler" behind it, the Witness has in the person of J. C. Porter.

EVANGELISTS.

And along with the migratory birds come the evangelists, in advance of the cold, holding meetings anywhere, everywhere that an invitation is extended. Rev. A. P. Graves has had meetings at Leesburg, Dade City, Sanford and elsewhere, "Singing" Price of New York, is announced for Ocala early in January, and others will come and stir up things at other places. Some think this course wise, others think it otherwise, and so we go; I may be prejudiced against this class of our ministry, doubtless all must not be judged in the scale in which A. B. Earle and Sam Jones are weighed, these two I have heard of, heard and seen, and I am unconvinced. I don't wish to be understood as meaning that evangelists do no good, but I would like to see an experiment running through twenty years tried between two churches equals in all things, one having evangelists with their methods of "hustling in converts," holding special meetings twice a year, the other church steering clear of the evangelist and having protracted services when the indications from the Lord were favorable, the pastor and his own people doing the work, or if outside aid should be needed, have a prudent, pious pastor come in and do the preaching. With some limitations, doubtless this experiment has been made, with what results? In my humble judgment this experiment of which I have spoken, would at the end of a score of years be overwhelmingly convincing that sans evangelist method had accomplished far more. My observation goes to sustain my theory, for the deadest churches I wot of are those that call in periodically the travelling evangelist; but I am a warm advocate of protracted meetings of the old fashion sort. I claim to represent myself and no one else.

TOURIST SEASON

is here again, it brings with it all sorts, sizes, conditions and occupations. Our hotels, boarding-houses, livery-stables, railroads feel the quickening stimulant in a mighty way—and our churches are greatly assisted too, many who come bring their religion with them, it being a kind that will bear transportation, they hunt out our prayer meetings, fall in with our congregations, help in every way in which good, earnest Christians can work; our churches feel the quickening influence of such, the pastor is assisted in his problem of bread and butter. We learn that a Baptist from North of Mason-Dixon is a Baptist just the same, sometimes a better one.

But enough, I do enjoy the RECORDER, I think it was never so good. How I'd enjoyed meeting your class at Elizabeth City. Send us some more good Baptists like Bro. and Sister Crawford of Ocala. SEYE.

Gross irregularities, amounting to millions of dollars, are stated to have been discovered in the New York custom house. A Treasury special agent's report on the matter has been laid before Secretary Carlisle. The report refers principally to tobacco refunds from 1883 to the present, in which the irregularities are alleged to have occurred.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, that the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. This will serve to prevent mistakes in the acknowledgment, and save the time, correspondence and printing to correct them.]

La Grippe Again.

The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.

ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.
In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe. L. STUART.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 18, 1893.
About two years ago I had a severe spell of 'grip,' and was induced by my relatives to try Royal Germetuer. It soon cured the 'grip.' MRS. GEO. TINDALE.

SWEETWATER, TENN., June 23, 1893.
My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health. J. T. BARROW, Pastor First Baptist Church.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of Germetuer relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

Rev. J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 31, 1893: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

SANDERS—THOMAS—On Dec. 27th, 1893, at 8 o'clock p. m., in Lilesville Baptist church, by Rev. L. Johnson, Mr. J. T. Sanders and Miss Fitzgerald Thomas.

RICE—LONG—On Dec. 24th, 1893, in the Baptist church in Aulander, by Rev. L. M. Curtis, Mr. J. D. Rice of Bertie, and Miss Lula L. Long of Hertford county.

VAUGHAN—DEANS—On Dec. 21, 1893, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Thos. Deans, by Rev. L. M. Curtis, Mr. J. N. Vaughan and Miss Ada Deans.

JENKINS—PEARSON—On Dec. 27th, 1893, at Lystra Baptist church, by Rev. J. W. Watson, Sheriff Joseph J. Jenkins and Miss Albia T. Pearson, all of Chatham county.

GATLING—BRITTON—On Dec. 24th, 1893, in the M. E. Church at Powellsville, Bertie county, N. C., by Rev. W. P. Jordan, Mr. H. P. Gatling and Miss Carrie V Britton.

STELL—HICKS—On Dec. 20th, 1893, at the residence of the bride, near Youngsville, N. C., by Rev. W. B. Royall, Mr. Y. N. Stell and Miss Siddie R. Hicks, both of Franklin county.

SMITH—HARRELL—On Dec. 21st, 1893, at the home of the bride's uncle in Bertie county, N. C., by Rev. W. P. Jordan, Mr. Joseph F. Smith of Chowan county and Miss Lizzie E. Harrell of Bertie county.

DIED.

HILLIARD—Jesse Hilliard died at his home on Dec. 12th, 1893, in the twenty-fourth year of his age. He professed religion and joined the Baptist church at Bear Creek in the twelfth year of his age, and lived a consistent life ever since. He was a model young man, dutiful and obedient to his parents. His manner of life showed that he was influenced by the religion he professed. M.

PHILLIPS—Josephine Phillips died Dec. 14th, 1893. She was ready for the summons, and only desired to live to help her husband take care of their little babe. After giving some instructions in regard to her baby and burial, she passed away without a struggle. Truly a good woman has gone. In her death Tyson's Creek church sustains a great loss. M.

HILLIARD—Mahala Hilliard, wife of Deacon William Hilliard, departed this life Sept. 6th, 1893. In her death Tyson's Creek Baptist church loses one of her best members, her husband a devoted wife, the children a loving mother, the community a faithful friend. In her life were blended all the Christian graces that make up the Christian character. May the Lord comfort the bereaved. M.

KIDD—Death has taken from among us Elizabeth J. Kidd, wife of J. H. Kidd. She died of consumption on Dec. 2d, 1893. She bore her afflictions with Christian fortitude, and died in the full triumphs of the gospel faith. She leaves a husband, five children, and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. She was a consistent member of Tyson's Creek Baptist church. M.

NUCKELS—Died Nov. 19, 1893, at Forestville, N. C., Mrs. Etta H., wife of Mr. W. P. Nuckels, in the twenty-fourth year of her age. She belonged to the Forestville Baptist church, and for months before her death manifested great joy in Christ, her Saviour. Very bright is the evidence left us that she is now among the redeemed in glory. The Lord sustain and comfort the bereaved husband. PASTOR.

CROSS—Died Oct. 29, 1893, at the residence of her brother in Wake county, Mrs. Martha Cross, in her sixty-first year. She was a member of the Forestville Baptist church, and lived a consistent Christian life. She bore the sufferings of her last days meekly and patiently, looking forward with calmness and confidence to the hour when she should depart and be with Christ. PASTOR.

HOLLEMAN—Died in the city of Raleigh, on Dec 21st, 1893, Brit Wyatt J. Holleman, aged eighty years. He joined the Baptists when a young man, lived an active Christian life, and died in the faith. His remains were carried to Apex for interment. His funeral was conducted by the writer, after which he was buried by the side of his first wife, who passed away many years ago. He leaves an aged widow, two sons and three daughters. J. M. HOLLEMAN.

CLEMENTS—Fell on sleep Dec. 11th, 1893, sister E. A. Clements, wife of Bro. W. G. Clements. She for a number of years has been a member of Mt. Carmel Baptist church. She was a great sufferer for more than six years during the latter part of her life. To know her was to love her, as she manifested on every occasion the spirit of her Master. Her husband and daughter can think of heaven as being nearer and dearer to them than ever before. May the Lord comfort them. J. W. W.

TAYLOR—Deacon William Taylor was born Feb. 1st, 1829, and died Jan. 1st, 1894, making his age just sixty-four years and eleven months. He was a deacon of the Goldsboro church for about twenty-two years. He was a man of sterling worth, possessing many admirable qualities both of mind and heart. He stood before the community as a man of unspotted character, loved and honored by those who knew him. At the time of his death his immediate family consisted of a wife, a son, and three daughters. C. A. J.

MEDLIN—Corlia, the little infant of J. A. and Etta Medlin of Laurinburg, Richmond county, N. C., was born Aug. 8th, 1893, and died Nov. 21st, 1893, aged three months and thirteen days. His life on earth was very short, but we must ever submit to the will of him who doeth all things well. Little Corlia is not dead, but has fallen asleep in Jesus. We extend to the stricken family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of trouble, and direct them to lean heavily upon him who is the great comforter in the time of trouble. One less on earth, one more in heaven. AUNT W. H.

PHILIPS—At her home in Ramseur, sister Malinda Philips departed this life Dec. 8th, 1893. She was a consistent member of Columbia Baptist church for a number of years. Our sister has so lived as to entitle herself to the esteem and good will of the people among whom she lived. She leaves a lonely sister, the two composing the family for a number of years. May the good Lord comfort her greatly in her sad loss.

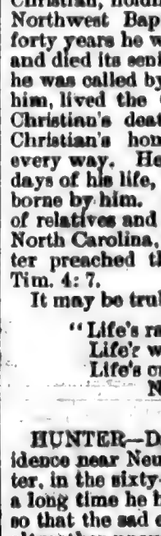
The funeral service was conducted by the writer, and a large gathering of friends were there to pay the last tribute of respect. G. W. HARMON.

Ramseur, N. C.

SCOTT—Mrs. Louisa Scott, relict of the late Stephen D. Scott, departed this life Dec. 25th, 1893, near Elizabeth City, N. C., in the fifty-sixth year of her age. Sister Scott had been an active and devoted member of the Baptist church for twenty-four years. She leaves two daughters and one son to mourn the inestimable loss of mother. Her life was an open book on the white pages of which the fair lines of a Christian character were distinct and instructive to all who knew her. She suffered much in body, but was patient in spirit. She did her work well while she could, and was ready when the Master called to go in to the rest prepared for the children of God. Her last words were a prayer that her loved ones might meet her in heaven. C. S. B.

ODOM—Mary P. Odom, relict of Charles Odom, departed this life at her residence in Hertford county, in hope of a better one above, on October 10th, 1893, in the seventy-sixth year of her age. In early life she was baptized by Rev. A. Craig and joined Sandy Run church, of which she remained a consistent member all her life. By reason of sickness and infirmities her seat in church had been vacant sometime before she passed away. Her Christian life was as a "city set upon a hill, whose light could not be hid," and by patience, meekness and faith, she greatly glorified the grace that saved her. For more than thirty years she had been a patient sufferer, not a murmur was heard to escape her lips, she bore it all with Christian fortitude. Her life was one worthy of imitation. C.

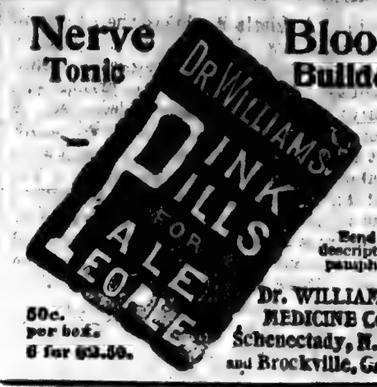
WILLIAMS—Bro. Wm. Joseph Williams died at his residence in Norfolk county, Virginia, Dec. 17th, 1893, aged eighty-four years and nine months.



For over a half century he had been a Christian, holding his membership with the Northwest Baptist church. For more than forty years he was the clerk of this church, and died its senior deacon. "Uncle Joe," as he was called by almost every one who knew him, lived the Christian's life and died the Christian's death, and he has gone to the Christian's home. His life was a success every way. He suffered much the last few days of his life, but his sufferings were nobly borne by him. He leaves one son and a host of relatives and friends, both in this State and North Carolina, to mourn his loss. The writer preached the funeral discourse from 2 Tim. 4: 7.

It may be truly said of "Uncle Joe,"

"Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crown well won,
Now comes rest."



C. W. MATTHEWS.

HUNTER—Died Dec. 25th, 1893, at his residence near Neuse, N. C., Mr. James T. Hunter, in the sixty-fourth year of his age. For a long time he had been in declining health, so that the sad event, though sudden, was not altogether unexpected. It is no ordinary affliction, however, that comes upon a devoted family when such a husband and father dies. Mr. Hunter was a man of marked integrity of character, esteemed and loved as such by all his neighbors. Those who had daily dealings with him, and, therefore, knew him best, found him ever honorable and just. He was compassionate to the ignorant and poor. The kindness of his heart expressed itself in the last act well-nigh of his life, when he took it upon himself to provide that some humble neighbor should not feel forgotten at the unveiling of the Christmas tree in the little school-house hard by that balmy Christmas evening on which the spirit left its earthly house. Though he never united with the church, Mr. Hunter always manifested a deep interest in Christian work, and did not leave his loved ones without a reasonable assurance that he had given his heart to Christ. May the God of all grace comfort the faithful and loving wife and the devoted sons and daughters. W. B. R.

New Year's Thoughts.

Let us walk softly, friend;
For strange paths lie before us, all untrod;
The New Year, spotless from the hand of God,
Is thine and mine, O friend!

Let us walk straightly, friend;
Forget the crooked paths behind us now,
Press on with steadier purpose on our brow,
To better deeds, O friend!

Let us walk gladly, friend;
Perchance some greater good than we have known
Is waiting for us, or some fair hope flown
Shall yet return, O friend!

Let us walk humbly, friend;
Slight not the heart's-ease blooming round our feet;
The laurel blossoms are not half so sweet,
Or lightly gathered, friend.

Let us walk kindly, friend;
We cannot tell how long this life shall last,
How soon these precious years be overpast;
Let love walk with us, friend.

Let us walk quickly, friend;
Work with our might while lasts our little stay,
And help some halting comrade on the way;
And may God guide us, friend!
—Lillian Grey, in Golden Rule.

"Miss Positive."

The girls called her that because she was always so sure that she was right. Her real name was Ida. In Miss Hartley's school the scholars each said a verse from the Bible, every morning, at prayers. One morning, Ida had such a funny verse it made all the scholars laugh; and even Miss Hartley had to pucker her lips to keep a little sober.

This was the verse repeated in Ida's gravest tones: "It never rains but it pours."

"Now, all the girls except Ida knew enough about the Bible to be sure there was no such verse in it. She was "just as sure that it was in the Bible as she was that she had two feet!" so she said, "and if they didn't believe it, they might ask Miss Hartley."

So at recess they all asked Miss Hartley at once: "Miss Hartley, is there such a verse?" "Miss Hartley, there isn't, is there?"

And Miss Hartley had to say that so far as she had read the Bible or heard it read, she certainly never had heard any such verse in it.

But Miss Positive was not convinced. She shook her pretty brown head and said she couldn't help it, it was in the Bible, in the Book of Proverbs, and she could bring the book to school and show them.

Miss Hartley said that would be the very best thing to do. So, the next day, came Ida, looking pleased and happy, with a little bit of a book in her hand, and pointing her finger in triumph to the verse in large letters: "It never rains but it pours."

"But, dear child," said Miss Hartley, don't you know that isn't a Bible?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," said Ida, "it is out of the Bible, every word of it. Don't you see it says 'Proverbs' on the cover? Everybody knows that Proverbs is in the Bible."

Then all the girls laughed again; and Miss Hartley explained that the book was a collection of the wise sayings of different men, and that they were called proverbs because they had so much meaning in them, and were used so much.

After a good deal of talk, Ida had to own that she was mistaken, and that there wasn't a word of the Bible in her book, from beginning to end. Then how her naughty little playmates teased her!

At the play hour they buzzed around her like so many mosquitoes, and giggled and asked her if she "got caught in the rain," and if "poured hard to-day," and ever so many other silly things that they seemed to think were funny.

Ida stood it very well. At last, she said: "I've got a verse for to-morrow that is surely in the Bible. Uncle Ed found it for me: 'Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips.' And, girls, in spite of all your teasing, I am going to keep the door shut." Then all the owners of those naughty tongues slipped away, one by one, looking ashamed. It wasn't the thing to say so much about a mistake.—Baptist Courier.

An Amusing Anecdote.

Some time ago an amusing little anecdote was related about the German Crown Prince whilst having a lesson in grammar from his tutor. One is now being told about the second son of the imperial couple, Prince Eitel Fritz. The Emperor is exceedingly strict about his son's behavior at table. Not long since little Prince Eitel Fritz, using his fingers instead of his knife and fork, was corrected by his father several times to no purpose. At last the Emperor's patience was exhausted, and he said: "Children who eat with their fingers are like little dogs that hold their food with their paws. If you use your fingers again you must go under the table, the proper place for little dogs." The little Prince did his utmost not to forget this time, and used his knife and fork like a man; but all at once he forgot again and began using his fingers. "March under the table," said his father. Prince Eitel Fritz crept under as bidden. After a little while the Emperor, thinking the Prince very quiet, lifted up the table-cloth and peeped underneath. There sat little Prince Eitel Fritz undressed. His father asked him what he meant by undressing himself. The child answered, "Little dogs don't wear clothes; they only have skin."—Selected.

A Little Sunbeam.

Railroad engineers and firemen, grimy and taciturn, lead a more dangerous life than any soldier; but their occupation is prosaic, and few give them credit for heroism or the gentler feelings which make up the romantic side of human nature. Yet in their existence there sometimes falls a spark of light and a ray of sunshine that illuminates the smoky cab. The overland train had arrived at Oakland, Cal., and the great iron engine was throbbing and puffing after the long, sinuous trip over the mountain-sides and rocky defiles, lofty trestles and marshy stretches.

The din in the depot was deafening; but out of the chaos of sounds a sweet girlish voice was heard welcoming home her parents who had arrived on the train. She was a little golden-haired beauty; scarcely seven years of age, with a quick, intelligent eye and a loving nature, to which she gave full vent in the radiant and impulsive way she welcomed her parents back. At last they took her by the hand, and proceeded toward the waiting ferry-boat.

As they passed by the engine attached to the train, the little one broke away, ran up to the big black machine, and patted the driving wheels affectionately with her small, white hands. Then, looking up at the smoke stack, she said:

"You good, big, old iron horse, you have brought back papa and mamma safe over the great mountains to their little girl, and I want to thank you, even if you don't care for me because I am so little. And you, too," she continued, turning her face wistfully toward the grimy engineer and fireman, who were looking down at her—"I love you all." Then she kissed her hand to them, and was gone.

"Bill," said the engineer to his fireman, "what was that?"

"'Peared like an angel," said the fireman, echoing the other's thought.

Just then a fleeting sunbeam from the great orb sinking down in the Golden Gate came stealing through a chink in the depot, and stole by the engineer into his cab. There was a strange look on his face for an instant, and when he turned his head there were two light spots on his dust begrimed cheeks.—Selected.

"A Last Year."

There will come a last year to each one of us; therefore let each one say to himself—Is this my last? Dear friend, is "this year also" to be your last? Are you ready to see the curtain rise upon eternity? Are you now prepared to hear the midnight cry, and to enter in to the marriage supper? The judgment and all that will follow upon it are most surely the heritage of every living man; blessed are they who by faith in Jesus are able to face the bar of God without a thought of terror!

If we live to be counted among the oldest inhabitants we must depart at last; there must be an end, and the voice must be heard—"Thus saith the Lord, this year thou shalt die." So many have gone before us, and are going every hour, that no man should need any other memento mori, and yet man is so eager to forget his own mortality, and thereby to forfeit his hopes of bliss, that we cannot too often bring it before the mind's eye. O mortal man, bethink thee! Prepare to meet thy God; for thou must meet him. Seek the Saviour, yea, seek him ere another sun sinks to his rest.—Spurgeon.

The Most Beautiful of all Cats.

The Persian cat is born to the happiest fate of any of his family, for according to the tales of travellers, he is, in his native land, not only loved and cherished, not only well treated and admired, but thoroughly respected, and he has an acknowledged position and rights. In form the bewitching Persian does not greatly differ from the Angora, but the tail is much more effective, for the longest and the thickest set hairs being at the tip, they form a magnificent plume, which the dignified owner carries proudly erect, waving in the air as he moves. In his splendid silky coat is not a trace of woolliness, and it clothes the graceful creature from the tips of his ears to the well "feathered" toes.

Unless some undreamed of feline marvel shall be unearthed, this animal must forever be regarded as the perfect flower of the domestic cat family. Not only does he easily surpass all his competitors in beauty and grace, but he possesses charms of disposition and manner and dignity of bearing, and while most affectionate and loving, is still self-respecting and independent.—Olive Thorne Miller, in Harper's Bazar.

When Jack calls on Miss Eleanor,
He always brings her plenty
Of flowers and chocolate bonbons, which
Most charm the maid of twenty.

And though Sir Jack has skinny arms,
And legs as thin as pheasants',
How could one blame Miss Eleanor,
Who much admires his presents?

No woman has any real admiration for a man's presence unless the man has a good physique—legs and arms well filled out. You can't be "well-looking" if you suffer from any of the diseases by a disordered liver or impure blood—dyspepsia, biliousness, and scrofulous affections. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a medicine that cures these cases. It's the only remedy that's guaranteed to benefit or cure, in every case, or the money refunded. Medical science stamps it "absolutely potent" as a blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder.

The worst Nasal Catarrh, no matter of how long standing, is permanently cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Young Inventors.

Children have taken out a number of profitable patents. The youngest inventor on record is Donald Murray Murphy, of St. John, Canada, who, at six years of age, obtained from the United States exclusive rights in a sounding toy. Mable Howard, of Washington, at eleven years, invented an ingenious game for her invalid brother, and got a patent for it. Arthur G. Smith, of Richwoods, Ill., at twelve years, invented and patented a rowing apparatus.

When only seventeen years old, Benjamin F. Hamilton, of Boston, took out patents on a number of devices for electric and elevated railways. A dispute over a contract which he desired to escape from, on the ground of his minority, made an interesting case not long ago before the commissioners of patents. Samuel Ker, eighteen years old, has patented a self feeding pen. Other boys have invented useful devices for electric signaling and telephoning. Geo. C. Pyle, of Wilmington, Del., at the age of eighteen, patented a machine which turns out sixty horseshoes a minute. He sold it for a sum sufficient to lift the mortgage off his father's home. In fact it was this purpose which inspired him to undertake the task of invention.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

A LONG STRING

of diseases follows a "run-down" system when the liver is inactive and the blood in disorder. Look out for "breakers ahead" by putting the liver and blood in a healthy condition. You've only to turn to the right remedy to make yourself secure from disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery prevents as well as cures. Take it, as you ought, when you feel the first symptoms (languor, loss of appetite, dullness, depression) and you'll save yourself from something serious.

In recovering from "La Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other wasting diseases, nothing can equal it to build up needed flesh and strength.

It's a blood-purifier that has stood the test of time; for a quarter of a century the "Discovery" has numbered its cures by the thousands. The manufacturers prove their faith in it by guaranteeing it for all disorders arising from bad blood; in Scrofula, Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, and every kindred ailment.

If you receive no benefit you'll get your money back. What offer could be fairer?

THE prevalent opinion in regard to denominational institutions is, we think, a mistaken one. We have often heard it said, and know it is a matter of current belief, even among supporters of denominational institutions, that such institutions are established and sustained for the sole purpose of strengthening the denomination, by making proselytes, &c. An institution conducted with such an object in view is little better than useless as an educational agency. Denominational institutions do strengthen the denominations that support them, and are indispensable to the growth of denominations, but higher ends should not be subordinated to one so narrow when compared to the real object of all education, which is the development of man—physical, intellectual, esthetic, moral and religious, by the inculcation of truth. This is a broad statement; but none too broad to embrace the objects of denominational institutions. Now we do not wish to be misunderstood to hold that denominational institutions should not be directed by denominations, and exert denominational influences, but we do hold that the inculcation of truth in religious light should not be subordinated to making proselytes for the denomination. The denominational character of the institution should always be prevalent, but never to such an extent as to make the institution appear as the agent of a denomination; it should appear as an instrument of truth so broad in its application that any one might be glad to take advantage of its opportunities. In Yale, Princeton, Amherst, Brown, Williams, and many other great institutions, we have laudable examples of what denominations may do in educating the race, and yet make the original object of education so prominent that their denominational character does not appear, although it is as strong, if not stronger, than is possible in institutions whose sole object is the strengthening of the denomination by the inculcation of creeds and doctrines, to the neglect of all the other objects of education. Our North Carolina denominational institutions should make it thoroughly understood that, while they are directed and supported by denominations, and their influence is denominational, their object is to apply the truth to the betterment of men without further regard to results.

ALTHOUGH it was announced with great rejoicing on this side of the Atlantic and with equally great fear and trembling on the other side three years ago that Brazil had undergone a "bloodless revolution," and had become a Republic, with all that that word implies, it now appears that our "Southern Sister" has been a Republic only in name, and that the idea and the spirit of republicanism has never been known to her people. After a term of peace, and what was thought republican prosperity, she is now in a worse plight than at any period under Dom Pedro II. The reason is not far to seek. There is one essential quality to the exercise of free ballot—the underlying principle of self-government—and that quality has never been known to the citizens of Brazil. That individualism of thought and character which has sustained us one hundred and nineteen years cannot exist among a people dominated by Catholicism. The very fact that they recognize a supreme temporal power, authoritative and infallible, makes them unworthy of the privilege of self-government, since by that recognition they set up one man to control their destiny. They are confessedly dependent on one central power, and independent and individual action is left to that power. The citizen of the United States is taught from the cradle that the ballot—self-government—is the privilege and the duty of his citizenship; he recognizes no earthly power greater than the ballot of the people, and as one of them, he knows that his safety is dependent on the wisdom of his ballot. He is one of the rulers, if he takes advantage of the opportunities of our Constitution. On the other hand, the Catholic-taught Brazilians, when they found themselves burdened with the responsibility of self-government, were so unused to individual action and independence of thought, that their President found no difficulty in making his power tyrannical. His subjects were as ignorant of the power of the ballot, and as incapable of exercising the functions of independent citizenship as barbarians. They were unprepared for so great a change. Brazil may become a land of free people, but she must first dethrone the priest as well as the monarch. She is to day, struggling in brutish ignorance and infantile helplessness, an excellent example of the educational influence of the Catholic religion and the consequences of ecclesiastical domination.

WE DISLIKE to exhibit a spirit of complaint, unless such an exhibition may be of some avail. We should always try to look upon the better side of everything, and in political matters this should certainly be an invariable rule. Political actions are the results of only human wisdom, and are always subject to criticism. Still we believe the present Congress has been unusually remiss of duty, and will be none the worse for a little criticism and a warning, neither of which are untimely just now.

Legislation was delayed an entire week immediately after the holidays by the slowness with which many representatives returned to their duties, and in the face of the fact that the dominant party had a great majority of the House, their absence stopped the wheels of legislation. Congressmen had a longer holiday than any other class of men we know of, and yet, because they were not immediately under the lash of a master, they gave way to the human aversion to duty like college freshmen. We know that it is characteristic of the ordinary man to do what he can to escape work, but we cannot understand the man that stands before the people, their servant, their guardian, their representative in campaign times, and after the people's votes have reposed in him these very honors, does what he can to escape whatever is burdensome in them. Congressmen should attend the sessions of Congress, if they do nothing else. They were sent to Washington, and they are paid a salary to represent people who have a right to be represented on every question. If not for this reason, we would expect them to be regular in attendance for the sake of the party to which they claim allegiance. They know that it does not speak well for their party that the speaker had to request the Sergeant at Arms a few days ago to compel certain members to attend Congress by arrest.

Again, we depreciate that spirit, invariably characteristic of the minority, which tries to delay legislation by whatsoever means it may. This nation is one of majorities, and graceful acquiescence is the only laudable means of serving their country left the minority. The filibusterer may become notorious, he may delay legislation, and he may be doing what his constituents would be willing to do, but as an American citizen, as a servant of the people, he is a failure. The people have shown their determination to lower customs, and any one who, taking advantage of the negligence of duty on the part of the people's representatives, delays the accomplishment of that determination, is unworthy of his position. The minority representatives may enter protests, they can vote against any measure they choose, but this way of delaying action, not with the object of considering a measure, but simply to delay, is despicable and intolerable. Filibustering is worse, if possible, than absence; neither are creditable to responsible representatives of the people.

STRENUOUS efforts are being made to defeat certain provisions of the new tariff measure. We have been the recipient of considerable matter on the subject of free coal, and have found the burden of most of it that free coal will injure Southern industries—just what New England has been saying with regard to herself of certain other imports all these years. Whether it injures Southern industries or not, we who have declared time and again that the principle of protection was unwise and unjust, should not ask for it ourselves as soon as it is perceived that we need it in regard to certain products. If the South has the benefit of a tax on coal, New England should have her choice of a tax on something that, admitted without tax, will injure her industries; thus every section would have to have its privileges, and a protective tariff would be the result. In the first place it is not apparent to us that free coal is likely to injure the South. No doubt the price of coal will be affected, the West Virginia miner's wages will be reduced, the railroads have less coal to transport, but the great body of consumers will reap the benefits of the reduction. But if we were fully persuaded that it would injure the South, we cannot see the consistency of taxing coal for our own protection and leaving other sections unprotected. The question with us is one of protection or no protection—not even for the South—and we believe that every other disciple of the revenue tariff will agree with us.

Just such projects as these will eventually kill the Wilson bill, which should be acted on to day. We favor setting a day for a vote in the House as soon as practicable, and carrying it through the Senate with certainly not more than a week's delay. Nothing can be gained by debate; not a voter converted, nor a new fact developed; and the suspense incident to delay is costing our business men millions of dollars. Prof. Wilson and his assistants have spent months on the subject; Congress has devoted the larger part of seven sessions to it in the last decade, not to mention the debates of the last seventy years; and it is presumption to say that this Congress can make any material change in the facts and principles which have governed the framing of the present measure. Debate, which cannot be otherwise than sectional, will be absolutely futile, so far as the principle is concerned, and we do not think that the question of the relation of certain items to various sections is of sufficient importance to delay action, on which so much now depends. We favor deliberation in all things, but we know there has already been enough, and we fear too much deliberation in this matter. Now is the time for action, straightforward and determined, for a principle, not a party, nor a section.

Introductory Sermon.

Text—"Preach the word." 2 Tim. 4: 2.

The Christian ministry is God's own unique institution. There is nothing at all like it in the world. No other religion has it. The wisdom and ingenuity of men would never have originated it. God calls his own men and puts them into the ministry. They do not choose it, as men do other professions. God then surely must say what purpose this institution shall serve. He and he alone has the right, the authority to say what his preachers shall preach. This is a matter of vast importance. It is not so important how the preaching is done, for God chooses men of different and varied gifts, and evidently blesses different styles and methods or preaching; but what is preached is of supreme importance, and God never designed or endorses any variation in this. The thing preached must always be the same. God has not left it to the taste or wisdom or caprice or ingenuity of the preacher to determine what he shall preach, nor he has left it to the whims or fancy of the people to decide what shall be preached to them. The sick patient must not prescribe for himself nor dictate to his physician; so this sin sick world must not say what message, what remedy God, its great Physician, shall send through his servants. If this world does dictate, the preacher, if faithful to a dying world and loyal to his God, must not heed. If he does heed it, and preaches anything else than what God directs, he will stand at the last day amid the reproaches of those to whom he was unfaithful, charged with malpractice while treating immortal souls in this great world-hospital of sin. Paul says, "if any man preach any other gospel, let him be accursed."

Our text informs us what God would have us preach.

We are not to preach philosophy. To discuss causes and principles. To investigate the various phenomena in nature, within and without us, is to many minds a tempting field, and to some hearers such discourses are interesting and acceptable. But the preacher is not a philosopher. We are not to preach the arts and sciences. Preachers should, if possible, be educated men, and they should be sincere friends and advocates of learning, but to educate the people is not their real mission. The preacher is not primarily an educator. We are not to preach politics. There is much in political parties which deserves denunciation. There are many pernicious laws which ought not to exist; and many good laws which ought to be made. As an intelligent and patriotic citizen, the preacher may see and know this, and as a citizen he may and ought to do his duty about these things; but in the pulpit he has a specific work, and it is not his mission here to reform or control the civil government; for the preacher is not a politician or statesman.

We are not to preach the current events of the day. Such themes may be made intensely interesting, and from many such occurrences interesting and profitable lessons may be drawn; but the preacher is not a popular lecturer.

We are not to preach an outward and formal morality. Much may be said in favor of the common virtues and much against the common vices of human character. Men may eloquently and impressively plead the cause of honesty, justice, chastity, &c., simply upon the ground that virtue is its own reward; for it can be clearly shown that it is wiser and more profitable, to the individual as well as society, for a man to be a good man. But preachers are not simply ethical teachers. Some one may ask, "May not preachers do much good by such preaching?" Possibly they might; but where is the authority for it? As commissioned officers, what right have they to do so? And besides, such themes appeal to and influence the head and not the heart. Such themes deal simply with men's relations to his fellowmen, and such themes all have reference to man's existence in this life, which is a very small part of man's existence. We know the heart and not the head is the fountain of conduct and the seat of character, and man's relation to God is of greater importance than his relation to his fellowmen, and we know man is an immortal being and his welfare here is not his chief concern. God gives preachers a message which not only influences the intellect but changes the heart, which not only puts men into right relations with each other, but what is of far more importance and really essential to the other, puts men in right relations with God; a message which affects not simply men's well-being in this life, but his eternal well-being in the world to come. What, then, is this message, what is it that God intends for us to preach? We are to preach the Word. Christ did this, Mark 2: 2. He implies we are to do this when he says the seed is the Word in the parable of the sower. The disciples preached the Word after the stoning of Stephen. Now the Word we know is Christ, and all the truths and facts vitally connected with him—all that converge in Christ and all that radiate from him. For Paul, who gives this instruction to Timothy, says of himself when in Corinth, I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified. Philip preached Christ in Samaria and to the eunuch. And John says Christ is the Word. The Word is the gospel of Christ—the good news about Christ. So we have the commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," &c. This it is we are to preach—nothing more, nothing less, and nothing else. It is a single theme, but a broad and great one. It involves sin, its various forms and manifestations, its destructive influence and power, its sad and fearful effects and consequences in this life and in the life to come. It involves the wisdom, the goodness, the love, the power of God in giving his Son for our redemption, and devising such a complete plan for man's redemption.

It leads us to dwell upon the beauties and perfections of Christ's life and character; for he was "God manifest in the flesh." It leads us to consider the blessedness promised to those who receive him and the glory of their future state. Oh, what a theme it is—as deep as hell, as high as heaven, as broad as humanity!—a theme which concerns our highest interest, and exercises our highest faculties! Surely such a boundless, fathomless, exhaustless, unlimited theme can never grow stale. Surely with such a theme there is no need to resort to other subjects for variety and freshness. No wonder Paul could say, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ," and "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." The gospel of Christ solves all the real problems of human life, removes all real evils, illumines all real darkness, comforts all real sorrow, supplies all real need, enables us to conquer all real enemies, to achieve all real success, to win all real victories. It puts man into right relations with his fellowmen and with God. It puts him into his own place in the great universe over which God's will and purpose reign supreme. It puts him into harmony with nature and providence. It teaches us how to live wisely and how to die peacefully. It puts us and keeps us in the way that leads through this world to heaven and to glory.

It is this gospel of Christ that we are to preach—that is, we are to publish or proclaim it. Some one who has investigated tells us that the English word preach, which occurs about 114 times in the New Testament, is an equivalent for six Greek words, three of which mean nearly the same thing, to bear a message, and these cover about sixty cases; another means to publish or proclaim, and occurs about fifty times; another, which occurs several times, means to talk about, to prattle; and only one means a formal discourse, and this occurs only three times. So we thus learn that to preach really means to tell or to publish, not to philosophize about it, not to prove or defend it, but to bear the message. This shows, too, that every Christian can preach, and is expected to do so. The commission was probably given to all the disciples as well as the apostles.

This, then, my brethren, is what we are to do, to preach nothing else but the gospel, and do nothing more with the gospel, but proclaim it: and the Holy Ghost will do the rest. By this simple means, God intends to save souls, to convert the world and reclaim the race. This appears to the world and to worldly-minded Christians, I fear, a very feeble and insufficient instrument to accomplish such a stupendous work. So it doubtless appeared when Joshua marched around Jericho blowing the rams' horns. So it appeared to Ezekiel when in a vision he stood in the valley, speaking to dry bones. The instrument seems utterly inadequate to those who do not know, or forget that it is God who wields it, and the strength which makes it efficient is in his almighty arm. To those who do not understand that it is but the visible sword of the invisible Spirit. The world thinks philosophers must be reached through philosophy; the learned, through learning; that the immoral must be reformed by abuse or ridicule, or threatened ostracism from society. The world thinks the ignorant and degraded masses must be left to rot in their vices, or restrained by police force, or slowly elevated by education. The world thinks it idle or almost insane to expect to impress the wicked philosophers by the simple story of Jesus and his cross, that it is ridiculous and absurd to attempt to reform the hard-seamed sinner by such simple and gentle means. The world thinks the gospel fit only for the feeble—for old women and children. The world thinks it has outgrown the gospel, that it has grown stale, and must have something to render it fresh and attractive. So the world thought in Paul's day, for "the preaching of the cross, says he, "is to them that perish foolishness." "For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and to the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God."

Away with all the vain and presumptuous theories of the world! What right has the world to dictate to God's servants? What has the world ever done to save itself, and what have preachers ever done who yielded to the demands of a worldly taste? Has not the world tried all means it recommends, and have they not all failed? Has it not tried philosophy and learning in Athens? Has it not tried law and ethical teaching in Rome, and did not the people become loathsomely corrupt in both, and did not their civilization become so honeycombed with vice that these great kingdoms fell to pieces? Was it not when in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, that God chose by the foolishness of preaching, to save them that believe? Was it not after the world had had time to make full test of all their plans, which seem to the world so feasible and promising for making men good, that God came with his plan, the preaching of the cross; and has not God's plan been thoroughly tested, and its wisdom and efficiency fully vindicated? See what has been wrought in the world by this simple means, the preaching of the cross. See what Paul did in heathen and idolatrous cities of Europe and Asia, though called in classic Athens a babbler talking about nonsense—the resurrection of a poor Jew! Surely from a human view nothing could have been more unpromising, nothing could have seemed so hopeless when Paul entered the proud, imperial city of Rome and began to preach Christ to all he could reach. His arrival attracted no attention, for coming as he did, he was beneath the notice of the proud citizens. He came as a prisoner, was confined in prison, and chained to a soldier. He had no friends or patrons. If his name was ever mentioned in the palace of the Emperor, it was only with contempt, and the proud Nero only heard of him as a criminal. Such was the entrance of the gospel in Rome. But as Paul preached Christ to the few to whom he had access, he deposited the leaven, which began at once to work in the population of this great city—this great kingdom, and it worked on attracting attention, overcoming opposition, undermining prejudice, subduing enemies, until it eventually leavened every grade of society from the bottom to the top, until its influence was felt in the palace of the rich as well as the hovel of the poor, until it won the reverence and respect of the learned and powerful as well as the ignorant and obscure, until it placed a Christian ruler upon the throne of the Cæsars!

See what the preaching of the cross has done in other places. See the revolutions it has produced, the progress it has made against the strongest forces and powers. See the effects it has produced upon the moral condition of nations and upon their civilization; how it has raised nations out of the degraded vices of barbarism. Brethren, we have nearly 1,900 years of victorious progress of the cross to strengthen our faith; and do we not see in all Christian history that the cause of Christianity has grown most and souls are saved in the greatest number, and piety has prevailed most, when Christ was most faithfully preached? Why was religion at so low an ebb, why was there so little piety and so much immorality in the church, in this latter part of the last century? It was as Blackstone indicated when he said he "went to hear all the chief Protestant preachers in London, and though they were learned, and preached profound and eloquent discourses, there was no more of Christ in their sermons than in the orations of Cicero, and from what they said, they might have been as reasonably regarded as the followers of Confucius, Zoroaster, or Socrates, as the disciples of Christ."

Brethren, I solemnly believe that preaching in our day is not more efficient because Christ is not fully, faithfully and exclusively preached, or where Christ is preached, it is an unfelt Christ. Christ is the only saving, transforming element in preaching. But when Christ crucified is faithfully, earnestly, believingly, feelingly, lovingly preached, this will be honored of God and used by the Spirit in the conviction and conversion of sinners and the edification of saints. When this great theme takes full possession of us, when our hearts are full of it, it possesses every element of attraction, of persuasion, of proof, and of power, which the Spirit needs to save and sanctify human hearts. God's love for men flowing on in nature and providence through all history as a mighty river, but the crucifixion of Christ is the great cataract in this stream over which the love of God falls. Scientists tell us if the power produced at the falls of Niagara could be utilized in generating electricity, it would be sufficient power to run all the machinery of our land; so there is enough moral power in the cross of Christ to transform the lives and reform the lives of all God's creatures in all the world if we intelligently use it and propel every department of the [illegible]

A NEED.

The instruction of our children in biblical history and doctrines, and denominational history and holdings, is a departure of church work that is now much neglected, for want of a proper agency within the church for such instruction. It does not take a great imagination to see that this want is the occasion of the very vigorous growth of young people's societies, which have recently appeared in many States, and which seem to do very satisfactory work where they have been tried. We do not propose to discuss the advisability of church societies now; we think the Convention was wise in putting them on probation for a year; but we do feel that there is a woful want of a knowledge of biblical and church history in the great body of our people, and to some extent among our pastors. We cannot help the present ignorance by any new methods; but it is a fact that if we instruct our children now, giving them knowledge, and exciting their interest, when they become leaders in the churches the denomination will be stronger and better for this knowledge and interest.

Baptists have a history that they should be proud of; and it is a reflection on us that we know no more of it than we do. No sect can point to so glorious a past as that which the Baptists have wrought wherever they have existed. It matters not where we open the book, the Baptists will be found maintaining God's word, whether amid persecution and oppression, or prosperity. We said much this summer in regard to North Carolina Baptist history; the record of the struggles of our forefathers would be an inspiration to the present generation, if it were impressed on their minds. We know they wrought well; for our present strength is built on the foundations which they laid in the face of oppression and persecution. But we cannot now dwell on this history; we haven't space or time to do it justice. The question is, How can we make our children acquainted with it?

We recognize that the pastor, especially he who has country charges, is already very busily occupied with his duties, and we cannot expect him to do any great degree of this kind of work. The Sunday-school, too, is usually occupied with Bible instruction through set lessons that have little regard to biblical history; and in most instances has not time to fully teach its lessons. We would be glad to leave this matter to parents, but they themselves, though otherwise well-informed, are usually ignorant of the good works of our denominational fathers; and they, too, may often say they haven't time. We see that under the present arrangements, this mode of strengthening our denomination cannot have that attention which it deserves. But some will say it is not necessary, and can be dispensed with. Why trouble ourselves with something that we have doing without for many years?

There was a time when this instruction was handed down through the family. There are brethren among us to-day who are well acquainted with our history, and who seem to have "come by it naturally;" they were raised in families that were Baptist from head to toe; and no one can say they were not the better for it. But we know that such is not the case to-day. They will tell us that such knowledge is not essential to Christianity; but their very lives testify that their acquaintance with biblical and denominational history has made them stronger and better Baptists. While not necessary, all will agree that it will add to the zeal and the power of the denomination to have our children acquainted not only with the faith and the doctrines of our fathers, but how they have maintained them through struggles on to victory and glory. It will make every Christian a better and a more useful Christian to know biblical history, and it will make every Baptist a better and a more useful Baptist to be acquainted with the history of the denomination.

Some will contend that we should not first try to impress our children with an interest in these topics. Childhood is the age for impressions, and if we put off instruction too long it will do but little good. We know that the pastor does not have the opportunity; we have shown that the Sunday-school is inadequate; now the question is, Is the desired result worthy of the means? Suppose we admit that between the church and the Sunday-school our children may become thoroughly acquainted with the Bible; can we dispense with denominational history? Shall we add another agency to the church—all sufficient in apostolic days—in order to make our denomination stronger by cultivating a denominational interest in our children, and giving them a knowledge of denominational history? Probably the question would be more readily answered if there were assurances that such a departure would not be accompanied with other results in addition to that desired.

Thus the question confronts the denomination. We are glad the young people's societies are being thoroughly tested in other States, and that we shall have the privilege of knowing their worth before they can affect us. We hope the brethren, as requested by the Convention, will see what North Carolina can do in the premises. So far, all steps have been taken in deliberation; we now have a year before us in which we hope the brethren will freely give their opinions of the proposed departure.

THE IMPORTANCE OF CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES IN HIGHER EDUCATION.

It is a reflection on one's Christianity to urge upon him the importance of Christian principles in anything. A Christian is supposed to know and appreciate their importance from personal experience. Yet it is patent that many Christians overlook this matter in the education of their children,—and especially is this true as regards higher education, in which they are most essential. Assuming that parents are already expected to influence their children in their earlier years, we shall confine our remarks to that stage in which they cannot so influence them; first with reference to Christians, and latterly in general application.

Christian parents who send their children to non-sectarian, and therefore, to all ends and purposes (as we shall show), non-religious institutions, usually do so in confidence that they have already so thoroughly imbued them with a knowledge of, and a regard for Christian principles, that they are prepared to withstand the influences of religious indifference or agnostic environments. The institution may not be agnostic, but we know that this general Christianity, this modern disregard of sectarian barriers, though recognizing God and Christ and attempting to observe the Bible in a general way, without definite convictions or beliefs, in efforts to conciliate all opinions, is hardly less potent in destroying that reverence with which home-taught Christians observe the word of God. It is not agnosticism; but a general confusion of doctrines, that disregards the sanctity of them all, and leads to indifference. We believe that such influences, or rather absence of influences, is likely to lessen the zeal of any but the most consecrated. Yet Baptists have often failed to recognize this to the injury of their children, and their own sorrow. The child may be strong at home, and seem so naturally, but no one can foresee the effect of environment. This much is obvious: If one is to be a Christian, it is best that he be reared and educated under definite and tangible Christian influences. Our stately pines may seem independent in their glorious height and verdure; but take away the shower and sunshine, of which they daily illustrate the blessing, remove them to more stubborn soils and bleaker airs, and their stately strength is dwarfed and enfeebled; they are no longer productive. So we may contrast the influences of a Christian home and a religiously accommodating institution. The environments of the children of the land have no little to do with the character of the nation. How important it is, then, that we place them in strong, bold, Christian surroundings in the years when the mind is most impressible, when it undergoes those changes which will characterize it for life!

We believe it is never safe to send a youth away from home except into a Christian institution. In young manhood he is stronger, and is able to resist evil tendencies. But in all stages the absence of parents is best compensated by Christian influences. And when we say Christian influences, we mean those which proceed from Christian principles, definite enough to be understood, and strong and prominent enough to impress themselves. We do not wish to be misunderstood as advocating that denominational colleges should make it an object to impress denominational principles regardless of other objects, but we do hold that there is no comparison between the general influences for good between a denominational institution and one in which definite Christian principles are impressed.

As to the importance of Christian principles to the general welfare. Bacon has said that "religion is the aromatic principle which preserves science from corruption." We believe religion—Christian religion—has not only preserved science from corruption, but we have the testimony of history that it has on more than one occasion preserved the human race from this consequence. Religion in one form or another has always characterized the world's greatest nations. The Greek king claimed to pronounce his decisions as a judge by the inspiration from Themis; the Roman monarch is said to have learned the elements of legislation from the nymph Egeria, and consulted the oracles for the wisdom of his laws. These empires, false in religion, more perfect in political government, passed away with their faithless gods. To-day our own legislatures, despite constitutional declarations, invoke God's blessings by the daily prayer of their chaplains, and our courts remind us of the presence of "Almighty God, the searcher of all hearts." This is a tendency. The nation recognizes an all-wise and omnipotent God, and confesses its fear of him; who would say that it should not learn of his love through his Son! We know it cannot as a nation, but there is no reason why it should not as a people.

Our nation was rocked in the cradle of a sublime Christianity. The Puritan fathers came to our shores in the name of Christ; their first work was for his glory; and their first appropriation of public funds was for the establishment of an institution, their monument to this day, for the education of a Christian ministry—Harvard. We know our constitution of necessity recognizes God only; but we know that the people largely recognize his goodness through Christ. For without him we would long since have lost, and we may yet lose, that bond of brotherhood that sustained our fathers on the seas, established them on inhospitable shores, and preserved them in famine and war—the bond of Christian brotherhood. Such is the indisputable testimony of history.

As a State we recognize and fear an All-wise God; as a people we love Christ, and love God through him. As Christians we should apply Christian principles practically. It is needless to say that in the education of youth this can be done most speedily, surely, and lastingly; and that Christian churches must be the means to the attainment of this end.

Why the nation needs Christian principles practically applied may be briefly stated. If the idea of a perfect man—an exemplar, an ever-to be sought ideal—is lost, men will be content with their own conduct. Our imaginations offer us nothing better than ourselves. We must beware of that materialism, under the influence of which Italy fell as a State, and which to-day threatens France. Mankind must have something—indefinable, elusive, but spiritual and omnipresent that speaks to and stirs the soul. Israel fell in Judaism, and the Grecian and Roman Republics perished as their character and stability were lowered and lessened by the imitation of mortal and perfidious gods. Christianity alone can sustain that reverence for a divine ideal, which they lacked.

Again, we have in Christian principles the incentive to sympathy with all men—that brotherhood, to which we have already referred. A nation that lacks this spirit is deficient in the noblest human quality, and one sided in its civilization. Only by these principles will grasping capital and oppressed labor be reconciled. We know the present conditions; we know in whatever degree they have been alleviated has been through Christian philanthrophy; and we know the final adjustment must be made. It cannot be done by the ballot; such a course may be successful for a time, but former conditions will return. It cannot be done by war, for the victors will become oppressors unless subdued by Christ. Mammon-worship has brought the strife; Christ, only can bring peace. The laborer must learn "to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness;" the capitalist must learn that "who serves man most, serves God best."

> "Whose sad face on the cross sees only this

Even the agnostic and the infidel acknowledge that New Testament principles would make the world far better than it is, but they say they are ideal. We do not know but that they may be ideal now. An ideal should always be sought. Men are human; still they pray, and we hope, not without faith, that the kingdom of God come on earth, and he has promised to answer our prayers. At any rate, we do not see that it is unwise to teach these principles admittedly wise and just and good. We must first learn them, and try to live in them ourselves, and teach the rising generation the importance of living by them.

SOME one has said, "Worry kills; work doesn't;" and we believe it. It is not going to do one whit of good to worry. We cannot help being concerned, but being concerned and worrying our life away just because "things don't suit us," when, for all we know, they shouldn't, is foolish and unchristian. Don't worry, be concerned, be studious in work, be fervent in spirit, and place your hope and trust for better times in the Lord, who has brought us safely thus far, and we cannot fear the result.

REV. T. M. LEARY.

Rev. T. M. Leary, aged twenty-eight years, of Morehead City, N. C., at the time of his death a member of the senior class at Wake Forest College, died at Wake Forest on the morning of the 14th, after a short illness of pneumonia, contracted Christmas week through exposure, while ill with the "grippe," in attending his appointments to preach.

Mr. Leary was ordained to the ministry about eighteen months ago. Since then he has filled acceptably the pastorates of several churches, at Clayton, Beres, and elsewhere. But it was as a student that the promise of his life was most marked. He not only took a high stand in the class-room, but held the highest honors in the gift of his Society and fellow-classmates, having last year been elected to the position of second debater from his Society, and this year he had been chosen to represent his Society as Anniversary Orator, and to deliver the class prophecy at commencement.

Mr. Leary's death is one of the saddest we have ever been called on to chronicle, and seems to us untimely; yet God knoweth best, and to him we commend his grief-stricken relatives and friends.

The remains of Mr. Leary were shipped to Morehead City, and the interment took place Tuesday morning.

THE Board of Education is now in need of the sympathy and the aid of every Baptist in the State. It represents a worthy cause—the dissemination of God's word, the redemption of the lost. This is not a time for retrenchment in such a work. God's harvest must be garnered, and the reapers must be prepared.

The question as to whether or not certain young men who have been assisted by the Board while at Wake Forest last fall, shall now be continued, confronts us. We know they are worthy, for they have been tried in the past six months. We have no excuse for not supporting them except a financial one; and it is a sad day when we submit to that. Let us rally to the cause of ministerial education; let those who have subscribed send in their amounts, and those who haven't given anything, see if something can't be done. Prompt action this week is very important. God has given us Wake Forest College, and if we allow its usefulness in educating young ministers to wane, we will lose a rich blessing.

The new term should open not only with all of last Fall's students present, but many more.

CHRIST gained his victory over the flesh and the devil only after a struggle that would have repulsed one less divine; but his conduct is an everlasting assurance and a consolation to struggling Christians. He had to endure a Gethsemane and a cross and death before the bright days of the resurrection and the ascension came. Our victory may not have to come through such struggles, but it will not come without toil, sorrow, and disappointment; else, it is a cheap victory, and will not be appreciated. Let those who feel forsaken, and weary, and afraid of the world's sin, remember Gethsemane and the cross and the ultimate triumph—as sure to come as was the sorrow that preceded it. What is worth gaining is worth trials and sufferings.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Dr. Broadus of the Seminary is spending a few weeks in Florida.

....Rev. G. W. Bagby and family have returned to their mission field, Brazil.

....Dr. H. M. Wharton is conducting evangelistic services in Brooklyn, N. Y.

....Rev. W. J. Fulford has changed his address from Maxton, N. C., to Blenheim, S. C.

....There are fourteen young men now at the Seminary who will become foreign missionaries.

....Rev. Sam J. Porter who left us for Brazil last July is now pastor of the church at Juiz de Fora.

....Dr. A. E. Owen has been elected President of the Norfolk-Portsmouth ministers' conference.

....The trustees of the Morganton church have purchased a lot on which a new brick church will be erected.

....Rev. R. T. Bryan attended the Florida Convention last week. Of course the brethren fell in love with him.

....The Board of Missions meets in Raleigh on Tuesday, Jan. 23, 1894, instead of Jan. 16th, as has been stated.

....Let us have your renewal as soon as possible. We have waited on some very patiently, and must hear from them.

....We were glad to have Bro. John Robertson of Iredell county, now at Wake Forest College, in to see us last week.

....Rev. John T. Albritton contributes a very readable historical sketch in this issue. He will tell us of the religious history of "Old Waynesborough" in our next issue.

....Rev. W. S. Long has resigned the presidency of Elon College, of the Christian denomination, this State.

....Dr. R. R. Overby has been called by the church at Roper, and will, perhaps, preach for those brethren once a month this year.

....Our aim is to publish every bit of Baptist news that occurs in North Carolina, and we rely on our subscribers to let us have it.

....As far as we have heard six profession of religion have been made in the revival at Statesville conducted by Rev. G. H. Church.

....We tender our sympathies to our brethren of the Alabama Baptist, who lost their outfit and establishment by fire Christmas week.

....Rev. D. M. Austin has resigned the pastorate of Olivet church, Charlotte. Bro. D. K. Bennett will supply until further arrangements.

....Bro. C. H. Fry of Hasty, N. C., called in to see us on his way to Wake Forest, where he enters this week with a view to the ministry.

....Rev. G. M. Webb has changed his post-office from Randleman to Shelby, and wishes the brethren in writing to him to note this fact.

....We were pleased to have Bro. H. W. Norris in our office last week. Bro. Norris reports that all his churches are making good progress.

....Rev. M. R. Pernell of Franklinton has accepted a call to Wake Cross-Roads church. This, with his other charges, fills up all his Sundays.

....The Disciples of Christ and the Baptists of Indianapolis are about to unite in one sect. This sect has about 600,000 followers in this country.

....All the more important churches of Western North Carolina have called good, strong pastors, and we feel very hopeful of good results.—W. N. C. Baptist.

....Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr., has decided not to have any more of his sermons published in the papers for some time. He estimates that they have reached 1,500,000 people weekly.

....Judge Winston's "Talk on Wills" in this issue is very instructive. But few of our people are acquainted with the laws in regard to making wills and the order of inheritance.

....President Andrews of Brown University has been offered the chancellorship of the Chicago University, which, if accepted, will make him practically co-president with President Harper.

....We have noted with pleasure the many expressions of love and appreciation our various churches have given their pastors. Such things make a pastor's life happier and his work better.

....Dr. Williams preached his farewell sermon as acting pastor of the First church, Baltimore, Jan. 7th. He has been pastor of this church forty-three years. Rev. C. L. Laws will take his place.

....Rev. Thomas Carrick entered on his work at Randleman, succeeding Bro. Webb, on the 9th inst. A brother writes: "His sermons were just splendid, and his people are highly pleased with him."

....Bro. W. L. Wright, the shepherd of the great flock of Church Hill, has been quite sick. This is sorrowful news, for he is one of the choicest and most effective laborers in Richmond.—Baltimore Baptist.

....We regret to hear of the continued sickness of Bro. Peterson of the Baptist. Doesn't it seem rather fortunate that Bro. Peterson and Bro. Caddell were kept at home by the grippe during the holidays?

....Rev. A. W. Crabtree has accepted calls to Chaney's Hill, Locust Level, and Howells churches. Brother Crabtree has charges also at Arlington, Oak Grove and Coldwater, and two out-stations. A busy man.

....The Baptist parsonage, next to the church, is being repaired and will be occupied by the new pastor, Rev. Samuel Sanders, who is expected to arrive about the first of February.—Murfreesboro Index, Jan. 12, 1894.

....Dr. H. A. Tupper is now in Richmond, having returned from pleasant visit to his children and grandchildren, in Denver, St. Louis, Birmingham, Baltimore and Albemarle. His many friends will be glad to know that his health is excellent.—Religious Herald.

....Rev. C. C. Newton and family sailed from Liverpool, England, Jan. 3d, for Lagos, Africa. He says: "La grippe has held me back several weeks, which was a great disappointment. It may be best in some way. We cannot see. Often our disappointments are God's appointments."

....Dr. Pritchard rises to the occasion in good shape this week, and adds some valuable facts to his series of papers on Co-education. Whether one believes in Co-education or not, Dr. Pritchard's articles are worth attention for the information they contain on the subject. We are sure the Doctor has been studying the matter deep and long.

....The liberality of our Newberry church should be an example to the whole State. One year ago they undertook to pay a missionary $400 a year, and have paid it monthly. The minutes of the Association show that other objects were by no means overlooked. They gave, Sunday-school and church, for the Orphanage, $24.00; [illegible] for Foreign Missions; Home Missions, $38.11; Ministerial Education, $18.12. They will support the missionary again this year. In addition to all this they pay Bro. [illegible] the pastor, a good salary.

....The congregation of Olivet Baptist church has taken no steps yet towards securing a pastor, and will not, probably, for some time. Rev. Mr. Austin has received calls from both Asheville and Mt. Airy, but has not accepted either as yet. He says he has no plans for the near future.—Charlotte Observer.

....Hard times seem to encourage the matrimony business. The RECORDER has about a column of marriage notices on hand, a part of which appear in this issue, and the remainder will appear in our next, along with others that are constantly coming in. Verily, "it is not good that man should be be alone." Let the good work continue.

....The Waynesville church has unanimously extended a call to Rev. A. R. Willett of Harrisburg, Ill. He is a native of Kentucky, and belongs to a large family of preachers, having eight brothers and a father, all of whom are Baptist preachers. This is more remarkable than the Dixon family in this State. Bro. Willett has not yet accepted.—W. N. C. Baptist.

....There seems to be some confusion in regard to the situation of Bro. A. D. Hunter. The following from him explains matters: "I accepted work in Raleigh Jan. 2d, 1894; so am regularly in my work. Have two country churches in reach, so I am to preach in my Raleigh church each Sunday night." His work is "in and near Raleigh," and he lives near the West End Mission Chapel, just beyond the western limits of the city.

....A church of eleven members has been organized at Macon, N. C., but they have no house of worship, and are now holding services in a school-house. An effort is being made to raise funds to build a house. A lot has been secured, but the brethren have not enough money on hand to warrant them in commencing the work. This is a worthy object, and any help given will be highly appreciated. Bro. John H. Nicholson, Macon, N. C., will acknowledge all money received through the RECORDER. Help them, brethren.

....Rev. W. H. Strickland of Plant City, Fla., writes January 10th, 1894: "Rev. C. S. Farriss, Professor of Greek in Stetson University, and editor of the Baptist Witness preached the Convention sermon to-day at 11 o'clock. Text, John 17: 3. It was a masterful effort, forceful in expression, finished in diction, graceful in delivery, beautiful in metaphor, sound in doctrine, aggressive in spirit—it swept the deck. North Carolina gave us much in yielding him to Florida. The effort places him in the very first rank of preachers; it makes our University still prouder of him and assures us all that the Witness is safe in his hands. Much obliged for Farriss. Send us another."

....Col. J. M. Heck has written a letter of most touching gratitude to the brethren of the late Convention for their sympathy and prayers in behalf of himself and daughter, and begs me to say to them that the Lord has been pleased to hear them, for Miss Fannie has begun to improve, and he, if no better, so far as permanent improvement is concerned, is so much stronger that he can sit up, and feels that special grace is given him to bear with patience his sufferings. He mentions also with liveliest expressions of gratitude that one of his sons has not only professed faith in Christ, but resolved to devote his life to the ministry. These blessings he regards as the direct results of the many afflictions sent upon the family recently.—Dr. Pritchard in Charity and Children.

Wake Forest Letter.

The spring term opens January 15. Several new students have already arrived and quite a number of others are expected soon. All things considered, the prospects of the coming term are good.

The examinations just closed, show that very thorough work has been done in all the departments. The list of class absences is smaller than usual and the average grade higher.

At the last meeting of the Missionary Society Dr. Taylor discussed "Christ and Mohammed." He was at his best and his address was deeply interesting and instructive.

Mr. R. L. Freeman, the Librarian, sketched the progress of Christianity in Mohammedan countries. The amount of the collection, $8.00, was given to Foreign missions. At the February meeting the "Qualification of the Missionary" will be discussed and Profs. Royall and Ferrell will be the principal speakers.

We are glad to welcome back to the "Hill" Dr. John Mitchell, who takes charge of the work of the Board of Education. His presence and influence are a blessing to any community. The Board at a recent meeting decided to continue the support of all the beneficiaries now here. This step was taken because we were unwilling that any young man should be forced to give up his course if it could be avoided, and because we believed that the Baptist hosts would rally to the support of an object so closely connected with our progress as a denomination.

The following extract from a private letter received from a gentleman at Johns Hopkins University will be gratifying to the friends of Wake Forest: "Wake Forest is taking her stand at Hopkins as she does everywhere. Three of the six honorary North Carolina scholarships are held by Wake Forest boys." This proves the justness of the claim made by the friends of the College that it offers broad, thorough scholarship, and disproves the charge sometimes made, that denominational colleges make narrow, one-sided men. J. E. C.

Twenty-two persons have united with the Calvary church, Roanoke Va., since Bro. L. G. Broughton took charge.

Co-Education—No. 4.

BY T. H. PRITCHARD, D. D.

Before proceeding with the argument, the article of Dr. C. Durham, in the last issue of the RECORDER, merits a word of comment. He quotes from me these words: "I had the honor to organize the first woman's missionary society of modern times in this State." In the same sentence I stated that there were women's missionary societies in the State as long ago as 1816, thus showing that I used the word modern in the sense of recent times. Now for a brother, after that disclaimer, to devote half a column to ridiculing my claim to be the first man to organize women's missionary societies in the State, is so unfair and unjust as to place him beyond the pale of legitimate controversy. I have no objection to discussing this question with any one who will deal fairly with me and my arguments, but must politely ask to be excused from discussing a question with a brother who has so little regard for the courtesies of debate.

To proceed: This is a matter of importance and interest to our people, and I propose to say in this number a little more about the history of this movement. Within the past twenty years it has gained favor with remarkable rapidity in Europe and America, but it was practiced in some few schools of higher learning long before that time. So far as I can learn, Oberlin College opened its doors to both sexes in 1833; Antioch College, under that great teacher, Horace Mann, followed twenty years later; then came Baylor University, Texas. Later this principle was adopted by Queen and Bedford Colleges, London; then the Universities of London, Oxford and Cambridge, England, offered their degrees to women as well as men, and two years ago St. Andrews of Switzerland invited women to become students and the University of Pennsylvania, with twenty State Universities of the West, have placed men and women on the same footing in their course of study. In Michigan, Iowa, and Kansas there is not a single college separate for men. The two most richly endowed institutions of America, the Leland-Stanford of California and Chicago University, make no distinction between men and women.

In the report of the National Educational Association of 1890, I find this language: "We think we should be safe in saying that the question of co education, in every grade of schools in this country, is settled: Individuals may deny the soundness of the theory, but the public mind is made up, and is not likely to be shaken in its conviction."

Dr. W. T. Harriss, the United States Commissioner of Education, of whom the Religious Herald, in its issue of this week, speaks thus: "He is one of the profoundest scholars and ablest educators in this country. His reports and writings are sought after in Europe, and have helped to give us the high reputation which was so generally conceded by teachers and scholars from abroad at the International Educational Congress in Chicago"; this eminent educator has summed up the advantages of co-education in three remarkable statements:

"Improvement in discipline. The self-will, violence and rudeness of boys being restrained by the presence of the girls, while the manners of the girls are more self-possessed by daily association with the boys.

"2. Improvement in instruction and study. The diversity of sex preventing extreme methods and one-sided training. The tastes of the boys for severe studies being corrected by the inclination of the girls for the lighter studies of literature and vice versa.

"3. A more sound and healthy development of both sexes. Schools kept for either sex exclusively, requiring stricter surveillance upon the part of teachers. Daily association in the class-room tests the intellectual strength of each sex, each seeing the weakness of the other and learning to esteem what is essentially true in each, thus checking the imagination, which, in boys and girls especially, is the reigning faculty. That the sexual tension remain undeveloped as long as possible and that all early love affairs be avoided is the desideratum; and experience has shown that association of the sexes, in the plane of intellectual contests, is the safest course to secure this end."

This testimony, I submit, is worthy of weight, since it is given by the very highest authority on the subject at issue.

This is largely a matter which must be settled by evidence, and I now wish to submit some witnesses in the case, in addition to those heretofore published. The first man I bring on the stand is my old college-mate, A. J. Emerson, President of Northwest College, Texas. He says:

"I have an experience of only three years where the two sexes have been educated together. So far, however, my impressions are altogether favorable. I think the influence exerted is mutually beneficial. I have observed no resultant harm to girls. The girls have less sentimental silliness than when educated in separate schools. Boys are more manly, less inclined to rowdyism; more amenable to moral influences; the vicious are more easily detected and are not backed up in their evil courses by their fellow students as they are in male schools."

The next witness is also a new convert to the system. J. T. Henderson, President of Carson and Newman College, Tennessee, writes:

"We have tried co-education for four years, and are pleased with it. In a mixed school the discipline needs to be carefully guarded. If you have separate boarding-houses for the boys and girls, and these be well located, much of the difficulty of discipline is removed. The principal of a mixed school especially, if many of the boys and girls are young, needs to be a wise executive. The effect socially is good, and there is a stimulating effect on both sexes. In these hard times the economy of co-education is a very strong argument."

Our next witness is from Oregon, Dr. T. G. Brownson, President of McMinnville College. He writes:

"I most gladly and cheerfully say, after graduating from a male school, and after teaching for six years in a mixed school, I am positively and pronouncedly in favor of admitting women to every male school in the United States, especially to such schools as are under Baptist control. I know of no injurious results that are not vastly more than counterbalanced by the beneficial results to both sexes. On the score of economy, it seems to me that all the arguments are in favor of the mixed school."

Let us hear the President of Sioux Falls University, Dakota, Rev. E. B. Meredith:

"Our school has always been co-educational. We find no difficulty in it. The girls seem to be able to carry the same work as the boys, and we have never had any difficulty about their being together. We think it has a refining influence on both sexes, and with proper management makes the girls more conservative in their conduct towards young men than when they are educated separately. It is well to have two separate dormitory buildings, but let them use the same dining-room, and recite together, and also it is well to have them in the same literary societies, for they will thus come into good and refining competition with each other."

Dr. S. B. Morse, President of California College, shall next be called:

"I have had seven years' experience in schools where the sexes were separated, and twelve years in co-educational work. There are advantages in both systems. I have sometimes thought that I had rather my son would attend school with young ladies and my daughter an exclusively girls' school. If, however, the government is just right, I am inclined toward co-education. I should say without hesitation that co education is best for college students. For academic and preparatory students, it is doubtful. We find most trouble with boys and girls from fourteen to eighteen, i. e., in the academic grades. After students get over the soft period and have come to realize the necessity of study, they give us but little trouble; this is not always the case, however. We have separate boarding-houses and they take their meals apart. I should advocate, however, a common dining room. I think taking their meals together would be advantageous, especially to the boys. I have noticed this in California; that students of mixed schools stand higher for scholarship than those from others."

I might cite the testimony of many other experienced and able educators on this point, Dr. W. R. Harper, for instance, who is unqualifiedly in favor of co-education;—but surely, if there be any worth in evidence, I have adduced a sufficient number of witnesses, and as the lawyers say, I rest here the case, at least for a while.

Facts From Missionaries.

"I have done the hardest year's work, the past year, of my life; have made more than 1,500 pastoral visits; attended, usually, twenty-one public services per month; written about 200 letters and postal cards for my churches; held six protracted meetings and many other general meetings of different kinds; organized two churches and expect to organize another this year; baptized fifty; received by letter fifty seven and restored two. I have a family of six to support, and here in January with $250 behind, it tries my patience. I never was so embarrassed before in my life. I am badly worn by the year's work; but "I count not my life dear." The Lord be with, and direct you in your responsible position." These words are from one of the best men in the State. The Board is due him $41 70. Who will send us the money for this missionary?

"If there is any possible chance for me to get the amount due by the Board I would be glad to have it. Those who have waited on me to pay them are wanting their money and are dunning me for it." This statement is from a most devoted missionary, and the Board is due him $25. Who will send us the money to pay him?

"I am much in need of money to pay some of my indebtedness. Can your Board do anything for me? I would appreciate a part, if you can't send the whole amount." If there is a better worker in the State than this brother I do not know him. The Board is due him $88.74. Who can send us the money to pay him?

"I am sorry to say I will have to drop my work unless I can get some aid soon. Times are very hard at present and the people here can't do much for me." These are the words of a missionary to whom the Board is due $100. He is in a very destitute mission field. Cannot some one send us the money to pay him?

"I must ask for some money. I am being dunned for my coal bill and have not enough to last two week with only one dealer in town. I am dependent on the Board. I now owe, house-rent $75, and grocery bill about $50. Please, if possible, let me have $100 at once. I have put off my creditors for months—in fact ever since September. I don't see any chance to put them off any longer without compromising my honor and integrity. Please let me hear at once." If there is a better man that walks the earth than this missionary I do not know who he is. The Board is now due him $134 35. Where is the money to come from to pay him? These facts are taken from private letters not designed for publication. I could add many other facts. This is a great burden upon me day and night. I feel that these men must be paid speedily. Who will help to pay them?

Union News and Notes.

Dear Recorder:—Our work throughout the county moves on, with now and then an interruption.

A new church, composed of old members from other churches, was organized December 31st at Union school house. I do not know whether it was needed or not. Some think so, and some think not: wise or unwise, it is done.

Our Union Meeting was more of a success than usual. As a rule, the preaching brethren seem to think that these meetings can run themselves, and so they do not attend; but this time they were there in full force and did good work.

The hard times is affecting us in our work here more now than at any time previously. Several have moved away and several more are now making their arrangements to do likewise. With all these things to work against, we are doing well and working hard.

I have never known the like of sickness. Everybody has "grippe," and those who have escaped to date are taking it. Last Sunday there were about twenty families of my congregation with from one to three sick in them. It had its effect on the size of my audience, too. We are hoping for more settled weather and less sickness soon. The doctors tell me that it is equally as bad in the country as it is in town.

This is about the extent of the news. Now for the NOTES.

1. I see quite a newsy letter from Sam Jones in the Texas Baptist-Standard. Sam seems determined on what he believes that he ought to do, conference or no conference. He closes his letter in the following words: "You have no idea how free a fellow feels when he feels he owes allegiance to no power greater than himself under the shining stars. God as his King, Christ as his Elder Brother, the Holy Spirit his Comforter and Friend, the Word of God the man of his counsel, the praying millions around him helping him on in his work! With wings like these, a man can fly around the world." It is really surprising that Sam has not seen these things earlier, and that he had to be forced to see them by the Bishop's refusing to allow him to continue his evangelistic work. This is just what we Baptist preachers have always had, and this simple freedom largely accounts for our flying around the world at such a rapid rate.

2. The other day Dr. R. R. Montgomery's physician said to him, as he stood by the bedside of the dying pastor, "Pastor, we have let you work too hard. We ought to have given you a rest sooner"; and then he confessed that the pastor's death was largely due to overwork. In the same issue of the Examiner, it is also stated that three young pastors are in bed from overwork. The Examiner then utters a word of caution to the pastors and preachers thence to lecture the churches. Very timely, too, I think, for the churches will very often allow a man to work himself to death, and then mourn when it is too late; or what is worse, they will after allow a pastor to work hard, make great sacrifices for them, and then when he is gone to some other field, say hard things about him. Sometimes he is not paid. This scribe well remembers a few instances where he has labored hard, and then his salary was not paid and is not yet paid. There is no class of men anywhere who work as hard and get as little for it, both in appreciation and money as preachers. Sometimes the church fails to meet her obligations to the preacher, and then he is necessarily bound to fail to meet his own obligations and to be abused because of it, when justly the blame should fall on the church. The moral here is, take good care of your pastor. Keep his salary paid. Pay all you promise, and then our pastorates will be more pleasant and longer, and the memories thereof sweeter. M. A. A.

The Biblical Recorder the Organ of the South Carolina Baptists.

Here is and extract from "a sermon, occasioned by the death of Rev. Thomas Meredith, delivered in the Baptist church in Newbern, N. C., November 24, 1850, by Rev. J. M. C. Breaker, pastor. Preached and published by request of the church." The extract is this; "From Newbern he (Meredith) went to Savannah, Ga., where he remained for several months as pastor of the church at that place. In 1826 he was called to the pastorate of the church at Edenton, where he remained nine years. It was here that he commenced the publication of The Baptist Interpreter, the first Baptist paper published in North Carolina. He received and accepted a call the second time to become the pastor of this church (Newbern), in June, 1834, which office he continued to occupy for two years. During this period, the publication of the BIBLICAL RECORDER was commenced, which for several years was the denominational organ of the Baptists of both North and South Carolina."

Until I read this sermon by Bro. Breaker I was not aware of the fact that the RECORDER was at one time the organ of the Baptists of two States. How long this arrangement continued the sermon does not say—can some brother tell us? R. F.

Scuppernong Union Meeting.

This Union convened with the church on the Sound Side in Tyrrell county, Saturday before the fifth Sunday in December, 1893.

We had a very interesting and we hope a profitable meeting. The introductory sermon was preached by a boy we raised and baptized in our midst (John A. Shaw), which would do for any congregation to hear.

There was great interest manifested in the cause of State Missions.

Rev. W. V. Savage was elected a delegate to represent this Union Meeting in the next session of the Bertie Union Meeting in the interest of State Missions.

The following query was ably discussed by Rev. W. V. Savage, J. A. Spruill and M. Magett. (Our duty as Baptists in the cause of State Missions.)

The committee on religious exercises recommended that the next session of the Union Meeting assemble with the church in Columbia, Tyrrell county, Saturday before the fifth Sunday in April, 1894. Rev. W. J. Fulford to preach the introductory sermon, Rev. R. R. Overby, alternate. Adopted.

J. A. SPRUILL, Mod.

South Yadkin Union.

This Union met with Society church, Iredell county, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in December, 1893. The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. J. F. Redwine.

Practical subjects pertaining to church and Sunday-school work were discussed before the body.

Revs. J. F. Redwine, D. W. Pool, J. B. Newton, W. J. Hopkins and J. M. Ballard were present and did all that could be expected of them to advance the work of the Union.

The next Union will meet with Beres church, Iredell county, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1894.

Brethren, you are earnestly requested to be present at our next meeting. Don't think there is no work for you; but let each one feel that he has a work to do, and then we will revive the work that once characterized the South Yadkin in its earlier days.

Ordination of A. E. C. Pittman.

This brother was ordained in the Baptist church at Rennert, N. C., at night on the 7th inst.

Examination of candidate by the presbytery before the congregation. Sermon by pastor, Rev. R. A. Hedgpeth, from 2 Tim. 2: 3. Impressive sermon. Ordaining prayer by Rev. A. R. Pittman, father of the candidate. Charge and presentation of the Bible as the only weapon of spiritual warfare, was also by the father. Hand of fellowship extended by presbytery. Benediction by Rev. A. E. C. Pittman.

The congregation was large, considering the inclement weather, and the entire service seemed to be much appreciated by all present.

May heaven's benediction rest upon the young minister of God's Word, and upon all his efforts in the Lord's vineyard, is the earnest prayer of his church.

From Georgia.

Our Christmas holidays went off very well in North Georgia, and in North Carolina along the line. Bro. Plott ran a series of meetings on Nantahala. I had a continuous meeting at Mt. Pleasant church. The Hiawassee people had a Christmas tree on the night of Christmas. On the night of the 30th of December the people of our little town and some of the nearer country folks, gave a supper to Prof. I. G. Harrison and his wife, Miss Bessie Gillmore. They were married on the 28th of December at Gainesville, Ga. The supper was a splendid one, and made the attendants feel like they would be glad if these sort of scenes and realities would come every day or two. Some thing over 200 persons were the happy participants in this supper.

Our school opens up this morning with quite a host of students, several young ministers among them and bids fair for the best session lately.

Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Union.

The next session of this Union will be held with the Concord church the fifth Sunday in April, and we hope the brethren will come out better than they have done heretofore.

1. Should we as Baptists patronize our own denomination in all respects? Martin Henson.

2. How can we get church members to attend the Sunday-school? J. L. Cashion.

3. Is compulsory attendance at church-meetings right? J. W. Snider.

4. Why do Baptists hold to so-called close communion? Dr. T. H. Pritchard.

From Kelsey.

Dear Bro. Bailey.—We have had a good meeting of ten days at Boon's Fork church. Rev. E. D. Crisp, the pastor, did most of the preaching. He was faithfully assisted by Bro. Phillips. Both did good preaching. There were five conversions. Twelve were added to the church. On Sunday before Christmas, Bro. Crisp baptised eight girls, all under eighteen years old, in the beautiful stream, Boon's Fork, at the foot of Grandfather Mountain.

The church was greatly revived. The members covenanted to run a prayer-meeting once a week till next Christmas. May the kind Heavenly Father help them to keep that vow.

The RECORDER comes every week like a dear friend. May its editor have a happy and prosperous year 1894.

Don't go [illegible] pills.

Christ's church. If the mighty volume of sound produced at Niagara could be converted into articulate melody, it would make music enough to be heard in every home all over our country. So the love and goodness of God revealed by the death of Christ passing through the sanctified hearts of his people like so many æolian harps ought to cause such sweet music as to charm and fascinate, to win and persuade, to convince and subdue the ungodly everywhere, and to render every heart and every home happy.

Oh, what a privilege, what an honor to preach the Word! May God help us to do it faithfully. For God will bless the preaching of his Word to the salvation of souls and to the advancement of his kingdom.

BY JUDGE R. W. WINSTON.

THERE BEING NO WILL.

We have heretofore had occasion to consider the subject of wills, and, incidentally, what will the law makes for a man dying without a will. The personal estate of a person dying intestate, that is without a will, is divided under the "statute of distributions." If a man die leaving more than two children and a widow, the personalty goes equally to widow and each child. That is, he gets a child's part. If there are two children or less, the widow gets one-third, and two-thirds goes to the child or children. If the dead man left no child, nor the legal representative of a deceased child, the widow gets all the personalty. Now, if a son dies leaving no widow nor children, his father takes the personalty. But if a son dies leaving no widow nor children and having no father but a mother, the estate goes equally to her and the brothers and sisters of the son.

Sometimes a question arises as to whether persons take by stocks or by the head—per stirpes or per capita, as the law hath it. This is very material, as one may readily see.

Suppose an old bachelor dies leaving no mother nor father, but leaving one living brother, two nephews and two neices, the children of a deceased brother, will the living brother get a fifth or a half of the estate? He will get half, and the nephews and neices will get each one fourth of a half. That is to say, they take the place of the deceased brother of the intestate.

If the old bachelor had died leaving no living brother or sister but children of dead brothers, such children would have taken by the head. The presumption, so say our court, is that they take in all cases by the head, and this presumption will prevail unless, as sometimes happens in wills, the opposite intention may be gathered.

A father will often, in his life time, make a deed to a piece of property to one son, or will let that son have more money or other things of value than the other children. On the death of the father, the question arises, will that son have to account for what he received of the father before he can get any of the estate, or shall he keep what he has and share equally with the other children in the estate. In a word, did the father give him, or did he advance him money and other valuables? If it was a gift, the son does not have to account for it; if an advancement, he does. Of course, a father can give his son all the property to the exclusion of all the other children, if he wish. The presumption is against the gift and in favor of the advancement; and the son must show that it was a gift and was so intended. This he may do by evidence that the father said, "I give you this horse, and do not wish it charged against you in the settlement of my estate;" or by the words of the will, indicating that all the property, during the life of the testator, were gifts and not advancements; or, indeed, in any way, by which the presumption of an advancement is rebutted.

Indeed, so far have our courts gone that, in a recent case from Durham, they held that when a father executed to a son a deed to a tract of land worth, say $1,200, and recited a consideration in the deed of only $400, the son was advanced to the extent of $800, which he must account for in a settlement of the estate.

This did not violate the rule of law that you may not alter the terms of a deed or other written instrument concerning land by word of mouth; because our courts hold that the consideration of a deed is not embraced in the Statute of Frauds which requires all contracts for the sale of lands, or any interest in or concerning the same, to be in writing.

Suppose a son has been advanced by the father, can the other children take away what he has thus received? Not at all. But if the party advanced is not willing to, and does not, render an inventory showing what he has received from the father, he can get none of the estate. If he is willing to render such inventory and account for what he received, which is called bringing the effects into "Hotch-Pot," he will then share equally with all the other distributees.

An administrator, as is well known, is appointed by the clerk, and represents the estate of an intestate. An executor is appointed by will.

So true is it, in the eye of the law, that the executor or administrator represents the estate of the deceased, that when suit is brought upon any contract of the deceased, generally no one is made defendant in the action but such executor or administrator. The parties really interested as distributees of the estate, or as legatees, are not only not necessary parties, but are oftentimes not proper parties to the action; and after judgment goes against the executor, and afterwards he files his petition to make real estate assets to pay the debts of the deceased, in which last proceeding the heirs-at-law are necessary parties, they are not permitted to attack the judgment for any cause whatever save and excepting fraud or misconduct on the part of the administrator. They cannot set up the statute of limitations or payment previous to the taking of the judgment, &c., because the executor has had his day in court and the same case cannot be twice tried except upon appeal. Matters arising since the judgment they may avail themselves of. The solvency or insolvency of many an estate is a matter largely depending upon the executor or administrator.

Previous to 1868, after a man had, by his wife, children, he had a beneficial interest in the rents and profits of her lands, even before she died. He is said to be tenant by the curtesy initiate.

Since 1868, however, that is, under our new constitution, the husband has practically no interest in his wife's lands or the rents and profits of the same, until after her death. He then becomes tenant by the curtesy consummate.

Our courts have recently said that the husband cannot sue alone and recover the rents of the wife's land, she living. She must sue.

What a change this is in the old law, when husband and wife were one in law. Baron and femme they were called. We are told that once upon a time in England, a wife, deserted by her husband who fled the realm, sued alone in the courts. Whereat, my Lord Coke was so surprised, that nothing would give expression to his feelings but a Latin distich:

"Eccè! modo-mirrum, quod fœmina fert breve regis,
Non nominando virum, conjunctum robore legis"!!

A Question Solved.

Too high praise cannot be accorded the American Baptist Publication Society for its enterprise in preparing a series of charming papers for children. The future success of the child in Bible study depends largely upon the way in which the instruction is begun. Our national Society has solved this question in the delightful papers which it issues.

Old Waynesborough.

Railroads kill and make alive. In 1820 Newbern was the largest town in North Carolina, having a population of 3,633, while Wilmington's population was only 2,633. The latter is now the largest city in the State, having gone far ahead of Newbern in consequence of the fact that she had railroad facilities twenty years or more before Newbern did.

The same railroad (the W. & W. R. R) that made Wilmington surpass Newbern, converted a forest into the town of Goldsboro, and the town of Waynesborough into a cotton and tobacco farm.

I have never become reconciled to the death of this ancient town—the home of my early boyhood. But few of its inhabitants are now living. Many of their descendants, however, are citizens of Goldsboro and other parts of the world, and I feel confident that reminiscences of the dead town will prove interesting reading to them.

How old the town was at its death I cannot tell. Wayne county, of which Waynesborough was the capital until some time in the fifties, was formed in 1779, and named after Gen. Anthony Wayne, known in Revolutionary history as "Mad Anthony." The town, which was named after the hero's birth place—Waynesborough, Pennsylvania,—is probably as old as the county.

In Entick's old dictionary, printed in 1812, Waynesborough is mentioned as one of the eighty-four leading post towns in the old North State.

The writer is just now in a reminiscent mood, and under the mastery of the sentiment so beautifully expressed in Wordworth's lines,—

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood,
When fond recollection presents them to view!"

Nor is it difficult to follow the old Latin maxim, de mortuis nil nisi bonum, since, to my boyish mind, everything connected with the dear old town was not only good, but very good.

Somewhere in the forties, the writer—then a small boy—travelling westwardly, passed through the little village of Goldsboro, his objective point being the old town of Waynesborough, situated on the right bank of the Neuse, about a mile beyond Goldsboro. At that time, the old town contained several stores, two hotels, two carriage factories, a tailoring establishment, a large milling interest and other industries that gave quite an air of business to the place. Besides, there was the court-house, which had been for generations the trysting-place where such eminent lawyers as Louis D. Henry and Wm. H. Washington were wont to engage in fierce, forensic warfare. Then there were three steamboats—the Wayne, the Johnston and the Rough and Ready—plying with tolerable regularity between Newbern and Waynesborough, frequently ascending the river as far up as Smithfield. Last, but not least, the incoming four-horse stage coaches, laden with mail and passengers, and heralded by the loud-sounding stage-horn, relieved the monotony of the place and infused new life into the citizens. But alas! the halcyon days of the stage-coach have departed. The railroad is the destroyer of many an old-time institution.

Paul said that when he was a child, he thought as a child, he spake as a child. In this respect, we are all like the apostle. I wish to speak of Waynesborough, as the town impressed my boyish mind. It was emphatically

THE SMALL BOY'S PARADISE.

If the Tillery boys, Ben Williams, Ben Traylor, Lem Springs, Bill Wellons and Dick Nelson are yet living, they will bear willing testimony to the fact that old Waynesborough was what the preacher said heaven was—"a Kentucky of a place."

Bill Wellons, as a school-boy, excelled all the other boys in one particular,—he carried in his basket whitest, lightest biscuit and the best fried chicken that ever tantalized a hungry boy. I am sure that Bill, if living, gets no such biscuit and chicken now, for his good old mother died several years ago. Bill was a clever fellow, and would frequently swap dinners with me just for accommodation. Bill used to ask me home with him, and I always accepted the invitation when my mother would let me.

As for Dick Nelson, he is down in Selma, Ala., pleading law, presiding over a bank, and teaching other bankers how to run their business. When last heard from, he was president of the American Bankers' Association. I am not surprised at Dick's growing propensity; for to be born in old Waynesborough was to get a good running start in life's race. I was not born there, but went there a few years after that important event happened.

Fishing, hunting, swimming, boating, and climbing after grapes, constituted the chief sports of the Waynesborough small boy.

In the immense growth of cedars that surrounded the old church, the ubiquitous robin found both food and shelter. I have never seen so many robins since the day I left the old town. My father bought me my first bird gun, which I literally wore out shooting at the red-breasts. The gun was rather weak in the hammer, but whenever she went off, something happened. Sometimes fifteen or twenty robins would fall, to repay me for my patient snapping. I then thought that gun was the best gun in the world, that weakness excepted.

In the adjacent low grounds there grew, up the large trees, a superabundance of as fine black grapes as ever grew anywhere, free to everybody who was willing to climb for them. We cultivated the art of climbing until I believe we could have beaten the world at this high calling.

Swimming was par excellence the amusement and the glory of the small boy of the ancient borough. We had no use for bathing suits, a popular appendage to the swimming of more effeminate times. We had no fight to make with those who opposed the nude in art; but, to our minds, the nude in nature was the proper thing when swimming was to be done.

Out in the river, at the foot of the long platform up which were drawn the logs for the saw, were great timber-rafts, in which were holes sufficiently large to admit the body of even a grown man. To our delectation, we would jump into the river, dive under the rafts, and come out through these holes. One day the writer failed to find the hole as quickly as he wished or needed to find it. I would advise boys of all kinds never to hunt for a hole on the under side of a timber raft, unless they are hungry for a drowning experience.

If the reader will, as the preachers say, pardon a little personal allusion, I will relate a thrilling story that had a sad ending. Sometimes the old Neuse would get on a big swell and bisect Waynesborough pouring its surplus water into a low depression running through the whole town. It is an ill wind that blows no good to any one. Our parents thought it a great calamity to have their town cut in two by the wild, rollicking river, but the small boy looked upon the calamity as an occasion for great rejoicing and thanksgiving. Of course, we had to cross and re-cross the improvised stream daily to get from one part of town to the other. Some of our parents lived on one side, and carried on business on the other side. We had to construct improvised crafts for crossing over. We boys placed some timbers in the form of a four-rail pen, overlaid the craft with a plank or two, and started out for the other side. When about midway the rushing stream, the craft got crazy, and soon became a total wreck. Like Paul and his companions in the Adriatic sea, we that could swim first cast ourselves into the water, and the rest, some on boards and some on the broken pieces of the ship, escaped all safe to land. Sorrowfully my brother Jesse and I wended our way homeward where our parents discovered that we were broken out all over with the measles. The darkened room and the sassafras tea are painfully remembered to this day. The heaviest affliction we had to bear, however, was the fear that the river would get within its bed before we could get out of ours. Our worst fear, alas! was realized. For the river no longer divided the town, and hence the necessity of boat-building no longer existed.

We boys thought the older people did a very unwise thing when they left the old town to help build up Goldsboro. The railroad was the cause of the removal and of the breaking up of our paradise. The little shrieking locomotive, slap-slap slapping the iron bars from one end of the road to the other, at the rate of fifteen to twenty miles an hour, was not worthy to be compared to the grand old stage coach drawn by four magnificent steeds, guided by a King or a Samson. The railroad of that day was a very primitive thing. Across the cross ties were laid long pieces of scantling upon which were nailed bars of iron about the width of cart tires, but somewhat thicker. The ends of these bars would sometimes rise up and pierce the coaches, seemingly in retaliation for the slapping they got from the train. When I first saw a locomotive running and throwing out fire at top and bottom, through smoke stack and fire pan, the sight brought me into profound sympathy with the old lady who, having seen, for the first time, a locomotive approaching her on a dark night, exclaimed, "Lord o' mercy, old man, yonder comes the devil shore, a-puffin' and a-blowin', and a spittin' fire! Poor thing! how tired he is!"

Wait awhile, and I will come again, and tell something about the old church in the old town.

MARLVILLE, N. C., Sept. 20, 1893.

Messrs. Boykin, Carmer & Co.:—

Gentlemen: The chemicals I bought of you for making "Home Fertilizer" continue to give satisfaction. I only use it under cotton. You know I must think it good, or I should not have used it so long. This makes 16 or 17 years that I have been using it, and its use has made me able to pay for it cash, not on crop time.

Yours truly, THOS. S. EVANS.

CHERAW, S. C., Oct. 16, 1893.

Messrs. Boykin, Carmer & Co.:—

It gives us pleasure to say we have been using your Home Fertilizer for more than fifteen years continuously, and expect to continue to do so. Of course, we are entirely satisfied that it pays us to use it.

Respectfully, J. W. McKAY. R. M. McKAY.

HOME-SICKNESS.

Last Sunday morning I preached a sermon to my people on the expediency of Christ's return to heaven. I said:

It was expedient for the development of the highest faculties of our nature. Love never ridicules that. It wants eternal contact. Nevertheless all of our experiences teach that absence is wholesome. It is one of the grandest lessons of this life that absence intensifies love. Who in the world has never been home-sick? If you have never been home-sick you do not know how tenderly, truly, mightily you love home. That, afterward, prodigal boy inexperienced, untried, enjoying the comforts of a father's honesty, and the little attentions of a mother's love, does not know what a dear place the father's house is. But when at last in the far, far distant land he sins away his money and health, and a wretch in rags and filth he is cast out, there rises before him a vision, and even the mountains, the valleys, the rivers that rise and stretch and roll and spread betwixt the old home and the new one, there come the memories of his boyhood days, and he loves the old home as never before. You live with your mother so long you really forget you love her. You pause sometimes and ask, "Well, now do I love my mother." But O my soul! how it all comes back in the shadows of a dream, long years after the dear, dear face, furrowed with the marks of anxious care and patient suffering, rests under the snow and the cedars; when the nerveless hands are crossed in dreamless sleep upon the pulseless breast. All our hopes are centered in a world we never see. All we love go away into the unseen world. What cords of affection are woven to bind us to the invisible as one by one—friend, father, mother, brother, sister—embark in the dark boat of death for the other shore. One thing that saves this life from being contemptible is the thought of mother. Thus the love side and the faith side of our natures are developed, &c.

Think how constantly in our dull, daily experiences, these sentiments become facts. It seems to me every year I love North Carolina better. There my mistakes were made, my wild oats were scattered broadcast. There the precious opportunities and cloudless days of boyhood were squandered in thoughtless carelessness. There the voice of the aged preacher called a raw lad to the foot of the Cross. There I met discouragements that at last whipped and stung me out of the pulpit into the newspaper office, and upon the edge of dissipation and recklessness, a dispensation of Providence (like Luther's thunderstorm that drove him into the cloister), which brought me, a trembling penitent, back to the wounded, loving Saviour. I never expect to return to North Carolina to live, but at last under the sighing pines I chance to be buried.

Take a shell from the shore,
Twill sing of the sea;
Take a heart from its home,
'Twill tell of its love.

THE HOMELESS BOY.

For seven years I have lived in hotels. Since I have learned how to tell the story of the Cross in pastorates of more or less influence, I have preached to many strangers. Some have been converted under my ministry. Some of these boys were away from home. Two are now preparing to preach the gospel, whom I baptized when not a relative nor a home acquaintance of theirs was present—Mr. Howell of Jonesboro, Tenn. (preaching there temporarily), Mr. Johnson of Tenn., now a rising student at Wake Forest College. One, of whose conversion I am especially thankful, was from Massachusetts and in Tennessee, a young actor impersonating "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Another, Henry Brown, who was in a minstrel show, I baptized, and afterward he dedicated a fortune to the cause of Christ. He is now at death's door.

I learned from bitter experience how to sympathize with the weak and with strangers. How little sympathy there is in the world for those who need it! How rare, how inactive, how full of gush and tears in the absence of the object that little is! How it pulls aside its robes, how tight it is laced while the tears fall! There are women in choirs and in pastors' homes who care more for the poodle-dog than they do for the orphan whose frozen tears fall at the gate! In the language of Luther Benson, whose voice compasses the sweetness and agony of women and children: "This life is too short to speak an unkind word to a dog." You who have been emancipated by the eloquent kindness, the suffering sympathy, of Him who spake to the very harlot and showed her the way up, to the stranger and publican and showed him the way up—look after the homeless boy on the street, in church, in the college, the cold and chilling college.

OSCAR HAYWOOD.

Huntsville, Ala., Dec. 28, 1893.

If you want to be on the safe side, stick to the old reliable, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It is sold by dealers everywhere.

The effect of negative teaching is enormous. The pastor, the Sunday-school teacher, the parents, the friend, who says nothing to his unsaved friend, or child, or neighbor, does in reality say a great deal. He says to him, "You are not in danger; you have nothing to do; keep right on." We apprehend that more harm is done by negative teaching than by all the positive false teaching that would be heard in a lifetime. The lighthouse that professes to shine, to enlighten, to guide, but that shows no light, does really mislead and often fatally. —National Baptist.

When the dross is taken from the gold of the Christian he will be forever delivered from the furnace of trial. The purer the gold, the hotter the fire now, the whiter the garment, the harder the washing.—Moore.

From the Little River Association.

I noticed in a recent article from Dr. Pritchard that so far as he knew there is only one Association in the State that paid its quota to the Centennial Fund. Please let me say that the Little River raised its quota also. Organized eighteen years ago, at Cumberland Union, it has more than tripled its membership and increased its contributions many fold.

I am trying to collect all facts of historic interest in connection with the churches of the Little River Association, and all churches of all denominations in Harnett county. If I succeed in my undertaking, I desire to have the facts published this year.

I earnestly request the immediate co operation of all persons who can tell us something about the first preaching or organization of churches in this section. A short sketch of the ministers who have labored in this section is also desired.

Our last Union met at Cumberland Union church where, eighteen years ago, Elder Orin Churchill made the first motion ever made in this body. Now he lies sleeping in the cemetery near the church. The Union appointed a committee to collect funds to erect a stone at his grave. I am sure he had hundreds of friends over the State who will be glad to help a little in this matter. Don't wait to give large amounts, but let all who will do so send at once to the writer whatever amount they desire to give. Proper acknowledgement will be made, and with the little mites we will get the best stone we can secure for the money given. If you wait, you will forget it. Send it today.

Was not the Convention helpful to all who attended, but especially the tired, worn-down, despondent preacher? What a blessing to the country preacher who seldom can see or hear such men as attended our last meeting!

As I heard McConnell preach I made a solemn promise that if I should be permitted to try to preach again I would do better.

I don't know whether I have kept it or not, but I have never enjoyed so much trying to preach as I have since that meeting. Oh, that we all may be more earnest during this year.

I desire to say that our last Union was the best we ever had, I thought. Bro. R. G. Taylor of Dunn was elected Moderator, and made us an excellent one. The discussions were lively and helpful. The spirit of the meeting was good. Some one said, as we were leaving, "This seems like a revival."

Sandy Creek Union.

Dear Recorder:—This Union, on last Sunday, closed an interesting session at Siler City.

The next meeting is to be held with the Mt. Zion church, Alamance county, on the fifth Sunday in July, 1894. Our Sunday-school Association convenes with Bear Creek church the fifth Sunday in April. Here is the report of the Executive Board:

To the Sandy Creek Union, December 20th, 1893, for the year 1893. Amount received from all sources, $50,31; amount paid out, $29.67; amount on hand, 20.64; necessary to be raised, $34.69.

The Board has appropriated to the following places for the year 1894, the following amounts, provided suitable and efficient ministers can be had to supply said points:

Deep River and Macedonia, each, $25.00; Cedar Falls and Moore's Chapel, each, $12.50; Ephesus and Cameron, each, $20.00; Central Falls, $25,00; total, $140.00.

This appropriation is made upon a basis of $200. Your Board earnestly calls on the churches within the bounds of the Association to make up and send in this amount to Rev. G. L. Merrell, Franklinville, N. C., as soon as possible.

The Board is in arrears $23.40 and the churches are called on for this amount also. The Board has lengthened the cords in this work feeling sure the churches in the Sandy Creek Association will respond.

Respectfully submitted,

G. L. MERRELL,
W. N. STRAUGHAN,
W. C. DOUGLASS,
For Committee.

Sentiment and Life.

A great many mistake religious sentiment for a religious life. Because they are touched by religious truth, they fancy they are religious. Because they are susceptible to religion, they think they have it. An impression is to them the same as if they obeyed it; to appreciate right is the same as though they did the right. Weeping over a book of martyrs, they almost think it as heroic as though they died at the stake themselves. They come to take what God has planted in them as a substitute for a practical Christian life.—The Watchman.

Bro. Blackwell's Sermon.

I suppose, even in my short life-time, that I have read through eight hundred pages devoted to baptism and the Lord's Supper. But I have never read anything that equals Dr. C. S. Blackwell's article, "The Baptists and the Lord's Supper," in the RECORDER of January 31. In his article one finds almost what he would find by reading a thousand pages.

The influence of the sermon upon me was very great. So much the more when I thought of the fact that the eloquent Doctor some few years ago came to us from a denomination which all its life-time have in one way or another "perverted the design" of the sacred ordinances.

By all means let it be printed in pamphlet form. Put me down for one hundred copies. Oh that every Pedobaptist could and would read it with a prayerful and with an honest heart. But many of them are so much afraid of such grand Bible truths that they will not read. And even if they do, they read, many of them, with hearts bursting with prejudice.

Lord hasten the day when all men shall know the truth and practice the truth as it is in Jesus. I am one of those lonely country pastors whose work is hardly known outside of his own community, (nor do I care to be very much known) but dear Doctor you have helped me, even me.

Moneys Paid to Advance Baptist Church Lot.

Dear Recorder:—Below are the names and amounts of those who have paid towards the Baptist church lot at Advance. Other names and amounts will be sent when the amounts have been received.

A. H. Carter, 25c.; E. Frost, 2.25; P. B. Cain, 1.00; J. G. Clifford, 50c.; J. P. Green, 1.00; R. W. Woodward, 25c.; B. R. Bailey, 15.00; W. A. Bailey, 15.00; F. M. Phillips, 5.00; A. C. Wood, 2.00; W. A. Thomas, 1.00; W. A. Clement, 1.00; J. A. Davis, 1.00; J. M. Foster, 2.00; W. R. Ellis, 1.00; S. C. Rich, 1.00; Giles Hendrix, 1.00; J. C. Turner, 2.00; L. K. Lazenby, 1.00; F. F. Wooten, 1.00; A. H. Stewart, 1.00; Pink Hendrix, 1.00; J. B. Newton, 10.00; U. H. Orrell, 19.68. Total amount paid in to date, 85 93.

Last Wednesday we had run 2½ acres just where we wanted it. As we did not have money to pay for it all, we had run 1 1-16 acres, where we aim to locate the church. We paid for that amount and got a deed for it. We need the other, and will get it when the money comes in hand. The land costs seventy five dollars per acre, but the man selling gives in fifteen dollars on each acre. We lack about forty five dollars of having enough subscribed to secure the remainder. Will not others send me money enough to purchase the balance?

I had expected to begin this week to secure subscriptions for building, but am confined at home with the la grippe.

Thanks to the brethren and friends who have already helped us.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

How Postage Stamps are Made.

Every part of stamp making is done by hand. The designs are engraved on steel, two hundred stamps on a single plate. These plates are inked by two men, and are printed by a girl and a man on a large hand-press. They are dried as fast as printed and then gummed with a starch paste made from potatoes. This paste is dried by placing the sheets in a steam-fanning machine, and then the stamps are subjected to a pressure of two thousand tons in hydraulic presses. Next sheets are cut so that each one contains one hundred stamps, after which the paper between the stamps is perforated and, after being pressed, the sheets are filed away. If a single stamp is injured, the whole sheet is burned.—Selected.

From Brazil.

Dear Recorder.—The State of Minas Geraes is almost the size of Texas. Numbers of new towns and cities are springing up. An immense foreign population is pouring in here yearly. And nearly all these foreigners are Italians and Portuguese, who know nothing of the gospel. There is not a city in this whole State where the people have yellow fever,—a remarkable thing for Brazil. The climate is more pleasant than that of any other State in the country. The land is fertile—so fertile that many people of the poorer classes do not work but about three months in the year. The farmers export thousands of sacks of coffee every year. Many of these coffee farmers have as many as fifteen hundred persons living on one plantation. In fact, this State is rapidly taking a foremost position in all Brazilian affairs and has before it a comparatively bright future. But the people are wicked and knew absolutely nothing about faith in Jesus Christ.

There are three Methodist preachers in the State, and I am the only Baptist preacher. Brother pastor, imagine how you would feel, if you were the only Baptist preacher in North Carolina. Imagine what a responsibility there would be resting on you. Well, brother, weak as I am, I feel this same responsibility. Oh, when will these people have the gospel preached to them! I am trying to preach twice a week, but my efforts seem only as a drop in the ocean.

The people in a town some miles from here have expressed a wish that I go there and preach the gospel, and many such inviting doors are being opened to us, but I can not go yet; the work here must not be left. Not yet, did I say? What does this mean? It means that not yet can these hungry souls eat the bread of life; it means that not yet can they have offered them the Saviour whom they are seeking; not yet, not yet! poor dying men, can you be saved from death and hell. And why not yet? Because we have not men and means sufficient. And where must the men and means come from? The reply is, from the Christian people of the United States; from the Baptists of the South; from the churches of dear old North Carolina; from her happy homes and Sunday-schools. Men must bring their money and lay it on God's altar. Family circles must be broken and bright sons and daughters must turn away from home and follow the command of our Master, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Parents must act as a dear father and mother whom I know did when they said to their son, "Go and perform your duty, my boy, and obey the command of God."

Dear brethren, pray for Brazil, and pray for us.

OF NORTH CAROLINA.

The RECORDER of Nov. 8th is just to hand, and its contents are unusually interesting. From the Wake Forest letter I learn that Dr. Taylor has taken up the work of lecturing to the ministerial students. I am glad to learn this, and let me say that every Wake Forest student who intends to preach the gospel will do himself a great injustice if he fails to attend these lectures. I feel grateful that it was my privilege to attend, for nearly four years, the lectures given by the late beloved Dr. William Royall. I love and revere the memory of that great and good man. The counsels and instructions so faithfully and lovingly given by him to the young preachers in those little Sunday afternoon meetings will influence the lives and brighten the paths of many of us till death.

Wake Forest seems to be coming to the front notwithstanding the hard times, and I pray the blessings of heaven upon every department of her work.

I am cheered by the encouraging accounts of the various associations just held throughout the State. As I read of the zeal and work of the dear brethren at home, I feel like saying, as did one of our Brazilian Christians, "The United States is God's country."

Surely the Lord has been blessing our churches in North Carolina during the past summer and fall. Accounts of so many good revivals, and so many conversions, indicate that the soldiers of the Cross are on the triumphant march. May the good work continue. The country pastors seem to be bestirring themselves unusually. They are the pioneers of the gospel cause. Our country churches are the backbone of Christianity, and though their contributions in money to benevolent objects may fall far short of the contributions of our city churches, yet they make up the deficiency by their great number of consecrated, simple hearted and God-fearing men and women.

Some months ago, as I walked along Twenty-third street in New York, I was struck by the appearance of a fine, handsome building just completed. Every stranger who passed, paused to admire. As I stood admiring that great structure with its polished stones and ornamental work, and thought of the great amount of material which lay concealed in the interior and in the foundation, I was reminded of the state of affairs in the religious world. Many men by their unusual gifts and accomplishments, rise to occupy spheres of usefulness where they justly command the respect and admiration of the world. For such men we are thankful, because they show what Christianity can do, just as the polished, ornamented stones of the building display the more delicate skill of the artist's hand: but we should not, at the same time, forget the foundation material of our churches which is hidden from the praise and gaze of the world—the hard-working country pastors, the Sunday-school teachers, the faithful lay-members, and the often unheard-of mothers by whose tender and loving hands the great leaders are trained, and prepared for the deliverance of Israel. These humble ones form the foundation of the church, and without them we would be as unable to stand as would be the beautiful building without its foundation of rock.

Literary.

Beautiful Joe. An Autobiography. By Marshall Saunders. 16mo, 304 pp., illustrated. Price, 50 cents. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

For centuries there have been the means of learning of "man's inhumanity to man," but it is only recently that any voice has come from the animals that we are accustomed to call dumb. Now their complaints have reached us, and they tell of the tortures they have been compelled to suffer. They are told in such publications as Our Dumb Animals and "Black Beauty." This latter has had a phenomenal circulation and, it was inevitable that other books of this class would follow. One of them is the volume herewith noticed, "Beautiful Joe." It purports to be an autobiography of the dog, as "Black Beauty" is that of the horse. Much is told of the dog; of his disposition, his traits, his affection, and his love toward men. But the book is not confined to him alone; nearly all the domestic animals and pets are touched, and some wild ones. The author has entered into sympathy with them, and speaks from their point of view. Mr. Hezekiah Butterworth, who furnishes for the book an appropriate introduction, says of it: "Through it we enter into the animal world and see as animals see, and feel as they feel. The sympathetic state of thought in this interpretation is ethically the strong feature of the book."

The Preacher's Magazine for January is the first number of the fourth volume of this most excellent Homiletical Periodical. The leading sermon is entitled "Christian Brotherhood," and is by the venerable Wm. M. Sinclair, Archdeacon of London. The senior editor, Mark Guy Pearse, contributes another chapter on "Moses: His Life and Its Lessons," taking up "The Story of the Golden Calf." Joseph Parker, D. D., writes on "How to Read the Scriptures" and Dr. C. O. Eldridge, "The Key of Experience or "Pages for Young Preachers."

Rushlights. By Mattie Dyer Britts. 12mo, 252 pages. Price, $1 00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

This is a pleasant little story of life in a country school district, and is confined in the main to the limits of a single school year. Barry Finley, a bright, well educated, and devoted Christian young woman taught the school at Oak Grove. The course of events is well unfolded by Mrs. Britts, and the influence of one unselfish, conscientious, and thoroughly devoted Christian life is well brought out. The book is full of lessons for the young, and will make a not unwelcome addition to the lists of any of our Sunday-school libraries.

Congress has proposed to levy once again an Income Tax, consequently this is one of the principal subjects of discussion just now. A valuable and timely paper on this question has been contributed by Dr. Frederic C. Howe of Johns Hopkins University to the January Annals of the American Academy. It is entitled "Federal Revenues and the Income Tax," and endeavors to show that if properly administered, and income tax is not necessarily burdensome or unjust. [Philadelphia, Station B].

"The Life of Jesus." By Rev. O. C. S. Wallace. 16mo, 192 pp. Price, 90 cents. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

The purpose of a new publication must largely establish its legitimacy. In the case of this book, it is found in the fact that the author has made therein an effort to start our young people in the pathway of an intimate knowledge of the Christ. It has been the thought to present a manual that might lead up to the larger and more exhaustive works of Farrar, Geikie, Edersheim, and others. In this purpose Mr. Wallace has succeeded in a way to win great praise. In a domain explored again and again, he has given us a fresh discussion of an old theme by the freshness with which he has used the well-worn material. The appearance of the book comports well with its contents, and it is deserving of a wide circulation.

The Treasury of Religious Thought begins the year with an excellent number. The reader will find it the monthly visits of this magazine an invaluable repository of sermons, articles, illustrations and other matter admirably adopted to the wants of any preacher and Christian worker. The portrait of the Rev. Russell T. Hall furnishes the frontispiece, his sermon has the first place, and a view of his church, with a sketch of his life, is also given. There is a full sermon by Dr. O. P. Gifford, an Expository Lecture by Rev. J. F. Forbes, and Sermonic Thoughts by Drs. MacDuff and Alexander, and Revs. S. G. Hillyer and W. M. Roger, and many other interesting articles by able writers, in addition to the usual feature.

The New Minister. By Kenneth Paul. New York: A. S. Barnes & Co.

As a modern theological novel this effort is passing fair: as a romance, it is unworthy of type. The author shows unmistakable ability in dealing with modern theology, and modern church methods, but as a romancer he is a failure. The plot has in it the conception of a popular and useful work, but in efforts to increase interest, which, indeed, were not in vain, the dignity of the subject is lost, the characters and the situation are overdrawn, and the book falls to the level of a fin de siecle romance of the weaker sort. The book is moral, suggestive, and interesting, but we cannot overlook the blunder of the author in converting what promised to develope into an excellent satire on certain ecclesiastical methods into a dilettante fiction.

The North American Review for January is as usual replete with thorough discussions of questions of the day. Prof. Wilson's leading article—Income Tax on Corporations," Rev. C. A. Briggs, D. D., of "heretic" fame, on "The Sunday school and Moden Biblical Criticism," "Inter-collegiate Foot-ball" by two leading physicians, and "Tariff and Business," are of especial value.

The United States—An Outline of Political History; by Goldwin Smith. MacMillan & Co., New York.

Although the author states that he has writen this book for English rather than the American readers, we have found it the most valuable work in its especial field that we have seen. Americans and the English speaking race will profit by an acquaintance with it. Beginning with the colonial epoch, the various phases of our development up to 1871 are considered and discussed in a style that is succinctness itself, the volume being so condensed that it can be published at a price within the means of all. Among the especially instructive and interesting features of the work is Prof. Smith's remarkable insight into the character and the lives of the men who have made our history. His analyses are at once clear, discriminating, thorough, and at times so contrasted to as to bring the subjects out into boldest relief. As a political history it is an invaluable contribution to our national history, and will, no doubt, be handed down as the standard on the topic, with which it deals. Students of present conditions will find its pages very suggestive. To say the least we are glad that our political history has been found worthy of treatment so careful, just, and suggestive.

Daniel G. Taylor—A Country Preacher; by J. J. Taylor, A. M. D. D. Baptist Book Concern, Louisville, Ky.

Beginning with Carlyle's observation that the true delineation of the smallest man is capable of interesting the greatest, by way of apology,—by no means necessary—the author delineates in a very pleasant style the character and the life of one of the humblest and simplest and noblest of those whom God ordains to spend their lives in the blessed peacefulness of a country pastorate. The work is worthy of its subject, and is a deserved tribute not only to the individual but to the thousands of those of our brethren whose work, simple and unostentatious, but ernest and consecrated, is worthy of him in whose name, and for whose glory it is done.

Many Persons are broken down from overwork or household cares. Brown's Iron Bitters Rebuilds the system, aids digestion, removes excess of bile, and cures malaria. Get the genuine.

La Grippe Again.

The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.

ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.

In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe.

CATHOLICISM IN THIS COUNTRY.

To those who have watched the course pursued by the Catholics in this country have realized something of their purposes concerning our government and its subversion. All the while they are becoming more bold in their movements and defiant in their course. Recently I announced to begin a series of sermons under the shadow of St. Mary's College at Belmont, on the origin, history and doctrine of the Roman Catholic church. Before I had time to begin, they sent me word that I had better be careful in my utterances, or I would have to give a libel, and thus they sought to intimidate me. Sometime since Rev. J. V. McNamara, an ex-priest, was attacked on the streets of Maysville, Ky., where he had gone to lecture. I remember some years ago to have helped to guard Dr. White from the court-house in Russelville, Ky., to his hotel, because his life was in danger, and had been attempted several times.

Just now the attack is upon the public schools, and they are determined to secure a part of the fund for their schools if possible, because so many of their people are poor and they do not feel able to support the parochial school where the public school is free. In Maryland they are now moving for a division of the public fund.

"TROUBLESOME ASSURANCE."

Down in Texas they are having a deal of trouble with assurance. For months the discussion has raged and will not down. The point in the controversy is not so much whether one can attain to Christian assurance in this life, but whether he is born into it when he becomes a child of God. There are some strong men on both sides, and great damage has come to the cause of Christ because of the intemperance of expression among many brethren. Assurance is a "mighty good" thing to have if it assures, but it is easy to substitute presumption for assurance, and thus do great damage to the individual and to the cause. It is better not to have assurance than to have the wrong kind. There has been strong talk of dividing the denomination in Texas on the question of assurance, but how foolish such a course would be.

"THE LEADER."

The first copy of this "new factor" in our work I and my household have examined and read with infinite satisfaction. It is good every way—beyond expectation, and evidently has a mission in our churches. The "make-up" of the Leader is capital, and the very breath of it is fragrant and freighted with good things. I have been reading for many months the Baptist Young People's Union, and I have a warm place place in my heart for this publication in Chicago; but the paper from the "cold clime" has no chilling effect upon the "new comer" in the fair sunny Southland. But few of our people will take the former, but we trust many will take the latter. The projectors are careful to let us know that it is their purpose to push the State papers, or I had rather say "pull them." I noticed in crossing the river from Norfolk to Portsmouth, that every now and then could be seen a small "tug-boat" drawing a "schooner" along the river. May not the Leader prove to be a sort of "tug-boat" bringing the "State paper" and introducing it to the young people and so make itself a fine agency in creating a necessity for the State paper—not so much creating the necessity as discovering to the young people a necessity already existing of which they were not conscious before. Such a paper can be of great service to every department of our work in the Convention. If the initial number is any index to what is to follow, then our young people are to be congratulated. The price is forty cents per annum, and certainly no young Christian could put their money to a better use than in this way, and I trust they will secure a club at once and send to Nashville, Tenn.

"SUGGESTIVE SILENCE."

Some weeks ago the Western Carolina Advocate of Asheville came out with a great "tirade" against the Baptists, and I kindly asked the little brother who edits that paper to affirm certain propositions in a written discussion. The propositions were very simple, and ones which he promulgated with great gusto in the article referred to; but his silence on the matter is really painful, and I have concluded that he "don't have to discuss" infant sprinkling or sprinkling for baptism. Of course he don't, and there is no man in North Carolina any gladder than he that he don't. I feel real sorry for the fellow and almost repent me that I disturbed him in his "good time," for he was having a real good time. The trouble in the whole matter was, his readers did not know any better than to think that what he said was true, and for them to find out that it was not true, would spoil a lot of fun for him, and so he concluded that discretion was the better part of valor, and so let his people remain, as the Alexander county man said of his neighbor, "vastly ignorant."

S. R. Niles Business

WILL BE CARRIED ON BY THE S. R. NILES ADVERTISING AGENCY.

The advertising business of the late S. R. Niles of Boston, Mass., will be carried on by The S. R. Nile Advertising Agency, which was incorporated prior to Mr. Niles' death.

The management is as follows: E. G. Niles, President; Carl G. Zerrahn, Vice-President and General manager; J. C. Howard, Treasurer.

It is announced that the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad has been sold to a foreign syndicate for $1,000,000. It is thought that the change will be made the first of next month.

The Cosmopolitan for January is, of course, worth several times the price. This magazine has done what none other has, and now stands at the front in its class. Well illustrated, neatly printed and bound, its presence is always agreeable.

We have already made reference to the January Forum. It begins the year with a striking array of articles that makes it valuable to every man. Its low price $3.00 per year, has no perceptible effect on the quality of its contents.

The Farmers' Alliance store at Durham has gone into the hands of a receiver.

Frank Newell, colored, was shot and killed in Cumberland county recently by other negroes, the result of a row over a dog.

Ben Hill, colored, was hanged publicly at Plymouth on the 5th inst., for the murder of a white man named Andrews several months ago.

At Rockingham, on the 5th inst., Daniel Gilchrist, colored, was hanged privately for the murder of Frank McKay, his father-in-law, on Feb. 9th, 1893.

The seventh annual exhibition of the East Carolina Fish, Oyster and Game Industrial Association will be held at Newbern, Feb. 19th to 24th inclusive.

John Fleming, colored, was knocked down by an unknown man near Weldon on Friday night week and died from the effects of the blow on Sunday following.

The Northampton and Hertford Railroad has been completed to Jackson, and is to be formally opened to the public for passenger and freight traffic at Jackson on the 17th inst.

Mr. William Gootchins of Rome, Ga., a student of Davidson College, fell over the balusters of the stairway from the third to the first story on the 5th inst., sustaining fatal injuries.

Ida Marrow, a respectable young colored woman, was outraged and murdered near Stovall, Granville county, one night recently. Circumstances point to the guilt of one Sol. Marable, colored, who has been arrested and is now in jail.

The aldermen of Greensboro recently adopted a motion to place a tax of $200 per year on retail dealers in cigarettes—wholesale dealers to pay a tax of $500. It is said that this ordinance practically does away with the cigarette business in that place.

The 107th annual convocation of the Grand Lodge of Masons was held at Wilmington week before last. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Grand Master—John W. Cotton of Tarboro; Deputy Grand Master—Francis M. Moye of Moyeton; Senior Grand Warden—Richard J. Noble of Smithfield; Junior Grand Warden—Walter E. Moore of Webster; Grand Treasurer—William Simpson of Raleigh; Grand Secretary—William H. Bain of Raleigh. The Grand Lodge appropriated $3,500 for the Oxford Orphan Asylum. There are 230 orphans sheltered in the Asylum, and the expenses last year were $19,465.

If you look at a dozen common lamp-chimneys, and then at Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," you will see the differences—all but one—they break from heat; these don't; you can't see that.

Common glass is misty, milky, dusty; you can't see through it; Macbeth's is clear.

Tough, clear glass is worth fine work; and a perfect chimney of fine tough glass is worth a hundred such as you hear pop, clash on the least provocation.

DIED.

PARKER—The subject of this notice, Mr. John W. Parker, son of John H. Parker, was born in Johnston county, N. C., Nov. 8th, 1873, and died at his home in Selma, Jan. 1st, 1894, aged about twenty-one years. Brother Parker was a member of Selma Baptist church, was baptized by Rev. J. K. Howell when quite young, and his life was so Christ-like that he won the admiration of all who knew him by his consistent walk. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," and our young Bro. Parker's life called forth words of praise from all around him. On New Year's morning his father mentioned the fact in the presence of his son, and inquired what he desired for a New Year's present. "Nothing," said he, "I don't want anything in this world but to go home." "You are home," said his father, tenderly. "Yes," was the reply, but strongly indicated by his manner that he had another home to which he must be off soon, and for which he was ready and willing to go.

O. C. HORTON.

Selma, N. C., Jan. 8, 1894.

BRADSHER—"God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform," yet who would question his love and mercy, then! Thus it was when he who knows best entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Bradsher on Dec. 20th, and plucked the tiny rosebud that he had loaned them for a few weeks, to plant it in his own happy home, the eternal garden. Little D'Arcey Merritt was a sweet, bright babe, and had even in his short life planted many fond hopes in papa's and mamma's heart, and had won his way into the heart, and good wishes of all whose pleasure it was to know him. How glorious his mission! How happy his lot! His life was long enough to share with the saints in the eternal reward, and yet too short to feel a sorrow, a grief, a bereavement, a heartache. Little Merritt, thou hast finished thy work, thou hast performed it well; though only a span of one month and ten days was alloted thee. May father and mother, brothers and sisters so live that they will meet thee on that eternal shore, and may the fountain of comfort and love make whole the bruised hearts, is the prayer of uncle G.

CUTTS—Sister Maggie D. Cutts, wife of W. H. Cutts, died Oct. 23, 1893, at her home in Granville county, N. C., in her thirty-third year. Sister Cutts was a member of the Baptist church, first being baptized into the fellowship of Island Creek church, then, for convenience, with her husband moved her membership to Stovall Baptist church, where she was a member at her death. Sister Cutts, in many respects, was a remarkable woman. No one could associate with her without being impressed with the gentle spirit that at all times characterized her Christian life. Being resigned to the will of her Heavenly Father, we believe she was ready to meet him. She was not conscious of her death, being confined to her bed but a short while, and she passed over the river to her reward. Her last words were, "God bless the little ones." She leaves four little children not old enough to know their great loss. She was a good woman in her home, always ready to assist the children in their amusements, though she spoke with authority, and they knew how to obey. She was never heard speaking ill of any one, never fretted nor grumbled, but took everything quiet an easy, beloved by all who knew her. There was universal sorrow when the spirit of our dear sister winged itseternal flight to God who gave it. Maggie saw life on its bright side. We shall greatly miss her. Her piety was unquestioned. Surely others of her companions can afford to follow her example. While we cannot help regretting her early death, we remember that our Saviour died young. Yet it was said of him that his work was done.

Her funeral services were conducted by her pastor. Loving and sorrowing friends laid her body to rest in the cemetery at Stovall Baptist church. While with deep sorrow we say that she is dead, with the eye of faith we see her not dead, but only gone before. A devoted and affectionate wife, a loving mother, an exceptional friend and neighbor to all; but alas, she is gone. Her husband and children can see her no more on earth, but can meet her in the sweet by and by—

For she who meekly bears her cross
A golden crown awaits,
And loved ones who have gone before
Welcomes her at heaven's gates.

The New Year.

Your petitioners stand at your gates, New Year,
  A clamorous, hungry crowd;
And they pour their wishes into your ear
  In voices deep and loud.
They show you the work that you have to do,
  And it is not an easy task
If you listen to all that they say, New Year,
  And give them the boons they ask.

"Give me a little more gold to heap,
  Or houses, or shares, or land!"
"Give me more bread for my children's mouths,
  And work for my willing hands."
"Oh, give me health, you may keep the rest
  If you will, but make me strong."
So the pleaders fill the air with prayer,
  And are begging the whole day long.

"An upward step in the social scale
  Give me, and an honored name."
"Little care I for the gold that wastes
  If I have my meed of fame."
"What is the outside world to me?
  Give me a heart at rest
In the kindly thought and the tender love
  Of those whom I love the best."

There are a few who are wise, New Year,
  And this is the boon they crave,—
"Bring me a change that is all within,
  To render me meek, yet brave,
To conquer and banish the self that is mean,
  And the higher self upraise,
That so I may work on the Master's side,
  And my life may give him praise."

You will do your best for us all, New Year,
  But you come of a race of sires
Who never have given the sons of men
  The half of their wild desires.
No stronger are you than your fathers were,
  And however good your will,
You will leave the petitioners at your gates
  With their needs and cravings still.

But the whole world opens its heart to you,
  Welcome to towns and men!
Welcome to every fireside scene,
  And to frozen field and fen!
Your hands are full of our Father's gifts,
  And they come his grace to prove;
And whatever you bring will be good to have,
  For our Father's name is Love.

A Natural Bear Trap.

When I was twelve years old my uncle moved into a house nearly two miles from my father's farm.

I was allowed to go there sometimes from school with my cousins, who were boys of my own age. At such times I had permission to remain till early evening. Now and then we became so absorbed in our games as to forget the clock. One night I happened to look up just when the hand touched the very last minute. Trustworthiness and obedience were my watchwords, so, with a hurried good night, I set out cheerily for home.

My walk was along a country road among wooded hills. The snow was white under a full moon and the sky brilliant with stars such as glitter and gleam above the cliffs and tall pines in a clear winter evening.

A mile from my uncle's house I reached the point where the road began to keep company with a small river beside which it went quite a distance, crossing and leaving it finally at a covered wooden bridge. On the opposite side of the river was a rugged height, glorious with moonlit snow, yet seamed and heavily marked with rocks and dark pine trees. From the nearer bank hemlocks reached out their level boughs over the stream. The clear, dark ice reflected the stars, that, to my childish eyes, seemed to shine deep beyond the opposite hemisphere in that other vault of heaven.

When I recall scenes that I used to look upon when my eyes were new, I often think of Hood's tender lines:—

"I remember, I remember,
  The fir trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
  Were close against the sky;
It was a childish ignorance,
  But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from heaven
  Than when I was a boy."

Other words, however, came to me then. Gems of literature made familiar by our school reading book were among them. One of these I had learned for examination day, when we "spoke pieces" and "read compositions." It seemed to belong here, among the dark tall trees with stars shining through their branches and the moon lighting their huge trunks to show how strong they were. In the audience of the river and the hills I recited aloud:—

"Thou art, O God, the life and light
  Of all this wondrous world we see,
Its glow by day, its smile by night,
  Are but reflections caught from Thee;
Where'er we turn Thy glories shine,
  And all things fair and bright are Thine."

I was interrupted by a sound that was not the echo of my voice from the hill. Turning quickly, I saw, near the opposite bank, what brought to a sudden test all I had of boyish courage. I had seen the like before, but not unchained. At once I recognized the motions as well as the form of a full-grown bear.

I ran rapidly down the road toward home, but he kept opposite me, lumbering along the other bank. Twice he came down to the river's edge, but dared not venture his weight on the frail ice, which, though it covered the river from side to side, yet, so early in the season, was too thin to be secure.

Deciding at length that some bolder effort must be made, he started a third time and pushed out almost to the middle of the stream when an ominous crack, sounding under his very feet, hurried him back to shore.

It was evident that I could go safely toward home as far as the river kept between us. But Bruin and I would meet at the bridge. I must, therefore, bring my enemy to close to conclusive terms.

I took my position on a high point of the [illegible] bank. Here I set, or selected, my [illegible] all putting myself as bait. He [illegible] a moment, then continued a few steps further down the stream. When he found I did not come, he stopped again. Then he returned and passed to and fro several times before he seemed quite sure that I had made a final stand. Once he sat up, challenging me with waving paws.

But he did not wait long before he made the venture I expected. One paw first, then another, was cautiously tried on the ice; then he crept carefully out from shore, listening all the time for another loud crack. Finding that all went well, he advanced more boldly past the middle of the stream.

It was time now to spring my trap. With all my might I tossed a stone high in the air. Down it came under his very nose. Crack! went the ice. He jumped, and his frail bridge went all to pieces under him. The fragments shivered like glass as he struck about wildly with his great paws. Down he went under the gleaming splinters and tossing foam. The current caught him and swept him under the ice down the stream.

He was securely trapped.

I assure you, it was not long before I was telling my adventure to interested listeners at home. But they seemed to think less of my trick on the bear, in which I was chiefly interested, than of my narrow escape from danger. Mother, especially, I could not understand. She said hardly anything. She hugged me till I thought the bear had got me after all. She kissed me; and then, to my astonishment, she cried.—Julius Robinson, in Zion's Herald.

Jack and his Blind Mate.

"One always likes to read about the fidelity of animals," said a gentleman the other day, "and I will tell you a little incident that came under my observation when I was taking my vacation last summer. I stopped at a farmhouse and the farmer was the owner of a pair of chestnut horses, named Doll and Jack. He had raised them from colts, had always stabled and driven them together, and they were consequently much attached to each other. Last summer he turned them out to pasture, and while wandering around the fields I noticed the incident.

"Doll had been blind several years, but she never betrayed it by her gait when traveling. In the pasture she would sometimes become separated from her mate, and as soon as she discovered it she would commence to search for him. Sometimes she would whinny, and he would respond to her, when she would go directly toward him, and when she found him they would rub their noses together. At other times Jack would not answer, but would stop eating, and watch the course his blind mate would take, back and forth across the pasture, each time turning toward the left and nearing the fence at each turn. Frequently she would stop and listen. If she was nearing the mischievous Jack, he would stand perfectly still; if she was some distance away, he would stamp his feet two or three times when Doll was listening. She was always sure of finding him, though sometimes it would take an hour to do it, and then they would go away side by side cropping the fresh grass. When they went to the spring in one corner of the lot to drink Jack always led the way, and he would stand beside the trough and call to his mate until she stood beside him, and both would drink together.

"One day a terrible racket was heard in the pasture, and it was kept up so long that one of the men went to see what it was all about. Doll had gotten one of her feet caught in the spokes of an old wagon wheel that lay in the pasture. She stood very still and quiet in the trap into which she had walked, while Jack was thrashing around the pasture and neighing as though he had been hired to rouse the neighborhood. Doll was released, while Jack stood by and watched the operation with apparent delight, that was manifested with a wild gallop around the lot when she was once more free."—Utica Observer.

Help Is Wanted

by the women who are ailing and suffering, or weak and exhausted. And, to every such woman, help is guaranteed by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For young girls just entering womanhood; women at the critical "change of life"; women approaching confinement; nursing mothers; and every woman who is "run-down" or overworked, it is a medicine that builds up, strengthens, and regulates, no matter what the condition of the system.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and bracing nervine, and the only guaranteed remedy for "female complaints" and weaknesses. In bearing down sensations, periodical pains, ulceration, inflammation, and every kindred ailment, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Not Worth While.

Agnes M—— was a girl who never thought it "worth while" to be pleasant at home. Her smiles, her gay sallies, her sweet and tender words were given to friends and acquaintances, and her ill-temper and sullen words reserved for the privacy of the home circle. She was quite a different person at home from what she was abroad. Outsiders thought her obliging and generous, while her brothers knew her to be irritable and selfish. When rebuked or reproached by her mother she always answered that it "didn't matter" how she acted at home; she "didn't care what the boys thought of her."

But the time came when she realized her mistake. Her brothers left home on reaching manhood to make places for themselves in other cities, and they carried with them, as a matter of course, the memory of Agnes's ill-temper and selfishness. When, on the death of her parents, she was left with only very slender means, not one of her brothers offered her a home. Each had some excellent or plausible excuse for not receiving her as a member of his household. Alas, the truth was that they had all preserved the memory of their sister as she had been in youth; and now in her middle-age and loneliness on one wanted her. She was forced to suffer for her early mistakes. By no loving or tender words could she blot the past from the minds of those to whose consideration her relationship should have given her a claim.

Said a young man to the writer once in speaking of a sister whom he had not seen for years: "I always remember Annie as fretting about something."

Girls would surely try harder to repress all ill-temper and to distribute their kind and loving words more generously in the home circle if they realized how tenaciously early impressions cling to the memory of those whom they expect to love and cherish them whatever their faults and failings.—Florence B. Hallowell, in the Examiner.

WOMEN IN SOCIETY —often need the strengthening support of a general tonic and nervine. They're tired out or "run-down." This is frequently the result of "weakness," and it makes life miserable.

Are you weak, nervous, or ailing? Then Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription brings you special help. It's a remedy prescribed for delicate women, for all the derangements, disorders, and diseases of the sex.

For regulating and promoting all the proper functions, building up and invigorating the entire system, and restoring health and strength, this is the only remedy that can be guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money will be refunded.

It has stood the test of a quarter of a century of cures—Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. That's why the proprietors take the risk; they say: "If we can't cure your Catarrh, we will pay you—$500 in cash!"

ALTHOUGH the November elections are yet quite in the distance, the honorable, and yet dubious slogan of the partisan, "free ballot and a fair count," is heard in the land. It is in itself a censure of the present administration of affairs in the State and counties, and should be answered with the promptest action by those on whom it reflects. A cry for a free ballot and a fair count implies that such have not been accorded us in the past, and are not assured for the future. It is not our intention to question this matter now. We have heard charges and charges, and their volume persuades us that they are not miserable excuses of defeated candidates, but rather outcries based on the suspicions of a possibly misled people. There should not be ground for suspicion, and to this end all efforts of all parties should be bent. It has been said, and we know it is true of past history, that the great body of the people is patient under ordinarily adverse conditions; that even in conditions intolerable to the individual, the people are comparatively complacent. We know that to day many of our citizens with reputations for calmness are now loud in their complaints; and in this one matter of elections we do not see why they should be allowed to continue uneasy, when all grounds for their complaints can be easily removed. It must be confessed that these complaints are based on mere suspicion, else they should not be made a party slogan, but be brought before the grand jury. The question is, how can this suspicion be allayed and the cry rendered futile so far as further results are concerned, and it is not a difficult question. To say the least there is no reason why all the parties concerned—there'll not be more than three—cannot have representatives at the polls and at the counting of returns. A party that is unwilling to such equality of representation shows a spirit of dishonesty and a tendency to defraud, and must rest under suspicion. The law intends that each party concerned shall have supervision of elections, and any attempt to prevent this is basis for suspicion, which is full ground for injury. The public official, the State, the party that hopes to govern the State, like woman, should not only be of unimpeachable honor, but above suspicion. There is one way, and but one, that will allay forever this suspicion, and that is in confiding the ballots of the people to responsible representatives of each of the parties, that each may be responsible for all transactions.

THE Nation is just now in financial straights very similar to those in which its individual components have been for almost a year. But a nation's responsibility is so great, and its transactions of so much consequence, that when it does become involved the solution of its troubles is a very serious matter. Our much-talked of gold reserve of $100,000,000, which had stood the storms of decades, is now dwindling, and at such a rate that prompt action is essential to the maintenance of our national credit. We are accustomed to believe that our dominions are so broad, and our realized personal property of so great value, that our credit is illimitable. As a nation we cannot become bankrupt, but our credit may be so greatly impaired that national progress will be retarded for years. We cannot foresee the consequences of the loss of that credit which the gold reserve maintains. One thing would be clearly demonstrated: We would know whether this nation can conduct its affairs with a paper currency, which represents only imaginary values. But as glad as we all would be to have this ground for so much speculation removed, we would rather have the demonstration made under more favorable conditions. Secretary Carlisle has recommended the issuance of bonds, by the Federal government, to tide us over this crisis. This is an extreme measure, and any other means of avoiding the contingency is preferable, and to this end many other recommendations have been made. Senator Voorhees, to whom more than any other man the repeal of the Sherman law is due, favors the coinage of $55,000,000 of our stock of silver bullion, now lying disgracefully idle in the treasury vaults. He exposes himself to the charge of inconsistency here. This fall he was violent in his denunciations of the law, under which more than two millions of "dishonest" dollars were being coined monthly; now he thinks it advisable to coin these same dollars! Dishonesty is dishonesty. Still we do not see that such a measure would not relieve matters, and we have never been persuaded that the silver dollar was too dishonest for internal uses. We know it is folly to hold millions of dollars worth of silver bullion useless when it would do so much to help the nation. The income tax is another plan, which, though advocated long before the present troubles were manifest, is thought better of in the light of the present condition of our treasury. And yet there is another, which we wish to highly commend as a permanent measure. It is to tax immigrants, not so much as a means of enriching our treasury, but for the welfare of the nation.

MORE has been said and less done concerning the problem of immigration than any other subject that has confronted us. One naturally feels that whatever he may say will be in vain, words have been in vain so long. But the problem is worth the attention of every citizen; the day will come when it will have to be settled, and we might as well prepare for it. There is a sentiment associated with the problem, and until recently it has been all-powerful: we could not overcome the consciousness that our fathers intended America to be a refuge for the oppressed for all nations, without money and without price; and this consciousness retards whatever progress we may make toward limiting immigration. Again we are conscious that our fathers were immigrants, and some of us have the same degree of confidence in those of today, that we have of reverence for those who came in earlier days. But we have put away sentiment in refusing to receive the oppressed of China; and the question now is to obtain grounds for further limiting the number of immigrants.

The tide of immigration first turned to our shores in 1820. Since then it has increased decade by decade with slight variations. But the ante-bellum immigrants were of far better character than those who now seek a paradise on our shores, make Castle Garden a Babel, and the streets of our larger cities echo with alien tongues. Our fathers paid no small amounts for their passage across the ocean; they had to be good steady workers in order to accrue sufficient money to come to America. In their days the tramp and the idler and the mendicant and the organ grinder spent life-times without having seen at one time sufficient money to pay their way to our shores. They had to know how to labor and to save, before they could get here, and were prepared for work on their arrival. But now how different! There are representatives of steamer lines in every European city, large enough to afford subsistence to a small number of tramps and beggars, who do all in their power to persuade these worthless people to come to America. They are wanted to fill the steerage of vessels, and probably to compete with the lower class of American laborers. It has been too often demonstrated that they are useless as citizens to need further words. They are a menace to our welfare, socially, politically, physically, and in every other respect that we know. The way to keep them out is easy: Levy a prohibitive tax on every undesirable class. We would be justified in taxing all classes of immigrant laborers. They have no claims on us. If they did not come we would be none the worse for it. We are certainly independent to that extent. And none can pay as our fathers paid—not only in the sweat of their brows, but in their life's blood. And more than this, all who are worthy to partake of the privileges of our land would be glad to pay an initiatory tax.

IT IS not difficult to conceive of the disadvantages under which all reformers labor. It has been said that every existing plan, system and institution possesses two arguments in its favor: "It is established, and it is known"—arguments with which logic has but little to do. On the other hand, all new measures must be largely theoretical, and must be established before they can be otherwise. A nation may await the experience of other nations, but this will result in slow development; and, moreover, what is advantageous under certain national conditions may not be in the least so under others. The knowledge of these facts leads the thinker to conservative action, and makes the radical reformer deservedly unpopular. This accounts for the proverbial slowness of "all great reforms." They must first be small movements—tendencies—and afterwards develop so gradually as to permit of the adjustment of the nation to them. A sudden great reform may prove very unsalutary, when, if it had been a development of a generation, it would be a blessing. The people must have time to adjust themselves to new conditions, else the conditions will probably work hardship.

Perhaps these contingencies had no little to do with the framing of the proposed tariff measure. England's experience as a free-trade land might have led less wise men to move the removal of all commercial barriers at one blow. But we know such a course to-day would result in little less than anarchy; still this is not an argument against free trade;—it merely shows the necessity for moderation in all things, and especially those which effect various and extensive interests. We all remember how the Democratic party denounced the McKinley tariff, and how we were led to great expectations; and we are now disappointed when there should be no ground for disappointment. Any party is to be commended for conservative action; it should be commended for conservative promises, but such is not compatible with the nature of the American citizen. The campaign orator is usually so ardent in the advocacy of his ideas that he is unaware of the responsibility he incurs in advocating them. But power is always accompanied with the sense of responsibility of action, and the radical candidate often becomes the conservative legislator. He perceives that his measures are to be actually compared with those with which he has been making only verbal comparisons in his speeches; he recognizes that the substitution of new means, to which the people are unaccustomed, with old laws, to which the nation has adjusted itself, necessarily places the unknown in an unfavorable light. And his first impulse is to moderation, that the unestablished and untried may become established and known gradually and as imperceptibly as possible. It is not sufficient to prove the justness of a new measure; expediency is about as important as justice. We may often find just theories which are unjust and inexpedient in practical application. We know that there are not a few instances in which injustice is done, because a just measure would be subverted to evil purposes by designing men;—in these instances expediency must have precedence over justice. But to return to our point, even if a measure is in theory wise, just and expedient, it will be dangerous, unless inaugurated with reasonable moderation.

IV.—THE CRISIS AT CORINTH.

The four great letters which had their origin in the controversy sketched in the last article are Galatians, First and Second Corinthians, and Romans. The letter to the Galatians is the earliest. In some respects it is unique in the series. It has a closely reasoned and formal unity of thought not present in the others. If the personal element in it is not more controlling than in Second Corinthians, it is more serious and vehement. The letter is a mingled torrent of argument, entreaty, irony, and lofty exposition. The missionary Judaizers have been warmly received by the fickle Galatians, who now discredit the independence of Paul's apostleship and the Divine origin of his gospel. He is astonished and indignant, and with all his powers at white heat, he throws himself upon the adversaries of Christ in a pamphlet which for irresistible power can scarcely be matched in all the range of polemic literature.

Next in time to this admirable defence of Christian freedom, stand the two Corinthian letters. Only a few months of Paul's stay in Ephesus pass by, and the tension of his anxiety for Galatia is scarcely relaxed, when bad news reaches him from Corinth. The ubiquitous Judaizer has reached that bright metropolis of Achaia and deposited in its infant church the leaven of suspicion. Loss of confidence in Paul on the part of many was quickly followed by the recurrence of the dissolute pagan habits which, while he was present with them and honored of them, had been repressed. The still faithful element were at a loss what to do with members who thus scandalized the Christian name, and they made their appeal to Paul. In a letter which has not been preserved (1 Cor. 5: 9), he answered that they should not mingle with such men. The Corinthians appear to have misunderstood him and replied that if they were to keep no company with the dissolute, they must needs go out of the world (1 Cor. 5: 10). In the same letter the church laid before Paul a number of new matters, practical problems in the life of the church for his solution (1 Cor. 7: 1). Besides, three representatives of the church arrived in Ephesus, and the apostle doubtless received with confidence their account of the religious condition at Corinth, for he speaks of them in the highest terms (1 Cor. 16: 15—18). And members of the household of Cloe, a lady lately come from Corinth, informed him of the factions which rent the church (1 Cor. 1: 11).

By these several means Paul was fully informed of the situation, and to it he addresses himself in his second letter to the church, our First Corinthians. The situation was different from that in the Galatian churches, and, as we might expect, Paul's method of dealing with it is different. In Galatia the issue was openly and squarely joined between the Christian principle and the legal, and it was without adventitious complications. It was a question of dogma, and accordingly the letter to the Galatians gives us a sketch of Paul's system of theology. At Corinth, on the other hand, this issue is not allowed by Paul's enemies to appear. They seek to undermine his authority by secretly fanning the tendency of a Greek democracy to discord, and by stimulating the development of many embarrassing questions. He is confronted by a multiplicity of unrelated subjects, some of them being of merely local and transient interest, and on that account all the more difficult to handle. He is called upon to apply the teaching of Jesus to so widely diverse matters as church factions, social scandals, law trials, the behavior of women in public assemblies, the use of meats offered in sacrifice to idols and religious toleration, marriage and celibacy, love-feasts, the use of spiritual gifts, and the resurrection. This is not the condition which calls for a coherent line of argumentation, of which the Galatian letter shows him so capable. It demands a different set of faculties, and brings into view a new aspect of this richly endowed nature. It discloses a rare alertness of mind and adroitness in questions of extreme delicacy, and a self composed mastery of practical details in the sphere of conduct. At the same time, to the careful student, a wonderful power of generalization is no less apparent, for it is to be observed that "in treating each particular matter submitted to his judgment, the apostle does not stop at the surface; he endeavors to penetrate to the very root of those various manifestations. Instead of summarily settling the questions as by the article of a code, he searches the depths of the Gospel for the permanent principle which applies to the passing phenomenon." And it is precisely this method of solving local and temporary problems that gives to the Corinthian letters their universal and abiding interest. The principles of the Gospel are here applied to the practical conduct of life. "While the letter to the Galatians was the foundation of Christian dogma, the two letters to the Corinthians, signalizing as they do the emancipation of the regenerate conscience, are the beginning of Christian ethics."

United as they are in this general relationship, these two Corinthian letters are yet very different in tone and contents and must have originated in a different set of circumstances. Excepting two or three passages, as, for example, the fourth and fifth chapters, and the eighth and ninth, Second Corinthians is, I think, read less than any other of Paul's letters. It contains so many obscure allusions and so much biting irony that it is "hard to be understood," to use Peter's phrase. And yet from the point of view of Paul's inner history, no other letter is so important, for in no other does his own personality occupy so conspicuous a place. The wearing anxiety and the bitter experiences which it recounts seem in their bare recital to dissolve his habitual reserve, and he exclaims, "Our mouth is open unto you, O Corinthians, our heart is enlarged." As his heart swells and warms toward them, his tongue is loosed, he grows nobly garrulous. The spontaneous self-revelations of such seasons are apt to be full and of most value. It so turns out here in the most critical period of the apostle's life.

The best help to the understanding of this letter is the reconstruction of the history of the Corinthian church immediately prior to its writing, for I apprehend that its difficulty for us consists solely in our inability to transport ourselves into the midst of the precise historical conditions out of which it sprung. In seeking to compass this task, I shall follow the guidance of M. Sabatier, who approaches the problem with a more intelligent appreciation of Paul's personal traits and with an acuter historic instinct than any interpreter whom I have read.

The key to the situation I think we shall discover in 1 Cor. 5: 3—5. The particularity and emphasis of the passage at once arrest attention. "I verily, being absent in body but present in spirit, have already, as though I were present, judged him that hath so wrought this thing, in the name of our Lord Jesus, ye being gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of the Lord Jesus, to deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." Here is a formal call for an assembly over which he will in spirit preside with all the rights and authority of an apostle. His Judaizing enemies, who had already in covert ways been seeking to discredit his apostleship, looked upon this formal assumption of the very thing which they denied as the opportunity for open and avowed hostility. They declared that he was incompetent (cf. chaps. 3 and 4), that he wished to lord it over the churches for gain (11: 7—15), that he was no Israelite (11: 21—23). They are reinforced in the mean time by emissaries from Palestine armed with "epistles of commendation" (3: 1, 2), and claiming themselves to be apostles of Christ (11: 13—15). They said to the Corinthians that Paul had not preached to them the true Christ, for the sufficient reason that he had never seen or heard him; they themselves, however, had seen and heard him, and were prepared to give them the only true gospel (11: 4).

We observe, accordingly, that the affair of the incestuous person and Paul's apostolic demand concerning him merely supplied the occasion for a new and more serious breach in the church, not upon that question of church discipline, but upon the question of Paul's apostleship. The peril of the church required an immediate visit. (Cf. 2 Cor. 13: 1, 2; 12: 14; 1 Cor. 16: 7, and 4: 21; 2 Cor. 2: 1—3.) But his enemies were in no wise terrified by his presence (2 Cor. 10: 10). It is probable that there were hot debates, during one of which it appears that one of their number gave the apostle a public personal affront which deeply humiliated him. (Cf. 2 Cor. 2: 5—10; 7: 12, which passages, contrary to the general interpretation seem to refer, not to the incestuous person and his father, but to the man who had committed the personal affront suggested and to Paul himself.) He left the city in great dejection; but soon after, "pen in hand, he regained his power, and wrote a crushing letter," to which he several times refers (2 Cor. 2: 3, 9; 7: 8—12). It was scarcely out of his hand before he was sorry that he had written it, and it may be, as Sabatier suggests, that this expressed regret accounts for the fact that it has not been preserved. This letter, supported as it was by the personal presence of Titus (2 Cor. 12: 18; 7: 6, 7), seems to have won over "the majority" to Paul. The insult was publicly withdrawn and the offender censured. Paul's extreme anxiety about the result of this letter and the mission of Titus appears in his statement (2 Cor. 2: 12, 13), that at Troas he had no relief in his spirit when he found not Titus there, and even with the door for the Gospel open in that city he left it and went forth into Macedonia to meet him. His spirit was at last relieved by the coming and the message of Titus, "who told us," he writes to the penitent church, "your longing, your mourning, your zeal for me; so that I rejoiced yet more." In another place, when he recalls this happy meeting, he exclaims, "Thanks be unto God, which always leadeth us in triumph in Christ!"

"Thus reconstructed, this dramatic chapter of the apostle's life enables us, better than anything else, to understand what that life was really like," and the letter which arose out of it (really his fourth to the church) becomes intelligible and intensely interesting. When that letter was written, "the storm was dispersing, and we only hear its final mutterings. But in the joy and gratitude with which Paul's soul overflows, there linger the vibrations of his sorrow, his anger, and his apprehension. A drama has evidently been enacted at Corinth of which this letter is the denouement."

The Education Question—A Clear Statement of the Situation.

We do not propose to go into politics; but at the same time we do not propose to be so afraid of politics as to let the politicians destroy us. * * * Christian people, and Methodists with the rest, mean to * * * promote higher education under religious influence. * * * They surely cannot look with indifference upon a legislation which arrays itself against them. As things are drifting every church college in six Southern States must sooner or later go to the wall. Methodist or Baptist people cannot compete with themselves as citizens—working in the latter character by taxation, with all the taxable population represented, and in the former as a fractional part of the population—by voluntary contribution. When the legislators (practical men) meet, the State universities must make a large showing of numbers for all this money; therefore they take in, upon a low standard of qualification, many boys and girls who ought to be in grammar schools. Thus, not only are the colleges broken down, but a valuable class of teachers are hurled and discouraged who are essential to the higher education—men who at their own expense keep preparatory schools and academies.

What is to be done? The agents, committees on education, and trustees in all the reports and addresses which I have seen and heard in all the conferences, seem unwilling to recognize the situation. With singular unanimity they preface their appeals for aid by magnanimously declaring that they have no complaint against this destructive competition, no issue with the State universities that are cutting rates, etc., etc.; and they conclude by asking from a few Methodist friends help in their hopeless contest against tremendous odds. I greatly mistake if this tone and attitude will not have to be altered before relief comes. * * * If those most nearly concerned stand with indifference, and even with implied approval, while the cord is tightened, can rising men who have Judgeships, Attorney-Generalships, and Senatorships in view, be expected to sacrifice a career for the principle at stake?

A correction of abuses will be accompanied by a few things concerning those who take part in it.

1. They will make up their minds not to be popular with certain men and newspapers.

2. They will not act like a boy who throws a stone at a hornet's nest and then runs. Steady, systematic movement is required. Politicians will soon [illegible] this and get out of the way.

3. The religious weeklies, planted as they are at controlling centres, will [illegible] suspect in a religious way—calmly, [illegible] avoiding intemperate expressions [illegible] Turkish catch-words of demagogues [illegible] opposition. A few strong [illegible] will join them in giving [illegible] ject.

4. All personal complaints [illegible] will go for nothing while the [illegible] form rather to an individual [illegible] ments and is gained.

IS THIS AN AGE OF UNFAITH?

The present period is one of intense human research. The intellectual world is seeking to make the unknown known; it is seeking the means of a more comfortable existence; to adapt man to nature and to the world about him. Men give their lives to the demonstration of a theory, or the explanation of a fact, which in other years has been unknown, or regarded as of no consequence. There is an overpowering ambition among mortals to remove mysteries that in other years excited mingled awe and curiosity. The heavens are mapped, and its laws set; mother earth is claimed to be known from centre to circumference; the falling star, or the rain, it matters not which, is always explained and often anticipated. Progress has been made, and credit should be given for it, but men are not yet satiated. Earth's mysteries are still abundant, and they are the more earnestly sought because they have withstood investigation so long. The number of seekers after the unknown is growing rather than diminishing; in fact it seems that all mankind distrust the present, and hang expectant on the future; wherefore, this is said to be an "age of unfaith."

Many of us have, no doubt, often heard the infidelity of the times, the lack of strong faith even among Christians, excused with the remark that all men are doubters these days; that nothing is certain. It is said to be a time of investigation conducted by human power only; that faith in the unseen and the undemonstrable is a poor basis for research. But let us see. Do not these very men contend for the molecular theory of matter, and the wave theory of light, or the evolution theory of human development? Can they demonstrate these theories; can they make them known and seen? Do they not to an extent depend for their existence on the human faith that nothing else can explain certain phenomena, while they themselves do not demonstrate those phenomena beyond a doubt. It seems to us that with all our search the world is yet a simple world, and doubts only those things which it is agreeable to doubt. Men seek a sign in matters of religion, but in human theories it is sufficient to say that we believe nothing else than our theory will explain matters as well. They cry for sight in religion, when they do not hesitate to explain the light of the sun, or the heat of a stove, by faith in theories, which do not permit of demonstration. Men are not yet the doubters they claim to be; they are seekers, but they seek material things by faith, and the wish to investigate the kingdom of God by sight.

It is not an age of unfaith, but one of a blind hopefulness in human beings that is pitiable. Which one of us does not look forward to better times; who does not dream of better governments; who does not hope to see disease overcome, or the means of transportation transformed again as greatly as it has been in the last half century? Would we be surprised to see an air-ship in actual action? The success which has rewarded past seekers after the unknown, of inventors of other ages, has made the world foolishly faithful in its own power in the very period when we expected it to be most distrustful. All men, infidel and Christian, who have watched the march of progress since 1850 look forward with strong faith to even greater things. But men still seek a sign from God, and have no faith in him because they have not sight. Have to-day's scientist sight to guide them in their searches? Have inventors sight to guide them in their experiments? They have only a hope—a faith.

The January issue of McClure's Magazine contained a series of short prophecies from those men who "are in the active service of modern civilization," than whom, the editor well says, none are more fit to report on the problems of the time. The encouraging words are from scientists, theologians, scholars, lawgivers, economists, editors, and many other representatives of almost every profession. There are infidels, atheists, agnostics, Christians, and the pope of Rome; and all, but one or two malcontents, have a sublime faith in the progress of the coming years. The mechanic says the day of steam-engine fast draws to an end; [illegible] and the air ship are the means of [illegible] the future; and that it is to be ap[illegible] to prolong human life. Edward [illegible] a social millennium, and says [illegible] long life for all men is near at [illegible] believes that the [illegible] will secure us wealth and art, wisdom and happiness; another predicts the eradication of contagious scourges. Dr. John Hall says that Christianity will cure all social ills; that new religions must die; Dr. Briggs sees tendencies to church unity; a priest foresees a larger fraternity of men under the paternity of God, and many other theologians repose their hope in Christianity. And we might go through the entire list, and cite prophecy after prophecy from men and women who have justly earned their title as the leaders of nineteenth century thought. Is it not rather paradoxical that they should have such unbounded faith in this day of unfaith, of walking by sight, of investigating the mysterious, of insatiate research.

No, it is not a day of unfaith. Men are more than ever inclined to repose faith in human power for progress, whether blindly or by sight. They make the excuse of unfaith as to religion because they have no better excuse, and because people will take such an excuse in a day of such extensive unfaith! Many of the prophets whom we have quoted have no doubt "reckoned without their host." Their blind enthusiasm has made them foolishly trustful of the future. Many of them are trusting in man alone; they will be disappointed. There is one means that would do much toward alleviating many oppressive conditions, and that is more search after God, and a larger faith in him, which we are sure will come to every earnest searcher.

But credulity is as characteristic of the race as ever; let it not be said that this is a day of unfaith. It is a hopeful world. Would to God that its hope was rightly grounded!

THE BAPTIST FEMALE UNIVERSITY.

After four years of effort and consideration in regard to the higher education of our girls under the same conditions which the denomination has provided its young men, the Board of Trustees of the North Carolina Baptist Female University have, with the approval of the Convention by which they were appointed, elected a President of the institution,—Prof. Jno. R. Brewer, A. M., at present the President of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute. They have also taken steps to open the doors of the University in September of this year.

The RECORDER is in hearty accord with the sentiments of the report of the Board of Trustees of the institution which, through the kindness of Dr. Durham, we publish on another page. We would advise every Baptist in the State to read this report, in order that the broad scope and large usefulness of the institution may be known to our people from the beginning. From the report it will be seen that not only those branches which are usually taught in female institutions are aimed at, but in addition to these plans are laid to have a thorough business course, a normal and industrial department, and a course of study that leads to the degree of Master of Arts. This may seem rather a broad aim for a beginning, but it is as it should be, and is in the power of North Carolina Baptists to perfect.

We have much to be thankful for in that the recent action of the Trustees and all the developments of the institution have been made in deliberation. Ample time has been given for us to recognize the value of an institution for which there has long been a need. Brethren Skinner, Boone and Stringfield have, in various ways, put the matter thoroughly before the people, and they have spoken through the Convention in favor of its early establishment. Now that the matter is settled it is needless to say that its success depends on the co-operation of the members of the denomination which has ordered it.

The need for a denominational female school, conducted under the auspices of the Convention, has demonstrated itself in the many excellent female institutions which have been conducted by individual brethren. Of these, several have dissolved or been converted to other objects, and to day we have only Oxford Female Seminary and the Chowan Female Institute. These institutions are of undoubted merit, but they have not done for our girls what our central and denominationally approved institution has done for our boys. There are other schools, but they are smaller in scope, and can hardly be classed among institutions of higher learning. None now existing are as broad of scope or large in aim as the University is to be, if present plans are only partially perfected by September,—that they will eventually be complete, cannot be doubted.

Of course, under the circumstances, the institution could not be inaugurated without a small degree of friction. We believe the delay of four years has done much to reduce friction to a minimum. As to friction without the denomination, that will have our attention another time. It could not be expected that the way to the attainment of any object so desirable would be without barriers.

We cannot expect to make great progress in a year. We have much in the conception, gradual growth, and present glorious development of our institution at Wake Forest to teach us the value of earnestness and co-operation in such an enterprise. Its history is one of struggles and hardly won victories. It made a small and insignificant beginning, and none dared prophesy its present large usefulness in its early days. But under God's guidance his servants have labored without ceasing, until to-day it is the pride of the denomination, a credit to the State, and an active means of glory to God. The Baptist University begins under far more auspicious circumstances; let us see to it that its development is that much more rapid, and that its usefulness is not less.

As to the present possessions and needs. It has a faithful, consecrated, united, practical, and energetic Board of Trustees; it has a President who has spent twenty successful years in the school-room, who has not known what failure in an enterprise is, and who has shown along with broad culture a business tact and executive ability that is characteristic of few men. Moreover he was educated at Wake Forest, has served the denomination long and well, and is known to many of our people personally, and to all by good report. He is all that could be desired. Of property, a lot and house thereon have been purchased at a cost of about $20,000, and $2,600 is still due. The buildings are well situated, and can be equipped with small expense. Three thousand dollars is needed before the opening to put everything in order as it should be. Of course this will not make the institution complete; it will only begin it; its growth must be one of years.

We need hardly speak of the significance of the enterprise thus inaugurated. Here, too, Wake Forest speaks for us. What it has done for our denomination through its sons is inestimable; it sufficeth to say that its influence is felt in every department of our work. What the University has in its power to do for our daughters, and for our denomination through our daughters, may never be so prominently seen, but it will be none the less salutary.

We have undertaken a great responsibility; but the Baptist who sulks under a load, or who is afraid of great responsibilities, is not a characteristic Baptist. Our march must be onward, and we think the education of our girls is essential to our progress. We owe as much to them as we do to our boys. There is not a shadow of a doubt of eventual success; all our efforts should now be concentrated for the accomplishment of that success as speedily as possible.

THERE are more agencies for the education of our children than we are accustomed to think; and many of them are very dangerous agencies. We have heard it said that the child learns far more in going to and from the school house than it does in the school-room. Environments make lasting impressions on children; we believe they are more powerful in shaping character than heredity. Association with an evil-minded companion may destroy the character of a child whose parents are good citizens and Christians. The streets of the town make lasting impressions for good or evil. There are pictures on shop-windows and billboards that produce impressions that are as lessons imparted and received. They are mute, but they possess a fascination more powerful than the human voice. And then there are the much maligned daily papers. They are a great power for good, and they may be a great power for evil. They have to get the news; it is their function to inform mankind, but we believe many of the details could well be omitted. A gentleman, in the true sense of that word, doesn't care for them; and it goes without saying that they are very unwholesome to children. Let the news be told as chastely as possible, and the details, which are often fabrications, be omitted. Such evil news is unwholesome enough at best.

THERE is a danger that comes to many people who have great talents; they may become "above" their brethren. The great preacher, like the high mountain, may grow colder and more barren the higher he goes. We know those who are, in the popular estimation, great are often less blessed in their works than many who are never known. Knowledge and eloquence is not all that is needed; grace and spirituality are far more indispensable than they. How many we see in daily life, now looked up to as great leaders, who long for the simple joy of their unknown years! They have learned how to attract and entertain, but they do not reach the heart of their hearers. They have power, but it is not over the soul—spiritual power. It is dangerous to become too popular; it is dangerous to become great in the eyes of the world. Luke said, "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you." That was a warning against the praise of the world.

SEEKERS after lower prices seldom think what lower prices mean. They have so often been over-charged that they are glad to think they are getting their money's full worth. But lower prices often mean far more than appears. We think what is our advantage is the merchant's or the manufacturer's disadvantage; but such is very seldom the case. The lower price means the poor laborer, or the helpless producer in an abundant market, must live at a lower cost; must deny himself and family of all that makes life comfortable. Lower prices too often mean that some one is suffering for the few cents which we gain, and which we do not need half so badly as the worker. But it is a problem which we cannot overcome. People will buy at the lowest price, for they have no assurance that a high price doesn't make a profit for the manufacturer, and that the laborer receives no more than he would with lower prices. What the world needs is Christianity in merchants, manufacturers, producers, and laborers—Christianity everywhere!

NONE of God's sayings are meaningless; there is an object of every sentence in the Bible. It is beautiful in story, eloquent in its lessons, but it was not made to entertain, but to instruct. It cannot help being attractive to God's loving children. Its actions converge to one point—Christ. The Old Testament prophecies him, and the New fulfils the prophecy; there are lessons on every page. We have theologians in the land who say the Old Testament is no more than a history; it is a history, written by God, but it is more; it is prophecy, it is full of warnings, it is full of examples; it teaches us faith, hope, and charity. It divides the straight and narrow from the broad and easy as clearly as possible. One of God's greatest lessons, which Christ often taught, but which some Christians are still unacquainted with, was taught the first children—the lesson of giving. God's acceptance of Abel's gift was for a reason. In that act he showed the futility of gifts given in the wrong spirit. Cain's gift was in sin; he was jealous of Abel. His offering was as expensive as Abel's, but his heart was not in his offering. God will bless the gifts of the righteous, but all the gifts in sin that men can give will not receive his sanction or acceptance. Perhaps this accounts for the uneasiness of many in regard to their gifts. "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr., will be in this State on his lecturing tour.

....Rev. S. F. Bristow preached his first sermon at Institute, Lenoir county, Jan. 14th.

....We have received the Seminary Magazine for January. It is an excellent number.

....The revival conducted by Bro. Church at Statesville did much good, we are glad to know.

....Rev. N. S. Jones writes encouragingly of his work at Salisbury, in a private letter to us.

....We are glad to see Dr. T. E. Skinner up and looking well after six weeks indisposition.

....We will publish a sermon from Rev. M. V. McDuffie of New Brunswick, N. J., in an early issue.

....Rev. J. A. Brunson was expected to take charge of the French Broad church, Asheville, last week.

....Prof. Jno. R. Brewer, the President of the Baptist Female University to be, was in Raleigh last week.

....Rev. O. C. Horton has recovered from his recent illness, and is now regularly filling the duties of his pastorate.

....Rev. J. L. White will aid Dr. Pritchard in a series of meetings in Tryon St. church, Charlotte, in February.

....Rev. Chas. H. Durham's work is divided between the mission stations at Bryson City, Tenn., and Murphy, N. C.

....On the 14th inst. eleven persons joined the Baptist church at Statesville. Bro. Church continued the meetings all last week.

....The B. Y. P. U. A. meets in Toronto, Canada, July, 1894. They have recently gotten out a neat descriptive leaflet of that city.

....There is no sickness at Wake Forest College. Bro. Leary's sad death was due to exposure, and not to unsalutary surroundings.

....We were glad to have Rev. J. F. MacDuffie of Durham in to see us [illegible] week. The brethren of his vicinity are in line, and hopeful.

....We spoke of the needs of the Board of Education last week. Dr. Mitchell has something interesting to say about the matter in this issue.

....Our warmest sympathy is extended to Rev. T. J. Leary of Morehead City in the loss which he sustained in the death of his [illegible] son.

....The Charlotte pastors enjoyed a ministerial hunt last week. We have heard that Dr. Pritchard came out ahead, with seven birds and a rabbit.

....Brother Caddell continues unable to travel, though he is improving. He hopes to be among the brethren before another paper is issued.

....Rev. M. P. Matheny, who resigned the pastorate of the church at Lincolnton, N. C., will continue to serve his other churches in that community.

....Dr. I. G. Broughton is organizing his Roanoke church in the same vigorous way as he did at Winston. He has already begun to publish a church paper.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield, who has served so faithfully as Financial Agent of the Female University, will continue his service in that position for sometime yet.

....Rev. E. J. Edwards having accepted the call to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Williamston, N. C., will reside there hereafter. Correspondents take note.

....Rev. Jno. O. Gough, a student of Wake Forest College last year, was ordained to the ministry at Lumberton, on the 18th inst. He has accepted charges in South Carolina.

....We regret to learn that Miss Fannie Heck is again very ill. It is thought now that she will have to have the care of specialists. Col. Heck, we are glad to know, is doing well.

....Bro. F. F. Cohoon of Elizabeth City expressed the sentiments of the brethren when he said: "I am opposed to the protective plan in education as well as in commercial affairs."

....In furthering the interest of your denominational paper you do the denomination and the Lord a service. Make up your mind to send us a new subscriber before the end of the month.

....Dr. J. W. M. Williams, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist church, Baltimore, is spending some time at Chapel Hill on vacation, his many friends in North Carolina will be glad to know.

....Raleigh is becoming a Baptist centre. Look at this list of preachers: Skinner, Carter, Simms, Durham, Cobb, Stringfield, Hunter, Bailey. Raleigh has nothing to complain of in this line.

....In the death of the venerable Dr. E. Burke Haywood of Raleigh, N. C., the State loses one of its noblest citizens. It is seldom we have seen his equal in his profession, or as a Christian gentleman.

....We have heard many good things said of Prof. Poteat's "Studies," Dr. Carroll's and Dr. Buckwell's and Tyree's sermons, recently. They are among the best things we have given our readers in some time.

....The new Fayetteville Street Baptist church of this city, recently built, is about ready for occupancy. It will be dedicated on the 28th inst. Bro. Jno. Pullen and his co-workers under God have labored long and well for this church.

....We have heard with deep regret of the death of the estimable wife of Bro. D. H. Graves of Selma, which occurred on the 20th inst. of pneumonia. She leaves a daughters, Mrs. Jno. Vann, and three sons. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.

....A good sister in another State pays her pastor's subscription, and writes: "He is my pastor, and a fine one too. Hope he will enjoy the RECORDER as much as I do." The brother was recently one of the most beloved pastors in Virginia; he is now in Tennessee.

....Rev. C. J. F. Anderson a former Wake Forest student, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the church at Carthage. Bro. Anderson has charge also of churches at Siler City, Cool Spring and Sanford. Bro. Newton, recently pastor at Carthage, accepts work elsewhere.

....Rev. J. H. Hildreth writes that his work at Southport is in good condition, and he thinks it would help matters greatly if our Board would turn their attention to the Southport church, which he says will become self-sustaining if services were held every Sunday now.

....Rev. Hight C. Moore, the new pastor of Broad street, Winston, writes: "I am enjoying my work. The church has splendid prospects. Five or six are awaiting baptism, and others expect to follow soon." Bro. Moore has a hard place to fill, but he seems to be equal to it.

....We were glad to have Rev. J. M. White of Apex in to see us last week. Bro. White spent last year in the service in and around Edgefield, S. C., and has now returned to his old home, Apex. He will serve Salem church, Wake county, and Cameron, Moore county, this year.

....We thank Dr. R. H. Marsh of Oxford for a club of subscribers received last week. He is an example to our brethren in many things. He has begun the twenty-sixth year of his pastorate at Hester's, and will preach also at Poplar Creek and Grassy Creek churches, near Oxford.

....Rev. Samuel Saunders of East Radford, Va., who succeeds Bro. T. W. Wood as pastor at Murfreesboro, will also give part of his time to the church at Seaboard. We extend Bro. Saunders a cordial welcome to the State, and hope he may become one of the Chowan's "standbys."

....An [illegible] of the vilest type, one Rabbi John Sergius Ben [illegible], who has deceived Christian people in many States, has been preaching his frauds in our State. He claims to be a descendant of the lost ten tribes, and a Christian. His object is to make up collections from Christian churches for a people who, according to the London Missionary Society, and the American Israelite, do not exist. He has been denounced wherever he has been, and [illegible] the prompt way with which North Carolina journals "showed him up," we judge he will not deceive North Carolina people again.

....We were glad to have Bro. VanDeventer of Henderson in to see us last week. He reports his field in a prosperous way, and is himself more ardent than ever in behalf of our Foreign Missions. Our readers will hear from him with profit on this subject, and Young People's Societies also, occasionally.

....Old State Line church near Reidsville has long been one of the Lord's strong-holds. Revs. J. H. Lamberth of Greenville, N. C., and C. G. Jones of Chattanooga, Tenn., did their first pastoral work there, and now they have arranged to return next summer for a few days and hold a revival, and be themselves revived, in the old church.

....It appears that there is more religious zeal than Christianity round about the Yadkin River, in Caldwell county. The Methodist, Adventist and Baptist churches of one community became crowded, and had to have the courts settle the matter. The case has been compromised to the satisfaction of all parties, however, we are glad to say.

....On Sunday last, Master Henry Thomas received a very neatly bound copy of the Holy Scriptures as a prize for being present at every session of the West End Baptist Sunday-school, Raleigh, during the year 1893. He was also present every Sunday for the year 1892. Bro. T. D. Watson is the superintendent, and the school is succeeding well under his management.

....We greatly regret to learn that Capt. W. C. Allen has closed the Scotland Neck Military Academy, and will not open again. We had thought this institution one of the best of its kind in the Eastern part of the State, and are surprised to hear that the hard times have made it unwise to continue it longer. Bro. Allen has our best wishes in whatever field he may turn his talents.

....Rev. F. H. Martin of Lumberton "knows a good thing when he sees it." He writes: "Dr. Blackwell's sermon is one of the best I ever read on the subject. Our work in Lumberton is moving on nicely. We have two strong preachers who have come into the Robeson Association during the last year—J. Hartwell Edwards and M. L. Kesler." Of course the outlook in Robeson is bright.

....We need in mission work at once the minutes for 1893 of the following Associations, viz: Bladen, Brushy Mountain, Caldwell, Catawba River, Cape Fear, Columbus, Chowan, Eastern, Elkin, Liberty, Mecklenburg and Cabarrus, Mitchell, Montgomery, Robeson, Yadkin, and Yancy. Will not the clerk or some pastor in each of these Associations send three or four copies of their minutes at once to C. Durham?

....The South Carolina brethren have appointed a brother to write their history. North Carolina is in great need of such a work, and we hope the Historial Society will see what can be done. We are sure if a North Carolina Baptist history were well and faithfully written, it would find a good sale, and fully compensate the author. The material is plentiful. We need a man, and then the enterprise will take tangible form.

....The following note in regard to the Female College of the South Carolina brethren, published in the Courier of last week, is at once an encouragement to North Carolina Baptists, and a testimony to the need of a Female University: "In spite of the 'hard times,' the College has steadily increased in numbers since the opening. Two young ladies, once from Winston, N. C., right from under the shadow of the Salem Seminary, and another from Orangeburg county, have arrived since new year's day."

....The Western Recorder recently sent out postals to distinguished Baptists, asking two questions, viz., "Is it wise to publish unaccepted calls? 2nd. Were the Apostle Paul living now, what do you think he would be doing and where?" To the first, the general response is "No;" to the second most of the replies differ. Dr. Noah K. Davis thinks that Paul, if now living, would be under the direction of the Foreign Mission Board, S. B. C., and in the van of Chinese Missions. Others think he would be in Chicago.

....Some of our readers may be curious to know how the Female University can begin real work with only buildings and no endowment. It looks like a hard proposition when we contemplate the struggles of well-endowed male institutions and their demands for more endowment. But it can be done. There'll be no free-tuition students among the girls. But this is not all. Prof. Brewer has been conducting female institutions for many years, and has made a living—not to say more. He has never had the advantages of his present opportunity, and yet he has made successes. The Baptist Female University needs money; it cannot have too much. But its great need is the co-operation of every Baptist in the State; and surely it will have that from the beginning.

....Bro. Jno. R. Brewer, the President of the Baptist Female University, comes of stock whose name is a synonymn for piety, integrity, and Baptist principles. Both of his parents now live at Wake Forest, where they have reared as noble a family as is in the State. The sons—John, Samuel, Carey, Richard and Charles—and the daughters—Mrs. Perry, Mrs. Bagly, and Mrs. Powers—are testimonies to the worth of their parents. Bro. John R. Brewer was born in 1846, graduated at Wake Forest College in 1868, with the degree of M. A., and immediately adopted the vocation of teaching. He spent two years in a small school in Franklin county, whence he left in 1870 to take a position in the Wilson Collegiate Institute. In 1873 he became principal of this school, and held the position until he was elected President of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute in 1881. Since then he has become well-known among North Carolina Baptists, having travelled over the State and attended many Associations in the interest of the Institute. He has the confidence of the people in whose service he has just been called.

....That Associated Press dispatch that Dr. Kerr B. Tupper has expressed his opinion that the Baptists and the Campbellites were about to unite, must be taken with more than the usual grain of salt. It seems the two denominations are very close together in Indianapolis, but as for North Carolina and the South, union is impossible. The Baptist name and the Baptist principles will not be disregarded in the least degree. The Campbellites may be absorbed, if they are real Missionary Baptists, but such a thing as a compromise of New Testament principles—never!

....."We hold in our hands here a slip of paper containing the names of 101 Roman Catholic priests of the diocese of Archbishop Williams, of the city of Boston, who within a few years have been dismissed, suspended or otherwise disqualified, and who, taken together, were guilty of almost every crime in the calendar of crimes. And we are to bear in mind that rarely are Roman Catholic priests disciplined unless their irregularities and iniquities become notorious. Here before us, we repeat, are the names of 101 disgraced Roman Catholic clergymen. Archbishop Williams can give you a duplicate of this list, if he chooses to do so." Suppose the same could be said of any Protestant denomination—the daily press would join all its forces to hold that denomination up to public execration. Suppose the Sun and the World and the Herald should turn their editorial light in the direction of Rome!—The Christian Inquirer.

A Statement by the Trustees.

The following brief statement of the needs of the denomination and the outlines of the school they propose to establish, has been authorized by the Board of Trustees of "the Baptist Female University of North Carolina":

1. We need a school for our daughters, which will sustain the same relations to the Baptist State Convention and to the denomination that Wake Forest College sustains to the Convention and to the denomination in the State.

2. We need a school whose grounds, buildings and apparatus shall be owned by the denomination through a Board of Trustees created by the Convention, and whose Faculty and management shall be subject to said Board.

3. We need a school which will offer the same advantages, in all respects, that are given by the best female colleges in the State.

4. We need a school which will offer, in addition to the above, to those who desire it, and are prepared to take it, a course of study equal to the course required for graduation with the A. M. degree at Wake Forest College.

5. We need a school which will, in addition to the above, offer, in Normal and Industrial training, opportunities equal to those given in the best Normal and Industrial colleges for young ladies.

6. We need a school which will, in addition to the above, offer, in practical business training, in all departments suitable for young ladies, opportunities equal to those given in the best practical business college.

8. We need such a school as the above so endowed, that all the advantages, in all the literary departments, could be secured by girls and young ladies at a cost not exceeding the cost of a young man in the A. M. course at Wake Forest College.

THE STEPS TAKEN.

The Convention in 1888 appointed a committee of nine "to consider the expediency and feasibility of inaugurating such an institution." In 1889, the committee said: "The committee appointed to consider the expediency and feasibility of establishing a Baptist Female College of high grade, under the auspices of the Convention, are convinced that the great need for such an institution renders the enterprise expedient, and most encouraging assurances of moral and financial support convince us that it is now feasible. We, therefore, earnestly recommend that this Convention resolutely and joyfully assume the duty which we believe the desires of the people and the demands of the times have laid upon us."

The Convention adopted the report and named twenty-five "Trustees to establish and govern such institution."

To the Convention in 1890 the Trustees reported: "After much investigation, discussion and prayer for Divine guidance, we unanimously located the institution in the city of Raleigh. One of the most eligible locations in or about the city was selected, and the work of payments, on the installment plan, began. The Trustees are determined and hopeful, and mean by the favor of God and the aid of the denomination, to push to a blessed consummation the work committed to them. They beg the patience, sympathy and co-operation of the Convention and the Baptists of the State in their important and difficult work."

The Legislature of 1891 (Chapter 182, Private Laws) incorporated "The Baptist Female University of North Carolina," giving a most liberal charter to twenty-five Trustees and their successors. The charter permits the Trustees to hold, free from taxation, in lands, buildings, apparatus, endowment, &c., one million of dollars.

The report of the Trustees to the Convention in 1892 said: "The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees has been unanimously directed to press the work with unremitting diligence."

The report of the Trustees, through their Financial Secretary, to the Convention in 1893, said: "This Convention should encourage the Trustees to make the necessary arrangements to begin the school at an early day, and that plans worthy of the enterprise be made to raise an amount sufficient with which to erect the buildings and get for it an endowment of one hundred thousand dollars."

The Convention thus unanimously adopted the following:

"Resolved, That we have heard with pleasure that, with the exception of $3,600, which sum is covered by good subscriptions, the property, purchased by the Trustees of the Baptist Female University for founding that institution, is paid for.

Resolved, 2nd, That we have also heard with pleasure of the purpose of the Trustees to push their work vigorously."

At a meeting of the Trustees, Dec. 19th, 1893, it was unanimously

"Resolved, 1st, That it is the sense of this Board that the University be opened in September, 1894.

Resolved, 2nd, That a committee be appointed to nominate a suitable man for President of the Institution at an adjourned meeting to be held on Jan. 16th, 1894."

At a meeting, Jan. 16th, 1894, the committee nominated Prof. John B. Brewer of Murfreesboro, N. C., and he was unanimously elected President of the Institution. His acceptance is assured, if the property can be put in readiness for the school.

The Executive Committee has been directed by the Trustees to comply with President Brewer's suggestions about needed preparations to open the Institution in September.

There has been no time in twenty years when such a school could have been established under circumstances more favorable to united action by the denomination in the State, or with prospects of so little friction with our other Baptist female schools, and with more unanimity of opinion in the necessity and wisdom of the enterprise. The three years' delay now seem providential. After our delay, has come God's relay, and after our disappointments have come God's appointments. Every step has been authorized and approved by the Convention, and every step by the Convention and the Trustees has been a step forward. This is a great work, and it will take time to do all that is needed and contemplated. But the school must be opened and time given for growth. The Trustees are united, their plans are practical, the progress in their work is steady, and their faith in the establishment of the Institution unshaken.

Such a school for us, as a denomination, is a necessity, and its establishment is worthy of five, ten, or if need be, twenty-five years of toil. This is our work for those mainly who are to come after we are gone. We commend it to the people.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I hereby give and bequeath to the Trustees of "The Baptist Female University of North Carolina," located at Raleigh, N. C., ... to be applied by them to the purposes of said Institution.

(Signature) .....

Many might by will arrange to put some of their property in the hands of the Trustees for the use of this Institution.

Edenton Remarks.

We were delighted just after the Convention to have with us brethren Lamberth, Ballard, Vann, Cade and Simms, who stopped over for a day or two, for various reasons. Cade was after insurance scalps, Simms was looking after Cade, Vann and Ballard to take the boat up the Chowan, home, and we hoped that Lamberth was after a wife. Well, it seems that he was, and always has been, but was too far from taw in Edenton to effect anything while here.

I am sure if others of the brethren who are foreign to the Eastern shore and its attractions, had known what a delightfully selectful town was at their feet and in their easy reach from Elizabeth City, that more of them would have given us an opportunity to show them what we brag on even if limited time would not allow us to convince them that Edenton is the most pleasant residence place in North Carolina.

In Edenton, as in no other town in the State, Old Past is married to Young Present, History to Progress, and Colonial Relics to Twentieth Century Saw Mills. Nor do we mix these things in small proportions of each—a few musty relics and a little saw-mill; but we go about both on a big scale. The writer of North Carolina history who leaves Edenton out and what she has to show him, builds his history without a foundation. Besides having the largest lumber industry in the State, Edenton furnishes fish for North Carolina, fills the markets at Richmond, Norfolk and Baltimore, furnishes caviare for the Czar of Russia, and keeps on hand for her own consumption enough to make a famine forever and forever impossible.

But the RECORDER is more interested possibly in what the Baptists are doing here, than in what our Episcopalian forefathers did here. Edenton is a Baptist town, having twice as many Baptists as all other denominations put together. I want to assure the brethren elsewhere who fight against overwhelming odds and influences, as I did in Wilson, that it is indeed a comfortable feeling to feel that for once in your life you are in a majority. Coming here in September, the present pastor did not find things in a very happy condition, but thanks be unto God the church is now thoroughly united and harmonious. Our house is too small for our congregations, our prayer-meetings have grown in favor and in feeling, and our Sunday-school since September has grown from 65 to 130.

To pay way of thinking Edenton is an ideal pastorate. Ask Brother Vann if it is not so. How the people do love him here! And he loves the people and the town. It is related of him that when in the hands of the Baltimore doctors a few months ago, when they prescribed rest and mountain air, he said, "Won't Edenton do as well, Doctor?"

I am not going to enumerate the Christmas presents with which the good people inundated myself and family. I will only say this: they made us happy—cook, nurse, and all.

Our Union Meeting, the Temple, held its recent session with the Hertford church. It was the sentiment of all that it was the most successful meeting in the history of the Union.

The brethren in Hertford, under the leadership of Josiah Elliott (to write a eulogy reaching up to panegyric on Josiah Elliott would be the easiest thing in the world, but I will not offend him), have made many admirable improvements in the interior of their already splendid church. This church was Dr. Pritchard's first pastorate. A good sister told us during the Union Meeting how the Doctor, then but a boy, used to come out with his sermon, read it to her, and ask her how that would do, &c.

Bro. W. B. Waff preached the sermon on Sunday. An ex Congressman thought it the best sermon he had ever heard, and it was good—just like Waff, sweet-tempered, clear and gentle.

The Yeopim Union is doing all the missionary work that is being done by Baptists in Hyde county. It is evidently a fine field for Baptist missions. John C. Scarborough, our Superintendent of Public Instruction, says it is one of the finest farming sections he ever saw. We are spending only $200 a year there. The State Board ought to come to our rescue as soon as it is able.

W. V. Savage is doing a grand work at Columbia just across the Sound. Alone, not a Baptist preacher in his county, he presses forward courageously. He has some men in Columbia, however, who stand by him, and who, in time of famine, I had rather have behind me than a whole Association of preachers.

Josiah Elliott is preaching to six churches, shoulders full, arms full, hands full, heart full. Ten years ago he was a drayman on the streets of Hertford, eking out a precarious existence for himself and an invalid wife. To-day, from Elizabeth City to Roanoke Island, and all through this eastern section, he is the most popular and best beloved man as well as one of the most useful preachers. He thinks your Caddell told some pretty hard things on him at the Convention.

This is not only a Baptist town, but it is a RECORDER town. Here the Baptist Interpreter was commenced in 1833 by Rev. Thos. Meredith, a monthly, which afterwards was changed into a weekly under the name BIBLICAL RECORDER, the publication of which was commenced in Newbern in 1834 while Meredith was pastor there. Here (in Edenton) the paper is appreciated and supported, and its editor prayed for daily. We have some dear sisters in our church, who always ask about the health and welfare of the editor, and who in wrinkled and forgetful age carry still the memories of his pastorate at Edenton. Yours, JNO. E. WHITE.

From Morehead City.

Dear Recorder:—The silence of my pen has been due to my wife's long illness, in addition to an abundance of hard work. Now she is gaining her strength quite rapidly after ten weeks of fever. During this time of anxiety, our sorrow was deepened by the death of our only child. My people have been so kind, sympathetic and attentive, as to deserve the highest praise from an appreciative heart.

Our church is moving along nicely; congregations are good; Sunday-school large and well attended; prayer meetings also good. The people attend with remarkable promptness. I haven't preached to a pro cassion since my arrival here.

Last Sunday I exchanged pulpits with Bro. J. D. Moore of Beaufort. My people were well-pleased with him. Some compare him as a preacher quite favorably with his attractive brother.

The Beaufort saints received me warmly; and one among the night congregation—a cultivated Episcopalian—surprised me much by saying he wished he could hear me in his own church. How does this sound for an Episcopalian? Are we not getting close together? Surely a few more years of earnest study of the Bible (not prayer-books and other substitutes) with the light of our age, will gradually draw denominations nearer together. Dr. J. A. Smith, in his "Modern Church History," says: "Denominationalism came into existence as a result of conscientious and earnest study of the New Testament law as regards things outward in Christianity. We believe it to be perpetuated now, in a great measure, through lack of such study. Loyal inquiry, with all the advantages secured in results of learned research, and the aids and testimonies of consecrated scholarship, ought to result in at least comparative unity."

Another experience which illustrates the above quotation: Some time ago soon after preaching a sermon in which I emphasized some Baptist principles, I met a prominent Methodist brother who heard the sermon, and upon entering into conversation, he expressed his hearty approval of the Baptist doctrines I had just preached, adding that he had "always believed them." How he could have made such a confession and remained in the Methodist church is a mystery to me.

What "Smith" Did He Mean?

A New Yorker won a bet that he could get exactly the same answer to the same question from fifty people. He asked them if they had heard of Smith's failure, and every one of the fifty inquired, "What Smith."

In like manner when people are told they can get roses by mail, if they are bright they will ask, "what roses?"

If they have not learned that there are roses and roses, they should get The Dingee & Conard Co.'s New Guide to Rose Culture and become posted. This Company makes a specialty of sending the famous H. & C. roses everywhere by mail. They are "on their own roots," which is another peculiarity, and how good they are may be inferred from the fact that they have made the Company the largest rose growers in the world. The book will be sent to our flower-lovers no earnest, and only applicants will get better a sample copy of the Company's magazine, "Success with Flowers." The address is West Grove, Pa.

A Virginia Letter.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Though I am not a "returned Virginian," let it be understood that I lived so long in the Old North State that I naturally feel a lively interest in your affairs both secular and religious. You will see from the Herald, the Baptist organ of Virginia, the drift of religious matters in this State. The late General Association took the Southwest Virginia Institute, located at Bristol, Va.—Tenn., under its fostering, and this action of that body has excited a lively discussion in the columns of the Herald. The educational question is a living one, and I see that you are handling it in your columns with ungloved hands. Keep your gloves off, Doctor, and roll up your sleeves. The agitation is timely and there is undoubted need that the relation of the State to public education should be clearly defined, and if the State goes beyond her province and brings her so called institutions for the higher education of her people, in ruinous competition with the schools within her borders founded and supported by the liberality of religious denominations, or private individuals, the question may well be asked whether she is not going beyond her constitutional authority, and doing violence to the genius of American institutions. The ship of State in America is just now greatly troubled by two adverse winds; that of paternalism on the one hand, and that of sectarianism on the other. These are the Scylla and Charybdis that our Legislatures and our Congress would do well to avoid. It is quite difficult to convince some that the State has no right, according to American ideas of liberty, to tax her citizens for such a system of higher education as will cripple effectually denominational and private enterprise; and then again, quite as difficult to convince some religious sects, or denominations, that they have no more right than any other to the money collected for public purposes. May God speed you and other sturdy Baptists of North Carolina in standing for your rights! It is a well known fact that error is hydra headed, and when defeated on one field it renews the conflict on another. Look well to your armor brother, the conflict before you is no child's play!

I am getting along pretty well on my present field of labor. There have been some thirty-five additions to my churches since I took charge of the work here. My people are kind and appreciative. One of my churches gave us a genteel pounding during the Christmas holidays. Such thoughtfulness on the part of churches cross the members but little, but adds greatly to the pastor's comfort, besides assuring him that his services are appreciated and that he is remembered in the homes of his people.

I am glad to see that the work of the Minister's Relief Board is obtaining a faster hold on the masses of your people. By the way, I notice that a larger number of churches in the Robeson Association than in any other are contributing for the Board. This I suspect is largely due to the efforts of our active laymen (E. K. Proctor) in that Association. Preachers and laymen throughout the State say they are heartily in favor of this work, and I would say to all kindness to our godly laymen all over the State. If your pastor neglects it, take hold of it yourself; you will suffer this much from one formerly identified with this work. Plucky little Robeson shows what can be done.

Prof. Poteat's letter in last RECORDER was worth more than one reading. Your man "Palmetto" wields a trenchant pen. Tell him to come early and often.

Board of Education.

I wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that the Board of Education is sadly in need of funds now to meet current expenses. We are now aiding thirty-four young ministers at a cost of about three hundred dollars per month. And yet the contributions for the past month were less than one fourth that amount. Brethren, shall this continue? The indebtedness of the Board is already $1,000, and is this to be increased monthly? Will not the brethren and the churches send up their contributions as soon as they can and relieve the Board? I know that many are going to help, and that some time during the year the expected and the promised help may be looked for. But, brethren, help is needed now. The distress is upon us. Please don't wait till the close of the year to send up your contributions, but let as many as can conveniently do so send them at once, or as soon as they can, to our Treasurer, J. D. Bonsball, Raleigh, N. C., and help in this time of need our young ministers. It is the Lord's work. Let the Lord's people come up cheerfully to the help of the Lord.

Old Waynesborough—No. 2.

In this paper I wish to tell of the religious interests of the old town. I am indebted to Rev. C. J. Nelson of Goldsboro for many of the facts that follow. When Bro. Nelson moved to Waynesborough in 1838 he found there no house of worship. A free house was built about 1840 through the liberality of Messrs. Richard Washington, Geo. W. Collier, John Wright, Martin Stevenson, and others.

The first public Sunday-school ever organized in Wayne county, Bro. Nelson states, was the school he organized in Waynesborough about the date of 1842. This school still exists, and is known as the Sunday school of the First Baptist church of Goldsboro. My memory can recall but very few incidents of my Sunday-school life during my residence in the town, as I was not at all inclined to have anything to do with religious matters of any sort. I was afraid of all preachers, and shunned them as I would a snake. (By the way, the time has been that the reverend gentlemen were to be feared, and their title "reverend," from reverere, to fear, was quite appropriate.)

But I remember that the Bible was in more general use than now, the memorizing and repeating of long passages of Scripture being a common and popular practice. My little sister Fannie, when in her sixth year, repeated from memory the whole of the third chapter of Matthew. Several of the first pupils of the school were first taught their letters and how to read in that school, and afterwards became pious and useful members of the church.

Between 1840 and '42 quite a religious awakening was brought about by the visit and labors of Revs. Robt. McNabb, David Thompson and —— Dupree, Baptist ministers, and several professions of religion resulted. The meetings were held alternately in the free church of Waynesborough and in the old Academy of Goldsboro.

Another great awakening occurred later on, or about the year 1848, under the leadership of Rev. Ira T. Wyche, a Methodist minister, who impressed me as not being a very eloquent speaker, but a man of deep piety and great earnestness. I was an unconcerned spectator, but I remember that many of the prominent citizens of the surrounding country made a profession of religion during the progress of that meeting.

As the outcome of the first religious awakening, the church now known as the First Baptist church of Goldsboro was organized. This occurred in 1843 or '43. The church applied for membership in the Union (now Eastern) Association in 1844 through her delegates, T. C. Garrison and Rev. Wm. Robinson, the pastor. The constituent members of the church were Chas. J. Nelson, Thomas C. Garrison, Mrs. Lizzie Garrison, Patsey Powell, and Cynthia Ellis. Brother Nelson is the only original member now living. He resides in Goldsboro, retains a large measure of his physical vigor, and preaches wherever opportunity offers.

Beginning with five members, this church reported a membership of twenty-three to the Association in 1844. To my mind, the most remarkable and gracious revival with which God has ever blessed this church was the great revival of 1856, during the pastorate of Dr. David Coulling of Richmond, Va. The church then worshipped in the old Academy, which stood on or near the spot now occupied by the new Methodist church called St. Paul's. While Dr. Coulling did most of the preaching, and was the leading spirit in the meeting, A. P. Repiton, Dr. Chas. F. Deems and Dr. Jas. B. Taylor, Sr., Corresponding Secretary of the F. M. Board of the S. B. Convention preached, at least once each, during the meeting. Dr. Deems probably preached more than once, as he was at the time pastor of the Goldsboro Methodist church. I heard him but once, however, and still remember much of his able and lucid sermon on Faith.

Dr. Taylor's sermon was timely. Many of us were troubled about restricted communion, and we requested him to preach on that subject. He cheerfully complied. He didn't put on war-paint, as too many preachers do when they discuss distinctive principles; but with much tenderness and affection he spoke the truth with great plainness, showing that we, in common with the other leading denominations, required the scriptural prerequisites of repentance, faith, baptism, and church membership. We saw—what we should have seen before, and what everybody, it seems to me, should be able to see,—that the trouble was not about the terms of communion, but about what constitutes scriptural baptism. Bro. Coulling, under God, led me to Christ, and Bro. Taylor led me into the Baptist church.

I believe that about one hundred persons professed faith in Christ during the meeting, some uniting with the Baptists, and some going to other denominations. Dr. Deems immersed some of the new converts in Neuse river, just as Dr. Coulling did.

From the date of organization in Waynesborough, 1843 or '43, to the present, the following ministerial brethren have occupied the pastorate of the First Baptist church of Goldsboro: David Thompson of Smithfield, Wm. Robinson, A. J. Battle, H. Miner, J. J. James, editor of the RECORDER, Samuel Wait, president of Wake Forest College, David Coulling, George Bradford, Geo. W. Keener, M. B. Cobb, P. D. Gold, Theodore Whitfield, J. B. Hardwicke, Geo. W. Sanderlin, C. Durham, E. H. Ivey, Thomas Dixon, J. S. Dill, J. H. Edwards, and C. A. Jenkins.

Although many years have passed away [illegible] I have lost none of my interest [illegible] Bro. Nelson my first ecclesiastical [illegible], having been baptized into her [illegible] by Dr. Coulling, Oct. 5th, 1856. [illegible] has become to preach January [illegible] any twenty-five years. I was [illegible] fall work of the ministry by [illegible] February 19th, 1859. Dr. Thos. [illegible] preaching the ordination tion sermon. It was a good sermon, but it was too long for Bro. George Bradford, who had to follow with the charge to the candidate. Some say that Bro. Bradford had gone to sleep under Dr. Skinner's sermon, and had to be aroused from his slumber to act his part in the programme. He was soon wide awake, however, and charged vigorously. His charge was double barrelled, and was aimed at Dr. Skinner as well as myself. Looking at the Doctor, he emphatically charged me "never to preach long sermons until I had made up my mind that I was a great preacher." The congregation smiled, and Dr. Skinner tried to. I shall never forget what a hearty laugh we three had over that charge when we chanced to meet, some years afterwards, at Brother Pescud's residence, during the session of the S. B. Convention in Raleigh. Bro. Bradford, I believe, has gone to heaven. May Bro. Skinner have many years of usefulness before him before the Lord shall call him away.

The Lord grant Brother Nelson, who has watched with fatherly solicitude the Goldsboro Baptist church through all her varying vicissitudes from her constitution to the present time, abundant grace and peace, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Notes and Comments.

SEMI-POLITICAL.

The RECORDER has a difficult but important task on hand in its discussion of current questions which sometimes borders on the political. I believe in it and trust that this department will be kept up—it can be made of service as well as of great interest to the readers of the paper. It is a very delicate matter to handle and very difficult to always make them colorless politically, but that it can be done the Examiner has demonstrated, this feature of that paper being among the most interesting. I am a "sort of political crank" anyway, and believe in mixing politics and religion—not putting politics into religion, but religion into politics. I am of the opinion that we are too much afraid of public criticism along this line. There are great questions "with moral phases" agitating the public mind of to-day that must be met, and the only way to meet them is for Christian people to be largely independent in politics and thus let the politicians know that we are not "to be collared" and led about at their will, but we think for ourselves and that we will act for ourselves. I am constrained to express appreciation of this new department of the RECORDER, and venture to express the hope that it will be kept up. The department I have carefully read from its inception, and it has grown upon me. I have no idea of agreeing always with the editor's conclusions; but what is an editor for if not to express ideas and conclusions? and what is a reader for if not to read what the editor says and then differ from him as widely as he likes?

"EDUCATIONAL PROBLEM."

I am glad you have taken up the above subject in your editorial department. It is a "large question" and one of vital importance to all of the interests to the Church and State. The question is not to be settled in a day, neither is it to be settled by any appeal of a selfish character. Its foundations are deep in the work and history of the past, and yet something must be done to change present methods of State education, or perpetual strife and injury must follow. It is a recent question with me, and I do not feel like venturing upon its discussion, but I must be permitted to venture a word.

The position I have held in the past in reference to the matter is, that the State cannot justly engage in the matter of higher education; but I am learning that the question has two sides and already I am in "hot water" at home, and discussion "waxes warmer" with no prospect of abatement. Turn on the light—go to the bottom of the question, and let us have all the truth, and nothing but the truth, on the subject. One thing can safely be said, and that is, that our State is very far behind in provisions for the common schools. Her ambition may be great for her University, but the neglect of her 500,000 school children for the common schools is a shame. We have a capital superintendent, but what is $1.00 a year per head for our children? Whatever else she does in the way of education, she ought to increase this amount five fold.

A GOOD PRODUCTION.

That is an exceptionally good production of Bro. Blackwell in the RECORDER on the "Baptists and the Lord's Supper." It is clear that when he came to us that he did not come with his eyes shut. He understood the Baptist position, or he has been a very apt scholar since he came. His position is thoroughly invulnerable, but if his first ordinance is Scriptural—"the ordinance of preaching the gospel"—how about lending our pulpits to those who do not preach a whole gospel? Are they not just as far from the truth on this ordinance as the other two? And would it be just as consistent to have them baptise for us or administer the Lord's Supper for us? I think we are surrendering the outer post of the citadel, in thus recognising the right of the ministers of other denominations to preach, and it is sure the attack is now being made along this line. They have long since ceased to try to answer our position on the other ordinance, and have concentrated their forces on this point. They recognise the advantage gained and the victory over "our bigotry" by such recognition. For a long time their great plea was "We are Christians—God's children, and therefore entitled to come to his table," but they were repelled with the statement, "Inasmuch as it is the Lord's table, he had a right to make the conditions of admission, and he has put baptism before the Lord's Supper." Now they can make a stronger plea in this, "You recognize our ministers as called of God to preach the Word of God, and if ye thus recognize them in their official relation, ye must recognise their official acts." How are we to avoid the conclusion? Does the Master call to represent him in preaching the gospel those who cannot represent him altogether?

A Valuable Book.

T. W. Wood & Sons' New Seed Book for 1894 is now ready. This is a most useful publication to all gardeners and farmers. It not only tells all about the best seeds, but also when to plant, how to cultivate, and gives much useful and valuable information about profitable drops for the garden and farm. Two articles in it which are particularly timely and valuable are about the new forage plant, Lathyrus Sylvestris and the Growing of Beets for sugar making. This publication will be mailed free on application by T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va.

Church Annexes.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Although I am not a Baptist, yet when I see your people score a victory for God and the right, as I see it, I feel like lifting my hat and giving them a gospel cheer; and when I see the cause of my Master suffer through any mistake of your people, I can truly weep with you, and so I ask permission to say a word to your noble and hard-working people as to Bro. Blanchard's church "annexes." If I could endorse Baptist tenets generally as heartily as I can the position he has taken on this question, then I would ask you to let me be a Baptist, too, for I believe he is right, fully right in this matter. I hope for the honor of the church of Christ and the glory of God, that the Baptists of this beautiful and highly blessed Southland will generally take the same stand, for I think there is some danger of stinting the growth and diminishing the usefulness of the church.

It looks to me even now that the church in nearly all denominations is doing its work very largely by proxy, for her principal work is done in organizing societies which are to go out and do her work for her, while she takes "a big mid day nap," and if this sort of work is to go on, not only unchecked, but encouraged, it will not, I fear, be many years till the church will be "hobbling along" on crutches, while the societies will be standing off, with "hands in the pockets," laughing at her misfortune. Already real, solid gospel work goes a begging for the want of workmen, while the societies are chiefly engaged in ministering to the lovers of amusement—and their work is in fact only a sort of religious dissipation.

This is an anti-gospel idea, and the sooner God's people appreciate the fact, and, instead of organizing so many societies, go boldly to work themselves, the sooner will the grandest institution God ever gave to man—I mean the church—pass beyond the most dangerous breakers on the shores of her earthly existence. God grant that his people may be sufficiently wide-awake to see betimes the dangers in the way and avoid them.

As I understand it, the Baptists are noted for claiming "a thus saith the Lord" for what they teach. They claim to have it for the church, for an ordained ministry, for immersion, for close communion, for repentance toward God, for faith in Christ, and for regeneration; now what Baptist will be smart enough to name the book, chapter and verse in the Bible where they may get the authority "of a thus saith the Lord" for these church "annexes"—these societies which the church is organizing to teach her how "to do nothing."

Think of it, brethren! The church wishes her young people to become pious; she organizes a society to look after that work. The house of worship needs repairs, painting, &c., and she organizes an aid society to raise the money by all sorts of fun, with a big supper and a jolly good time. She wants missionary funds to send the gospel to the heathen, and she organizes a society to raise the money. She wants to help provide for the orphans, and she organizes a society to raise the money. The poor must be helped and a society must do it.

The puzzling question with me is, if all this society affair is right, what is the church for? What is its mission among men? Did the Master make a mistake in instituting the church, and was the honor of finding it out reserved for the wise men and women (?) of the last half of the nineteenth century? And is the modern church society the institution which is to supplant the dear old church of God, after she has helped and comforted and given passports to heaven to millions of the people of earth? Is her work done? Must she henceforth be "shelved" like the book for which there is no demand? God forbid, but if he is to forbid it, brethren, he will do it through the faithful few who have never bowed the knee to this modern idol which seeks to change and improve (?) the plans of God himself.

MARLVILLE, N. C., Sept. 20, 1893.

Gentlemen: The chemicals I bought of you for making "Home Fertilizer" continue to give satisfaction. I only use it under cotton. You know I must think it good, or I should not have used it so long. This makes 16 or 17 years that I have been using it, and its use has made me able to pay for it cash, not on crop time.

Yours truly, THOS. S. EVANS.

Letter From Mexico.

To the Missionary Society of Chowan Female College:—Though it may not be my good fortune to know any of you personally, I am sure you are all interested in Mexico. As we are approaching the end of the year, you will please join me in a brief review of our work and progress.

It will be remembered that our Board began work in Mexico twelve years ago, 1881, with three missionaries, Rev. W. D. Powell, his wife and her sister. We now have twenty-four foreign missionaries, sixteen native workers, and thirty-five organized churches with an aggregate membership of over 900. Six new churches have been organized this year, and preaching opened in three new stations. Two promising young men have been ordained to the full work of the ministry, and three others have recently concluded a four years' literary and theological course of study at Saltillo. So, while the field has been greatly extended, some valuable workers have been added to our number. This will enable us in some measure to meet the multiplying demands made on our time and services.

La Luz, our newspaper, is rapidly coming to the front under wise and efficient supervision of Rev. W. H. Sloan, a missionary of the Northern Board located in Mexico City. After a suspension of two years, El Expositor, our Sunday-school paper, has been resumed with new life and vigor by its founder, Rev. D. A. Wilson, than whom we have no more critical Spanish scholar in all Mexico. After much prayer and consultation about fields and workers, our forty missionaries have been distributed. All things considered, I think our work has never before been so happily and hopefully arranged, and in so prosperous a condition as it is now.

Coahuila Association, composed of twenty-six churches located in northern Mexico, held at Saltillo recently one of her most harmonious sessions. The delegation, though nearly complete, was not large, owing to the extensive territory occupied by the Association, some of the delegates having to come 900 miles. A number were kept away also because of the wide spread poverty occasioned by the terrible drought which is now scourging northern Mexico. In many parts, crops are a complete failure, and hundreds of poor families have been driven from their homes in search of bread and water.

Notwithstanding the high pressure and poverty, the church letters show the cause to be in a healthy and prosperous condition. In this Association we have had 104 baptisms during the year, and $800—an average of one dollar per member—has been raised for missions. This does not include an equal amount which has been given for church building. Our members are early taught to "lay by in store" as the Lord has prospered them. Besides sustaining a missionary for all his time within her own bounds, the Association unites with the other Baptists of Mexico in supporting Rev. J. D. Bautista, a missionary now at work in Brasil. Thus it turns out that Baptists are the first denomination in Mexico to push on into the regions beyond. The gospel which Christian people of the United States sent to them they are sending on to South America. This is as it should be.

To accommodate an overflowing congregation at Doctor Arroyo, we were driven some time ago to double the capacity of our hall. As we had to begin work in debt for the house and lot, and building material being enormously high, the heavy expense of repairing has made some of us "see stars at noon-day." But the work is now about finished, and we have one of the most elegant, durable chapels south of the Rio Grande. Dr. Powell came 500 miles to preach our dedication sermon. On Sunday night, December 3d, the newly-finished hall was full, and there were perhaps twice as many people about the door and windows on the outside. The order and attention were perfect. The speaker seemed to be in the happiest mood for the task before him. By his logic, pathos and eloquence he carried us heavenward, burning to our very souls the words of his text: "This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." Gen. 28: 17. My own heart swelled within me as I beheld an old, gray-headed man, two seats back, with streaming eyes, weeping like his heart would break. The Spirit of the great God was with us. Some of us will never forget that night and that sermon.

The new chapel and lot, worth $1,200, constitute the Centennial gift of Mexican missionaries to the Foreign Board. We greatly need $50 for benches. The Mayor kindly lent us seats from the city school for the occasion of the dedication.

There has been a decided reaction here in public sentiment and feeling toward the gospel and its advocates. The people not only see the good fruits in the daily lives of our members, but they are becoming mollified and even convinced of the high purity and justice of our principles, and of the truth of our doctrines. They are beginning to find out also that our work is permanent, we have come to stay. We are greatly encouraged with the outlook.

I purpose spending the larger part of January in the saddle, traveling more than 500 miles over some of the roughest mountains on this continent. To those of your home pastors who are troubled with indigestion, I recommend as a sure remedy missionary life in Mexico.

Will you not join with us in praying that the dear Lord may bless the preached word, turning many benighted souls from darkness to light, and from the power and service of Satan unto God.

Most truly, J. G. CHASTAIN.

As dark misery settles down on us, and our refuges of lies fall to pieces one after one, the hearts of men, now at last serious, will turn to refuges of truth. The eternal stars shine out again as soon as it is dark enough.—Carlyle.

"Co-Education."

I am glad to see that our Charlotte pastor has thrown his whole soul into this enterprise, as he does in all great matters of world-wide interest. I will just say amen to his views on the subject, and not undertake to argue it myself. It does seem to me that the thing is so plain that everybody ought to see it just as he sees it. Yes, as a natural consequence, good results do and will follow. The brother's arguments, I think, are sufficient for the whole State.

BASE-BALL AND FOOT-BALL.

I am glad to think that many of our good people are considering the propriety of supporting schools in which these foolish and dangerous plays are tolerated.

Indigestion? Dizziness? Take Beecham's pills.

From Elder Hocutt in Burlington.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—It is becoming in me to say that the "lines have fallen to me in pleasant places." Since I began serving the people here and in the neighboring towns, I have received many tokens of appreciation. As Christmas presents, the people in this town gave me a $15.00 overcoat; at Haw River, they gave me a pair of gold-framed glasses; and at Graham, they gave me many presents.

In addition to these, last evening, while I was in my study, the members of my congregation here took me by surprise, and gave us a first-class pounding. May the Lord reward the dear people for their kindness. I feel a deep desire to do them better service than I have ever done before.

The Lord continues to bless the labors of his servants in these parts.

Ordination.

At the call of Beres Baptist church, Iredell county, N. C., a presbytery, composed of Elders D. W. Pool, W. J. Hopkins, W. J. Wyatt and A. W. Crabtree, met at their church Wednesday, Jan. 3d, 1894, and organized by the election of W. J. Hopkins, Moderator, and A. W. Crabtree, Clerk.

The church presented Bro. J. M. Ballard to the presbytery, and after a thorough and highly satisfactory examination of the candidate, Bro. D. W. Pool preached an excellent sermon upon the customs of Baptists in the recognition of God's call, the qualifications and duties of the minister, and the duties of a church to the same, at the close of which Bro. W. J. Wyatt made the ordaining prayer. The writer presented the Bible, and the benediction was pronounced by Bro. Ballard. A. W. CRABTREE, Clerk.

Charity as a Fine Art.

"The fine art of charity, that is, of cordial, prompt, efficient help to whoever needs it, is one which surpasses music, sculpture, color and all other gifts of intelligence. Like all art, it has its rules and foundations. Amateur giving is apt to prove little satisfaction to giver or object. The first principle laid down by best authority is that charity begins at home. That it should not end there does not weaken the force of this obligation. Let every man and woman ask themselves if they have no relation less comfortably placed, who would be the better for help which they might give. If this be so, help is due to that quarter before all other obligations. If there is a brother out of employment, or out of health, a brother's widow in strait circumstances, a sister lacking comforts for health and credit, and old aunt or uncle on a scant income, thinly clad, poorly fed, ill-housed may be, a far-away cousin falling into decline from overwork, the sacred sense of family honor should compel care for these interests before all outside cases. If you do not do your duty so, the world must see to your duty for you, or suffering no less pitiable than it is never heard of, must appeal to heaven against you. And you, neglecting your own blood, bestow your alms on cases not half so needy or so worthy often, as those of your own kin. It is a very odd thing that the most desperate cases appealing for aid or employment almost invariably are found to have relatives abundantly able to help them, if only disposed to do so. There is no family disgrace equal to this, and public sentiment needs to be educated up to seeing this fact in its true light.—The Housewife, New York.

The Heavenly Inheritance.

Christians look forward to a heavenly home when they die. It is a home prepared by Jesus for them, and a home which he earned for them by his own sufferings and perfect obedience to God's law. They obtain the privilege of enjoying this heavenly home by simple faith in Jesus Christ. Faith is trust in the merits of Jesus and a reliance upon what Jesus has done in the way of atonement for the sins of the world. All those who have faith in Jesus and prove it by a godly life have titles clear "to mansions in the skies." As a joint-heir with Jesus, they inherit a heavenly home, for God has graciously forgiven their sins, adopted them into his family, and cleansed their souls. At death he will receive them into glory. The way, then, to obtain a heavenly home forever is to repent of sin and believe on Jesus. You gain this inheritance not by doing, but by trusting. "By faith are ye saved, through grace." God's grace allows it.—Kind Words.

A Priceless Jewel.

When opportunity offers itself to selfish desire, the strength of one's purpose to do right is severely tested. If in that hour of temptation the force of evil example be added to the allurement and opportunity, the strain upon one's will is raised very nearly to the limit of one's power of resistance. Happy, therefore, is the Christian man who in that moment of moral peril gives heed to the Divine Voice which whispers, as in Paul's caution to Timothy, "Keep thyself pure!" In these ethically evil times marked by almost daily instances of detected corruption in unexpected quarters, the Christian needs to keep vigilant guard over himself; and, as Lewis Morris exhorts, to "keep his innocence" by being "all a true man ought," superior alike to the blandishments of pleasure and to the pain caused by the scorn of men whose meanest crime it is to laugh at virtue. Keep thine innocence, therefore, O tempted man! It is a priceless jewel:

"Who hath that, he hath all things having naught;
Who hath it not, hath nothing having all."

The man who was so mean that he sat in the back pew in church to save the interest on his cent while the contribution box was coming around has at last found a rival.

This man, it is declared, took his supper a little later each night.

"Now, why does he do that?" some one asked, in surprise, who did not know him very well.

"Why, so that presently his supper will come after twelve o'clock, and then he'll call it his breakfast and save one meal!"—Youth's Companion.

At the bloody battle of Marengo the French line fell back in a complete route, and the officers rushed up to their commander crying, "The battle is lost." "Yes," exclaimed the general, "one battle is lost, but there is time to win another." Inspired by his faith and courage, the officers hurried back, turned the head of the retreating column, and when in a few hours the last gun was fired, the French camped on the field of battle. Marengo had been won. So if we are thinking of battles lost during the past year, in school, or business, or worse still in character—lost temper, lost patience, lost spirituality or prayerfulness—let us remember that there is yet time to win another battle. Raise the standard once more, take fresh courage, put on the whole armor, and God will surely give us the victory. "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.—Rev. H. W. Pope.

This New Year Thou givest me,
Lord, I consecrate to Thee,
With all its nights and days:
Fill my hand with service blest;
Fill my heart with holy rest;
And fill my life with praise!

Francis Ridley Havergal.

Where God Leads.

God knows where we can do the most good, better than we do. Hence it is well for us to realize we are just where we ought to be when we are in the place where God has set us. "If each drop of rain chose where it should fall," says Charles Kingsley, "God's showers would not fall, as they do now, on the evil and the good alike." So it is that the world is benefitted by God's choosing the place for his individual workers in the world.—Sunday school Times.

"Who has a greater combat than he that laboreth to overcome himself? This ought to be our endeavor, to conquer ourselves and to make a further growth in holiness.—Thomas a' Kempis.

Selma Items.

"An old friend's welcome to his old home is a thing already assured"—so we felt on our way down to the Baptist State Convention in Elizabeth City, N. C., in December, 1893.

We were not disappointed in our thought about our welcome—it was all we expected and all we could desire—but the la grippe put us in bed on the first day of the Convention and kept us there through the entire session, and even longer. Why? This might call out a year's guessing without finding a true answer. We can already see some things our sickness did, and with these we must be content until further developments shall let us into the now unrevealed. Our sickness called into exercise the sympathy of our relatives and old-time friends as nothing else could have done.

After our return from the Convention, Selma church and the people of the town gave us attentions and many substantial expressions of sympathy and love. We feel drawn closer to this people because of these kindly expressions of regard for us in our need. A dear brother, writing concerning the seeming strangeness of some of the Lord's dealings, said: "Nothing happens, brother. What seems to be mysterious to the human mind is plain and well ordered by heaven." How true, we thought, as we read the wholesome words of comfort. "All things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to his purpose." Again, "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord"—his steps in affliction as well as his steps in health, and the "all things" of God include those things which others design shall work against us. The Lord be praised for his goodness—that which comes to us through affliction and strangely—as well as for that which comes otherwise.

Our Union Meeting work is growing in favor with the churches. Glad to report such a disposition to unity in the Lord's work on the part of his people. When the Lord's people get to the unity of spirit and concert of action exercised by the opposition of good, we shall be stronger and move on more rapidly. Our last Union Meeting at White Oak was thinly attended; because of much sickness, some lack of disposition to go, and the inconvenience of getting to the church. We must try to have a better meeting next time. The brother who said, "We never either win or lose" put the truth in proper shape, as it refers to our opportunities and means. The servant who buried his talent lost it. Another has said that "opportunities have no resurrection." They never come back to us in better shape for use for having been buried. Then our December opportunity for a good Union Meeting has gone forever, and we must make better use of the next opportunity God may give us.

The members of Clyde's Chapel church have treated their house of worship to a new dress. This "white body" and "green blinds" is as we admire it. It shows to advantage and is longer in fading. It may be pronounced old fashioned by some, but we think it is modern enough, and pretty. Some other churches are talking about following the example set by Clyde's Chapel ere long.

Rev. F. H. Poston has decided to remain in Smithfield and occupy his old field of labor, very much to the satisfaction of those he has been serving—indeed, it makes all our hearts glad. He is an earnest worker, a good preacher and a good man—what more can, or ought to be said in his favor? Our highest compliment of respect is found in our willingness and delight to have him remain with us.

Clayton church is still without a pastor, so we were informed the other day, and we were very sorry to hear it. A flock without a shepherd scatter and often get torn by wolves. The true Christian gets hungry for the bread of life also, and we would be glad to hear of the church's success in securing a good pastor. If some good man could feel called of God to live in Clayton, and some of the neighboring country churches could be induced to co-operate with Clayton church, so as to make a field and support for the preacher, it would be a good thing, if we are not mistaken in our conclusion. This is only suggestive, however, and there may be a better way—or even ways—open to the mind of others. Our cause needs a preacher in Clayton, one in Smithfield and one in Selma (there is one in each of the latter towns) with hearts in love with each other and the work, and a mind to co-operate for the good of the cause.

Bethesda, Wilson's Mills, Pine Level and Princeton claim "to be holding their own," as it is so often put when wishing to express neither gain nor loss, backward nor forward step. We believe the Lord is with his people at each of these places, and, if so, there must be progress. There was one received into the fellowship of Princeton church by experience at our last appointment.

Selma has the exodus fever—an incurable case. It has been fatal to our numerical growth during the years of our stay here. We cannot tell how many have gone from us to other places since we first adopted Selma as our home. The fever still rages. "We want a home in a larger place where we hope to do better"—desire for city life.

We received two into the fellowship of Selma church by letter at our first regular appointment for January this year, and we have heard of one or two others who are thinking about coming in with us soon. We hope all the good reports we have heard are true, and that by-and-by, more good than we have heard, is in store for us.

Seminary Notes.

Intermediate examinations are upon us. They continue until Feb. 2nd.

Dr. Whitsitt is at present giving the class in church history an interesting course of lectures on the history of American Baptists. These lectures, slightly modified, are being published in The Young People's Leader of Nashville, Tenn.

Talmage and Sam Jones lectured here some time ago. The city is to have the privilege of hearing America's foremost orator, Tom Dixon, on Feb. 1.

Dr. W. L. Pickard, pastor of the Broadway Baptist church, is in Florida taking his winter vacation. He has just closed his first year's pastorate. He has made a wonderful record. His church last year contributed to all objects over ninety thousand dollars.

Dr. Broadus is also in Florida, taking a much needed rest. During his absence Dr. Robertson is delivering a course of lectures to the class in New Testament on miracles.

Many new students are entering. We have about 275 now, and still they come.

I hope that the young ministers of North Carolina will begin to make arrangements to enter the Seminary next fall. I cannot begin to tell the advantages to a young minister who takes a course here. Many of our North Carolina students will enter the pastorate next summer. I hope that some of our churches will capture Bro. C. J. Thompson. It is rumored here that Virginia is about to capture him.

Dr. G. W. Manly dropped in to see some of his old Wake Forest friends and former students about New Year's day. He is taking a fine stand among the Ohio Baptists. He is Professor of Latin in Denison University.

Where Seeds Come From.

First among the seed producing houses of the world stands the old establishment of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich. Established in 1856, this firm has been for years the largest and best-known seed house in the world. In 1893 over one hundred thousand dealers handled Ferry's Seeds, and the number of people who planted them runs far into the millions. For 1894 this firm has made preparation to supply at least 50,000 bushels of garden beans alone. Something more than shrewd business methods is required to place and keep such a business in the lead. It is something that deserves the thought of every one who plants a seed. If every sower could go on a tour of inspection through this great establishment and see what is behind the name of Ferry's Seeds, see with what care they have been developed and tested, see with what precision they are sorted and packed, ready for planting, there would be less disappointment and fewer losses from the use of inferior seeds.

Every year D. M. Ferry & Co., issue an Annual for the convenience and instruction of those who plant seeds. It is prepared by the most competent authors, and is rightly looked upon as a standard authority on the most profitable things to plant, and the best way to cultivate them. This book is sent free of charge to all who send their name address to the above mentioned firm.

My First Year with the Piedmont Church.

With Dec. 31st ended my first year as pastor of Piedmont Baptist church, and with the passing months the members have become dearer and dearer to me.

Their appreciation of my services, their ready co-operation in every good work, their care for our physical wants, together with the rich blessings of salvation to so many precious souls, have made the past the happiest year of my pastoral life.

With Christmas came the gifts, with the accompanying expressions of appreciation and love that almost overcame us; and to crown all, as I took my place on the platform Sunday morning, 24th ult., I was met by Bro. Callaham, who, in a few well chosen words, presented me a beautiful gold watch and chain, "in behalf of the Christian people of Piedmont." Notwithstanding the hard times, they paid my fare to the Southern Baptist Convention, and before starting on my vacation, which I spent at my North Carolina home, they put in my hands more than enough to meet expenses. Added to this, my liberal salary is all paid up, and missionary contributions have been liberal.

I preached the anniversary sermon at the evening service, Dec. 31st, and promised with God's blessing to be a more consecrated pastor in the year to come.

The next morning I was attacked with la grippe, and am yet a "shut-in." This is a new experience to me, but the work and the workman are the Lord's, and I wait patiently his will. I am recovering, but my wife is now suffering with the same dread disease.

J. B. MARSH.

Piedmont, S. C., Jan. 19, 1894.

Mr. O. J. Carroll of Raleigh has been nominated and confirmed as United States Marshal for the Eastern District of North Carolina.

The rollet flouring mill of the Eureka Mill Co., Gibsonville, was recently destroyed by fire. Loss about $7,000; insurance, $4,000.

Lieut. Richard Henderson has been detailed as military instructor at the Agricultural and Mechanical College, Raleigh, N. C.

Literary.

From S. S. McClure, Limited, New York City: "Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne will begin publication in McClure's Magazine for February of their new novel, 'The Ebb Tide.' It is a tale of the South Seas abounding in dramatic situations and adventures, and it has been very effectively illustrated by Alfred Brennan.

The Century Co., 33 East 17th St. New York, have just issued "Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar for 1894," containing humorous extracts from Mark Twain's latest story, "Pudd'nhead Wilson," now appearing in The Century. They offer to send a copy of the calendar free to any one who will inclose them a stamp to pay postage.

The February number of the Baptist Teacher is very full and complete. Contributed articles on "Abraham," "Judgments upon Wickedness," "Genealogies of Genesis" and "Hebrew Manuscripts" are furnished by Presidents W. T. Stott and W. T. Lowery; Rev. William Hurlin, and Prof. W. Taylor Smith, in the order given. The editorials as usual, are bright and pointed, while the comments on the lessons, with suggestions for teachers, etc., will be found full of pointed comments and information. A feature of the Teacher, which is becoming more important, are the suggestions to the teachers who are using the Inductive Lessons prepared by Mr. Fennell and Miss Dimock. We are glad to know that this new series of lessons and helps is being received with very great favor: this is especially true of the new Primary course "Two Years With Jesus." It is issued by the American Baptist Publication Society at 50 cents per annum in clubs of five and upwards.

From Statesville.

Dear Recorder:—We are now in the midst of a very precious revival of grace in the Statesville Baptist church. I commenced a prayer meeting the first of the month, and told my people that my plan was to take the meeting in Jerusalem as a model for our work; so after special prayer for a week, I commenced preaching on Sunday, the 7th, and there has been an increase in interest and congregation every service. Yesterday was a great day for the Baptists of Statesville. At the close of the morning service, we received four young ladies for baptism and five by letter.

It had been announced that I would preach my new sermon on the Devil last night. The brethren had put in some forty extra seats, the house was filled to overflowing, and many men stood up in the rear end of the church. God blessed his Word, for I am just preaching the pure Word.

We will continue the services from night to night as long as the Spirit directs. Many persons are interested.

GEORGE H. CHURCH.

Statesville, Jan. 16, 1894.

A Suggestion.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have read with interest Dr. Carroll's article on "Does Indebtedness to Men Excuse Christians from Giving to the Lord?" It is excellent and goes directly to the pith of the subject. Could Dr. C. Durham do a better thing for his work than to have it put into tract form, and send a copy to every pastor and missionary in the State, with the request that they read it to their congregations, commenting upon it, &c.?

By the way, permit me to say I read the RECORDER with pleasure and profit.

With best wishes, I am yours fraternally,

JNO. W. M. WILLIAMS

La Grippe, Again.
The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.
ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 26, 1893.
In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe.
L. STUART.
MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 13, 1893.
About two years ago I had a severe spell of 'grip,' and was induced by my relatives to try Royal Germetuer. It soon cured the 'grip.'

SWEETWATER, TENN., June 23, 1893.
My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health.
J. T. BARROW,
Pastor First Baptist Church.
Rev. W. G. E. Cunningham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of your remedy relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."
Rev. J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 3d, 1893: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

Mississippi Baptists.

There are two general bodies of Baptists in the State, the Convention and the General Association. The Convention occupies the larger section of the State, having forty-district Associations, containing 973 churches, 486 pastors, and 66,233 members. The General Association, though not so large, is a thorough missionary body. Only a few weeks since its annual session was held with Mt. Olive church in Jones county. Its territory is in the southeastern portion of the State. In this meeting seven District Associations and twenty-nine churches were represented. Its pronounced missionary spirit is seen in its having employed eight men during the past year in preaching the gospel, including work among the resident Indians. From this time the body proposes to support a foreign missionary wholly as its representative on the world field. This is a most praise-worthy move. The venerable Rev. N. L. Clarke of Newton was Moderator, Mr. Benjamin Thigpen, Clerk and Mr. D. T. Chapman, Treasurer. The body invited Rev. H. N. Hatch, Sunday-school evangelist of the Convention, to labor within its territory. It has a constituency of 252 churches, 110 pastors and 14,710 members. There were during the past year 332 baptisms and 193 received by letter and a total loss 121, leaving a net gain of 711. It has in its membership only eight churches, eight pastors and 300 members among the Choctaw Indians in the State.

Since the opening of the fall session of Mississippi College, and, by the way, that the opening has been well sustained, for its halls are thronged with the young manhood of the churches,—since the opening the Board of trustees have laid hands upon Rev. Charles L. Lewis, the excellent Raymond pastor, and made him the general solicitor and financial agent of the College. He is expected to devote his whole time to the work, in the field among the churches in the interest of the College. The scientific department has run down and is sadly in need of complete philosophical and chemical apparatus. Secretary Lewis will make an effort to secure at least $3,000 in order to fully equip this department, into which Prof. Provine is infusing new life and energy—no disparagement to his predecessor, Prof. J. F. Sellers, now of Mercer University, Georgia, who did excellent work. This is an arduous task and Bro. Lewis needs an immense amount of audacity and pluck to attempt it in the face of these hard times. But he is a man of pluck and has pulled off his coat and gone into his work in a business-like way. He is a man of grit and success.

Secretary Lewis was lately with Dr. Hackett and his Shuqualak people. He says: "We had a real love-feast; I never saw pastor and people love each other better. If all the pastors and churches would treat the agent as did Dr. Hackett and his churches, we will soon have the College all it needs to be. I am doing well for the College."

Dr. Walter Hillman, the noble and accomplished President of the Hillman College, for young ladies, has been in very poor health for some months past. At several times his life has seemed to be in the scale and might cease in a moment. The good man said he was ready for either life or death as seemed good to the Lord. He has been in educational work at Clinton for at least thirty years, once President of Mississippi College, but for twenty or more years President of Central Female College, now Hillman College. This is a work of which any one might feel justly proud (in the good sense.) In all of his work Dr. Hillman has been ably seconded by his excellent wife, Mrs. Adelia Hillman. A recent $10,000 addition to his school buildings bears the name of Adelia Hall in honor of Mrs. Hillman. This hall is said to be a model of convenience and adaptation for school purposes, and is the result of twenty-five years of careful study of school architecture, both practically and theoretically, by Dr. Hillman.

Mrs. Hillman, besides her school duties, has for several years past been the President of the Central Committee of Woman's Societies in the Baptist churches of the State. She has also been librarian of the Baptist State Historical Society almost from its organization. In the work of this Society she has taken a keen and most lively interest, and has greatly aided in collecting the large amount of historical matter already gathered by the Society. This material is all arranged and classified. Many friends hope that Dr. Hillman may be spared yet many years to the denomination, and most heartily appreciate the excellent denominational work being performed by Mrs. Hillman.

That truant Mississippian whom you captured and held for these years at Waynesville where he did an excellent work is back in his native heath. It is Rev. Geo. Wharton. He paid a flying visit to Dr. Hackett and the Record office a short time since and is now girding his loins for arduous work in his new pastorate at Corinth. We are all glad to welcome him back. May he be greatly blessed in his work.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Harboro has a chewing-gum factory.

Mr. T. G. Sparrow, a prominent citizen of Idalia, Beaufort county, died of apoplexy the 5th inst.

The Piedmont Mineral Company of King's Mountain is prospecting for tin about two and a half miles from that town.

Friday the 15th inst. was the anniversary of the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee. That is a legal holiday in this State.

The eleventh annual session of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly is to be held at Morehead City from June 19th to 26th.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows has 4,500 members in this State. The number of lodges is 168.

The President has appointed Mr. Stephen H. Lane of Newbern collector of customs of the Pamlico district, embracing the Newbern district.

Early Wall and George Broadaway, citizens of Davidson county, were recently accidentally drowned in the Yadkin river near Bringle's Ferry.

The cigarette ordinance which passed the town council of Greensboro some time ago, mention of which appeared in our last issue, has since been repealed.

Secretary Carlisle has awarded the contract for the erection of the life saving station at Portsmouth, N. C., to W. J. B. Shuff of Beaufort, N. C., at $5,419.

The Ex. Committee of the North Carolina Sunday-school Association have fixed Aug. 21—24, 1894, for the meeting of the State Convention, which will be held at Durham.

Eleven people were killed and twenty-eight injured in a railroad collision on the Delaware, Lockawanna and Western railroad near the bridge over the Hackensack river on the 15th inst.

Gov. Flower of New York, and a number of other prominent gentlemen of that State, escorted by the Albany Burgesses Corps, will visit Raleigh, Feb. 2d, stopping for a day, on their way to the New Orleans Mardi Gras.

Rosa Haywood, an aged negro woman living near Raleigh, was strangled to death in her house, Tuesday of last week, by Orange Page, a negro ex-convict, and Mary Smith, the old woman's niece. Robbery was the motive for the deed. The Governor offers a reward of $100 each for the arrest of Page and the woman Smith.

The store house and stock of goods contained within, belonging to Mr. J. A. Coppedge of Cedar Rock, Franklin county, were destroyed by fire on Friday night, the 19th inst. The post-office was located in the building, and a quantity of stamps and other things belonging to the office were also consumed. Estimated loss, $2,000; no insurance.

The good people of the State were horrified by the sensational culmination of a disgraceful scandal among well-known Greensboro and Danville, Va., people last week. An unfaithful wife, a depraved man, and an injured and incensed husband were the parties involved in a shocking affair, which resulted in the serious shooting of the adventurous interloper and the disgrace of two families.

The Wilmington Star of the 20th says: "The British steamship Leander, Captain Robson, cleared yesterday for Bremen, Germany, with the largest cargo of cotton ever shipped from this port—and probably the largest number of bales to the registered tonnage of the ship ever sent abroad from any port in the United States. The Leander's registered tonnage is 1868, and she carries 10,513 bales; near 5½ bales to the ton. Her cargo is valued at $400,015."

A Greensboro, N. C., special to the Richmond Dispatch, January 20th says: "The North State Improvement Company, which is the same thing as the C. F. & Y. V. R.R. Co., was to-day placed in the hands of receiver John W. Fries of Salem by order of Judge Graves of Mt. Airy. The application for the receivership was made by the United Brethren of Salem to whom the company is indebted about $10,000. In view of the approaching sale of the road it is thought the receivership will be only temporary. The Company's liabilities are placed at $650,000."

The Raleigh Chamber of Commerce is the recipient of inquiries about good farming lands, timber lands, water powers, etc., that may be for sale in the State. Recent correspondence with a large land agency has been interesting, and the agency, which is now getting ready to issue a book, desires to include in it any good lands in North Carolina which may be on the market. People who desire to sell may easily be put in correspondence with a good purchaser by writing to the Secretary of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce and giving a good description of the lands for sale, what they will produce, and especially the lowest price at which they can be purchased. The agency mentioned has sold $70,000 worth of lands in the past few months, and stands ready to place on a good market other desirable lands.

General News.

The Cotton States and International Exposition is to be held in Atlanta, Ga., during the autumn months of 1895.

On the 15th inst., the Senate rejected the nomination of Wm. B. Horablower of New York, for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Capt. A. G. Babcock of Richmond, Va., died on the 17th inst. He left the bulk of his estate, valued at $135,000 to charitable institutions.

Col. Frank A. Burr, a well-known journalist, and the biographer of U. S. Grant, Russell A. Alger and James A. Bayne, died recently at Camden, N. J.

A freight train ran into the rear end of a vestibule train at Chester, S. C., on the night of the 16th. Five persons were injured; none fortunately were killed.

A terrific wind storm swept over Oak Cliff and Dallas, Texas, last Friday night, destroying property to the extent of $100,000, killing one person and injuring several others.

Lewis Rudolph, the defaulting cashier of the Gate City National Bank, Atlanta, Ga., was recently tried for embezzling $103,000 found guilty and sentenced to six years imprisonment in the Ohio State penitentiary.

A pugilistic contest came off at Norfolk, Va., last week. Gov. O'Ferrall has been interviewed on the subject, and says that he proposes to have the matter investigated and to bring the participants to justice, if possible.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular offering for public subscription an issue of bonds of the United States to the amount of $50,000,000, in either registered or coupon form, in denominations of $50 and upwards, redeemable in coin at the pleasure of the Government after ten years from the date of their issue and bearing interest, payable quarterly in coin, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

"Honesty is the best policy." Nobody contradicts it. Your dealer can get lamp-chimneys that almost never break from heat, or those that break continually. Which does he get? Which do you get?

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" are tough against heat; not one in a hundred breaks in use. The glass is clear as well as tough. They are accurate, uniform.

Be willing to pay more for chimneys that last till they rot, unless some accident happens to them.

Pittsburgh. GEO. A. MACBETH CO.

A true Christian is the representative of Christ in the world, the only embodiment of Gospel teaching and influence presented in human society. How vitally important is it, then, that those of us who profess and call ourselves Christians should make our Christianity attractive! Multitudes of people know very little and think very little about the Lord Jesus; nearly all the idea they get of his religion is what they see in those who profess it, and their eyes are as sharp as those of a lynx to discover whether their neighbor is one whit the better for religion.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Rev. Geo. A. Lofton, D. D.,

PASTOR OF THE CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH OF NASHVILLE, TENN., AND AUTHOR OF "CHARACTER SKETCHES," GIVES TESTIMONY.

[From the Baptist and Reflector.]

Several parties have written to the editor of this paper inquiring whether the Electropoise really possessed the wonderful curative powers that are claimed for it. While the editor has not been in a position to speak from personal experience, quite a number of his friends and acquaintances have testified to great benefit received from its use; among them is Rev. Dr. Lofton of Nashville who writes as follows: "I have given a partial trial to the "Electropoise," and I found it great relief to indigestion, nervousness, and sleeplessness; and while I have not kept up the use of the instrument sufficiently to judge of its full effect in the treatment of the many ills of life, my wife considers it invaluable, and so do many of my friends about me, who would not for any consideration part with it. My very good health since I purchased the "Electropoise" has superseded the necessity of its use, except occasionally when I employ it for the purposes above specified. Judge East told me that after exhaustive speaking he found it of great value in equalizing the circulation and restoring the nervous equilibrium in sleep, and I have found the same effect under like circumstances."

DIED.

BURNS—In the town of Pollocksville, N. C., Jan. 9th, 1894, Sister Susan Burns, aged sixty-four years. A good woman and faithful Christian has thus been removed from our midst. She leaves a faithful and devoted son and step-daughter to mourn their loss, which we believe is her eternal gain.

J. H. VERNON.

Pollocksville, Jan. 19, 1894.

GREGORY—Sister J. A. E. Gregory died at her home in South Mills, Camden county, N. C., on January 7th. Sister Gregory joined the Baptist church about fifty-nine years ago. If she had lived eight days longer she would have been seventy-eight years old. She rests from her labors and her works do follow her.

R. R. O.

WILKIE—Mrs. L. E. Wilkie, widow of H. J. Wilkie and daughter of Rev. G. J. Wilkie, died at the home of her son-in-law, A. Shell, in Hickory, N. C., Dec. 18th, 1893. Sister Wilkie was for many years a faithful and consistent member of the Baptist church. One more is added to the number of whom it may be said, "These all died in faith."

PASTOR.

FLORA—Dennis Flora, aged nineteen years, departed this life at his home, of heart trouble, January 5th, 1894. He professed religion and joined the Baptist church at Shady Grove in the fourteenth year of his age, and lived a consistent life ever since. Very bright is the evidence left us that he is now among the redeemed in glory. The Lord sustain and comfort the bereaved mother.

E. F. HUMPHREYS.

BROWNE—Departed this life at her home, near Roxobel, Bertie county, Nov. 18th, 1893, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Browne, in the ninety-fifth year of her age. She survived her husband, Joshua Browne, thirty-seven years. She was a consistent member of Sandy Run Baptist church for many years. She was remarkably active for one of her age until within a few years of her death.

In March, 1893, she had a fall from which she never recovered. She gradually grew weaker every day, until her life, as a light, simply went out. Her funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. A. Cree, in the presence of a large crowd of friends and relatives.

We cannot grieve for dear grandma as one who had no hope. We know she has gone to rest.

GRANDDAUGHTER.

GOODWIN—At Elizabeth City, N. C., Jan. 16th, 1894, Minnie Cherry Goodwin, the beloved wife of Z. E. Goodwin, in the thirty-fifth year of her age. Sister Goodwin was the daughter of the late James Bonner, of sainted memory in Chowan county. She confessed Christ and joined the church when quite young, and has ever been a most consistent member. Her name was not simply on the church-book, her heart was with Christ. She loved God's people, and all who knew her loved her. She and her husband have made many real sacrifices for the church here during the last few years. We all feel her loss deeply, but her devoted husband is bereft indeed. She has left three lovely little boys, for whom her last conscious moments were spent in prayer. May the God of the motherless and orphans watch over them and guide them. Bro. Josiah Elliott and the writer officiated at the funeral.

C. S. BLACKWELL.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, An Allwise Providence has seen fit to remove by death our sister Mary Smaw, who was a member of our Woman's Missionary Society, therefore Resolved 1. That in the death of Sister Smaw this Society recognizes the loss of a valuable member, a Christian who was quiet in life, humble in spirit, consistent in conduct and faithful in Christian work.

Resolved 2. That while we realize our loss, we bow with Christian submission to the will of him who doeth all things well. We mourn but do not murmur, believing as we do that our loss means gain to our departed sister.

Resolved 3. That our sincere and heartfelt sympathies be extended to the bereaved family; and further, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family, and also published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Newbern Journal.

Plant Wood's Seeds.

The best vegetables come from the South, and the best vegetable growers there are planters of Wood's Seeds.

They are unequaled in quality, and will grow North, South, East or West—wherever they are planted. Wood's Seed Book for 1894 is a complete history of current progress in planting. It helps you to select the best things to plant and tells you how and when to plant them. Write for it, and current prices of Garden, Flower or other Field Seeds required.

Let us Give Thanks.

For all that God in mercy sends:
For health and children, home and friends,
For comfort in the time of need,
For every kindly word and deed,
For happy thoughts and holy talk,
For guidance in our daily walk—
For everything give thanks!

For beauty in this world of ours:
For verdant grass and lovely flowers,
For song of birds, for hum of bees,
For the refreshing summer breeze,
For hill and plain, for streams and wood
For the great ocean's mighty flood—
In everything give thanks!

For the sweet sleep which comes with night,
For the returning morning's light,
For the bright sun that shines on high,
For the stars glittering in the sky;
For these and everything we see,
O Lord! our hearts we lift to thee—
For everything give thanks!

Did it Serve Her Right?

A FASHIONABLE WOMAN DRIVEN TO FLIGHT BY JUVENILE INQUISITIVENESS.

Her hat was a regular stunner and no mistake. It looked something like a miniature tropical garden, but nature never produced anything half so gorgeous. A couple of artificial butterflies, whose wings presented a dazzling assortment of colors, were poised upon invisible wires over two imitation orchids. They were obviously designed to supply the crowning touch of realism. When she entered the "L" car she knew that that hat would create a sensation. There were plenty of vacant seats around, but she walked nearly the whole length of the car before taking one, and when she sat down it was with the proud consciousness that all eyes were fixed upon her—or rather upon her hat.

But nobody stared at that hat half as hard as a bright, chubby little youngster, who was sitting alongside of his mother, right opposite the owner of the triumph of millinery.

"Oh, mamma, mamma!" exclaimed the little fellow gleefully, "I see two butterflies on that lady's hat."

"Hush, hush, Willie," said the mother; "you mustn't make remarks."

But Willie was at that age when the mind refuses to be satisfied with domestic assertions, and demands reasons.

"Why must I hush? Will the butterflies hear me and fly away?"

The people in Willie's immediate vicinity began to snicker, and the proprietor of the hat began to look uncomfortable.

"Willie, you must be quiet," said the mother; and then, with the view of allaying his curiosity, she added, "The butterflies ain't alive."

"Did she stick pins through them and kill them?"

"Hush—no; they are made up butterflies."

Willie meditated upon this for a minute, and then, to the intense delight of everybody within earshot, excepting of course, his mother and the proprietor of the wondrous hat, he broke out afresh.

"Did you ever see any live butterflies like those butterflies, mamma? I never did!"

"Do be quiet; don't ask foolish questions."

But Willie was not to be suppressed in that fashion.

"Mamma, why is it that other ladies don't put butterflies in their hat?"

"I don't know. Do be quiet."

"Mamma, if you put butterflies on your hat, would you put butterflies on your hat like that?"

By this time the snicker had developed into an audible titter, and threatened to become a downright laugh soon.

The conductor suddenly opened the door and shouted out something that sounded like "Dronthonth Street!"

Whatever the street might be, it seemed suddenly to occur to the proprietor of the hat that it was the street she wanted, and she rushed precipitately out of the car, her undignified exit contrasting strangely with her stately entrance a few minutes before.

And what do you think I overheard the woman who sat next to me say?—

"It just serves her right!"

Why it served her right I don't pretend to know."—New York Herald.

Keep a Clean Mouth.

A distinguished author says, "I resolved, when I was a child, never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother." He kept his resolution, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar words and expressions, which are never heard in respectable circles. Of course we cannot think of girls as being so much exposed to this peril. We cannot imagine a decent girl using words she would not utter before her father and mother.

Such vulgarity is thought by some boys to be "smart," the "next thing to swearing," and yet, "not so wicked;" but it is a habit which leads to profanity, and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

Young readers, keep your mouths free from all impurity, and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this, ask Jesus to cleanse your heart, and keep it clean, for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.—The Christian.

Perfect Faith.

A street boy in London had both his legs broken by a dray passing over them. He was laid in one of the beds of the hospital to die; and another little creature of the same class was laid near by, picked up sick with the famine fever. The latter was allowed to lie down by the side of the little crushed boy. He crept up to him and said:

"Bobby, did you ever hear about Jesus?"

"No, I never heard of him."

"Bobby, I went to mission school once, and they told us that Jesus would take you to heaven when you die, and you'd never hunger any more, and no more pain, if you axed him."

"I couldn' ax such a great big gentleman as he is to do anything for me. He would not stop to speak to a boy like me."

"But he'll do all that, if you ax him."

"How can I ax him, if I don't know where he lives? and how could I get there with both legs broke?"

"Bobby, they told me at the mission school as how Jesus passed by. The teacher said that he goes around. How do you know but what he might come to this hospital this very night? You'd know him if you was to see him."

"But I can't keep my eyes open. My legs feel so awful bad! Doctor says I'll die."

"Bobby, hold up your hand, and he'll know what you want when he passes by."

They got the hand up; it dropped. They tried it again; it slowly fell back. Three times he got up the little hand, only to let it fall. Bursting into tears, he said, "I give it up."

"Bobby, lend me your hand. Put yer elbow on my pillar; I can do without it."

So his hand was propped up. When they came in the morning the boy lay dead, his hand still held up for Jesus.

You may search the word, and you cannot find a grander illustration of simple trust than that of the little boy who had been to a mission school but once.—John B. Gough.

Thorns.

Every one has a thorn sticking him. The housekeeper finds it in unfaithful domestics, or in an inmate who keeps things disorderly, or in a house too small for convenience, or too large to keep clean. The professional man finds it in perpetual interruption, or in calls for "more copy." The Sabbath school teacher finds it in inattentive scholars, or in neighboring teachers who talk loud and make a great noise in giving a little instruction.

One man has a rheumatic joint, which when the wind is in the Northwest lifts a storm signal. Another has a business partner who takes full half the profits but does not help to earn them. The trials are the more nettlesome because, like Paul's thorn, they are not to be mentioned. Men get sympathy for broken bones and mashed feet, but not for the ends of thorns which have been broken off in the fingers.

Let us start out with the idea that we must have annoyances. It seems to take a certain number of them to keep us humble, wakeful and prayerful. To Paul the thorn was as disciplinary as the shipwreck. If it is not one thing, it is another. If the stove does not smoke, the boiler must leak. If the pen is good, the ink must be poor. If the editorial column be able, there must be a typographical blunder. If the thorn does not pierce the knee, it must take you in the back. Life must have sharp things in it. We cannot make up our robe of Christian character without pin and needles.

We want what Paul got—grace to bear these things. Without it we become cross, censorious and irascible. We get into the habit of sticking out thorns into other people's fingers. But, God helping us, we place these annoyances in the category of the "all things that work together for good." We see how much shorter these thorns are than the spikes which struck through the palms of Christ's hands; and remembering that he had on his head a whole crown of thorns, we take to ourselves the consolation that if we suffer with him on earth, we shall be glorified with him in heaven.—Christian Herald.

Dr. Henson on Evolution.

Dr. P. S. Henson makes his wit serve him in puncturing holes in various sophistries. He does not like Prof. Drummond's evolution ideas, and he likes to give them a ludicrous turn, as witness the following:

"There is one consolation in it. If the theory be true, this evolution, of course, is going right on, and in course of time there will be a race as far superior to Prof. Drummond as Prof. Drummond is to a monkey now; and when that time comes the wise men of that future race will go out and capture such men as Prof. Drummond and his advocates and put them in cages and poke them with sticks and feed them peanuts and chestnuts."

The paper says: "Prof. Drummond collected a great number of observations showing extraordinary prehensile strength of new-born babes, from which fact he concluded that it was reasonable to postulate an ataviatic tendency traceable only to simian ancestors. Think how absurd that is! A new-born babe grips a thing firmly. So does a monkey. Ergo, a new born babe is a monkey. But so does a spider. Ergo, also, a new-born babe is a spider. One is as reasonable as the other."—Christian Herald.

If we wait until we have more than we want before beginning to give, we shall die without giving. But if we give out of our scanty proportion to those whose need is greater than ours, we shall live as givers, and shall enjoy living. The man who only gives from his surplus, never knows the real joy of giving.—S. S. Times.

SEDENTARY CALLINGS at sometime or other bring on a torpid liver. This condition is common to an indoor life; then there follows another condition, anæmia or lack of blood; frequently another worse effect—that of dyspepsia. These conditions aggravate one another. Your bad temper is likewise aggravating to your friends. No need to go further, the rest is easy. If you buy a vial of Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets you'll find them a natural remedy. Mild but effectual. They have a strengthening effect upon the lining membranes of stomach and bowels, hence their effect is lasting. They cure Constipation, Indigestion, Jaundice, Biliousness and Sick or Bilious Headaches, permanently; because they act naturally.

The best medical testimony proves that these cases are best treated by mild methods. One tiny, sugar-coated, Pellet is a corrector, a regulator, and a gentle laxative. They are put up in glass vials, easily carried and always fresh. They are guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money is returned.

IT HAS been well said that it is not prudent to be over hasty in judgment. The wise man admits no prejudices into his considerations. What we think is grossly wrong may be right after all; there is more than one opinion of all actions, but only one can be right; some one must be wrong. Hence in all matters, and we have especial reference to matters political just now, calmness and carefulness in reaching conclusions, and the exercise of broad charity toward those whose opinions are at variance with ours, may save us many a regretful pang.

The administration of affairs by the party for which North Carolina and the South gave their votes has not been pleasing to but few of the voters. In the beginning the South, having been deprived of its share of Federal patronage for years and years, had great hopes that it would be recognized by the party which it had sustained for decades; but its hopes seem vain. Yet there is no reason to complain, although it may seem otherwise. We have no right to complain of one who stands for the abolition of the "spoils system," however inimical to our personal interest it may seem. Again, the South was disappointed by the action of the Congress in regard to silver. But disappointment should not interfere with our equanimity. Congress labored between two opinions, and it decided to demonstrate the worth of that opinion opposite to ours. Can we not wait a reasonable time before we condemn that opinion? It is on trial; and if it fails, the worth of our opinion will have an opportunity of demonstration as surely as another election is held. How much better it is that our opinion is not on its final test, and that all barriers may be removed before that test comes; that if disaster follows the present legislation, we may rightly hold ourselves irresponsible. There were two opinions; one or the other was right; and one or the other had to be demonstrated first. If we are wrong, so much the better; if we were right, and the leading financiers and economists were wrong, we shall have the glory—true, at great cost—and the victory in the end. Three years will tell, and then we may act accordingly. Meanwhile, let prejudice, partisanship, and passion, be put away, and in their stead enthrone reason, patience, charity, and do what is in our power to make times easier.

A RECENT article in the Forum by the Librarian of Congress brings out some interesting facts. In these latter years the method of reaching the public mind has taken a decided turn. At one time our leaders in thought communicated with us through books. Every man of learning would set forth his views of a particular subject at great length, and depend on the eagerness of the race for books to recompense him. But there are too many books now. One knows not which to select, so many are excellent, and he cannot afford to buy all, nor has one the time to read all. The newspaper and the magazine have supplanted books. The modern press syndicate gathers the best thought of the land in short articles and distributes it so widely that its original cost is unfelt by the reader. An author may charge a thousand dollars for a short article, but when it is distributed to one thousand newspapers, its cost is insignificant. Of course this plan is not feasible with regard to the religious press just yet; there are not sufficient religious papers of any kind. But that it will some day be accepted was recently evinced by the efforts of a syndicate, which had gathered excellent articles from most prominent writers on religion and sociology, and which offered these articles at a very low price. The trouble is now that one has to buy so much that he doesn't desire. Of course, in the case of the daily press it is different.

Another tendency is the turn toward special fields that magazines and reviews have taken. "The recent increase of periodicals devoted wholly or mainly to literature has been phenomenal. In 1883 there were published in the United States 428 reviews, magazines, and other periodicals of this class; in 1893 there were no less than 1,051. Still greater has been the increase of periodicals devoted to science, invention, transportation and the technical arts, this class numbering 146 ten years ago, to-day 611." The tendency of all human application is to specialism. More than one subject, or one phase of a subject, is too broad for the limits of one periodical. Every direction of human activities is held separate and independent, and has its especial and unhampered organ. None of us can hope to keep pace with the progress of them all; yet with the aid of the daily paper, and a certain class of reviews and magazines, sufficient can be done to keep us well informed generally, and this much should be done by every one who is able. We live in an age of intense desire for knowledge, and we thank God that the means of satiating that desire grow more abundant, and come nearer to the poor man year by year. When every citizen has the time, the opportunity and the means of acquainting himself with the progress of the world in its more important fields, then we may expect a broader, higher civilization.

SIR WILLIAM DRAPER, replying to the celebrated letters of Junius in regard to the administration of English affairs in the beginning of the latter half of the Eighteenth century, took occasion to say that "disappointed ambition, resentment for defeated hopes, and desire of revenge, assume but too often the appearance of public spirit." That charge is as true to-day as it was then. Few public spirited men are critics, fewer still give vent to their criticisms publicly, and yet still are personal in criticism. We know of but one man of this generation who was in active public life, and whose position demanded that his sentiments be given to the public, that showed an entire disregard of self-interest and personal motives in all his actions—Henry Grady. And he was never a critic. His ambition was to better the South, but he did not set about it by disparaging the North. If eloquence and logic would not inspire his hearers, he was too public-spirited to resort to abuse. How different are the men in public life to-day! The politician harangues his hearers with abuse of the opposing party; his effort is to excite discontent, that a change may be made whereby he may obtain office. He may not be a candidate, but if his party is victorious he raises the cry of ingratitude if he is not given an office. The public weal does not enter into consideration. Such also is the aim of many a newspaper writer; they abuse because certain men like to feel that they are oppressed, and are satisfied only with discontent. They are paid well for calling the people's representatives scoundrels, and they are afraid of starvation, if they cease their defamations. It has been said that "no man can be a gentleman and a politician." Even though one's character were spotless, a public office surrounds him with treacherous enemies. He is looked upon with suspicion, even if actual charges are not made. But at the same time these defamers claim that all their efforts are in the interest of the public; that they are the people's faithful guardians, and that all dishonesty that is known to them shall be exposed. They are devoting their energies in the name of public spirit to the defamation of the character of those, who, of all men, should be treated with respect for public spirit's sake. It can be safely asserted that such men are of the class to which Lord Draper referred, or are making their living by their accusations. Dishonesty should be exposed, and virtue taken as a matter of course in all things. But political parties should not attempt to gain victories by proving either personally. The man of true public spirit will contend for principals, and will contend logically. Moreover, it may be said that he who makes a profession of exposing character is prompted by personal motives.

IN THE rejection by the Senate of the President's nomination of Hon. Wm. B. Hornblower for Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, some facts were brought out which, though heretofore apparent, were not publicly acknowledged. Senator Hill, who led the opposition, confessed that his chief motive for opposing the nomination was that he and his colleague had not been consulted in regard to the appointment, and called on the Senate to remind the President that he was not to nominate officers without the approval of some Senators. He, too, claimed to be acting in the name of public spirit—"senatorial prerogative," it was called. However this matter of "senatorial prerogative" may be, and however just Senator Hill's opposition may be, we do not perceive under what law the Senate has a right to expect the President to consult any one in making his appointments. And we believe, rather than be expected to consult Senators, he should not be permitted to give undue consideration to any recommendation they may make.

We do not know how long it has been customary for Senators and Representatives to serve their constituents by getting offices for them; we do know that this occupation is now one of their permanent functions, and we have the late opposition of Senator Hill in testimony that they value it very highly; and we believe that the custom gives rise to contingencies, which should be avoided. Congress is our legislative body, and has no prerogative except in law-making. It should have nothing to do with appointments, beyond confirming and rejecting, as it thinks proper. This applies equally to the body and the individuals. If this were the custom, the suspicion which has given form to the charge that the President buys votes for his measures with patronage—an aspersion on both President and Congress—could not exist; Senators would not have to resent the charge of "office-brokerage;" Congressmen could give more attention to their duties; would make no enemies by refusing to give influence to any one's application; and better men would hold public offices. The lawmakers should be as free from the influence of the Executive as possible, and to this end they should not be under any obligations to him. Let them make and revise laws—no more, no less, than they were elected to do,—and in the name of all that is good, let them be separate from and independent of the Executive, and we may be sure the Executive will hold himself independent of the legislators.

What To Do in Hard Times.

A sermon preached in the First Baptist Church, New Brunswick, New Jersey, Sunday, Jan. 14th, 1894, by Rev. M. V. McDuffie.

Text—John 6: 9—"There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes; but what are they among so many?"

It was an anxious time in the life of five thousand people. They were in a desert place—many of them from home. They were all hungry. The food supply was very scant, and is always so when there is destitution among the people. The true worshippers of God, Christ and his disciples were asking, what should be done? One said, "There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes; but what are they so among so many?" Then it was that our Saviour gave an object lesson. He first took steps to prevent confusion and a panic of fear. He had the people to sit down. Then he brought to bear upon their minds the subduing and comforting influences of religious worship. He took the loaves and fishes, and lifting his heart in adoration and prayer, he gave thanks—doubtless thanking God that the people had something still to eat, even though it was but five barley loaves and two small fishes. Then he called to him his own immediate disciples and commissioned them to distribute the loaves and fishes among the needy people. When this had been done, he gave commandment to gather up the fragments that nothing might be lost.

We may get some suggestions from this narrative that will assist us in determining what to do in hard times. We seem to have fallen upon hard times. There is verily something like a panic in the North and in the South, in the East and in the West. It is said that in 119 cities of this country to-day there are more than 800,000 people out of employment. The factories are closed. The wheels of industry are stopped. Commerce seems paralyzed. The hearts of men are failing with fear. Many are asking, what shall we do? The saddest sight I have ever witnessed in the North I witnessed last week as I went through the different streets visiting among the people. I saw many strong, well, able bodied men sitting idle in their homes. They were out of work. They were distressed. The weather was cold. Many needed coal; others bread; all needed money. They had sad hearts. They said, "Times are hard, and we fear the worst is not yet."

It is no time to theorize as to the cause of the present stringency in the money market and paralysis of business. As to that, there are different opinions among us. Perhaps some of us know the exact cause. There are different theories as to the cause on the ebb and flow of the tides of trade and of the tides of the ocean. Doubtless all are subject to some law, either known or unknown, and I am persuaded that the hand of God is in all these things, and for our good. It is said that during the late war at one time the colored people along with Grant became very despondent and fearful as to the results of the war, when one old colored man approached Grant and said, "General, how is tings goin'?" The reply was, "Everything is going all right." At once their despondency gave place to joy and enthusiasm. If you should go to your commander in these dark days, and ask him how everything is going, he would say, "Everything is going all right." "All things work together for good to them that love God." So if you ask me what to do in hard times, I answer—

First, have faith in God. Have faith in God for two reasons: first, as a preventative of despondency, gloom, insanity and other mental disorders that are common in hard times. Secondly, have faith in God because he is able to do for us exceedingly abundantly above all we may ask or think. God is the Pilot at the helm of the old ship of State. All signs point to the conclusion that God has large plans concerning the people and government of America. He will not suffer this nation to go to destruction if we faithfully serve him and pray as he directs us to pray for kings, presidents, governors, and all who are in authority. The leading thinkers of the age have thought that right here in America is to be fought the decisive battles of the world; that right here on American soil is to be developed the government which shall be a model for the governments of all nations for all time. At the close of the late war the heads of authority in Washington stamped upon our national coin the legend, "In God we trust." Let us not repudiate the declaration. Our faith is being tested. And I implore you "cast not away your confidence in God which hath great recompense of reward." To do this at such a time as this, would be as unwise as it would be in a sailor in a storm to cast overboard his chart and compass—as unwise as it would be in a soldier in battle to lay aside his armor and stand defenceless and exposed to the worst that comes. We seem, indeed, to be approaching a crisis in the affairs of the government. And I am reminded of the judgment expressed by all the great generals that have ever lived from the days of Julius Cæsar down to the days of Grant and Robert E. Lee. They have said that in every decisive battle there is a moment of crisis by which the fortunes of the day turn. The commander who seizes the ridge of destiny wins the victory. The pending tariff bill is the ridge of destiny to to us now. When England's enemies were once defeated through a storm at sea, England issued a medal with this inscription, "God blew upon them, and they were scattered." Let us have faith in God and pray that if the proposed changes will not be for the general good of the people, that he will blow upon them that they may be scattered. Have faith in God. Make a close alliance with the King of kings and secure his aid. Then,

Second, have patience with men—even with the present administration. The questions now under consideration have surely been much discussed, and the time has come for talk to cease, that changes may be made. If you call a physician, and the first effect of his medicine is to relax your system and prostrate your strength, you do not for that reason dismiss him. You exercise a little patience. You give his medicine time to effect radical changes in your system that you may be delivered from evils that may long have afflicted you and your family. Let us have faith in God and patience with men.

Third, husband your resources. Do not suffer anything in your home or premises to go to waste. Utilize everything and gather up the fragments. Jewelers preserve the dust of their shops because even the dust has in it something of the precious metal. The makers of telescopes use even grains of sand to good purpose. It is said that the American people waste every year more than enough to support another nation as great and as large as this one. Husband your resources. Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost.

Fourth, cut off luxuries. We have all indulged ourselves in some luxuries. Many men use tobacco, beer, wine, liquor. They regard these as luxuries, and like the Israelites who, while the quails were between their teeth, murmur at the providence of God. This applies to the rich as well as to the poor. The rich, in times like these, have no moral right to live upon luxuries. Men, women and children are shivering in the cold and crying for bread. Will you think no more of the cry of your suffering fellowmen than you would of the lowing of so many oxen in the streets?

Fifth, be mindful of the necessities of others. In hard times some actually prey upon the helplessness of their suffering fellowmen. They take advantage of their circumstances to drive hard bargains, foreclose mortgages, reduce wages, charge exorbitant interest, &c. They come upon the helpless as wolves from the forest come upon a lame deer, to drink the very life blood. Be mindful of others. Give the poor work. Draw upon the surplus accumulated by you in years of plenty. Woe be unto the rich who, in times such as these, tighten their purse strings and persuade themselves that there is no call of God's providence to them to give alms, provide bags that wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that never faileth. If you are poor yourself, be mindful of the necessities of others.

"Is the cruse of comfort failing,
Rise and share it with a friend;
And through all the days of famine
It shall serve thee to the end."

Sixth, seek sanctification of spirit. If you study the history of hard times, you will see that such times are favorable for the development of piety. It is said that in this country to day, 30,000,000 people have become estrtanged from the church and religion of God. In all our cities they hold labor meetings on the Lord's day and ridicule the church and name of God. This day of adversity may be intended to bring them to their senses—that they may see that the church is the best friend the poor of this world have. This day of adversity may lead the poor to see that all their help must come from God. The church that has understanding of the times will fulfil a great mission in a time like this, and by noble charity and sound teaching win back the thousands and millions of the industrial classes who like sheep have gone astray.

Seventh, in hard times, be loyal to God. Some will cut off all gifts from the church and from mission and benevolent societies at the very first signs of approaching hard times. It is poor economy. See the case of the widow of Zarephath and the multiplied meal and oil. Be loyal to God. "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," and in the day of famine you shall be satisfied.

Eighth, lastly, take short views of life. Do not attempt to look or plan too far ahead. Live to day. Do not borrow trouble. You may not need as much as you may opine. You may need only a shroud, a coffin, and a grave. "Be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the son of man cometh." "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing."

Some Phenomenal Blunders.

It is not easy to make proverbs which shall be both popular and true. Sundry American humorists have attempted the task; but I can recall only two that achieved any marked success. "Poor Richard" (Dr. Benjamin Franklin) attracted considerable attention in his day; but few of his proverbs seem now a-days to be generally remembered; and some of them were by no means to be commended for their moral tone and tendency.

"Josh Billings" is, upon the whole, the best proverbial philosopher that America has produced; and so far as my knowledge extends he may fairly be called the wholesomest of American humorists.

The popular proverb is, indeed, so generally vulnerable, either from the moral or from the intellectual side, and not unfrequently from all sides, that our canonical book, commonly called the proverbs of Solomon, remains a standing monument to the wonderful wisdom of the several authors of that very extraordinary compilation.

That average people, in making, or in adopting, their proverbs, should frequently blunder into absurdities, is no matter of wonder. But that men of ability and learning—men whose business is to instruct the public—men whose fame is spread over the world—should blunder as absurdly as does the most illiterate clown—this is a phenomenon that calls for explanation.

When a noted Baltimore daily, in "writing up" Mr. Spurgeon, told us that "he dispensed with all arguments on religious questions;" that "he believed that unless you are baptized you will be damned," there is nothing very wonderful in the case. Editors of daily papers are not expected to be acquainted with the score or two of volumes which Mr. Spurgeon published—most of them full of "arguments on religious questions,"—nor do we expect the average editor to know that a Baptist preacher cannot baptize any one who does not profess to be already saved.

Still, these editorial blunders recalled the story of a certain publisher, who, anxious to rival "Robert Elsmere," called upon a certain author with the request that the said author should write a religious novel. "I know almost nothing about the different phases of religious belief," said the author. "I can't tell a Unitarian from a Democrat. I know that the Methodists contend for close communion, and that the Baptists believe in infant baptism." "Oh, that is enough for you to know," rejoined the publisher. "You will do. Go to work on the novel."

Again: When one of our dailies gravely informed us that Mr. Spurgeon died "at Merton's, in Italy, I presume that nobody searched the map of Italy to learn where Merton's was. Most reading people knew that Mentone had, for many years, been Mr. Spurgeon's place of resort; and nobody who had any inkling of the Italian language ever imagined that "Merton's" could be Italian.

Mr. Gladstone, however, is a very different man from the editor of the average daily. He is a great man, a man of real learning, nay, a man of uncommon scholarship. And yet, in his book on Church and State, having occasion to quote the words, "My kingdom is not of this world," he makes Jesus utter them as a reproof to Peter, who had drawn a sword and cut off Malchus's ear! In John 18: 36 we learn that these memorable words of our Lord were spoken to Pontius Pilate.

Some years ago a distinguished United States Senator from Alabama was sojourning in my home at Orange C. H., Va. He was a man of refinement and culture. He represented a State in which the Baptists were especially strong in men of mark—Shorter, J. L. M. Curry, Watts, Porter, King, Harralson, and others. Learning that our family were Baptists, this highly cultivated statesman said, "Well, there is a branch of that people who are called Free-Baptists; do you belong to that branch?"

When a mulatto barber from Boston had been elected to the South Carolina Legislature in the days of "reconstruction," we are told that he made a flaming and highly rhetorical speech, to which Uncle Cudjo, a plain corn-field negro, replied thus: "Mr. Speaker, de gemman from Boston he tell us a heap 'bout de Merican eagle. But de ole South Kliny tukkey buzzard is jes as good a bird as de eagle any day. An' Mr. Speaker, I listen to de gemman, sir, from de beginnin' to de eend, and I never did hear no speech what was so superficient and ondigestible."

PRACTICAL DENOMINATIONALISM.

Many and various and distressful have been the out cries of the more 'liberal' representatives of the different sects of the Christian religion against "denominationalism" in the last few years. Catholic and Protestant alike have joined in the crusade against the barriers between the tribes of the children of God. The effort is for a "more liberal Christianity, a broader spirit, and more charitable feeling" between the denominations, in words; but what it means in actuality can hardly be anticipated. They say that the present conditions are contrary to the will of God and the example of Christ, and cannot but greatly hinder the progress of Christianity; that agencies are in discord where, in harmony, great progress would be made; that there is a rivalry among churches that is destroying their usefulness. These are the charges; they have been declared in pulpit and press; and they found a worthy harbinger in that colossal farce of liberal religion—the Parliament of Religions.

It is evident that during the actual ministry of Jesus there was but one sect of Christians; Christ their leader, interpreter and teacher. Were he now here in the flesh there would be but one sect; but men are imperfect and unlike physically, mentally and spiritually; hence the present differences; they are a consequence of and a testimony to human imperfection. Thus the facts that all were once one, and all will be one again, are not reasons for exercising looseness of belief now. It is a reason for the exercise of charity to those who differ from us, and for efforts to keep all Christians in good will and good spirit. But this does not interfere with practical denominationalism; in truth, it is a part of it.

We have used the word "practical" here because regard should be had for practicability in all things. Practical religion, practical Christianity, are the world's great needs; and practical religion means to a church member practical denominationalism. It is wrong, it shows a jealous spirit, to ridicule the faults of those who differ from us; it is wrong to have other than friendly relations toward the members of any church which we have reason to believe is serving God as well as it can and interpreting the Scriptures in sincerity. But with these allowances, there is no need for a "broader doctrine," or less intense church love. We may need practicability in our religion, but we must preserve at all hazard the thoroughness of our tenets and the strength of our principles. And right here the Baptists are thought to be particularly strong; they are even called stubborn for the steadfastness with which they maintain their views. We are told we attach too great importance to non-essentials. We thank God we cannot see that our ordinances are non essentials; and we trust that the day will not come when we recognize any non essentials in our religion. But while we maintain the principles as they appear to us, there is no reason why we should despise or dislike the Christian who in all sincerity holds different views from ours. We may respect him, and not alter our beliefs one iota.

The present idea of a common ground between all denominations, disregarding all those things which cause differences, will destroy Christianity. We believe a Baptist should be a Baptist, and being one, should stand up for everything that he believes. His children should be reared in denominationalism, because reared otherwise they will lose respect for Christianity. If we are taught that one thing is unessential, and teach our children so, they will probably come to the conclusion that something else is unessential, and before we know it, will be relying on nothing for salvation. There is nothing in the Bible that is unessential to Christianity. True, we may go to heaven without knowing all the Bible, but no one denies we would have been better on earth for having known it. The New Testament is our rule of life, and the more we know of it, the greater the strength of our belief in every verse in it, the better will be our life. On the other hand, disregard for troublesome points—causes of denominational differences—will lead to disrespect. For this reason it is necessary that we be intensely, though practically, denominational. For this reason these religiously-accommodating inter-church societies and conventions are [illegible]; they lead to looseness, too much [illegible], to disregard.

[illegible] call denominationalism "the [illegible]" but we believe that had it not been for denominationalism Christ's cause would not be as strong as it is. It can be carried so far as to injure the cause just as anything else can be carried too far. If we consider those who differ from us insincere, and attempt to ridicule them, then we lose that Christianity of which charity is one of the cardinal principles. But we may maintain our beliefs, and contend earnestly and Christianly for them with charity for others. Talk with a member of another church, let him understand your ideas, and you his, but don't think less of him because his conscience directs him to keep within his church. An honest difference of views is no ground for ill feelings. This is all the liberality that need be exercised. A denomination cannot be too strong in the devotion of its individuals; it needs strength in well-defined principles to maintain itself against sin; and on common ground that strength is impaired. It is well to be charitable; but it is also well to be thorough, strong and faithful, knowing what you believe, and maintaining it with all your might, though the barriers be ever so troublesome to the "more liberal;" for, when the barriers are broken down by compromise of sincere belief, Satan's way is just that much easier.

WOMAN'S WORK.

The RECORDER'S position in regard to Paul and the women and the churches is too well known to require words here. We have not changed from our position taken years ago, taught us from the beginning of our active career, but we have never been unappreciative of the good work done through our sisters. The work done by our Woman's Missionary Society in the year just closed is a noble testimony to what woman can do in a field that was once considered largely man's, and also a testimony to what may be done in that silence which Paul enjoined.

All mankind is ambitious, and the feminine half is not an exception. Which of us dislikes to adorn a high place? In other times, it is true, the high place for woman was the home, and never will she find a higher; but in these latter years her fields have multiplied so rapidly, and she has so ably and thoroughly demonstrated her usefulness in them, that amazed man has given way to her. Almost before we knew it, women doctors, lawyers, editors, appeared here and there, and now they are in all fields. Of course this is carrying matters too far, and a revulsion will follow. But we are glad that women have demonstrated their independence and ability, and have shown that they are as worthy of higher education as young men; but there are dangers in broadening her field. We are perfectly willing to admit the superiority of women, if they will confine themselves to their God-given spheres; but outside of them, whether superior or not, we do not care to recognize her. They are adapted to many occupations, but some, which they now try to fill, were best adapted to men. Let her be prudent, that she may command reverence and respect not afforded men.

But with all these dangers, woman has many duties in the service of the Lord, far higher than any human duties, in which her natural fitness will easily demonstrate her superiority. They know their duty to their children in the name of Jesus; they cannot know it too well, no more than they can perform it too well. But their duty in the churches is often neglected, and we are glad they are beginning to take a more active part in all church work. Women's missionary societies have long been institutions in this State, but not until recent years have they attained prominence in our denomination. Yet in this time they have demonstrated their great powers, and have not been in a position to excite opposition from any quarter. At the Convention Bro. Willingham especially commended the work of our North Carolina sisters; and they deserved it, and should be encouraged to press onward.

But there are other fields for her labor, and they are right at home. In the church, missionary work may be done with great effect. There are the sick and the weary and the poor, the disconsolate and the heart-sick; and none can so effectively bring consolation in such troubles as a Christian woman. She, too, may have no little influence in making a pastor's life easier. In fact, woman can influence the entire church for good, and she should do it; she could not do half so much with sermonizing as she can do in actions.

WE have indulged many of our delinquent subscribers some time, with the hope that they would remit their dues and renewals within the first month of the New Year. Many have not been heard from, and we hope they will spare us the trouble and expense of sending them personal reminders, by letting us hear from them as soon as possible. The date on the label of your paper shows when your subscription expired.

THE present tendency of Christians to neglect Christianity for the sake of politics is traceable to man's desire for controversy. If our religion had as many assailable points in it as politics, it would be the subject of many a discussion between men who now regard it as something uninteresting. If the Bible were studied more, it might not give rise to much disputation, but there would be more conversations about Christianity, and there would be more and better Christians. Let us change our habits; it is well to talk politics, but there is such a thing as overdoing the matter. Study the Bible more, enable yourself to look at politics from a Christian standpoint, and your life and your politics will be better for it.

THE following statement from a leading review is a testimony to the necessity of our Board of Education:

"While educational institutions and everything else have advanced with prodigious strides, the number of properly trained clergymen has remained stationary. In 1870 there were about 43 000 ordained ministers of religion in the United States; in 1880, 64,000: and yet there were no more trained men among the 64,000 than there were among the 43 000. There has been a slight improvement during the last ten years, but nothing in proportion to the increase of population."

This is a startling statement, but we have the figures as quoted from the report of the Commissioner of Education. Of all men the preacher should keep up with the age; he needs education, and must have it. The way to improve the appearance of these figures is to help the Board of Education of Wake Forest College. If North Carolina Baptists do their duty, we have no doubt others will look to theirs.

IT is only natural that in this day of new things, a new religion should be started. We have something really interesting in Theosophy, which first came into prominence a few years ago. It has some characteristic features that do not yet obtain in other religions. It believes in spirits—spirits all around us,—and the apostles of Theosophy "call them up" at will. It cures all ills by the consoling philosophy that all ills are imaginary. It does most anything through its unseen spirits; the miracles of the New Testament are overshadowed by the wonders which it works; but it happens that they never bear close inspection. The leaders of Theosophy are women, most of whom make their living by giving performances at high prices. The strange part about it is that any one will pay any price to witness their second class sleight of hand affairs. But the world is easily fooled, and converts can be made to anything.

DR. J. W. CARTER struck the key-note of many a church trouble—or situation, as some choose to call it—when he said too many of us wish to play "first fiddle," when we were made to play second. It is the old dispute that would have disrupted the ties that bound the disciples together, had not the Saviour intervened, when they disputed over who was to be first in the kingdom—that vain earthly kingdom they imagined was coming. It is not a question with the true Christian as to the station of his service, but as to the quality and the quantity of it. The second fiddle is as necessary as the first, and the brother or sister who consents to labor under the direction of another may do just as much and as good work for the Lord as any one. Some of us were made to be second, and we are glad of it. With all masters and no workers, the kingdom would be very long in coming. Let us aspire to the humbler place, and fill that well, and Christ will be the only First. We may be sure when Christians contend with one another about the first place, they have worldliness in view.

REV. E. M. POTEAT'S article—"The Minister"—in the February number of the Wake Forest Student is worthy of more than passing mention. He says that whereas in apostolic times the work of the ministry was divided among several classes of workers, viz., evangelists, apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, the minister of to-day is at once all these; and, moreover, he must be. With this statement as a premise, he proceeds to outline the fields of the minister's preparation, and the methods: first, what he himself must be; second, his education; and he well says here: "Whatever else the minister knows, or does not know, he must know his Bible—not books about the Bible." We are almost reluctant to state the other requisites to his education; they are discouraging, because of the difficulty with which they are attained. They are, briefly, Philosophy and the History of Philosophy, Psychology, and Sociology. Surely, these are not essentials, and yet were they a part of the education of every minister, the result would not be other than strengthening."

But we do not care to further mutilate so good an article. It can be read to advantage by every young minister, who should realize as early as possible that "his sphere is limited only by the nature and relations of man"; whose ideal should be "the reconstruction of society upon the basis of the gospel; and whose reward "is fellowship with Christ in his work and in his cross."

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb has resigned his work at Dunn.

....We regret to hear of the sickness of our aged brother, Rev. R. M. Sessoms.

....Rev. M. A. Adams has added Oak Grove, Union county, to his pastorate.

....Our readers will rejoice to learn that Sister Yates has arrived in China safely.

....We were glad to see Dr. John Mitchell of Wake Forest in Raleigh last week.

....Help us to make the RECORDER better by sending us the news from the churches.

....Rev. W. B. Beach, Jr., changes his address from King's Creek to Taylorsville.

....Revs. J. K. Fant and T. J. Taylor of Warrenton are engaged in a series of meetings at Littleton.

....We have received the January number of the University Magazine. As usual, it is very creditable.

....The next annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the Orphanage will take place January 31st.

....We extend our sympathy to Rev. Geo. S. Best of Kenansville in the sickness of his wife and daughter.

....Capt. W. C. Allen, principal of the late Scotland Neck Military Academy, will enter journalism at Wilson, N. C.

....Rev. O. Bullock, one of our substantial colored pastors, changes his address from Middleburg to Manson, N. C.

....Rev. E. W. Oakes, known as the "Irish Evangelist," held meetings in the Baptist church, Kinston, last week.

....Rev. N. R. Pittman will preach a series of sermons at Mount Airy before he leaves for his home, St. Joseph, Mo.

....Rev. Chas. H. Durham has declined to divide his work, and will give his full time to the work at Bryson City, Tenn.

....Rev. M. A. Adams began a series of sermons on the "Second Coming of Christ" in his church at Monroe on Sunday last.

....The W. N. C. Baptist says Rev. A. B. Thomas has been compelled to give up his pastoral work on account of ill health.

....Rev. J. R. Jones has been called to serve Yanceyville Baptist church another year. His address still remains at Milton.

....Rev. I. T. Newton has removed from Carthage to Wake Forest, and will continue to preach at Apex and Flat Rock churches.

....In a revival conducted by Rev. L. H. Greene and others at Bakersville recently, twenty-five professions of faith were made.

....By oversight we failed to include good Bro. Alvin Betts in our list of Baptist preachers in Raleigh in our issue of the 24th.

....In a recent issue we stated that the new book—"Beautiful Joe"—was on sale at fifty cents; it should have been stated sixty cents.

....Rev. Dr. Creasy of Charlotte has been engaged to deliver the baccalaureate sermon before graduating sermon of the A. & M. College of this city next June.

....Rev. M. V. MacDuffie of New Jersey, Dr. J. C. Hiden of Virginia, Dr. T. H. Pritchard and Rev. R. Van Deventer are some of our writers in this issue.

....We will publish Dr. Carter's Convention sermon in an early issue. Any one desiring extra copies of that number will please advise us as early as possible.

....When it is realized that over half the world is either heathen or infidel, contributions to missions will be wonderfully increased. The world is yet the field.

....Rev. L. M. Berry and wife, formerly of North Carolina, now of Booneville, Mo., will celebrate their golden wedding in the near future. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter is doing good work in his new field. On last Sunday he held three services in different parts of the city, and this week he holds revival services in the Swain Street mission.

....Rev. D. M. Austin is to become a raiser of stock. He has just completed his large barn, 24x100 feet, on his place south of the city, formerly the M. L. Barringer farm.—Charlotte Observer.

...Judge Winston makes the following correction to a recent article by him: In article twenty-three on Talks on Law, "There being no will" by inadvertence was omitted from line fourteen—"nor any next of kin of the deceased."

....Dr. Hufham of Tarboro, and Bro. Vann of Scotland Neck, recently exchanged pulpits. After his sermon Bro. Hufham collected one hundred dollars from his former flock, which pays off all the indebtedness of the Tarboro church.

....Rev. L. R. Pruitt will deliver an address before the pupils, patrons and friends of Madison High School on Friday night, Feb. 5th, 1894. Bro. Betts, the principal of the school, writes that it is in good condition and improving.

....Dr. Baldwin, one of the most eloquent Baptist preachers we ever had, was engaged in the early part of this century, at first as a supply, at the rate of six dollars per month and fifteen cords of wood by a Baptist church.—The Baptist (Baltimore).

....Our churches cannot be too careful in dealing with strange preachers. We would advise them to admit no unknown man to their pulpits without first having investigated his record. A good man will always have credentials, and will not fear investigation.

....Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage will resign the pastorate of the Brooklyn Tabernacle in April next, when he completes the twenty-fifth year of his Brooklyn ministry. Dr. Talmage will continue to preach in pulpit and press and platform, but has no plans of a permanent situation.

....Rev. M. A. Jenkins of Asheville has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Waynesville church. Brother Jenkins was born in Buncombe county, and educated at Judson College. Last fall he entered Wake Forest College, but ill health would not permit him to continue his studies. He has served as pastor of the church at Biltmore.

....Here's good news from Bro. W. L. Wright of Richmond, Va.: "The papers from which you took notice of my sickness had gotten the facts exaggerated. I was in bed only two or three days, and missed only one preaching service. I am as well and strong now as I have been in twenty years. Thanks for letters of sympathy from brethren."

....We were glad to see Rev. I. S. Boyles in Raleigh on his way to Wake Forest College, where he re entered last week. Bro. Boyles left Wake Forest in his junior year two years ago, and since then he has been doing good work in several pastorates. His recent pastorate at Roberdel Fields, Richmond county, has been taken by Rev. J. F. Tuttle.

....P. W. McDonald was excluded from the first district Christian Conference in Kentucky for the vilest offences April, 1893. He is now, we understand, traveling in this State as a preacher of the Christian (O Kelleyite) denomination, and preached in a Baptist church in Wake county on Sunday, 21st. We warn the churches and people against him.

....Rev. J. A. Beam writes: "Our school is fine. We have thirty boarders, and more are coming. Our young ministers, thirteen in number, are a noble set of young men." If there were more such able "feeders" to Wake Forest College in the State, the cause would be greatly strengthened. Bro. Beam says he heartily agrees with Dr. Pritchard on the co educational question.

....We should have been more careful in our statement in regard to the value of the purchased property of the Female University in our last issue. Between $14,000 and $15,000 have been paid out for the property. Other expenses, interests, agents salary, etc., make the total amount paid out a little more than $18 000 dollars. Money is needed now to put the property in order, and equip the buildings.

....With the following words Dr. J. B. Jeter once closed a sermon on "Useful Christians": "The reward of Christian laborers shall be proportioned, not to their success, but to their toil and thankfulness. In the day of retribution, Christ will say: 'Well done, good and faithful'—not successful—'servant'" That thought ought to comfort every discouraged worker in the Lord's vineyard.—Religious Herald.

....Here's hopeful news from Brother Blanchard of East Durham: "The Baptists in Durham are steadily gaining ground. A bright future awaits us here. In the near future a Baptist church in West Durham will be constituted and a new house of worship built. As soon as the financial cloud passes over the First and Third churches will have to enlarge their house of worship. Our Sunday schools already crowd us."

....The revival at the Baptist church continues, and the interest is unabated. Monday night ten persons were received into the church and baptized by the pastor. Tuesday night three persons professed conversion and there were many requests for prayer. Mr. Church is preaching strong sermons nightly, and the house is filled to overflowing at each service. The meeting will continue as long as sufficient interest is manifested.—Statesville Landmark, Jan. 26.

....Our sympathy goes out to our brethren of the Texas Baptist Standard, whose entire outfit was destroyed by fire on the 18th. The Standard has been a credit to the great Southwest, and we are glad to know that it will not be delayed an issue by the fire. Its plan of re establishment, which is to get as many subscribers to pay up as far in advance as they are able, is a worthy one, and we hope will meet with great success. Bro. Cranfill had just announced numerous improvements in his paper, and had bought new presses when the fire occurred.

....The fifty-ninth anniversary of the Literary Societies of Wake Forest College will be held on the 14th of February. The following is the program: Afternoon, debate: Should the President of the United States and the United States Senators be elected by popular vote? Debaters—R. L. Freeman, M. P. Davis, affirmative; W. H. Sledge and W. C. Newton, negative. Evening: orations by Jno. D. Robertson and Jul. B. Yates. The officers of the occasion are: President, R. H. Carter; Secretary, T. W. Mullet; Marshalls, Jno. H. Kerr, Jr., W. B. Stokely, S. W. Oldham, S. R. Buxton, W. H. Reddish, J. R. Moore.

....William Shaw, who claimed to be a physician and a Baptist preacher, was killed in a railroad accident (collision) near Henderson on the night of the 18th inst. He had held a revival meeting in Rev. J. J. Fant's church at Littleton since Christmas, and was in Raleigh with the intention of holding meetings in the mission house of the Baptist Tabernacle. He attended one meeting and delivered about a ten-minutes' exhortation. He could not give a satisfactory account of himself, and left here under suspicion. He claimed to be from Mississippi and Louisiana, and said he had relatives in Richmond, Va., and Rutherfordton, N. C.

....Our Bro. T. J. Leary of Morehead City, N. C., wishes to thank his many friends through the RECORDER for their kind letters of sympathy which have been received since his recent bereavement. They are most gratefully treasured, and would be answered privately were it not for his physical inability.

....Rev. Dr. J. A. Mundy is conducting services every night at the Baptist church, the onject being to bring the membership together in the true spirit of the work which is before Christians as members of church organization. His discourse on Monday night was on the text, "Ye are the light of the world," and was of the most tender and impressive character. Christians cannot but be benefitted if they attend these services, and those who are not may hear something which may lead to good results. —Wilson Mirror.

....Rev. A. C. Dixon has been in the midst of a great evangelistic campaign in Brooklyn, N. Y., for some time. The New York Times describes it as a "great religious wave that has filled thirteen churches nightly with zealous worshippers and brought large numbers of penitents into evangelistic meeting places." Many famous revivalists have engaged in the glorious work, and it appears that inestimable good has been done by them in the "city of churches." A recent issue of the Times contains an excellent likeness of Bro. Dixon, and puts him down as the great leader of this movement. Dr. Wharton, Geo. C. Needham, and very many others, have taken prominent parts in these meetings, which will be continued indefinitely.

....Dr. L. G. Broughton writes from Roanoke: "Let me say that Prof. Poteat's 'Studies in the Life and Letters of Paul' are worth to me their weight in solid gold. Surely he will put them in book form, and if so, here is an order for the book. My work is progressing well; am baptizing at almost every service. My congregations are large—always overflowing Sunday-nights. It is said that we have turned away at least five hundred people every Sunday night for a month. The RECORDER is better and better. Those squibs on current events can't be beaten." We are very glad to know that Dr. Broughton will aid Brother Simms of the Raleigh Tabernacle in a series of meetings in March.

....We have received a letter from Dr. Kerr B. Tupper, in which he gave the following statement of facts: "At our Denver Baptist Ministerial Alliance I said that I liked the name 'Christian' because it is biblical; that there is not so great difference between Baptists and Disciples as is generally supposed; that the latter people were in error in the emphasis they place upon baptism; that I had hopes that Baptists and Disciples might some day be organically connected; that I had even had correspondence with prominent pastors on this matter. Only this and nothing more. With my speech every Baptist pastor agreed." There was even less basis of fact than we supposed for the newspaper man's imagination, but he built a magnificent fabric of ignorant and lying conjecture upon it.—Examiner.

....Rev. Frank Dixon, recently of Oakland, Cal., has begun his pastoral work with the South church of Hartford, Conn., under favorable auspices. The people have a mind to work, and pastor Dixon has a mind to have them. The congregations are most encouraging, and the pungent discourses of the preacher can hardly fail to bear fruit. New England, as well as New York, appears ready to give hospitality to pastors whose birth and training have been in the South. Pastor Poteat at New Haven has for several years held on his way bravely and successfully under the shadow of Yale, and now the capital city of Connecticut welcomes a representative of the noted "preaching family" of the South. The Dixons seem destined to obliterate Mason and Dixon's line, so far as the Baptists are concerned.—Examiner.

....On Dec. 28th, 1884, the Fayetteville Street church, Raleigh, was organized. This result grew out of years of labor in prayer meetings, Sunday school work, visiting and helping the poor, &c. A site was purchased from the State during the administration of Gov. Jarvis and a mission house erected thereon at the lower terminus of Fayetteville street. Brethren Jno. T. Pullen, Sylvester Betts, T. W. Blake and others were prominent in the labors in that section of the city. After the church was organized, God blessed the work and many have been added to the membership. The house was enlarged; but the Master has so constantly blessed the labors of this flock, that the building became inadequate for its purpose. A more eligible site at the corner of Fayetteville and South streets was secured, and a larger, handsomer and a more convenient edifice has just been erected. The old house will be sold to colored people. On Sunday last the new church edifice was dedicated to the service of God. By especial request, Rev. C. A. Jenkens, the eloquent Goldsboro pastor, preached the dedicatory sermon. His subject was "God's Supreme Command of Love," and he treated it in a style that was at once broad, clear and convincing. His remarks with especial reference to the new house were very well taken. After the sermon, Dr. Carter, Bro. Simms, Bro. Stringfield, the pastor, and Bro. Pullen, who has labored so faithfully in this field, made short talks. They were all timely and forceful. Bro. N. B. Broughton made a "collection talk," and about $975 was raised to help pay the indebtedness of the church. The new church building is indeed an honor to the taste and judgment of its builders; is neat, well-arranged and roomy. It is situated in a location to do much toward bringing souls to Jesus, and the church has within it some of the best workers we know of. The attendance at the services was very large. Brethren Cobb, Carter, Betts, Simms, Stringfield and Hunter were on the pulpit.

....We are pleased to learn that Rev. G. W. Harman of Weldon, who has been confined to his room for six weeks by sickness, has recovered.

....The B. B. B. (Baptist Boy's Brigade), though only a year old, has 140 companies in 19 States and in Canada. It is already called a "movement," and will soon "demand recognition." It has not started a paper yet, but of course that will come in due time. Everything cannot be done the first year, you know. We expect some "live, progressive" woman will start the B. G. B. (Baptist Girl's Brigade) or the B. G. U. (Baptist Girl's Union) or something of the kind. It would never do to let the boys get ahead of the girls.—Western Recorder. Our cotemporary may be "slightly off" on the question of Paul's whereabouts, were he now alive, but it never fails to make a centre-shot against the "movements."

....Those who were in attendance at the Baptist Sunday-school last Sunday morning were made happy by the reading of a letter from Col. J. M. Heck, and the announcement that he had become so much better that he was able to take short walks. But the sad news that our brother was declining, and could not live but a few hours came Monday. His family has been called to Philadelphia, and at last accounts he was sinking. We shall hope and pray that Bro. Heck's life may be prolonged, yet we recognize that God knows best, and will do the best. Miss Fannie Heck, who was taken to Philadelphia last week for treatment, was improving when last heard from.

Only Sixty Days—Progress on the Debt.

The report of J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, for 1892, showed the reception and disbursement for all the work of the Convention to be $76,420 81, and his report for 1893 showed $124,307.36 This was a gain for 1893 over 1892 of $47,886 55. The total cost of the work of State Missions for the year ending with the Convention at Elizabeth City was $16,666 97, and of the Sunday-school department was $5,491.62. The Board, however, had to report a debt to the Convention of $3,097.10 on State Missions, and $2,086 94 on the Sunday-school department—total debt to be provided for, $5,186 74. The $3,097 10 is due to thirty two faithful, hard-pressed, worthy Baptist preachers for services as missionaries. The $2,086 94 is due the American Baptist Publication Society for Bibles, books, and Sunday school literature, which the denomination has received through the Board.

The Convention referred this debt and the manner of providing for it to a committee of six wise and well informed brethren. Their report, presented by T. B. Wilder of Louisburg, which was unanimously adopted, directs the Board to make an effort during the next sixty days to find one hundred individuals or churches who will, on condition the entire $5,000 is provided for, pay $50 each in ninety days from January 1st, 1894.

At a meeting of the Board, December 20th, the following was unanimously adopted:—

"Resolved, That the Corresponding Secretary be requested to secure, if possible, by April 1st, 1894, the debt of $5,000 now on the Board, according to the plan and instructions of the Convention; and, further, that he present this claim (1) to the members of the Board; (2) to Executive Committees of Associations; (3) to churches formerly aided by the Board, but now self-sustaining, and (4) to individuals and churches as he may be able to reach them."

I have used my energies and time for the past thirty days in obedience to the instructions given. The brethren have written very kindly; even when they could not give they have showed their deep interest, and have told me their condition. Some of them have told me to write again "on the home stretch" and they would do their best. Thirty days of the time given have past. The following amounts have been promised:

21 persons have pledged $50 each;	$1,050.00
7 persons have pledged $25 each;	175 00
12 persons have pledged $10 each;	120 00
5 persons have pledged $5 each;	25 00
1 person has paid $5;	5 00
1 person has paid $1;	1 00
Total pledged and paid to date,	$1,376 00

I have written to more than two hundred brethren and sisters from whom I have not yet heard. I now desire, oh how anxiously! to have each of them write me. Others have kindly written that they will let me know soon what they can do. It was not the desire of the Convention, nor was it the plan of the Board, to have public appeals made through the papers, or to congregations, for this work; but at the meeting of the Board January 23d, 1894, after a careful survey of the field, and due consideration of all that had been written to me by wise brethren from all parts of the State, the following was unanimously adopted:—

"WHEREAS, The Convention lumped the debt of $2,000 on the Sunday-school department, and $3,000 on the State Mission department, and instructed the Board to secure, if possible, 100 persons who would each pay $50 to liquidate the debt; and, whereas, it now seems wise to separate these two amounts, and to secure first the $3,000 due on State Missions, and to ask all pastors, churches and individuals to aid in this work; therefore Resolved, That the $3,000 now due the missionaries for work in the Conventional year ending Nov. 1st, 1893, be secured, if possible, by April 1st, 1894, and that every pastor, church, and individual member, be urged to co-operate and aid in securing this amount."

One-third of the time has passed, but not one-third of the original amount has been pledged. Only sixty days remain. Will not every pastor and church aid this work on the above proposition? You have the facts before you. This article gives you the progress made. The prospects are good. If we can have the general co-operation of the pastors and churches, every dollar of the debt will be paid by April 1st, 1894. Write me, please, and tell me what you or your church will do by that time. While due credit will be given to your church for all its members who give on this proposition, I hope you will send the name and amount of each contributor with the contribution.

OPEN DOOR IN INDIA.

In Upper Burmah the missionary is meeting with the favor and aid of the officials. They give money and lumber for building, and send their children to mission schools. How Dr. Judson would rejoice could he see the present opportunity, and how his zeal would glow with the prospect of entering those open doors in Burmah with the gospel.

LIBERALITY AMONG THE CHRISTIANS IN HEATHEN LANDS.

Some native Christians in South Africa recently built a sanctuary costing $13,000, all given by themselves.

The Karens maintain their educational and religious institutions and send the gospel to others.

They sustain the work in Upper Burmah, and have sent missionaries into other countries.

One Burmese Christian woman gave twelve hundred dollars, the first contribution to Judson Memorial chapel in Mandalay.

A Baptist church in Prome, Burmah, recently sent seventy five dollars to the Missionary Union, when they heard how much the Union needed help.

Not all the Christians in China are "Rice Christians," as they have been called. In a station established in 1883, three churches are soon to be self-supporting. Two others now provide for half their support.

Let our people get acquainted with the converted heathen and be convinced that they make as efficient followers of Jesus as we who have the advantage of gospel influence.

It is expensive to be a heathen. Ancestral worship costs one half of the time of the female population to prepare articles for sacrifices and offerings, and $150,000,000 in cash per year to sustain it. Some of our church-members who feel it an expensive business to belong to the church ought to live in China and be obliged to submit to the demands of Confucianism or Buddhism.

RELIGIONS IN CHINA.

Taoism, founded upon the teachings of a reformer of the seventh century before Christ.

Confucianism. In the sixth century before Christ, Confucius combined all that he could learn from Taoism, and others before him, with the best results of his own thinking, and gave the people a moral system of ethics and political science.

Judaism found its way into China about one hundred years before Christ.

Buddhism came from India to China a little while before the seige of Jerusalem by Titus in the year 70 A. D.

Mohammedanism came in China in the eighth or ninth century, and to day there are 30,000,000 followers of the Moslem faith.

Romanism effected an entrance into China in the thirteenth century. For an hundred years they had great success; then declined for two centuries.

Protestantism began with Robert Morrison in the first part of this century. Since his day, converts, schools and churches have multiplied. About fifty years ago there were not more than one dozen native converts; now there are more than 50,000.

In China proper there are 386,000,000 souls. The women of India hold the destiny of their country. They are worth saving.

THE SUCCESS OF THE GOSPEL IN THE SOUTH-SEA ISLANDS.

In 1777, Captain Cook, while referring to the effort to carry the gospel to the islands of the sea, said:

"It is very unlikely that any measure of this kind should ever be seriously thought of, as it can neither serve the purpose of public ambition nor private avarice; and without such inducements I may pronounce that it will never be undertaken."

By a motive stronger than "public ambition" or "private avarice" the Christians have been stirred up to give the gospel to them.

What a mistake Capt. Cook made! You can pass from isle to isle and find a nice church and comfortable home for the teacher or preacher.

A Mistake Corrected.

It is never too late to correct an error; and the more necessary is it to do so, when the error comes from so distinguished and usually reliable source as the admirable President of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina. Dr. Marsh, in his article in the RECORDER of Dec. 6th, 1893, describes the time and place of the founding of the Baptist State Convention. He says it was in a barn in the town of Greenville, N. C.

The fact is, that the meeting referred to was held in the parlor of the former residence of the late Mr. Gorham (not Gorman, as the types had it).

The Tar River Association, at its fifty-sixth anniversary, appointed a prayer-meeting to be held in that same parlor, at 9 a. m. A large number of the delegates did assemble there at the appointed time, and a most solemn and impressive hour it was to all of us.

Mr. Gorham educated three sons at Wake Forest College, and Mrs. A. M. Lewis, his daughter, still resides in the city of Raleigh, and is a member of the First Baptist church.

THE LAST ISSUE OF THE RECORDER,

was one of the best I have ever seen of the paper. The amount of matter, editorial, and otherwise, was extraordinarily large and it was excellent in point of merit.

OUR BOYS AT THE SEMINARY.

One of them writes me as follows: "I have heard it said that some Baptists in North Carolina object to the Seminary on the ground that students who go there rarely go back to their own State when they get through. I do not know how far this is true, but as far as it is true, it might be well to stop and consider whose fault it is. Of course, they can't go back if no church calls them. They are in want of work, and are obliged to go where churches do call them. And I think they are perfectly right in doing so." He then goes on to say that five of the North Carolina boys, now there, will not return, and that they would much rather find work in their own State that any where else, and adds for himself: "My financial situation, as well as strong desire for work make it important that I should know before leaving here what I am to do." J. S. Corpening, W. M. Gilmore, J. W. Millard, C. J. Thompson and Jas. J. Kendrick are the names of the young men who will leave the Seminary in May. Brother Thompson, who was pastor, I think, at Lumberton for a while, will lack only two studies, Hebrew and Latin, of being a full graduate, brethren Gilmore and Millard will be eclectic graduates, and Brother Kendrick, if he gets through, of which I presume there is no doubt, will be a full graduate. They are all good men and not only good preachers, but men of excellent character, and we should by all means secure them at once. I have heard that so much do the students from Missouri think of Brother Thompson that they are trying to have him settle in that State. Let us bring our boys back home; we need such men badly, and if we don't invite them to return we shall have no one to blame but ourselves.

REV. J. B. SOLOMON, D. D.

A letter from this esteemed friend of other days, dated Hawesville, Ky., Jan. 19, says: "I am by God's forbearing mercy still in the land of the living, having passed my seventieth natal anniversary yesterday, and am enjoying a good degree of health and physical vigor for one of my age. I preach every Sunday two sermons and sometimes three and am thankful for the privelege.

I will say that my dear wife is still spared to me by the goodness of our kind heavenly Father, and is now sitting by my side, preparing her lesson for her Sunday school class of nine young men. Ours is a small town, on the banks of the Ohio, of about 1,200 people. I hope I am truly thankful to God for the honor he has put upon my poor labors here. Of course, I know that my days are very few now, and I want the summons to find me at my post and ready. Pray for me my dear brother. I read the BIBLICAL RECORDER with loving interest, and was highly pleased with your articles on Co education. Your views as to the location of the Baptist Female University are the correct ones. Wake Forest is the place, above all others for that school. I am interested in everything that concerns North Carolina, especially, North Carolina Baptists. I wish I could talk with you six days and twelve hours a day. I hope to be able to write for the RECORDER soon. I think there are a few of my old friends in North Carolina who would love to hear from me occasionally."

I wish to say, in conclusion, that I always read what J. T. Albritton writes; he knows how to use a pen, and has something to say. I know no man in the State better qualified to do the needed work of writing a history of the Baptists of North Carolina.

Expression of Appreciation.

The members of the Plymouth Baptist church, wishing to make public expression of the high appreciation and esteem they have for Rev. J. F. Tuttle, their former pastor, did on the 16th day of November, 1893, in conference assembled adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved 1st, That in all the relations of life, we recognise in him all the noble traits of character that constitute the high-toned, honorable Christian gentleman.

Resolved 2d, That as a neighbor, he was kind, social and entertaining; as a friend, true and steadfast; as a counselor, wise and conservative; as a preacher, eloquent without affectation; as an expounder of the gospel, learned without ostentation.

Resolved 3d, That the great work done by him here under adverse surroundings will ever be a living monument to his ability as a preacher and his consecrated Christian life.

Resolved 4th, That by his able ministry, prudence and wisdom, he gave to the church here a power and influence for good it never before possessed, and lifted the Baptist standard in all this surrounding country to a much higher plane than it had ever before occupied.

Resolved 5th, That we commend our beloved Bro. Tuttle and his noble Christian wife to all those with whom they may be associated in their new field of labor as being worthy of their confidence, kind consideration and Christian love.

A man lives but once; why should he live like a drone, a slave or a dunce? A man who does not labor six days in a week is a drone. A man who cannot rest one day in seven is a slave. And a man who is either a drone or a slave in this age of enlightenment is a dunce.—Joseph Cook.

"PLAN TO CONSOLIDATE THE BAPTIST AND CHRISTIAN DENOMINATIONS."

Dear Recorder:—I send you to day a clipping from the Republic, a daily paper published in St. Louis, with the above heading, which was doubtless intended to be somewhat sensational as something new under the sun. But I wonder what the editor of the aforesaid paper has been doing if this is the first time he has heard of this Campbellite fallacy. I use the term "Campbellite" in no invidious sense, for I have many warm, personal friends among them. And there may be, and I believe there are Christian people among them, but as a denomination they deny from our standpoint the fundamental principles of Christianity. You and I for a long time have heard the disciples of A. Campbell preach union for, lo, many years, even from the day they began what they call the current reformation, while using every means in their power to detract and divide Baptist churches.

It seems to me if a man was half-way sincere in advocating union, he would not try to divide and pull down others. Baptists have always been advocates of union on Bible terms, and are ready for it now. If Dr. Keer B. Tupper wishes to unite with the Campbellites, I doubt not but they will make it easy for him to do so, but he will find he is much less than the Baptist denomination. I should be much opposed to the whole Campbellite fraternity coming into the Baptist ranks. What do we want with such a mass of unconverted, deceived baptized membership? We already have enough unregenerate persons in our churches, with all our caution in receiving members, without inviting those in with the false belief that in the act of baptism they are made Christians, and are not saved without it.

If we had all the Campbellites with us today, in less than twelve months we would be compelled to withdraw the hand of fellowship from half of their ministry for preaching heresy.

I have heard no expression about the matter yet in Missouri. While we have some Baptist preachers who will receive into their churches Campbellite baptisms, the larger body of our ministers and churches are true to the Baptist or Bible faith, and would not be ashamed to be called Anabaptists, as many have done before.

I stand by the time-honored Baptist Bible doctrine of salvation by grace through faith, and not of works, yet God has created his people in Christ Jesus unto good works. God's people work not to be saved, but because they are saved by Christ the only Saviour.

"Dr. Shaw"—Meeting in Littleton.

In my absence two strangers came to Littleton, and the deacons asked them to hold services on Sunday. The Lord was with them from the first. I found the church in a state of revival. It was evidently the work of the Spirit, and I could say nothing against it. The services continued a week, "Dr. Shaw" doing the preaching—and he did it well—and "Capt. Dunlap" conducting after meeting. I "wired" for Bro. Taylor of Warrenton, and he came to the help of the Lord. "Dr. Shaw" went to Raleigh, and the meeting continued, Bro. Taylor aiding the pastor. Some dozen conversions; church revived; great grace upon us all.

"Dr. Shaw" returning to Littleton on night freight, was run into and killed. Saturday a. m. funeral services at Littleton.

Literary.

"The most popular technical journal." The vast importance which the electrical interests of the present day have assumed may be inferred from the fact that a recent issue of The Electrical World, the leading weekly journal devoted to electricity, contains no less than 100 pages, and over 300 business announcements in its advertising columns, an amount of matter only exceeded by that of one other industrial or technical paper in the United States—the journal representing the iron interests. The Electrical World, which is an enterprising and handsomely illustrated weekly, is called "the most popular technical journal," and is said to have more subscribers among the general reading public than any other technical periodical. The subscription price is only $3.00 a year, which includes postage, and the publication office is 41 Park Row, New York.

An article of unusual interest has resulted from an expedition of behalf of Harper's Magazine, made by Joel Chandler Harris in company with a skilful artist, Daniel Smith, to the scene of "The Sea Island Hurricane," off the coast of South Carolina. It was this strange region which was devastated by the great storms last autumn, which killed 2,000 people and left 30,000 homeless and suffering. Among them for the past few months Miss Clara Barton, with a staff of workers from the Red Cross Society, has been dispensing much needed relief. Mr. Harris viewed all the interesting features of this work, and his well-known conception of negro character has enabled him to present such a picture of the disaster, the suffering, and the work in progress as no other writer in the South could give. The illustrations present a realistic glimpse of the curious life on these islands. The article in this number is devoted largely to a description of "The Devastation." An article in the March number will treat of "The Relief."

In ordering goods, or in writing concerning anything advertised in this paper, you will confer a favor if you will say that you saw the advertisement in the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

Talks About Law—No. 24.

BY JUDGE R. W. WINSTON.

CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Never, perhaps, in the legal history of North Carolina has the subject of contributory negligence received so much attention as within the past few years. The reason can, no doubt, be found in the fact that there are many more corporations in existence than ever before; more machinery is in use; more accidents occur; and more damage-suits are brought.

In such suits, sometimes, two questions arise for the jury to pass upon: first, was the defendant negligent? And second, was the plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence?

A man is walking over a railroad bridge. An engine and cars rush by. He is killed. Can his personal representative recover damages because of the killing?

Now, this will depend, if the railroad is negligent, whether it might have avoided the accident, notwithstanding the negligence of the trespasser, as we shall presently see.

If the jury should find that the accident could not have been avoided by the railroad, the plaintiff would get no damages. But if the jury should find that the railroad, itself negligent, might have avoided the accident, notwithstanding the negligence of the deceased, damages would be recovered.

Perhaps the railroad was negligent; but perhaps also the deceased was a contributor to his own injury. That is to say, the deceased was a trespasser; he was on the bridge of the railroad; a notice, posted at the bridge said, "Keep off this bridge"; and so, of his own head, he brought about his own death; or, knowingly, took his chances.

To this the representative of the deceased replies, "Even if the deceased was negligent, still the railroad might have avoided the accident."

So it is seen that a third question generally arises: "Despite the contributory negligence of the deceased, might the railroad have avoided the accident?" This is the vexed question.

Some cases are plain and simple. For example: a train of freight cars is standing at the depot. A man comes along and, being in a hurry, does not walk around them, but attempts to crawl under. The cars are moved, and he loses his leg.

Now, was the railroad negligent? Perhaps so, because it did not ring the bell or blow the whistle when it started, and stood across the street longer than the law permits. Was the plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence? Yes, he knew it was dangerous to crawl under the cars. But, could the railroad have prevented the accident, after discovering the negligence of the plaintiff? Not at all, because the negligence of the plaintiff was the immediate, proximate, instant cause of the accident. And so, perhaps, no damage would be recoverable. But there are cases where the railroad sees the foolish conduct of man and his imminent danger, in time to stop the cars and prevent the injury.

If they do see it, or if they ought to see it, by the law, and fail to see it, and the railroad itself is negligent, and the accident occurs when it might be avoided, the defendant is answerable in damages. This difference exists when a man is on the railroad track, and when a beast or a little child is. The man is presumed to know his danger and the engineer does not have to blow or stop, except in exceptional cases, for the man. But a beast or a little child does not know the danger, or perhaps how to avoid it, and hence the engineer must blow and must stop, if he can, when the latter class get on the track in front of the engine. And even when a grown person is seen on the track, if the engineer discovers that he is in so dangerous a place that he cannot escape; as for example on a high, but narrow, trestle or bridge; or if the person is known to the engineer to be deaf; or an idiot or lunatic; or to be drunk; or to be asleep on the track; in all these cases it is the duty of the engineer to use every effort, consistent with the safety of his train, to stop and avoid the accident. And if he fail to do so and the accident occur, through the negligence of the railroad, it is a case for damages. The law, being humane, says, you must not take human life, although the person foolishly expose himself to danger. You must use every means that is provided to avoid accidents of this kind.

So far we have been speaking of trespassers on railroad tracks. Now a person who simply crosses the track of a railroad at a public crossing is not a trespasser. And in considering any question of damage, it may be highly important to the plaintiff's case that he was no trespasser.

There is another rule of law, and it is this: not only must the railroad not kill or injure a person (if they can avoid it) whom the engineer can see, but whom he ought to see. Now, whom ought the engineer to see? All are are agreed that he ought to see, and ought to keep a constant lookout to see, persons who are using the highways over the railroad track at public crossings, or in cities and towns, or in other places where experience has taught him that human beings usually pass along or over the railroad track.

But it is contended that the failure of the engineer to see every trespasser who comes on the track at places and points remote from the haunts of man does not subject the railroad to damages when accidents occur in these circumstances. For example: a little child is run over and killed by the engine. The jury find, first, that the little child, or its mother, was guilty of contributory negligence; that the railroad was likewise negligent; and, lastly, that the accident might have been avoided by the defendant, notwithstanding the child's negligence. The engineer states that he did not see the child. The point is, "Ought he to have seen it at all [illegible]?" It was a level, clear track, it [illegible] day, and the child might have [illegible] five hundred yards away. The [illegible] "You were a trespasser, and my duty does not require that I shall keep a constant lookout and actually see everything that happens on the track in cases of this kind. I stopped just as soon as I saw the child. Hence, I did my duty."

This is a real case that occurred in Northampton county (except that the child was not killed). The turning point in the case is, if the engineer or the fireman did not actually see the child, ought they to have seen it? and is the road answerable in damages for their failure to see it. When this case is decided, I will make known the opinion.

In our next, we will consider damages arising from the use of spring-guns and steel-traps and the like; from falling in old wells not properly covered over; from dangerous machines, &c.

Gospel Hindrances.

Lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ.—1 Cor. 9: 12.

Three things chiefly occupied the mind of the great preacher to the Gentiles. First, to preach the gospel. "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Second, to defend the gospel. "I am set for the defence of the gospel." Third, not to hinder the gospel. "Lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ." In our efforts to preach the gospel, and to defend it against error, we ought to be careful lest we should hinder the gospel. We may hinder the gospel both in its progress and reception. As to its reception, many hinder by their indifference. Preachers ought to be full of zeal, and all the Lord's people in earnest. The world expects us to be enthusiastic in the cause we represent, and if we are not, we lower the cause in the estimation of the world. Indifference in pulpit or pew hinders sinners from receiving the gospel. If politicians manifested no more zeal for their principles than many of us do for the gospel of Christ, they would find themselves with a small following. If the liquor men were as indifferent to the cause they represent as many Christians are toward the precious cause of Christ, we might look for prohibition at an early day. Those who have accomplished most in any direction have been characterized for zeal. Many are indifferent as to their attendance at church, Sunday-school and prayer meeting, and of course are indifferent as to the work of the church. The world expects us to do our best, and we ought not to be content with any thing short of our best. Many hinder the gospel in its reception by their inconsistent lives and conversation. The world expects the followers of Christ to be good men and women, and we must be good, or we will never enter the kingdom of heaven. Perfection ought not to be expected of us, but the world has a right to require a high standard of Christian living. So many of us hinder the gospel by our unchristian conversation; and the preachers are not always excepted. The conversation of many on their way to church, while there, and on their return, is such as to make an unfavorable impression on sinners. The Lord's people may hinder the gospel by speaking lightly of the sermon or the preacher in the presence of their children or before the unsaved. If the sermon has not helped us, it may have helped some one else, and if the preacher has not much influence with us, maybe he has with others. Some preachers indulge unduly in telling jokes, and jokes that at times are a bit smutty. Some of us have known preachers whose usefulness and influence were greatly curtailed by their jokes and yarns. It has been said of some ministers that when in the pulpit it seemed they ought never to go out, and when out, ought never to go in. Preachers may hinder the reception of the very gospel they preach, and Christians may hinder the gospel they give their money to support. The gospel is hindered in its progress to the heathen by the expenditure of too much money at home. Many churches have rendered themselves unable to give largely to send the gospel to the heathen by building, or undertaking to build, too costly church edifices. Our church houses ought to be neat, commodious and comfortable, but beyond this have we the moral right to spend the Lord's money to erect costly edifices with lofty steeples and costly furniture, while the heathen are dying without the gospel, and the last words of the Master ringing in our ears, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," and men feeling called of God to go to the heathen, and saying, "Here am I, send me," and the means wanting. But somebody says that the temple was the finest building ever erected. Very well, but there was but one temple, and if the Jews had undertaken to build all their synagogues as costly and fine as the temple, it would have impoverished the whole nation hopelessly. The gospel is hindered in reaching the poor by too fine and costly church houses and by making the worship and service of God too formal and fashionable. The poor feel they cannot dress themselves and children well enough to attend church and Sunday school at the fine and fashionable church, and hence stay away. While our Saviour was a friend to all, he was specially the friend of the poor. It might do us all good to study the last of the twenty fifth chapter of Matthew, and examine the reasons the Saviour gives for saying, "Come ye blessed," &c. What the world needs most is not pomp and show, but a pure, simple, spiritual and devout worship and service of God and not of man. Preachers may hinder the gospel by too frequent changes in their pastorates, when the changes are often to better salaries. The preacher is entitled to a living and something over and above for old age, but when the preacher manifests something like a covetous spirit, and that I am seeking yours more than you, he is hindering the gospel. We must not preach the gospel to live, but live to preach the gospel. We must not make merchandise of the gospel. We ought to stop now and then, and seriously consider whether we are helping or hindering the gospel.

From Boonville, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Our little town is beautifully situated, and is a remarkable little place in some respects. I took charge of the work here in Aug. last, both as principal of Yadkin Valley Institute and pastor of the church. The work moved on very smoothly till the time came either to compromise some of our principles or to take a decided stand for the Baptist cause, and when I took the stand, the storm arose. The Baptists have by far the ascendency in number, but some few are decidedly in need of more backbone religion. The Methodists are weak in number. They have their preaching once each month, and on that day we have no service to conflict. But from the time I came here, we have had our prayer-meeting service every Sunday night. In November at their service on Sunday they announced that they would have preaching that night. Of course, we had our regular service as usual, and then the storm cloud exploded because I did not recall my appointment. The Methodists stopped their children from school, and said many hard things. But I am sorry to say that the trouble was caused by a few weak-kneed Baptists who tried to occupy a middle ground—so afraid of losing popularity—that they try to compromise with the Methodists and say: "They need our help—they are few in number—we ought to help them on—we ought to help them support their preacher, etc., and give way for their service in order to keep down hard feelings."

But notwithstanding all that has passed, our congregations still increase, and our church is growing larger and stronger. Seventeen have united with the church during my charge of it. I hope soon to have more copies of the RECORDER among us. I expect to try to induce every family in my church to take it.

Yours in the work,

J. E. GREENE

Acknowledgments for Kernersville Church.

Dear Recorder:—Please acknowledge the amounts named below for Kernersville church:

Liberty church, Liberty Association, $2 15; J. M. Bennett, 1 00; New Friendship ch., 8 65; H. A. Brown, 5 00; J. K. Fant, 1 00; Mrs. Bettie Laugenhour, 1 00; Hugh Beeson and wife, 2 00; A Friend, 25c; Reynoldson ch., 3 99; Cool Spring church, Chowan Association, 2 36; W. B. Waff, 5 00; Madison church, 5 50; Charlie Tedder of Florida, 10 00; J. Van Lindley, 10 00; Rich Fork ch., 3 75; A Friend, 1 00; Collected by Miss Lilly Moore at Thomasville, 6 25.

We worshipped in the new house last Sunday, but the work is not quite completed. We held meetings elsewhere only four times And though the time has been short, we have no shoddy house; faithful work has been done. We had brethren in the church who took hold, and with others outside have scarcely regarded the time. Many friends have stood by us and done faithful work. Small boys have worked like beavers. We have all worked and the Lord has blessed our efforts.

But, brethren, we are needing money now to pay off some bills already due and others that will be due in the near future. Brother pastors, won't you call the attention of your churches to this call? We were deprived of our house by an act of God, and feel therefore that we have some claim upon the brethren. Quite a number have responded. Dear reader, won't you help, and try to get others to help? If you can do something in the future, drop me a postal, saying so. This is the last call through this medium.

The Effects of La Grippe.

My Dear Sir:—I gladly give you my opinion of the Electropoise. I consider it Science's best gift to man. It has been of such wonderful benefit to me that I feel as I could not say too much in its favor. A very severe attack of Grippe in the winter of 1890 left me with a shattered nervous system and almost no digestive power at all, and for eighteen months people in Hades had as much fun and as good a time as I did. I tried Allopathic, Homeopathic and "jam of the fence" remedies all to no good. The Electropoise has made me almost myself again, and I believe will eventually make me a better man. It has been used on every member of my household of seven children from the youngest up to their mother (who is also a convert) with marked beneficial results; so much so, that I have not paid one penny for drugs since it entered my house the first of last March. I have recommended it to many who have taken my advice and I have never known of any one to regret having done so. It is the most economical physician on earth. I would not be without one under any circumstances.

Yours truly, JAS. D. MCNEILL.

In the Observatory.

BY M. P. M.

BRO. C. W. BLANCHARD.

The Observer has an "eye out" for anything bearing upon the question of young people's societies, and hence read Bro. Blanchard's article on "Church Annexes," in the RECORDER of January 10th, with careful scrutiny and interest. He desires to "offer a few feeble remarks" on the question. Our brother lays great stress upon "the church" of Christ. What is the object of such an organization? For what purpose are such institutions perpetuated? The Observer assumes that the prime object of such organization and perpetuation is to execute the great command of our of our Lord, "to preach the gospel to every creature;" "to teach all nations." That such work is given us to do, there is no sort of question; but the method of doing it was left to the "sanctified common sense" of those who have it in charge at any particular time. Bro. B's own illustration is against his theory. The office of deacon was established "out of a necessity" which had not hitherto existed, and was "a method" of carrying out the Saviour's command. Every step taken by Baptists in the prosecution of the Lord's work has come in the same way—is the outgrowth of the necessities of the case. There is no special warrant in the word for the formation of associations, conventions, missionary societies, educational or philanthropic organizations, originating with God's people for carrying on the Lord's work, and yet no one believes them to be contrary to the Lord's will.

It was very amusing to see Bro. Hufham flourishing his New Testament around in our late Convention in his speech against young people's organizations, as though it was any more against such societies than it was against the organization of which he had been a leading spirit for many years. Some things are funny.

There is no work a church can do for Christ "as a whole." All must be done as individuals working in concert with other individuals. A church cannot run a Sunday-school as a body; it must be done by individuals working under the instruction and direction of the body; but a Sunday-school is no more the "church at work" carrying out the commission "to teach," than a missionary society is the "church at work" carrying out the commission "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The question is not one of "annexes" or "prefixes" to the church, but the best method of doing what Christ commanded, which always includes training and discipline. The object of the organization of an army is to carry out the commands of the governing power, but there are many things to be done by the officers, and those to whom the commands are given, which are not mentioned in the commands themselves. And so in carrying out our Lord's commands there are many things to be used that are not specified in the word. The questions involved in young people's organization are very simple: first, do we need the young people in our church work? second, do they need any sort of training for Christian service? third, is it wiser for the pastor and older members to see to this training, or leave them to go without, or get it in some undenominational society? These questions do not need any discussion from me; the statement of them is sufficient. A good brother made a speech at the Convention against organization of young people's societies, maintaining that "the church was sufficient." And I could not help remembering that the said brother had preached for several years to a church, and when he left, about the first thing his successor did was to reduce the membership by exclusion from 220 to 90—a revival out of the church of 130 members. Evidently that church needed something that it did not have.

WHERE I AM AT.

The announcement was made that Observer had resigned the care of the church at Lincolnton, and other churches wanting pastors suppose of course that he is "open to a call," and hence are writing to him. But he desires to say that he was only preaching to the church at Lincolnton one Sunday in the month, and that he does not propose to give up his field for the present; he does not see any reason why he should, as he feels that his call is to do foundation work and develop "hard-fields," and to that work he is giving himself, preaching three times every Sunday, and sometimes four. He has not yet determined whether he will go away from Lincolnton or not. His association with the membership of the church here—every one of whom would have preferred him to continue as pastor—has been exceedingly pleasant, but it may not be best for the cause for him to remain. The hardest place any man ever tried to fill is that of an ex-pastor. It takes more "grace, grit and gumption" to fill such a place than any other. Observer is of the opinion that it is always better for a pastor when he resigns, from any cause, to go somewhere else to live. In this Association there was a great work to be done, and my brethren, in whose judgment I have great confidence, think that I can be of some service in this work, and I have written these lines to say that it is my present purpose to stay in this Association. This may not be of any interest to the mass of RECORDER readers, but as churches were writing me from this and other States about work I thought it might not be out of place to let them know where I am at, and that I expect to be "at the same place," for awhile at least.

From Baltimore.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I want to write a short letter through the RECORDER to my friends in the Old North State to let them know that I am still living, and that we have just closed one of the most glorious meetings I have ever attended; and I have attended Moody's, Sam Jones', Earle's, and Pearson's several times.

Dr. H. M. Wharton begun a series of meetings at my church on Christmas day, and what a Christmas we have had!—everybody delighted. Wharton may not have the logical acumen of some of the D. D 's, but he has an unlimited drawing power. We have had a pentecostal meeting. He charmed the people as he does everywhere he goes.

He had to leave for another appointment last week in New York, and Dr. Barron preached for us this week. Wharton made the people laugh, but Barron made them cry, and our people are delighted with them both.

There must have been more than two hundred who made profession. The Lord only knows how many converts there were. I have already baptized a large number—several Catholics among them—and others will follow Sunday night. "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof are glad."

I have entered upon my fourth year as pastor of Broadway church, and the brethren have increased my salary two hundred dollars above that of last year; beside, they made me a present of a purse filled with greenbacks as a Christmas gift.

A happy new year to all my friends in the Old North State. R. B. COLLIER.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

"Church Annexes."

My object in writing this article is to call the attention of the readers of the RECORDER to Brother Blanchard's article on "Church Annexes." He says:

"Our fathers largely neglected to encourage or work in the Sunday-school, which is not an appendix but the church itself in the exercise of its most potent function for good. Now, let us, one and all, oil up this piece of machinery, and put it to work for all it is worth."

Now, suppose we do put the Sunday-school to work, as the brother reasonably suggests, where will you get your society work from? There will certainly be no room in churches for society organizations to work.

Whether it is good for the superintendent to lecture every Sunday, I can't say; but I believe the pupils ought to lecture and lead in prayer every Sunday; yes, every religious pupil, big or little, ought to be taught in the school to lead it in prayer at any time when called on, and also to lecture the school on texts of Scripture. Thus schools can be "run for all they are worth."

But, say some, "Neither little children, nor all big children, can lecture and lead in prayer." Right here comes in our big mistake. Train them and teach them; then all in school who are Christians can both lecture and lead in prayer.

Why can big children and also little children stand before large congregations at our school commencements and talk like preachers and lawyers? Simply, because they are trained and educated up to that point. Then let us leave the miserable, old, uniform, dead ruts of monotony in our Sunday-schools and teach the pupils, old and young, to be workers in the vineyard; yes, lively material, living epistles instead of dead ones.

O, how strange! We go to Sunday-school week after week and year after year, and never once enter into the spirit of the work! Yes, we go without any purpose in the world, only just to go. We ask our parents for many things before we start to Sunday-school; but after we get to the Lord's house, our heavenly Parent's house, notwithstanding we need so much, we don't ask him for needed good.

We have not been taught to do so in the Sunday school. Our Sunday-schools, as a rule, are dead formalities. May the Lord open the blinded eyes of Sunday-school leaders! R. Q. A. TEAGUE.

Two to Quarrel.

You have often heard, "It takes two to make a quarrel." Do you believe it? I'll tell you how one of my little friends managed.

Dolly never came to see Marjorie without a quarrel. Marjorie tried to speak gently; but no matter how hard she tried, Dolly finally made her so angry that she would soon speak harsh words, too.

"Oh, what shall I do?" cried poor little Marjorie.

"Suppose you try this plan," said her mamma. "The next time Dolly comes in, seat yourself in front of the fire and take the tongs in your hand. Whenever a sharp word comes from Dolly, gently snap the tongs, without speaking a word."

Soon afterward in marched Dolly to see her friend. It was not a quarter of an hour before Dolly's temper was ruffled and her voice was raised, and as usual she began to find fault and scold. Marjorie flew to the hearth and seized the tongs, snapping them gently. More angry words from Dolly. Snap went the tongs. More still. Snap.

"Why don't you speak?" screamed Dolly in fury. Snap went the tongs.

"Speak!" she cried. Snap was the only answer.

"I'll never, never come again, never!" cried Dolly.

Away she went. Did she keep her promise? No, indeed! She came the next day, but seeing Marjorie run for the tongs, she solemnly said, if she would let them alone, they would quarrel no more forever and ever.—Christian Age.

A Presumptuous Fly.

Just now, as I sit at my table writing, there is before me a horse-fly entangled in a spider's web. About an hour ago I saw that fly get caught in the snare. He was walking about on the window pane, and now and then would touch one of spider's threads. But with one buzz of the wings the thread would break and he would continue his walk. Thus it went on for awhile until at last he touched a place where the meshes were closer. Here he buzzed and struggled as before, but the strength that could break one thread easily enough could not break dozens of them together. He seemed encumbered, too, with the broken threads which he had been dragging about. Just then a very small spider, about half so large as the horse fly's head, came out and began drawing the threads closer and spinning new ones about his wings and legs, until he was so tied up as to be perfectly motionless. And now that little spider is feasting off his dead body.

It would seem that men might be warned of their danger by falling once or twice into sin. It seems that that fly might have gone away when he touched the outside thread, but no. It kept on till it was caught in the web. And so we, with just a little wisdom, and not warned by touching the outside threads, go on until we are caught in the snare. Not a few walk into the snare of Satan after abundant warning and with open eyes.—Selected.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood. By this means, it reaches, builds up, and invigorates every part of the system. For every blood-taint and disorder, and for every disease that comes from an inactive liver or impure blood, it is the only remedy so sure and effective that it can be guaranteed.

If it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

These diseases are many. They're different in form, but they're like in treatment. Rouse up the torpid liver into healthful action, thoroughly purify and enrich the blood, and there's a positive cure. The "Discovery" does this, as nothing else can. Dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness; all bronchial, throat, and lung affections; every form of scrofula, even consumption (or lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages; and the most stubborn skin and scalp diseases are completely cured by it.

Mild, gentle, soothing and healing is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Only 50 cents; by druggists.

Mother's Bible.

It is wise never to censure people until you fully understand just what you are talking about. Here is a story to the point:

"What is the meaning of this?" said a minister, coming into a house and taking up a tattered copy of part of the Scriptures. "I don't like to see God's Word used so"—for indeed the book had been torn right in two.

"O sir," said the owner of the half Bible, "do not scold until you hear how it came to be thus. That was my mother's Bible. When she died I could not part with it, and my brother could not part with it, and my brother could not part with it, and we just cut in two; and his half has been the power of God unto salvation to his soul, and my half has been the power of God unto salvation to mine."

What a change came over the good man's countenance after this more than satisfactory explanation! And he left more than ever convinced that there is a mighty transforming power in God's Word.—The Children's Friend.

On Sunday the 21st inst., he became dangerously insane and attacked his two sons in law, J. L. Starling and Rolandus Gainey. He succeeded in throwing Gainey and getting on top of him. The latter called for help and Starling rushed in with a gun and shot Denning, killing him instantly. A jury was summoned and an inquest held. After inquiry into the circumstances of the killing, the jury rendered a verdict of "self-defence," and Starling, who had given himself into custody of Deputy Sheriff, was released.

The failure of the North State Improvement Company of Greensboro has caused the assignment of a number of prominent people in different sections of the State who were endorsers for the company. Among those who have recently assigned are Dr. W. C. Benbow of Greensboro, Capt. Gilmer Winston, Dr. W. A. Lash of Walnut Cove, and J. H. Fulton of Mt. Airy. The Greensbore correspondent of the Charlotte Observer writes that paper that Col. J. Turner Morehead of Spray, this county, went to Wentworth Wednesday night to make an assignment. He was also one of the endorsers. Our people sympathize with Col. Morehead in his present troubles and hope that he will emerge from the difficulties without sustaining serious losses. We understand that the failure of Col. Morehead will not effect his cotton and woolen mills at Spray. J. D. Williams and E. J. Lilly, Pres. and Cashier of the Bank of Fayetteville, have also assigned. We are glad to learn that the embarassments are only temporary.

General News.

The German Emperor and Prince Bismark, his erstwhile chancellor, have become reconciled.

The Democratic caucus at Washington has voted to introduce the income tax and tariff bills jointly.

The rumor that the insurgents and the Brazilian government had agreed on a mediator, is untrue.

Both Dunn and Bradstreet report last week's business livelier and more promising than in some time.

A ferry boat, with six sailors on board, was swamped near Baltimore on Friday last. The sailors were drowned.

A mob lynched three men at Russell, Kan., on the 21st. They were charged with the murder of a man last July.

Constance Fennimore Woolson, well known as an author, committed suicide in France last week. She had been suffering with the grippe.

The debate on the tariff bill closes on the 1st of February. It will, in all probability, pass the House. A sharp contest in the Senate is anticipated.

Active hostilities exist between Nicaragua and Honduras. The United States has sent Admiral Stanton and the Kearsage to protect her interests in the two countries.

The prize fight in Florida last week occurred despite all opposition. It proved a disappointment, and will be resultant of good in that the States will be more careful in the framing of their laws hereafter.

The pension appropriation bill, recently introduced in the House, carries $151,581,570. It is stated that $17,000,000 will be appropriated for river and harbor improvement.

The House committee has reported adversely on the bond issue. Definite action has not yet been taken. From the number of offers received, it is certain the bonds would find a good sale.

A mob of six hundred strikers near Pittsburg attacked the mine laborers on the night of the 26th. Several buildings were destroyed and considerable damage done before the mob was subdued.

The municipal government of Guthrie the capital of Oklahoma Territory, has become so corrupt that a convention of the citizens has been called to take the matter of restoring good government in hand.

The man who is climbing the Alps has but to follow his guide and set his foot in the right spot before him. This is the way you and I must let Christ lead, and have him so close to us also that it will be but a short way to behold him. Sometimes young Christians say to us: "I am afraid to make a public confession of Christ; I may not hold out." They have nothing to do with holding out; it is simply their duty to hold on. When future trials and perils come, their Master will give them help for the hour, if they only make sure they are his. The short view they need to take is a close, clear view of their own spiritual wants, and a distinct view of Jesus as ever at hand to meet those wants. If the fishermen of Galilee had worried themselves over the hardships they were to encounter, they might have been frightened out of their apostleship and their eternal crowns.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., in "Stirring the Eagle's Nest."

From Bro. Tatum.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I could present my best wishes for season, but they would be out of date before reaching you. Our best Christmas gift this year is the return of mother Yates. She, with Mr. and Mrs. Seaman, reached Shanghai December 19. After having been sick during the summer and fall she is very weak and much reduced. We hope that with rest and care she may regain her strength, and be spared yet a long time to us and her church.

I have had it on my heart to write the RECORDER a letter for three months, but with the present force at this station, I hardly have time to say: "We are well and very busy." I want to tell you about a brother Presbyterian and how he prayed for us Southern Baptists, but not in this note.

Fraternally,
E. F. TATUM.

A Genius for Helping.

"There," said a neighbor, pointing to a village carpenter, "there is a man who has done more good, I really believe, in this community than any other person who ever lived in it. He cannot talk very much in public and he does not try. He is not worth $3 000, and it is very little he can put down on subscription papers. But a new family never moves into the village that he does not find it out and give them a neighborly welcome and offer them some service. He is on the lookout to give strangers a seat in his pew at church. He is always ready to watch with a sick neighbor and look after his affairs for him. He finds time for a pleasant word to every child he meets, and you'll always see them climbing into his one horse wagon when he has no other load. He has a genius for helping folks, and it does me good to meet him in the street. —Selected.

Better than Ever for 1894.

Is Different from Others.
It is intended to aid the planter in selecting the Seeds best adapted for his needs and conditions and in getting from them the best possible results. It is not, therefore, highly colored in either sense; and we have taken great care that nothing worthless be put in, or nothing worthy be left out. We invite a trial of our Seeds. We know them because we grow them. Every planter of Vegetables or Flowers ought to know about our three warrants; our cash discounts; and our gift of agricultural papers to purchasers of our Seeds. All of these are explained in the Catalogue, a copy of which can be yours for the asking.

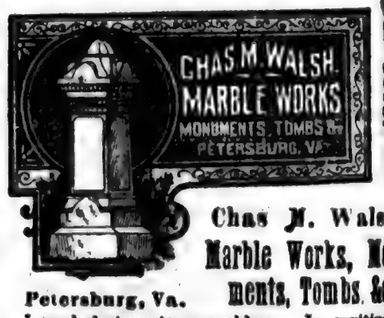
La Grippe Again.
The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.
ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.
In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe.
L. STUART.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 13, 1893.
About two years ago I had a severe spell of 'grip,' and was induced by my relatives to try Royal Germetuer. It soon cured the 'grip.'
MRS. GEO. TINDALE.



SWEETWATER, TENN., June 23, 1893.
My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health.
J. T. BARROW,
Pastor First Baptist Church.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of Germetuer relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

Rev J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 31, 1893: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

Funds Received for Cove Baptist Church.

Dear Bro. Batley:—Please acknowledge the following contributions for Cove Baptist church:

J. E Peterson, W. G. Britt, K. E. Bizzell, J. J. Robinson, W. T. Faircloth, E. W. Cox, R. M. Freeman, H. E. Grant, D. M. Stanley, H. Weil & Bros., and Mr. — Parker, one dollar each.

Rev. C. A. Jenkens and J. M. Beatty, two dollars each.

Kinston Baptist church, $12.50.

E. L. Edmondson, J. D. Daniel, and C. C. Whitworth, 50 cents each. G. E. Thurston, 25 cents.

Total, $35 30.

We have just got our house so we can use it. We owe near fifty dollars on it now, and it will take about one hundred dollars to finish it. Now if fifty brethren and sisters will send me one dollar each to liquidate this debt, we will finish our church without further aid. Remember this is in a section of the State that have but very few Baptists. I do not think there are more than seventy-five or eighty outside of Newbern in this county. We have a population of at least 10,000 outside of Newbern in the county. Supposing one half to be colored, and half of the whites to be too young to become Christians, then we have a population of 2,500 that are old enough to become Christians now. So you see we have only three Baptists out of every hundred that are old enough to join the church.

Brethren, this is mission ground for the Baptists if we have any in the State. We need your prayers and your money to establish the Lord's cause in this most destitute section. Send your prayers to the Lord of heaven, and your money to the undersigned, and see if he will not doubly pay you back in heavenly treasures.

Be it known to the honor of the Newbern Baptist church, that there are not any appropriations made to this field outside of the county. The only aid we have received outside the county is acknowledged in this article. Brethren, we need your most hearty co-operation from all over the State to evangelise this most destitute field.

Yours fraternally, J. W. Rose

Resolutions of the Lincolnton Baptist Church.

Whereas, Our pastor, M. P. Matheny, has seen fit to resign the care of this church, and that it came about without any suggestion from any member of this church, and that he has done more for the advancement of Christ's kingdom in this church, even under very great difficulties, than any could expect. Be it therefore

Resolved, That it is with great reluctance that we accept his resignation, in which he gives us no other alternative but to accept. That we hereby acknowledge our gratitude to him for what he has done for us, assuring him that we have only the kindest feeling for his welfare and will ever pray for his success whereon the Lord may direct him. That we have been inspired with perfect confidence in him as a minister and citizen, ever loyal to Christ and his fellow man, and that he has satisfied the people of the foregoing facts that even enemies have been made to rise up and praise him. We heartily commend him to the confidence of all, and bid him welcome to continue his home in our midst.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this church, a copy be given Bro. Matheny, and copies the Biblical Recorder with request to publish.

Adopted in church conference, January 21, 1894. J. Thos. McLean, Clerk.

An Appeal for Help.

Dear Recorder:—Maysville, a mission field in the Atlantic Association, is struggling to complete a house of worship. This place is twenty miles from Newbern on the Norfolk, Newbern and Wilmington Railroad. We are the first to occupy the ground. Let me appeal to the pastors and brethren to help us now. We have the house enclosed. We have the endorsement of the Executive Board of the Association. The people have done nobly. Help us brethren. It will be a good investment.

J. H. Vernon, Missionary Pastor.

Thirteenth Annual Report of N. C. Horticultural Society.

The North Carolina State Horticultural Society, having left a small supply of its Thirteenth Annual Report, will send copies to citizens of the State only, so long as the supply lasts, for the cost of postage and packing—three cents each copy.

This is a very complete and voluble report and should be in the hands of every intelligent farmer, fruit grower and amateur gardener in the State. The contents include select lists of fruits and vegetables the most successful in this State; kitchen garden calendar, chrysanthemum and tuberose growing; a chapter on canning and preserving fruits and many other articles by well-known fruit men.

Those who want the Report should order at once before the supply is exhausted. Address, Gerald McCarthy, Secretary State Horticultural Society, Raleigh, N. C.

If any man turns religion into raillery by bold jests, he renders himself ridiculous, because he sports with his own life.—Tillotson.

Mexican Items.

We need a strong man to follow brethren McCormick and Rudd as pastor in Zacatecas and to have charge of the work in that State. The foundation was well laid. A good house of worship has been built. It is a fine field and one of our strategetic points. Who feels called of the Lord to take this inviting field?

We need several men for Southern Mexico, where American pluck and enterprise are building railroads, so that "the good news" may be hurried on to those who have never heard of Jesus as the only true Savior. Who will go? Who will help support those sent? Eighty-four have been baptized on this field and nearly as many more stand approved for baptism. We need an abundance of grace and spirital power to train these new converts aright.

In November and December I assisted in the dedication of two Chapels built without any help from the States. One was the Centennial offering of the missionaries in Mexico to the Foreign Mission Board. It is valued at $1,200. It is finished, paid for and dedicated. We are doing our utmost by precept and example to teach the natives self-help.

We are supporting a missionary in Brazil and very soon we will support another among China's teeming millions. All the missionaries in Mexico live in native houses. One church built a parsonage for the American missionary. Two or three missionaries live in their own homes (native house) and the remainder occupy "hired houses."

Mrs. Chastain, Mrs. Goldsmith, Miss Cabaniss and Miss Barton are in the States. Brethren Chastain and Goldsmith will follow later on.

Bro. Wilson edits and publishes the best Sunday-school paper in Mexico. It is self-sustaining. Our Baptist paper La Luz is taking on new life.

Our church in this city grows slowly, but we have some signs of spiritual development. A candidate for baptism was received at our last prayer meeting. I raised $135 the other day towards furnishing our meeting house.

There is great encouragement just now to Americans to invest in coffee plantations in this country. W. D. Powell.

WASHAM—Little Essey Lee Washam, grand-daughter of Sister Jane C. Rodgers, (whose obituary appears in this paper), departed this life Jan. 16th, 1894, aged three years, eleven months and sixteen days. We give her back to God with sad and aching hearts. We expect to meet her in heaven, and there live with her forever.

W. J. Wyatt, Pastor.

GILMORE—James D., son of J. C. and A. E. Gilmore, died at his home in Moore county, of la grippe, Jan. 21, 1894. He was born Oct. 13, 1867, was a member of Cool Springs Baptist Baptist church about ten years. For two years he was in business at Gray, West Va., where he was taken sick. He came home for treatment, but alas! a mother's care was not sufficient. C. V. Booker.

PAGE—Near Morrisville, N. C., on Dec. 26th, 1893, after a long and painful illness, Bro. Oscar H. Page, aged sixty-six years. He had been a consistent member of Morrisville Baptist church for a number of years, and adorned his profession by "a godly walk and pious conversation." His pastor, Rev. W. S. Olive, preached the funeral sermon to a large concourse of sorrowing friends. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Friend.

CARTWRIGHT—On Jan. 22d, 1894, Mahala Cartwright, the beloved wife of W. A. Cartwright, departed this life in the fifty-fifth year of her age, from their delightful home in Pasquotank county, N. C. Sister Cartwright has been a devout Christian for many years and a faithful member of Woodville Baptist church. After many weeks of painful sickness borne with patient meekness, she found happy release and went home to her Heavenly Father's house, where she joined four children who had gone before. She left a devoted husband and six living children to deeply mourn her departure. A large company of her neighbors attended her funeral in token of their esteem for her many Christian graces and neighborly kindnesses. Around her cold form the writer preached the gospel of blessed hope to many interested souls. She was laid to rest near Corinth church by the side of her children.

C. S. Blackwell.

RODGERS—Sister Jane C. Rodgers was born Dec. 13th, 1826, married to M. P. Rodgers Feb. 14th, 1854, and departed this life Dec. 24th, 1893, aged sixty-seven years and eleven days. Sister Rodgers was a member of the Methodist church for a number of years. On becoming acquainted with the Baptist doctrines, and by comparing them with the teachings of the Bible, she decided that she hadn't followed her Lord in baptism. Therefore she joined Beren Baptist church about nine years ago, receiving baptism at the hands of Rev. Mr. Ruck. She loved her church, and enjoyed its blessings till her death. She leaves a husband, who is a deacon and also the clerk of Beren Baptist church, five children, and twenty-two grand-children, besides many friends to mourn her loss. The church has lost a faithful sister, the husband a devoted wife, and the children a loving and tender mother. She always welcomed her pastor heartily to her home, but alas! our loss is her eternal gain. W. J. Wyatt, Pastor.

SMITH—On Saturday, Jan. 6th, 1894, David Smith, aged seventy-five years, was called to his rest and reward. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at the home of the deceased Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. A large congregation assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to their kinsman, neighbor and friend. After the funeral services a large crowd followed his remains to Beaver Dam, where he was laid away to await the resurrection morn.

Bro. Smith had been a great sufferer for many years. "But he did not murmur nor complain beneath the chastening rod." He was fully resigned to his Heavenly Father's will. He was a consistent member of the Missionary Baptist church at Antioch, and he will be greatly missed by the church and neighborhood to which he belonged. We tender our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family, and trust that they may comfort themselves with these words, "Them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him" when he comes. J. H. Hildreth.

CARROLL—Sadness has come to another home, and grief, to many hearts. On Jan. 11, 1894, Mrs. Mary White Houston Carroll, wife of Mr. George W. Carroll of Duplin county, N. C., was called to go into the presence of God whom she had loved and served many years. Sister Carroll was born Aug. 28th, 1836; was baptized into the fellowship of Kenansville Baptist church, May 15, 1857; and was married Sept. 20, 1860. Hence, at the time of her death, she was fifty seven years, four months, and sixteen days old. As a Christian, she had been serving her Saviour more than thirty-six years; and, as wife and mother, she had made home a happy place for husband and children more than thirty-three years. It was in the home where her genuine Christian character appeared to best advantage. While she loved and respected, as Christians, all who love the Lord Jesus Christ, she was an uncompromising Baptist; and, hence, was devoted to all the interests of the church of which she was a member. Sister Carroll was a member of one of the best families in Duplin county. William J. Houston, a brother of hers, arose to distinction as a lawyer and statesman. Her husband, three sons and one daughter have sustained an irreparable loss in her death; but their loss is her gain. To the sorrowing loved ones, we extend our sympathies, and for them we pray that God may overrule this dispensation of his providence to their good. The writer learned to love and highly esteem Sister Carroll while she was visiting her son, Bro. W. H. Carroll, who is a rising lawyer in our town.

YATES—At her home near Grist's, Columbus county, N. C., Mrs. Ellen Williams Yates, beloved wife of Mrs. B. F. Yates, departed this life, Dec. 21st, 1893, in the forty-second year of her age. She only suffered a few hours when the Lord took her home. A good Christian mother, a devoted wife and a kind neighbor has been called to her reward. She left six children, the youngest a little babe only a few hours old, a devoted husband, an aged father and mother, and many friends to mourn their loss. Sister Yates was a consistent member of Spring Hill Baptist church for about twenty four years. She was married to Mr. B. F. Yates Jan. 30th, 1880. Regretting to leave her home church, she never moved her letter to Piny Forest church near which she lived the most of her married life. Yet she took great interest in the church, and at the time of her death she was president of the ladies' missionary society. She will be sadly missed in the missionary society, church, and neighborhood. She was faithful to her Master, and when he called she was ready. Her funeral was preached by the writer at Piny Forest church, Dec. 23d, in the presence of a large number of friends, after which her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn. May God bless the bereaved husband, children, and aged father and mother.

Life's Tools.

A man is wanted for the Lord!
Life, take thy tools, and make this man
Hew him, and shape, and mold, and form—
On ancient lines. Thou know'st the plan.

Thine axe! Affliction. Chisel! Care.
Thy gnawing saw! The fretting strain
Of ceaseless toil. Thy mallet's blows!
The humbled hope—the bitter pain.

Life, do thy work. But ere it close,
With tenderer skill the task pursue,—
Smooth gently o'er the rugged edge,
And softly touch with evening dew.

What's here! A simpleton! A babe!
A block!—Nay, such he came to thee.
But wrought by Life into man,
He passes to Eternity.
—L. B. Walford, in The Independent.

Forgiveness.

A street boy was run over several weeks ago by a heavy wagon in New York City. He was in the gutter, in the act of stooping, and did not see the approaching team. Another gamin, who had been taunting him, ran away when the accident happened. The injured boy was taken to the nearest hospital, where he was found to be fatally hurt.

After he had been in the hospital a few days, a small boy as ragged and friendless as himself, called to ask about him and to leave an orange for the injured lad. The visitor was shy and embarassed, and would answer no questions.

He soon came again with an apple to be used for the same purpose. After that almost every day he appeared at the hospital, bringing some small gift.

One day the nurse told the little visitor that his friend could not get well. The boy lingered in the receiving room, and then with great hesitation asked if he could see John. He had been invited before, but had refused.

The little patient was lying on his cot, very pale and weak. His eyes opened in dull surprise when he was told that he had a visitor. Before he knew it two little arms were about his neck, and a familiar, grimy face bent over his and sobbed:

"I say, Johnny, can ye forgive a feller? We was always fightin,' and I know I hurt yer, an' I'm sorry. Won't ye tell me, Johnny, that ye haint got no grudge agin me?"

The boy reached up his thin arms and locked them around his little mate's neck, and said: "Don't cry, Bobby. Don't feel bad. I was firin' a rock at yer when the wagon hit me. You forgive me? Yes, you forgive me—an' I'll forgive you, an' then we'll be square. The folks here learned me a prayer. How does it go nurse?"

"Forgive us our trespasses," said the white robed nurse, softly.

The next morning Bob was a little late. The kind nurse met him with a grave face. Johnny, she said, had just died. She led the boy to the place where his little friend lay shrouded from sight. He looked at the dead face a moment, and turned away with streaming eyes.

"Didn't he say—nothin'—about me?"

"He spoke about you before he died, and asked if you were here," replied the nurse.

"Are you sure he forgiv' me?" pleaded the trembling voice.

"I am quite sure."

"Then—may I—may I go to the funeral?"

"Indeed you may," said the nurse tenderly. "Poor Johnny hasn't any friends."

He was the only mourner; his little heart the only one that ached, and his the only tears shed over the pauper sod. But Bob had exchanged forgiveness with his friend before he died, and felt his conscience clear with his small world.—Youth's Companion.

R. C. Taylor, Murfreesboro, Tenn., writes: "I have used the Japanese Pile Cure with great satisfaction and success." Sold by Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C.

The Chopsticks.

"They cut their food with their daggers and they eat with pitchforks!" cried the horrified Japanese who first saw Europeans eating in such barbaric and revolting manner with the knife and fork.

Light-fingered, deft and imitative as the Japanese and Chinese are, it takes them as long to learn the proper and graceful use of the knife and fork as it requires for us to master the evolutions and etiquette of the chopsticks.

It is a pretty sight at the beginning of a Japanese or Chinese feast to see the host help his guests to sweets, as then is displayed the best and most graceful play of chopsticks. One can take a lesson as the master of the feast daintily lifts cakes or confections and places them on the plate or paper before each guest. The Chinese chopsticks are longer than the Japanese, often metal-tipped and decorated, and are used again and again. Mandarins carry their own silver tipped ivory chopsticks to a feast, wipe them clean and carry them home again when it is over. In the common restaurants in Chinese cities, the chopsticks constitute a lottery for the patrons. All the sticks are kept together in a deep, round box, and certain ones are marked on the lower end with a Chinese character or number. The ones who select these chopsticks from the box are entitled to an extra dish or portion without charge. In the old city of Tientsin, particularly, one is half-deafened when he passes a restaurant by the rattling of the boxes of chopsticks and the shrill voices of the proprietors screeching the merits of their establishments at the top of their [illegible], whose exquisite neatness and [illegible] more every part of household [illegible] these chopsticks are used only once. At a feast, or at an ordinary tea house, a long paper envelope laid beside one's bowl contains a pair of twelve-inch sticks no thicker than lead pencils, whittled from clean white pine. To show that they have never been used, the two sticks are whittled in one piece and split apart only half their length.—St. Nicholas.

The Manchester Ship Canal.

There was great rejoicing at Manchester, England, and a corresponding gloom in Liverpool, when the Manchester ship canal was formally opened January 1. Manchester and Liverpool have long been rivals, and though Manchester is the center of the great cotton manufacturing regions, Liverpool's seaport position on the Mersey has caused her to thrive mightily on the tolls her rival had to pay her on imported raw cotton. Manchester has tried for many years to counteract the immense advantages that Liverpool gains from her docks. As far back as 1720, Manchester secured scanty water communication with Liverpool by a small canal, but still the great ships unloaded at Liverpool docks, and that city grew rapidly.

Over ten years ago Manchester made a determined effort to obtain a ship canal, to bring the great steamers straight to her doors, and a bill to this effect was introduced in Parliament. Liverpool was in arms at once, and one of the bitterest of Parliamentarian battles ensued. Never was there a more costly fight. It is estimated that the Liverpool city council, the Liverpool dock board and the railway companies spent over a million of dollars in measures to defeat the legislation. Their efforts were successful, and the bill was thrown out.

This measure meant a great deal to Manchester, however, and two years later she succeeded in her efforts, a bill authorizing the building of the present canal passed both houses by a considerable majority, in spite of hot opposition on the part of Liverpool. Work commenced in 1887, and since that time an average of 16,000 laborers have worked at the undertaking. It has cost $68,000,000, fully a third of which was lent by the city of Manchester at a time when the canal seemed financially stranded.

The canal runs from Manchester to Eastham, a village on the Mersey five miles below Liverpool. It is thirty five and one-half miles long, with an average width of one hundred and seventy feet and a minimum depth of twenty-six feet. It has five sets of locks, any one of which will accommodate a ten thousand ton steamer. As soon as the canal is fully opened, a bitter war will commence between Liverpool and Manchester to see which will become the great distributing centre for that part of the country. Sweeping reductions will be made in dues, determined efforts will be put forth in foreign lands to have goods consigned to Manchester instead of Liverpool, and the whole commercial world will feel the effect of this big ditch.—The Watchman.

Make No Mistake.

Many preachers are duped in buying commentaries. Cheap offers are baits at which they oftentimes readily bite. When their money is gone and the commentaries come, they are glanced over with feelings of disappointment, and are at once shelved, scarcely ever to be thought of again for use. No such experience comes of the purchase and use of the American Commentary, published by the American Baptist Publication Society at $16 00 the entire set.

Only a Little Lesson.

It was just a little lesson, that was all, but it went right to the spot. He stopped a moment on his way home to look in a florist's window, and the florist, who saw him, asked him inside to see something extra fine.

"You don't buy any more flowers now?" said the florist.

"No," was the response, given good naturedly, though it was brief.

"And it used to be a year ago or more, that roses and violets and carnations and all sorts of flowers were a great attraction to you?"

"Yes; I had a sweetheart then," and the man blushed and laughed.

"You used to take her a flower every time you went to see her, didn't you?" pursued the inquisitive, kindly old florist.

"Yes."

"And they didn't cost you very much, as a rule, did they?"

"Oh, no, but that didn't make any difference to her. If I brought them fresh and fragrant, that was enough."

"Why don't you take them to her now? Did she choose another in your stead?' and the florist's voice was sympathetic.

"Oh, no; I married her a year ago.

The florist waited a moment, as if thinking.

"And don't you love her now?" he asked cautiously, as if treading on thin ice.

"Of course. We are very happy. But you know the flower business doesn't go any more."

"Did she ever say so?" asked the florist.

"Well—um—er—no, I can't say that she ever did."

"Have you ever asked her about it?"

"No. I never happened to think of it. Busy, you know, with all sorts of things so much more practical."

The florist didn't answer. He went to a pot of roses and violets, and, taking a handful, he handed them over to his late customer.

"There," he said, "I give them to you in remembrance of old times. You might take them to your wife; and if she doesn't like them, you can bring them back to me."

But they never came back.—Exchange.

Ladies, if you want a pure, delicate soap for the complexion, Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C., will always recommend Johnson's Oriental Medicinal Toilet Soap.

An English minister says:—"What is the church? It is more than a club for social chat. It is not a drilling ground for young orators; it is not a theological entertainment, with a programme packed with instructions to the minister as to what he shall preach; it is not a debating society for the discussion of the faults of deacons; it is not a repository for the stage of grievances; it is not a battlefield where every sort of contemptible grievance may be found out; it is not a park where all the loiterers of creation may gather and lounge. It is the marshaling of the forces of the Christian life, and the hurling of them in all their serried glory, like the Life Guard-phalanx at Waterloo, against the hypocrisies, the corruptions, and the agonies of the world's life."

A RECORD of twenty-five years of cures is made by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. In all blood disorders, this remedy has numbered its cures by the thousands. Years of uninterrupted success long ago led the proprietors to sell this remedy as no other blood-purifier can be sold. They have so much confidence in the "Discovery" that they guarantee it in all diseases that come from a torpid liver or impure blood. As a blood-cleanser, flesh-builder, and strength-restorer, nothing like the "Discovery" is known to medical science. Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, and the most stubborn Skin, Scalp, or Scrofulous Affections, quickly yield to its purifying and cleansing properties. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

MEN in responsible and prominent positions are frequently requested to give their endorsement to the claims, or commend the character of people personally unknown to them. It is really a difficult matter to avoid. The refusal to grant such requests, made in person, is always disappointing, often makes enemies, and is not infrequently considered an insult by the person refused. And yet, for the welfare of the nation, the protection of the people, and the preservation of the reputation for good judgment and honesty of those of whom the request is made, the majority of requests for the influence of a name should be refused.

Every applicant for a public appointment should be able to receive the endorsement of his fellow citizens, but we need not say such ability has little weight in the present conditions, when every man can secure endorsements from men of character. It has become common, and being so, is not valued. Just after Cleveland came into the presidency the second time, every would-be postmaster or minor government official in the land sent out his "petition" for signatures, not only of his friends, but often of men, till then, absolutely ignorant of the existence of the applicant. Many of them, if they had no conflicting interests, readily jeoparded their names, because they disliked to disappoint one, although he was unknown to them. We have heard of some men who obtained thousands of endorsements from many representatives of different States simply for the asking. And in nine cases out of ten their names were signed to false statements. It is disagreeable to disappoint either friend or stranger, and it is more disagreeable to tell the truth about them. We are all cognizant of the present extensive habit of giving glowing testimonials. One that is not exaggerated is valueless, and is seldom used. If men were more careful of the use of their influence, and more guarded in the use of their descriptive or qualifying adjectives, the present evils and dangers would be avoided. Names and testimonials would begin to mean something, and better men would occupy offices; for a man whose character is blamable, under suspicion, uncertain or unknown, would hesitate to face the public gaze and seek the signatures of worthy men. But, as we have said, it is a difficult matter to avoid, even though not avoiding it often necessitates falsehood, or, at least, danger of falsehood. A sympathetic man, no matter how careful of his word he may be, dislikes to refuse to aid an unknown applicant for office, and having no time to make personal investigation, dismisses the difficulty by a few glowing phrases and his autograph. And yet the habit should be reformed, for the sake of society, of reputations often built by years of labor, and, by no means least, for the protection of those applicants who are worthy, but lack boldness.

LIVING in the brilliant sunset of nineteenth century civilization, the present generation often contemplates the darkness of former ages with mingled pity and disgust. The present century has been one of unprecedented progress toward the ideal. The past and present are too often contrasted to require comparisons here. Improvement has been made in every province of human activity except literature, and in many departments of that sphere great progress has been made. But we wish here to speak of the hindrances to progress rather than the progress itself.

It is a true remark that the world's great leaders have arisen from the middle classes. And there is reason for it. There are two extremes of society, on either side of the middle that are inimical to the interests of the race. The pauper, the ignorant, the shiftless, one; the "society leaders" (only in name, thank God,) of which the "four hundred" in New York, and certain classes of city social organizations, circle, etc., are exponents, the other. In neither of these are men made, but rather promising manhood and womanhood is destroyed in the latter, while in the former there is a possibility of reclamation by reformatories and charitable enterprises. Neither of these extremes have good effect on human society, and it is not easily decided which is the greater hindrance to the accomplishment of that civilization of which we hope the twentieth century will be the dawn. We are resigned to the certainty that the poor—perhaps, the thriftless—will always be with us, but there is hope that so much of progress may be made that that part of the human race which has the opportunity of superior enlightenment, will be persuaded of the vanity of its ways, and become a contributor to the advancement of human society, rather than a menace to it. But it will not become so while men cater to the existing conditions; while newspapers devote several pages each week to "society and the fashions," and the leader of a fashionable set is made a hero; and the rising generation is taught to seek the recognition of the so-called society leaders as the first object of its ambition. It is well for men to be social; to be exclusive in their society, if they wish; but the present manner in which men and women subject themselves to the whims of a Brummell, apotheosize pedigrees and wealth (always in combination), and teach their children to seek to shine in this abortive condition of society, rather than as contributors to the betterment of real human society, is a dangerous hindrance to progress. We have made progress, but our development has increased hindrances as well as overcome them. Let us hope that the boasted brilliancy of the civilization of the present century will fade as a meagre reflection in the glorious light of the twentieth, in which men may have but one great problem to engage them—the problem of the eternal poor.

THE present discussion of the issuance of bonds, or more specifically the discussion of the "popular loan" bonds by a great daily paper, has brought the savings' bank department of the postoffice of Great Britain into prominence. It is claimed a popular loan would "practically make the government the custodian of the people's savings," and might lead to a system of national savings banks, inasmuch as such an issue of bonds in small denominations "would be practically based on the same policy as that which led to the establishment of the postal savings' banks of Great Britain." We do not believe that such would be the result of a "popular loan," for the simple reason that it is an impossibility to issue bonds to the masses in the United States; they are always bought by the moneyed classes. But we do attach significance to the favorable light in which this metropolitan journal, a stanch advocate of our present banking system, places the system of postal savings' banks.

After reciting briefly the history of former English savings' bank systems, it is stated that "since 1861 the postoffice savings banks system has been developed from 500 to 11,000 banks, in which six millions of people make deposits as regularly as the weeks come around. There is now to the credit of these depositors £30,000,000. This gigantic sum has been literally snatched from the grasp of those who prey upon the weakness of working men, and has been added to the wealth of the nation. Individually and as a whole it has been shown that hardly any of the present depositors were in the habit of saving money prior to the existence of the postoffice system."

And it is further stated that the system has "a most marked effect in promoting temperance among the people," and that it "has stood like a gigantic rock amid the financial cyclones that have raged around it, and instead of being itself dashed to pieces, has by its own immobility caused the storm to subside." The total number of depositors in these banks in England and Wales in 1892 was 5,027,481, or one out of every six of the population, each with an average balance of thirteen pounds and eighteen shillings (about $70.) These very favorable statements are surprising to us, and as the present system of banks is regarded unfavorably by some, and as one party is already the avowed advocate of postal banks, we think the success of England may well engage our attention. The statements being made by an interested official may be to some extent exaggerated; yet the figures speak well enough.

UNREST rests the head that wears a European crown. With the coming of the winter months of each of the last fifteen years the world has scanned the never-serene political sky of the great European Powers with dark forebodings. The portentous war-cloud has gathered and dispersed year by year, but its cause has not yet been removed; and now it threatens to gather its power from an unsuspected source and vent its force in a direction unexpected. The causes of the threatened wars of other years have been international jealousy, envy and fear; to-day they are civil, social and internal, though they have no little significance internationally. The masses, not the monarchs, are threatening. A year ago Germany anxiously watched the movements of the French, and both were not regardless of England and Russia and the minor powers; but now they all are occupied with heavy internal cares. The rulers are guarding their own sceptres rather than plotting new conquests; they have their own subjects to fear, not alien rivals. In France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Spain and Belgium the masses are becoming more and more desperate. Strikes are frequent, socialism is becoming more popular, anarchy is throwing bombs, and agitation and unrest is incessant. Sturdy England alone keeps the even tenor of her way, ready at a moments notice to take advantage of any opportunity, as indeed she is now doing in Turkey and South Africa. But European monarchs have always had a fortunate knack of postponing internal wars, and their present efforts will hardly be in vain. They are endeavoring to conciliate their subjects with many good intentions and some concessions. The Russian monarch is glad to be known as the peasant's Czar; the German emperor has made friends with Prince Bismark, long idolized by the people; Italy has restored Crispi; Austria's ruler is making electoral concessions to his subjects; Belgium's tottering monarchy has made concessions until it is powerless; and Spain and the French Republic have resorted to arms to compel the peace of their more desperate subjects.

These present troubles, although of unusual vigor, may be tided over. But the belief is prevalent that the days of European monarchy are numbered; and many hope and expect that the last years of this century will be marked by an uprising of "man evolving from the slave," like unto that which made the last quarter of the last century a great era in human history.

Legal Forms and Technicalities.

BY HON. WALTER CLARK, ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Every profession, legal, medical, philosophical or clerical, in its early stages endeavors to lock up its secrets and maintain its dignity by the use of a language and formulæ not intelligible to laymen. As civilization advances, professions become more liberal. Possessed of more real learning, they rely less upon jargon and meaningless forms and phrases.

To apply this to the legal profession, our English law was once almost wholly given to technicality and forms; so much so that the real matters in issue were often lost sight of. Frequently a party would lose a meritorious case and pay a large bill of costs because his counsel thought the action should be brought at law when the judge might think it should have been in equity, or because the action was entitled trover when it should have been case or detinue. These childish quibbles seemed to very able men, who were habituated to them, to be the very essence of the law. They thought that the very heavens would fall if these sacred forms were swept away. But they were swept away in this State in 1868, and yet the heavens remained placid and serene.

There then remained, however, the cumbrous forms in criminal proceedings. An indictment for murder was a wonderful instrument. It charged numerous and strange things, some of them unprovable and very many utterly irrelevant. But each was sacredly held to be indispensable. The "mystery" of the law must be preserved lest, as it seemed, laymen might attempt to plead their own cases and lawyers become unnecessary. Among numerous similar incidents, it may be recalled that a man convicted of a gross brutal murder, after a long and impartial trial in one of our counties, and at an expense of thousands of dollars to tax payers, had the judgment against him arrested after verdict because his lawyer discovered that in the bill of indictment the word "knife" (with which the murder had been committed) was spelt without a "k." The bill of indictment for perjury was so fearfully intricate that solicitors abstained from drawing them except when forced to do so; and indictments for that offence were usually held defective, as a matter of course, if the defendant had an ingenious lawyer. The trial judge was usually not willing to risk himself by holding such an indictment to be valid.

In conveyances—deeds, mortgages, and the like—repetitions, recitals and redundancy were considered essential. The greater the number of synonyms which could be found to express the same idea, the "more strengthy" and binding the conveyance was considered to be.

But we "have changed all that," too. A recent statute, construed by a decision of the Supreme Court, renders the following a sufficient indictment for murder: "The jurors for the State on their oath present that A. B. feloniously did kill and murder C. D." There is the one essential point clearly and unmistakably charged. The defendant and every body else can understand what it is. It cannot be misunderstood. If that charge is proven to the satisfaction of the jury, your man shall hang.

The indictments for perjury, and other offences, have been wonderfully simplified on the same lines.

As to deeds, the following would now doubtless be held to be a good deed in North Carolina, as it has been held to be in Iowa and elsewhere:—

"In consideration of — dollars, I hereby convey to A. B. all my interest in the following tract of land (describing it). This — day of —, 1894. SEAL."

And the following would be a good warranty deed:—

"In consideration of — dollars, I hereby convey to A. B. the following tract of land (describing it), and I warrant the title against all persons whatsoever. This — day of —, 1894. SEAL."

A mortgage would follow the above form for a deed, simply adding that it was given to secure a sum specified, and that if default is made in payment by a date named, the mortgagor may advertise for the length of time and in the manner set out, and sell the mortgaged property to pay off the mortgage, handing the surplus, if any, to the mortgagor.

A comparison will show that, excluding words describing the property, and the date, by the above forms a warranty deed requires twenty-five words, a quit claim deed twenty, and a mortgage one hundred words or less. The same instruments would to day require in New Jersey, where the old forms are still in use, as follows: A warrantee deed would require (excluding words describing the property) five hundred and ninety-three words, a quit claim deed two hundred and seventy words, and a mortgage seven hundred and eighty words.

From the above summary, it will be seen that there has been progress in the law in North Carolina. Both by legislation and by the courts there has been a clearly expressed determination to lay aside obsolete and useless technicalities, and to make every case, civil and criminal, triable on its merits, and and every indictment and every conveyance short, clear and intelligible.

The Second Coming of Christ.

A sermon preached by Rev. R. D. Carroll at Fort Barnwell Baptist Church, Craven County, August 20th, 1893.

Text, Rev. 1:7—"Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen."

That Christ will come again, is abundantly taught in the Bible. Not only do the inspired apostolic teachings prove this doctrine, but all the orthodox Christians, who have lived during the past centuries, have steadfastly taught the beaming millions the same God-given truth. No system of religious teaching would be perfect without the doctrine of "the second coming." Our Lord himself frequently referred to his second coming while he was with the disciples. The apostles taught the early Christians to watch and be ready when the Lord should come. There was at one time quite an excitement in the church at Thessalonica, because Paul had preached to the brethren there that the Lord would come again.

The Old Testament Scriptures which speak of our Lord's first coming, also speak of his second coming. In discussing this subject we are not foolishly to set a day as some have done on which the Lord will come. It is enough for us to know that the event is certain. I note then, first,

THE CERTAINTY OF HIS COMING.

The Scriptures teach that he will come again, and they shall have our first attention.

In the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew our Lord speaks of the sun being darkened and the moon being turned into blood. Then in verse thirty he speaks of the appearance of the sign of the son of man in heaven—"And then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Our Lord has been telling the people about the fearful consequences which came upon the wicked in the days of Noah and Lot, all because they did not watch, and therefore were not ready for the day of wrath when revealed from the presence of the Lord. He presents his second coming as the highest reason why people should heed his warning and receive his teachings.

In Matt. 26: 64, our Lord is before the Jewish court, being tried for his life, and the high-priest asked if he were the Son of God, and our Saviour told him that "hereafter shall ye see the son of man sitting on the right hand of power, coming in the clouds of heaven." Here Jesus Christ teaches that his enemies are to know that he is the Son of God by the fact that "he comes the second time without sin unto salvation."

After the resurrection of Christ he remained with his people on the earth forty days, and opened to them the Scriptures, and they loved him and were strongly attached to him; so when the time came for him to go back to his Father in heaven, they were grieved at the thought of his leaving them. They did not understand everything in connection with the divine arrangement; so when Jesus was about to ascend, two angels were sent from God to comfort his sorrowing children who remained on the earth. The aspiration of the redeemed soul is to be with its Saviour. These angels restored the heart broken disciples that Jesus came to reign, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Here the emphasis is on the fact that the Lord will come again. The Christians were comforted with these words and went to Jerusalem to pray.

In the fourteenth chapter of John our Lord comforts his disciples by telling them that he is "coming again to receive them unto himself," part of the Christian's comfort is based upon the glad union which is to be realized with the glorified Lord when he comes the second time.

Mark and Luke both say that the Son of Man shall be seen coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. The greater part of the knowledge which Christians have of Christ comes as a result of the Spirit's leading them into the truth. Paul, while at Thessalonica, was so thoroughly imbued with the glory of the second coming that he taught the Christians there to "wait for the revelation of Jesus Christ from heaven."

1 Thes. 4: 16, says, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." Here Paul assures the brethren that the Lord would come the second time. There is no truth in the Bible taught more clearly than the second coming of Christ. We may adduce proof from the old Scriptures in substantiation of this doctrine.

In Daniel 7: 9—14, we have a description of the second coming and of the general judgment—"I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld then, because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their times were prolonged for a season and time. I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Here the prophet foretells the future triumphs of the gospel, and the second coming is the central point around which all the other events cling. To be weak on this point, means that you are weak on the resurrection, future glory for the righteous, and future punishment for the wicked. Heaven with all of its glory will be nothing to you without the second coming of Christ. Both the Old and New Testaments state, "That he cometh with ten thousand of his saints." Deut. 33: 2. Jude 4.

What I have said leads me to notice

THE MANNER OF HIS COMING.

"He cometh suddenly." The thief comes when you are not expecting him. The flood came when the people were not expecting it. They were wholly unprepared for such a judgment. They were engaged in the affairs of every day life, as though no flood had been coming. They were destroyed because they were not ready to enter in God's way. When the people of Sodom and Gomorrah were revelling in their sins and giving themselves no concern about their future welfare, they were with fire and brimstone destroyed from the earth and consigned to the flames of eternal fire. Our Lord says as it was in the day of these people, so will it be in the days when the Son of man cometh. They will be eating, drinking and marrying, and will not know until the Son of man comes—"They will say peace and safety, and then sudden destruction cometh upon the children of disobedience." When you least expect it you will be called into the judgment of the great God; and if you are not ready and waiting for him, it will be ill with you. If you are not earnestly watching and waiting for him, then you will be deceived when he comes. Let all be watching, prayerful, diligent and faithful when the Lord comes.

THE UNIVERSALITY OF EVERY EYE BEHOLDING HIM.

Not only will the Lord come and come suddenly, but every eye shall behold him. For this statement the Scriptures are the best source of proof. The text states that "every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." Here we are told those who were guilty of the crucifixion of literally piercing him shall see him at his coming. With some people there is some difficulty in understanding how every eye shall see him. They say if the righteous go to heaven, and the wicked to torment, how can it be certain that every eye shall see him at his second coming? They shall see him, whom they pierced. John 19: 37. The "wailing" millions of the dead will rise and see him. The old earth will be called from their long sleep, and will come forth to be judged. The Lord, "for every eye shall see him," and they also of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. Dan. 12: 2. "Those who pierced him" will be raised before the dead in Christ at the second coming, and will see him coming. The nations will be gathered before him coming from heaven to judge the world. SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

The instruction of our children in Christian principles from the time when they are able to appreciate instruction until they reach manhood, is very important. The child should leave its mother's knee only to listen to God's truths more ably told. There should not be a period in life when the child is not receiving instruction in God's Word; and the Sunday school is an essential to this end. The parents may teach their children in their earlier years, but there is a tendency to leave them to their secular studies in youth; and here the Sunday-school must take up the thread.

But there is complaint now that the Sunday-school is not doing the work for which it was intended; that, while the younger children take an interest in it, they soon outgrow their love, and before they are able to follow thought as delivered from the pulpit, they lose all sense of duty to Bible study. We believe that to some degree the complaint is justifiable. Many Sunday-schools are not what they should be. There is not that spirituality in them that should always be present in the sanctuary of the Lord; they are not regarded as sacredly as they should be, and oftimes are disrespected. The youth goes, not from sense of duty or desire, but because the parents make him. He dreads it more than he does the week day school. Bear in mind that we are not speaking with regard to any one school, or the whole class; but of certain cases of which we have heard and have testimony.

We have in Raleigh excellent Sunday-schools; but they cannot be taken as other than exceptions to the rule, for they have the guidance of Christians of large experience, and are managed far better than the average Sunday-school. And moreover, they are so situated that they will always have abundant material for officers and workers and classes, being in a city of almost fifteen hundred white Baptists. They are exceptionally good schools, and in many ways show the weak places in those of other churches.

A great cause of the disrespect which many children have for the Sunday school is the method of making them attractive by entertainments, picnics, etc. It is only natural that such pleasures are not regarded in a spiritual light. They may be very well in some cases, and no one should deny children certain pleasures, but they should be given in a manner as to entirely disconnect them from things temporal, or weld them indissolubly to the spiritual. There is no half-way ground. Never should an excursion be given to obtain new scholars; but we may give them, and in a manner that is highly pleasurable, and impress the minds of the children with the goodness of God. In the same way Sunday-school exhibitions are dangerous. They can be made both profitable and pleasurable and spiritual, but it cannot be done in the foolish manner that is sometimes attempted. Money may be raised by the children, but they should find their greatest pleasure in the consciousness that they have helped the Lord's cause; other pleasure there may be, but it should not be predominant. A child should be taught to walk in the path of duty, and find its pleasure in that path; but at the same time the path of duty should be so natural and adaptable to the child that it will be pleasant. We do not advocate straight-laced and long-faced piety among children; but we do wish to see the children loving the Sunday-school, not for its so called attractions, but for the instruction to be received and the love of Christ.

A great need in Sunday-schools is properly trained teachers. It does not take a theologian to teach a class of youths, but it does require consecration, a knowledge of the Bible, something of history, an insight into character, a good mind and impressive force. The teacher must be able to impress himself on his hearers before he can impress knowledge; and he should have an insight into the character of those who hear him in order to adapt his methods to them. Great care should be exercised in choosing teachers. In them is the energy and the machinery of the structure. They cannot know too much about the Bible and Bible history; and they must have the faculty of winning the attention and the confidence of their hearers. We really believe that the most common mistake is in the choice of teachers, a most vital point; and yet few of us are able to discriminate between a successful and unsuccessful teacher before we have [illegible] tried.

[illegible] the North Carolina Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua was organized. Its object is to remedy the trouble to which we have just alluded, by the instruction of teachers. We believe there is good in such an organization, and its only drawback is that it cannot reach every Sunday-school. Its method is the usual Chautauqua method: Lectures, discussions, questions put and answered by men who have made successes in teaching. Let us have an educated, a trained Sunday-school teaching force; and we trust there will be no more complaints of the tiresomeness and dullness of Sunday-schools. They can be made interesting and attractive and instructive, but it requires good teachers.

"THE INDEPENDENT" AND THE SOUTH.

We had thought the war was over; at least we had long since acquiesced in the inevitable. But there are still a few Northern editors who have laid down the sword only to wield the reputed mightier pen against the South. It seems that they will never cease to vent their impious spite and vile spleen on the South. The latest to asperse the character of our section is the Independent (New York)—only in name, however,—which has for many years been prominent among defamers of the people of the conquered banner.

This paper contains a symposium on "Lynching" in its issue of Feb. 1st, and rather than lose subscribers in its own section, directs all its remarks against the South. We agree that lynching under any circumstances is as deplorable as it is diabolical,—as much so in the North and West as in the South, however. But the Independent goes farther: A correspondent, claiming to be a "resident of North Carolina," who discreetly withholds his name, charges the churches and the society of North Carolina with sanctioning the vilest crimes of which human beings can be guilty. The statements in the article purport to be from one who has resided in our State several years, and who has incontrovertible evidence of their verity. And the editor of the Independent willingly makes favorable comment on the article;—it is only charitable to say that he believes the statements of the resident of North Carolina.

We cannot refer more definitely to the statements made, for the simple reason that they are unworthy of a paper intended for the family. We would have been surprised to see them in any religious journal except the Independent. But there is one way, and only one, to settle the matter: The writer of the article refers to definite cases, of which, of course, he has full evidence. We challenge him to produce it. The editor of the RECORDER has lived in North Carolina twenty-five years; he has been an editor almost twenty years of this time; he travelled over the State, coming in contact with all classes of people, every fall for ten years; and he is certain that such travesties of the law of God and man could not escape his notice. He has been a trustee of Shaw University for about ten years; he has a larger acquaintance with the colored people than any preacher in the State; he knows he is regarded as their friend; and he has been no little interested in the negro problem. But never within his knowledge have such things occurred as the "North Carolina resident" refers to.

But our challenge will settle it. Let him adduce his facts specifically; the Independent will publish them only too gladly, as they, even though false, make good reading for the worshippers of Sherman's soulless horde, to whom, by the way, no insignificant percentage of the half and three quarter blooded negroes are traceable. If the facts are not adduced, let the article stand branded a foul invention of a depraved intellect.

In the name of decency the editor of the Independent should have refrained from publishing the article; in the name of truth he should have investigated before endorsing it; in the name of the God of truth and justice the article should be proved or retracted. Let him be mindful of the lake which burneth for liars as well as other criminals.

The writer of the article is worse than the negro brute; is worse than the Texas brute-burning mob: maliciously and without justification he has traduced the character of a people whose highest human regard is woman's virtue and man's honor. He has tried to steal their character, and, unsuccessful, slinks off fiend-like, as trackless as possible; guilt written in his very action. The South desires none of his kind; it is a region for men, not traducing ingrates. Let the "North Carolina resident" hide his guilt-bearing brow as well as his name from the gaze of men. His putrid intellect is an abomination to honest Southern sunshine.

Now is a good time to renew your subscription. By so doing you will confer a great favor on us.

MANY papers are absorbed in discussing the Roman Catholic attempt to obtain public appropriations for their parochial schools, but they have overlooked operations on the same principle that have been and are now going on under their very eyes. In the last nine years $2,736,581 have been appropriated to Roman Catholics for Indian education. Whether good comes or not, it has a tendency to evil that will culminate badly. It is on the wrong principle; it is unconstitutional. Let Congress listen to the petition of the National League for the Protection of American Institutions.

VARIOUS journals and books consume pages and pages in producing evidences of Christianity. It is a favorite theme with many, but they often seek too deep to find the truest evidences. Let them look at a Christian community, or a Christian man; they are all-sufficient evidences. The changes that Christ has wrought on human beings are more than miracles, and are wonderful testimonies to his grace and his power. In no other religion do we find these changes. The Mohammedan is a benighted and narrow being: he is sordid and low-minded and wretched, although he turns his eyes to the temple with every call of the muezzin; the Hindoo and the Chinaman are unchanged in nature and character, although their piety from the idol-worshipper's point of view is unquestionable. Let us have less of labored deductions. Christ in man is the great evidence of Christianity, and infidels can see it if they look. Be careful, Christian, that Christ shine brightly in your life.

THE breath of the school children is the life of the Nation; and North Carolina is regardless of her interests in that she is not providing for the education of her children. It is a fact that public schools in our State are kept open a shorter time than in any other State in the Union. Bro. Scarborough is doing all that is in his power, but he has not the means to do what should be done. Already some people are proposing a reformatory. The State is now spending too much on criminals, and we cannot sanction such a proposal as long as the schools are not provided for. If the people should pay taxes for anything other than the running expenses of the government, it should be for the education of our children in the public schools. Moreover a system of public schools maintained in every community eight months in the year would make a reformatory unnecessary. The average number of days they were open in 1891-'92 was only sixty-two.

THE system of church letters is a very delicate one, and yet it is very simple. Recently we have had several inquiries in regard to them, and our attention has been called to some errors in their usage.

The church-letter was originated with the object of protecting churches. They were made a part of our church organization, not to be kept in the pocket or in the desk; but for easy and immediate transfer of membership. Yet it is often the case that in moving from one town to another, the last thing the member does is to settle his church membership. He should attend to it at his earliest opportunity. And still there is another danger. The school-boy leaves home for college, and his pastor and his parents urge him to keep his membership in the "old home church." This is wrong. It exposes the youth to danger; he should always have active membership in some church, and the fact that his name is not on the books may lead him to disregard the college church. The same is true of moving "to the city." It sounds well to keep your membership in the old home church, but it is far better to be in a position to do active work wherever you may be. Instead of urging the boy or the man to keep his membership at his former home, his letter should be pressed upon him, and the pastor of the church in the place to which he removes notified. There is many a name on church-books now that should be transferred; they should be investigated and attended to.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

Court was to have convened at 10 o'clock in Louisburg on Monday, but did not convene till after 4 o'clock. The Judge in his charge to the grand jury said he did not propose to apologize for not being there earlier, for the reason that to have done so he would have had to travel the best part of the day Sunday. There was no sign of any disposition on the part of anybody to take an exception to this ruling on the part of the Court, and if there had been, certainly his Honor could have stood solidly behind the fourth commandment. But while this position was announced by the head of the court with a sort of pious heroism, and was received with silent applause by those present, we could hardly help wondering if, instead of being the Judge, it had been some other officer or person under the direction of the court, coming in with just such an excuse, how the matter would have turned out. In a recent article written for the RECORDER by Judge R. W. Winston, he takes the position that our courts ought to open on Tuesday instead of Monday as they do now. In this Judge Winston shows the good judgment and amiable character which have so distinctly marked his official dealing with the public. An excuse which is good for a Judge ought to avail for a juror, witness or any one else having business in the court.

Bro. C. M. Cook is suffering temporarily with rheumatism, and was scarcely able to be in place in the court-room.

Pastor Morton is in fine health and succeeding finely: hard times have taught preachers as well as other men to put forth extra efforts in organizing and systematizing the work of their churches, and are getting more work by the same number of members than heretofore.

Bro. Cade, who is so affectionately remembered by the brethren and citizens of Louisburg, spent some days with the legal fraternity: he loves the law as well as the gospel.

At Warrenton we failed to find Bro. Taylor, he being at Littleton holding a meeting with Bro. Fant. We failed, also, to renew the subscriptions of the brethren, not, however, for the same reasons we sometimes find. They had used the policy of the raccoon when he found that Davy Crocket stood at the other end of the gun—most of them had sent up their money the week before. Hope many more will do likewise.

Bro. Van Deventer has moved just across the street from where he lived last year. I didn't know this, so I found myself soon after reaching the town pulling at the door-bell which for the last three years had brought the Henderson bishop to his feet; but this time, instead of confronting the stalwart form of him whom I had so often met there, a gentleman, not over five feet, six inches, with a bald head and gold spectacles on, came out and politely invited me to walk in. Well, I didn't know whether to go in or not. I began to try to find out "where I was at." I had not seen Bro. Van Deventer for some time, but I knew it was hardly possible for such shrinkage and scalpage to have taken place in so short a time, but in the midst of my confusion, which must have been immense, I am glad my friend didn't have a kodak. I found I was trespassing upon the peaceful home of a good Presbyterian brother, who very kindly offered to either take me for the night or show me the new home of Bro. Van Deventer. All of this was a sign of good luck, for I found most of the brethren, and with the kind help of Bro. Van Deventer, put their subscriptions forward another year. Bro. Thrower has been sick for some time, but is better now. The whole face of the earth was covered with ice on Friday morning; young men were slipping and some falling on the side-walks, yet Bro. Lassiter was at his accustomed post in his store, sharing work and fun with the boys. Bro. D. Y. Cooper was happy, as he always is, when his warehouse is full of fine tobacco, and his customers are going away pleased with the prices they get for tobacco. Bro. Shaw has been "tusseling" with the "grippe" for sometime: we are glad he is better now. He and Bro. Pittman have dissolved co-partnership, and Bro. Shaw will be found now in the rear of the court-house. These brethren are fine advocates, and will no doubt continue as heretofore to get a large portion of the legal business in Henderson.

I noticed that nearly a page a day is filled with arrivals at Massenburg's Hotel. This is no more than a just recognition, on the part of the public, of the efforts of a man who endeavors to give them the worth of their money. There is no cleverer man than the proprietor of the Henderson Hotel, and there is no house in the State where people are better treated.

There are many things which make a visit to Oxford pleasant. We are all more or less selfish, or, rather, have an "eye to business." The BIBLICAL RECORDER is taken by more people in Oxford than at any other post office in the State; then, outside of this, it is a real pleasure to spend a few days among these brethren. A few years ago the criminal docket here was one of the largest in the State. It is not so now. I note this as a sign of prosperity. Bro. Hardaway, who has been preaching here only three Sundays in the month for some time, is now giving all his time to the work here. The brethren and sisters, too, are hard at work to secure the completion of their church-building. How I did wish I had a dollar to give to every one who asked me. Bro. J. M. Currin is hopeful of that section: he says the farmers are getting good prices for good grades of tobacco, and that they have plenty of provisions for another year. He had just received a check from a distant friend for $250 to aid in the finishing of the church.

Prof. Hobgood feels encouraged in his school. This session is better than the last. Many others desire to be there and would be but for the stringency in money matters. F. P. Hobgood, jr., has done excellent work in the school-room this year, and has arranged to study law at the Columbian University next year. Frank is a bright boy, and gives promise of usefulness in his chosen profession.

Bro. Fant is much pleased with Littleton. The late revival has added some valuable members, and the work seems to have a new start. Bro. Shaw has just completed and furnished an elegant hotel. Brother Ray Browning has just finished a splendid brick building which he will use for his office and drug-store. Bro. Bagley has without question one of the best schools for boys in the State. The area of his patronage continues to enlarge every year, a result of judicious advertising and honest, competent work.

....The Gospel Mission, a twelve-column monthly, is a new North Carolina Baptist publication. It is edited by Bro. R. L. Patton, and is issued from Morganton, N. C. Its object is to arouse the friends of this new mission (the Gospel Mission) to more earnest prayers and greater gifts.

....On last Sunday morning the First Baptist church Sunday-school of Raleigh voted to pay $100 of the debt on the West End Mission Chapel. This Sunday-school does good work. Dr. Carter said recently that it had a habit of keeping something special before it, and we believe it is a good habit.

....Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., of Jonesboro, Tenn., writes: "The Jonesboro church will make any pastor happy. About thirteen have joined during my pastorate. My members say they are in the best condition that they have been in for some years." The lamented Dr. William Royall was once pastor of this church.

....The rumor that the Pope nominated Mgr. Satolli a Cardinal at a recent consistory, and that he is to be recalled as Apostolic delegate to the United States, is generally believed. His mission to the United States has only served to anger Roman Catholics and Protestants. Giving him a red hat would enable him to escape from an uncomfortable position with dignity.—Watchman.

....Hon. W. L. Wilson, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and author of the tariff bill before the House of Representatives, is a member of the Baptist church at Charlestown, W. Va., and a faithful Sunday-school teacher. He generally returns home on Saturday night and is in his place on Sunday.—Baptist, Baltimore. We wish as much could be said of many other Representatives.

....Think, at almost the same hour in which you receive your paper, two hundred thousand Baptist homes opened to a visitor of much the same spirit, speaking in the same tone, having the same intent. Into nearly a million souls the same inspiration is breathed. Nearly a million copies of religious periodicals enter homes in our country this week.—J. E. Chambliss, D. D., in Central Baptist.

....Rev. J. E. Smith of Raleigh, a young Baptist minister, spent several days in the community this week. Preached at Knap of Reeds and Tally Ho Baptist churches. The people were very favorably impressed with Mr. Smith, and there is some prospects of his making Stem his future home. He will preach at Pleasant Grove Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 3d and 4th.—Stem cor. in Oxford Ledger, Feb. 2.

....Rev. J. C. Alderman has resigned the pastorate of the Concord church, to take effect May 1st. At that time he will have been pastor of the Concord church over two years, and in this comparatively short pastorate his membership has almost doubled, and a good sum has been paid on the church debt. Bro. Alderman will hold revival services in his church before leaving, which we think an excellent plan.

....Rev. C. G. Wells has returned to Warsaw, N. C., after an absence of fifteen months from the State. Our readers will remember that Bro. Wells was awarded a Fellowship at the Chicago University, where he won distinction as a student. Bro. Wells has the following to say of the RECORDER: "Through fifteen months of absence from home, the RECORDER has kept me in living touch with Baptist affairs in the State, and I want to thank you for what the paper has been to me."

....Rev. N. R. Pittman writes from Greensboro, on his way to St. Joseph, Mo., under date of Jan. 29th: "I am on my way to St. Joseph. I found it inconvenient to go to Raleigh and Wake Forest without breaking some of my plans to visit my people. I have preached at Greensboro, Rennert, Lumberton, Ashpole, Mt. Airy and in Chattanooga, Tenn., since I left St. Joseph—14 sermons—and I have enjoyed my visit to North Carolina very greatly. I may soon write the RECORDER a letter concerning the trip."

....Rev. H. W. Tribble of Jackson, Tenn., tells the Baptist and Reflector of a ministerial student at the Baptist University of that town who is living on $9.84 a month. He buys his own provisions, does his own cooking and cleans his own room. When a man like this "pulls through," he is sure to be in demand. He hardly knows what to do with the "calls" that pour in upon himself; while the young brother who waits for something to "turn up" has all the rest of his life to meditate upon the mistake he made.—Religious Herald.

...."From the most carefully compiled statistics, it is found there are in this country thirty-three Foreign Missionary Societies, whose contributions are $4,963,516; in Great Britain twenty-nine Societies, whose contributions are $7,904,158, in Canada five, whose contributions are $186,887; in Germany seventeen, whose contributions are $652,823. The summary of Protestant Foreign Missions in the world is 6,179 missionaries; 44,538 native laborers; 893,315 communicants; and $14,586,854 contributions from home churches."—Dr. Geo. Cooper, in Foreign Mission Journal.

....The Executive Committee met here (Thomasville) last Wednesday. All the members were present. Most of the business was transacted before noon. At 3 p. m. Dr. Pritchard preached an appropriate sermon on the Water of Life. Messrs. Frost and Fleming followed with timely and tender remarks on quiet devotion to daily duties. After supper, prayers were held with the sick, and the members of the committee returned to their homes.—Charity and Children, Feb. 2.

....The meeting at the Baptist church, which has been in progress since the first day of January, closed last Thursday night. Beginning Sunday night, January 7th, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Church, preached every night excepting Sunday night, and every Sunday morning, until the close of the meeting on the night of the 25th—making nineteen sermons in all. As a result of the meeting there have been about twenty-seven accessions to the Baptist church by letter and experience. Ten persons were baptized Monday night of last week and there are eight or ten more candidates for baptism.—Landmark, Feb. 1. That is what we call good, hard, faithful work; and it is the kind that God blesses. The meetings have resulted in the establishment of a mission in Statesville.

Corrections Corrected

DRS. MARSH AND SKINNER—THE "BARN" OF THE FIRST, AND THE "PARLOR" OF THE SECOND—THE CONVENTION—NOT LEGEND, BUT FACTS—"THE PALE OF CONTROVERSITY"—"THE COURTESIES OF DEBATE."

In the RECORDER of Dec. 6th, 1893, Dr. R. H. Marsh said: "The fathers of the Convention are now all dead; but the humble institution that was born in the barn of Dr. J. C. Gorman March 26th, 1830, still lives."

In the RECORDER of Jan. 31st, 1894, Dr. T. E Skinner, correcting Dr. Marsh's mistake about the place of organization of the Convention, says that the Convention was organized "in the parlor of the former residence of the late Mr. Gorham."

Both of these brethren are mistaken. The Baptist State Convention was organized neither in a "barn" nor in a parlor; but "in the Academy" in Greenville, North Carolina. The minutes of the first session of the Convention—the record made that day, March 26th, 1830, by the secretaries, and afterwards published, is before me. This minute distinctively and positively says "at half past eleven o'clock, March 26th, 1830, an introductory sermon was preached in the Baptist meeting house by Elder S. Wait from Matt. 9: 36-38. At 3 o'clock, the Society (North Carolina Baptist Benevolent Society) convened for business IN THE ACADEMY." They there and then, after transacting some business of the Society, as the minutes show, organized the Convention, read and adopted the constitution, appointed a committee on order of business for the next day, and "adjourned to 8 o'clock tomorrow."

There is, however, just this much as a basis for the "barn" and "parlor" legends—the minutes nowhere say the Convention "was not organized in a barn or a parlor." But, perhaps, it never occurred to Bro. R. S. Blount and Rev. John Armstrong, the Recording Secretaries, or to the Convention, that this would be necessary to fix the place of organization. They doubtless supposed the brethren, in all after years, would not follow legends, but the published statements in their minutes.

If these "facts" shall leave Dr. Marsh without "a barn" and Dr. Skinner without "a parlor," I am reasonably certain they will not place me "beyond the pale of legitimate controversy," or refuse to discuss the question further because the "facts" are against them. These brethren do not so understand "the courtesies of debate," but believe in faithfulness to the facts in our denominational history. But who misled Drs. Marsh and Skinner? C. DURHAM.

"CORRECTIONS CORRECTED."

The citizens of Greenville, I have no doubt, will be thankful for the facts. They and many others have been misled by the tradition that the North Carolina Baptist State Convention was organized in the parlor of Mr. Gorham.

It is hard to rub out a tradition, but we must not go "behind the returns." The minutes of the meeting settles the question. The Convention was organized in the Academy.

It is reasonable to suppose that a preliminary meeting of the fourteen original members of the Convention was held in Mr. Gorham's parlor, and that after full deliberation there, they met at the Academy as the North Carolina Benevolent Society, and there and then resolved themselves into a State Convention. The words of the resolution are, "Resolved, that this Society be transformed into a State Convention." Then followed the constitution, which was read and adopted.

The barn and parlor theories are smashed. Durham is on top. Where is Marsh? Hear him:—

"In a journal of Dr. Samuel Wait it is stated * * *, 'and that when the Convention was formed, in the barn of Dr. J. C. Gorman (Gorham) * * * that constitution was substantially adopted,' &c. Cathcart's Encyclopedia, page 864. That's all I know about it. R. H. MARSH."

Now that little quotation from Dr. Wait's journal excuses Dr. Marsh. But where did Dr. Cathcart get that bit of information?

Bro. Moderator, can you inform us who was Dr. Cathcart's informant? If that informant was correct, and if Dr. Wait's journal was also correct, then Dr. Marsh's barn is rebuilt, notwithstanding it was smashed. Here is a lesson for us Baptists. Be sure to preserve the historical facts of our existence by recording them accurately and as near the time of their occurrence as possible.

THOS. E. SKINNER.

Attention, Brother Pastors

Only three months remain ere the books of the Treasurer of the Home Mission Board shall close accounts for this year. In nine months we have raised $1,091.10 for this work. Since 1887 our contributions to Home Missions have run steadily upwards till for the year ending May 1, 1893, we gave, including contributions to the house of worship in Havana, nearly $10,000. What we gave last year I have no means of knowing, having mislaid my copy of the S. B. C. minutes; the amount was probably not under $4,000. Brethren, now is the time to bestir ourselves for this cause. Let us not go up to the Convention in May with a deficit of several thousand dollars. Let me beg every pastor to lay the matter before his churches and inform them about the work. I have on hand a hundred sets of the following tract on Home Missions: "The Cloud Lifting," by A. C. Barron; "Indian Missions," by I. T. Tichenor; "A View of the Negro Question," by Dr. Gambrell; "Our Frontier Missionaries," Dr. Tichenor; "The Field and the Work," J. W. Jones; "Conversation of Diaz and his Return to Cuba," Dr. Tichenor; "The Mountain Region and Its People," F. C. McConnell. With a view to aiding any brother who is not supplied with the means of information, I will send a set of these tracts complete or any of them that may be desired to any preacher in the State who wants them enough to write me a postal-card requesting them. I will pay the postage too. The only cost to you will be one cent. I would send them without your writing at all, but do not want to send them to any body's waste-basket. I ask you to write for them only to see whether you want them. Send on your requests, read tracts carefully, and then ask your people to make one contribution to Home Missions at your earliest convenience.

R. T. VANN.

The New President.

The trustees of the Baptist Female University have made no mistake in selecting Prof. Jno. B. Brewer of Murfreesboro as their President. For two years it was my pleasure and privilege to be associated with him as teacher in the Chowan Institute and I wish to take this opportunity of bearing witness to his entire fitness for the position.

The three prime requisites for the presidency of this college for women, and I name them in the order of their importance, are, first, executive ability; second, experience; third, scholarship. Mr. Brewer combines the three in a singularly happy manner. His twenty years record of successful teaching and management of female schools are far more expressive than words. Without a doubt he is the best man in the Baptist denomination for the place. Possessed of untiring energy, he will do all that one man can do to make the University a success. Again, he is fortunate in having a better half who knows how to do her part and always unhesitatingly does it. The unusual success Mr. Brewer has achieved is due in a large measure to the fine judgment, ability and cleverness of his noble wife.

To accept this position, Mr. Brewer will have to make a large pecuniary sacrifice and it behooves all Baptists to rally to his support. It is too late to discuss its location; that is settled and I believe wisely. The Baptists need, and need badly, a female college at Raleigh. Whether it should be called a University is of no practical importance. The trustees and Pres. Brewer will settle this matter wisely. It is too soon to discuss co-education. Theoretically I believe in co-education, but practically we are not ready for it. Let us side-track all these petty questions whose discussion now can not but result in harm, and see if we cannot do some work for the University.

Dangerous

Dear Recorder:—In the last issue of the RECORDER we noticed a short article commenting on the danger, which attends a minister who becomes popular, and we almost shuddered as we thought of our own beloved pastor, Rev. Rufus Weaver. "It is dangerous," the writer said, "to become popular; it is dangerous to become great in the eyes of the world. If this be true, then surely there must be danger ahead of him, for truly he is popular in High Point, and we expect him soon to become great in the eyes of the world, but we hope and believe he will be able to pass safely through the danger, and come out more pure, more humble and more consecrated than before. Although he is talented and eloquent, and the people are delighted with his sermons; his gentle unassuming manners; his humility and faith, and above all his deep spirituality is the magnet that has drawn the hearts of the people toward him.

His sermon Sunday night, on "Jesus the Carpenter," was forcible, pathetic, and grand, and impressed all who heard it. Rev. J. B. Richardson assisted in the celebration of the Lord's supper Sunday morning, and his remarks were timely and touching and much enjoyed by those present. The church is united and hopeful. May the Lord direct and keep us all, and may we, pastor and people, like H. A. Brown and the Winston church, grow up together a power for good and for God. H.

"News and Views"

BY M. P. W.

DR. J. B. LINK.

Recently there passed to a well earned reward—if one can be said to earn such a reward—this distinguished brother at his home in Austin, Texas. I have known him since 1883, but for twenty-eight years he has been intimately associated with the work of the denomination in that great State. He was my friend, and I love to think of his sturdy character and unflinching devotion to the truth as he understood it. Very many years of his life he gave to religious journalism, to which he was greatly devoted. No doubt he would have been in it up to the day of his death but for circumstances over which he had no control. He was a man of strong convictions and hence often got into trouble and sometimes with his own brethren, but his heart was always found in the right place. His judgment was generally reliable. I do not remember but one instance in which I felt called to differ from him, and that was his position in reference to the Sunday school literature. He was always a firm friend of the literature of the American Baptist Society as opposed to the Southern Series, and I suppose he died believing that there was no necessity for our own literature. He had gathered together a good deal of this world's goods, and he knew how to take care of it, for he was a safe business man, but he was liberal toward the cause of Christ. He died in his seventieth year after three days of illness. He had nearly lived out his three score and ten years, and his had been a faithful, consecrated life.

AN AWKWARD FIX.

Down in the "Lone Star State" they have two Baptist papers with about a half dozen aspirants for the dignity of such title. Just now there is a cloud on the denominational horizon somewhat "larger than a man's hand," and there is good prospect of rapid growth of said cloud. It all came about in a very simple way, but is none the less aggravating on that account. It so happens that there is a giant in that country, and he stands head and shoulders above his brethren, and this giant is remarkably popular in that land of cow-boys and large ideas, and naturally each paper wants the influence of his writings, and so there is a squabble over the publication of his sermons, and there is "blood on the moon," and the rumbling like unto a hurricane in a cave, and everybody is on the qui vive for a "cloud-burst" or something of the sort. One editor seems to have "a cinch" on the situation, and the other is making a pathetic plea for a portion of the eloquence of the giant. The aforesaid giant is in "a cita fiction," out of which he is trying to "worm himself." It all came about by an agreement first for one editor to publish his morning sermons, which were prepared specially for the church, and which said editor expects to publish in book-form later on. The editor who is never caught napping secured a short-hand reporter to report the night sermons, which were delivered off-hand without special preparation and were to the unconverted. The preacher agreed to correct them for a consideration; but when the stenographer appeared on the scene and began operations, it took all the fire out of the preacher and served as a "sort of shower-bath" to the service, and so he canceled his agreement to supervise, and tried to stop things, but they won't stop, and hence the fix.

THE SECULAR PRESS.

The secular press knows a great many things, and can be relied upon for a good deal of information, but when it comes to denominational matters, they are vastly ignorant, and get themselves into very unenviable positions, as, for instance, in the recent announcement of the consolidation of Baptist and Campbellite churches. The amount of ignorance among intelligent people on Baptist church polity is absolutely appalling. Many of these newspaper writers are intelligent "churchmen" in other denominations, and yet seem to have no sort of conception of our polity. There is no two denominations further part than the two mentioned, which are reported as ready to unite. The only point of agreement between them is on the mode of baptism, while they disagree on the other three essentials in baptism. As to their name—which Dr. Tupper is reported to favor because it is scriptural—it is proper to say that it would be a long time before Baptists would consent to adopt the name "Christian" to designate themselves as a denomination. There is a serious question in my mind whether it is legitimate for one to call himself "a Christian," much less a denomination. There is no real evidence in the Scriptures that such title is to be accepted. It is mentioned but three times in the Word, and then not by direction of the Holy Spirit unless it be where Peter uses it. It was first applied by unbelievers at Antioch as a term of reproach, and second in derision by Agrippa, but avoided by Paul in his answer, and so far as the other instance is concerned, it only shows that such was the name under which the disciples were persecuted. The prospect for a union under the name "Christian" is not very bright.

Ministers' Meeting at Statesville.

In accordance with previous agreement, Elders G. H. Church, W. J. Wyatt, J. M. Ballard, and the writer, met in Statesville, N. C., on Wednesday, Jan. 24th, 1894, and organized a ministers' meeting, the object of which is the study of the Scriptures.

With this in view, we cordially invite those who minister in word and doctrine to meet with us on Wednesday after the third Sunday in each month, in the Baptist church building of Statesville at ten o'clock a. m.

Subject for February meeting is, "The Importance of presenting God's Word in all our ministrations."

W. J. HOOPER, Sec.

Richmond County Items.

I have now been here something over two months, but with means of observation so limited, that I am still without other than mere fragmentary information as regards Baptist interests hereabouts. I had hoped to meet a goodly number of the brethren at Lilesville, where our Union Meeting was to have been held, but was denied that pleasure, as there were only three or four delegates from all the churches. Perhaps the exceedingly bad weather was the principal reason for it, and yet, as I see reports of other Unions, I am persuaded that there may have been other causes, latent, to be sure, but none the less causal on that account. Bro. Johnson, the pastor at Lilesville, and Bro. Thomas Wright were the only pastors present, and, be it said to their praise, instead of dissolving the Union, they adjourned it in good order, a living organism, and it is quite safe to assume that it will be heard from again. I enjoyed exceedingly the privilege of spending the Sabbath with Bro. Johnson and his Lilesville people, and not the least of all that contributed to my pleasure, were the marked evidences of confidence and sympathy between pastor and people. At Rockingham, also, the same conditions are conspicuously present, and it is certain that, whatever may be true elsewhere, there are no good reasons here for either change or exchange.

Some reference to myself and field of labor may now be in order. Well, to begin, I find myself here without official identity, as to my "clerical order," since, by some rather unusual and not altogether reasonable coincidence, my name has been dropped from the list of ordained Baptist ministers, in both the Baptist Almanac and minutes of the Baptist State Convention. Now, it may not be a matter of surprise, if the curious querist does jocularly inquire, why? Well, to state the case plainly, I can only answer, why? But enough of this, as it concerns me little how the records are kept here—only I am concerned about how they are kept "up yonder." I think I am justified in saying, there are some "signs of promise" in my field, the churches so far having shown a willing mind to come into line with my plans. However, that they are not overburdened with plans, they could readily testify, still some plan—almost any plan, is better than no plan. So with some new plans, rather old ones newly inaugurated, we are hoping to make some advances during the present year. How well we succeed remains to be seen, but with faithful, earnest work, the Lord's blessing attending it, I know no reason for failure.

For the marked improvement in the health of my family I am profoundly grateful; for without the blessing of health, even the wealth of luxury could do little more than mock our sense of comfort. But, even this has its better side, and the child of God having recourse to the better, catches glimpses of his Father's home—the "many mansions"—and sees the habitations which no invasion of disease nor reverses of fortune may wrest from him. But I digress; and yet it may be pardonable, since it is but the intrusion of reminiscence and experience.

Our next Union Meeting will be held at—well, somewhere, but it yet remains for the Executive Committee to tell us where, and so I am hoping to hear from them on time, and them to see them at the meeting. They have planned well, I think, and with their plans faithfully executed, I can see no reason for any other than an advance all along the lines of the Pee Dee. How greatly this is needed one can readily see, for some of the older churches are well nigh moss-covered, needing to be jostled out of their slumbers, while the younger ones require prudent leadership and careful training, if they are to take position as efficient bodies. That all this will come in due time, I have no doubt, for the sentiment of progress is invading the churches, and the church or individual that doesn't fall into line, will be left behind in this forward movement. Better organization—general co-operation, thorough consecration, and we are equal to all the demands that are upon us.

Here and There.

I. HERE.

1. Here are about 275 men who have given their lives—all that they are and can make of themselves—earnestly and conscientiously to preach the everlasting gospel of Christ.

2. Here are fourteen men from North Carolina who love their own State—her institutions, her people, her all—as they love no other spot in the world.

3. Here are nine of the above fourteen who do not expect to return to the Seminary next fall. They are men of piety, men of faith, men of power. They are competent leaders and would make faithful pastors.

II. THERE.

1. There are a number of fields in North Carolina that need pastors.

2. There is sometimes a little disposition to complain that boys who come to the Seminary do not return to their own State.

3. There is but a short time before these men will want to locate in the ministry. They would prefer working in North Carolina. W. R. C.

The inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah who were sunk beneath the fetid pool and consigned to the vengeance of eternal fire, shall all come forth and stand before the dread Judge of all. Enoch, with Moses and Elijah and all the Old Testament saints, stand before the glorified Lord, for "every eye shall see him." David and all the prophets will see him, for all kindreds and tribes shall be gathered before him, and "every eye shall see him."

I need not emphasize the fact that every eye shall see him; for this proves that you, my friend, will see the Son of God when he comes in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. It is not a question as to whether the teeming millions shall stand before the Lord or not, but how will you appear in that day! And will you see the Lord for yourself and not for another? Job said he should see God for himself and not another.

THE WRATH UPON THE GATHERED NATIONS.

"All kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." The general teaching of the Scriptures is, that it will not be a glad day for the wicked. They will wail because of him. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Some will awake to shame and everlasting contempt. Every soul will there be conscious of what it has lost in this life. They have refused his counsel and would none of his reproof in this life, and he will laugh at their calamity and mock when their fear cometh. Many of those who claim to be very religious here, will be sadly disappointed there. They will say, Lord, Lord, have we not eat and drank in thy name! and then the Lord will say "depart from me, for I never knew you." Those who have refused him here will there acknowledge that he is Lord to the glory of God the Father. Every knee will bow to him in that day. Those who have been called, and have rejected the offers of mercy and salvation in this life, will there stand before the Judge of all. The teeming millions who came in contact with our Lord, and heard his teaching, and over whom he wept because of the hardness of their hearts, will there see him, and in their awful disappointment will call for rocks and mountains to fall upon them and hide them from the face of the Lamb. You treat the presence of the Lamb with indifference in this world, but there you will mourn and weep because of your conduct here. The wicked of every tribe will mourn because of him. All those who are not in fellowship with Christ here will wail because of him. The great day of wrath will have come, and then who will be able to stand? The wicked shall be driven away in their wickedness and turned into hell with all the nations that forget God. Jesus Christ, who will be Judge in that day, will have the nations gathered before him, and he will separate them as a shepherd divides his sheep from his goats, and then the wicked will be placed on the left hand, and he will say to them, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." 2 Thes. 1: 7—9. "The heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." Whatever may be the fears of the wicked as they leave this life, death is only the door that opens to them the horrors of the second death at his coming. "The wicked shall be destroyed with the brightness of his coming."

My friends, the most fearful thing about this whole matter is, you would not heed the divine warning here, but you shall face the divine judgment there, when it will be contrary to your desire. You will bow when you will not want to. It will, indeed, be a day of fear, gloom, trembling and wailing, a day of blackness and darkness. Every fond anticipation will perish. Every hope shall give way. Heaven's gates will be closed, and mercy will no longer invite you, and you shall be driven away in your wickedness.

"It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Heb. 10: 31. This is all the more awful because those who thus fall cannot cease from sin, and so will by their continued wickedness and crime continue to feed the flames of the unquenchable fire. Your condition there will be all the more sad, because of your consciousness of what you have lost. One of the reasons why you will mourn and lament will be because you remember the opportunities of this life. If memory could be blotted out, and the vision could be dimmed, the condition of the wicked would not be so dreadful. But every eye shall behold him. You will be bid to remember what you received in your lifetime. "He shall have judgment without mercy, that hath showed no mercy." "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." "To sow to the wind and reap the whirlwind."

But again, your doom will remain unchanged. If you are unholy, you will remain unholy still. As the judgment finds you, eternity will receive you. "The dead shall hear his voice and shall come forth, they that have done good unto resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." The righteous and wicked alike shall come forth, and "every eye shall see him." The difference between the righteous and the wicked here is not as great as it will be there. The separation does not take place here. The wheat and the tares all grow together; but at that day the angel reapers shall gather all nations before the throne, and then shall the separation take place, for the wheat shall be gathered into the garner, and the tares shall be bound into bundles to be burned." The wicked are subjected to an awful doom. They are to go into "everlasting punishment." The Lord will laugh at you and mock at your calamity. You have trifled with him here, and he will deal in strict and just judgment with you there. You would not have the man Christ Jesus to reign over you while he was the merciful Saviour; but now, when he is the stern Judge of all, you shall bow at his feet and confess your condemnation just, for you there reap the full reward of what you have sowed here. You shall seek a hiding-place but shall find none. For the Judge shall set upon the throne, and the books shall be opened and the dead shall be judged out of the things which are written in the books. In the twenty-first chapter of Revelation the glorified Lord tells John of the blessed condition of those who are faithful to him in this life; and says, "I will be his God and he shall be my son." He here states the condition of the righteous and wicked in contrast, so that it may be seen more clearly, and says, "But the fearful and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." Could judgment be more dreadful or doom more awful? There will be weeping and gnashing of teeth. You were given time and opportunity for repentance, but would not; and now you are left in your desolation, and will no longer be moved to forsake your sins. "There is no peace to the wicked, saith my God." If you have known the way of righteousness and have not walked therein, you will be conscious that you suffer justly, for when you knew God, you glorified him not as God. Every excuse which you may have had for not being a Christian will there vanish away, for you have no cloak for your sins. "Every eye shall see him, and they that pierced him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him," "for the great day of his wrath has come."

"That awful day will surely come,
The appointed hour makes haste,
When I must stand before my judge,
And pass the solemn test."

"The day of wrath, the dreadful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away;
What power shall be the sinner's stay,
How shall he meet that dreadful day!'

When shriveling like a parched scroll,
The flaming heavens together roll,
And louder yet, and yet more dread,
Resounds the trump that wakes the dead.

O, on that day, that wrathful day,
When man to judgment wakes from clay,
Be thou O Christ the sinner's stay,
Though heaven and earth shall pass away."

The condition of the wicked is referred to in the twelfth chapter of Hebrews as being terrible. Those who refused Moses could not escape, and as the new covenant is more steadfast and unchangeable than the old, so much more is the condition of the wicked more dreadful. Moses feared and quaked when he saw the Lord in Sinai, and if they escaped not when they refused Moses, how much more shall we not escape who refuse him who spoke from heaven! "They could not endure." "Men's hearts shall fail them in that day."

"How will my heart endure
The terrors of that day,
When earth and heaven before his face
Astonished shrink away."

This is the day for which all others were made. "It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." Seeing that all these things are so, "we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have already heard lest at any time we should let them slip." For beyond,

"There is a death whose pang
Outlasts the fleeting breath,
O what eternal horrors hang,
Around the second death!"

Such will be the condition of a part of all nations and kindreds and tribes of the earth on that day. "He cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen."

Let me now to the other class, and look at

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE PICTURE.

The Bible just as clearly states that he will come to be admired in all them that love him. Christ will come in his glory with the holy angels, and the righteous in their glorified bodies shall see the glorified Lord. The righteous may live in glad anticipation of the coming of their Lord. The Christians at Thessalonica were established in the faith by the Apostle Paul, and among other things in which he strengthened their faith was the coming of their Lord. "They were not to sorrow as those who had no hope." They were exhorted to "comfort one another with these words." When Paul was a prisoner at Rome, he wrote to Timothy that he was already being offered; that he had finished his course, fought a good fight, and kept the faith; therefore, there was a crown of righteousness laid up for him which the Lord would give him at that day. The same servant of God was more anxious to be with the Lord than to remain on the earth. He was in a strait betwixt two, "having a desire to depart and be with Christ which is far better." In the restlessness of his soul he cried out and asked who should deliver him from the body of this death! The faithful soul who knows what it means to struggle with sin here longs to hear the Master say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you before the foundation of the world." How can we help desiring the glorious day when our bodies of humiliation shall be made like unto his glorious body! Notwithstanding we have received the gift of salvation through Jesus Christ, there is a reward of which the Bible speaks, which the children of God want to realize the possession of. The best of God's people here have much sorrow and suffering, but at that day sorrow and suffering will cease, for we shall be as the angels, and there shall be no more tears. But those whose souls are moulded by divine grace and are conformed to the image of Jesus Christ, are interested in the triumphant conquest of their Lord. It will be a glad day for the saints when they reign in glory. That day when there shall be no more curse, when the Lord comes to make up his jewels, is to be a bright day for the saints. It is a day of peace and deliverance—a day of joy and gladness. The saints will be satisfied when they awake in the likeness of their Lord. He will come and receive us unto himself, that where he is, there we may be also. Some of the old saints used to sing, "I want to go and be where Jesus is."

After a bright vision of the Master's glory, the beloved disciple prayed, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." "Then shall the righteous shine forth in the kingdom of their Father as the stars forever and ever." Broken hearts will be healed and burdened souls relieved; and we no longer shall see through a glass darkly, but shall see him as he is. Heartaches shall cease, and fear shall give way to perfect love. And there shall be no unclean thing among the righteous redeemed. They will not mourn nor wail. There will be no weeping, no gnashing of teeth among the people of God. But they who went forth with weeping, sowing precious seeds, shall then come with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them.

Rev. A. D. Hunter, Raleigh's Baptist City Missionary.

Dear Recorder:—Rev. A. D. Hunter, our city missionary, has moved his family to Raleigh, and is now pleasantly and comfortably fixed in a nice new house in West End, near the West End Mission Chapel, and seems to be perfectly at home and happy with his estimable wife and two lovely little daughters. Bro. Hunter is the right man in the right place. He has already been energetically at work in his new field of labor, and I rejoice to say that he has already made a very favorable impression on all the people of the West End section, and the interest there is growing rapidly. Already the congregations are increasing at every service, and great results are looked for in that part of his field. Bro. Hunter is very enthusiastic, and has entered into the work with great earnestness and energy. In the near future another important point in the city will be developed, and others will follow. A grand and noble work lies before Bro. Hunter. He will be able to reach many people who do not attend our city churches and who need the gospel preached to them. His field is a large one, his duties are not few, and his labor will not be light, and it is very important that he should have the hearty co operation and the united and earnest prayers of every Baptist in the city of Raleigh that he may be able to preach the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ with great power and effect, and that many souls may be saved. There is a great work to be done in and around this city. Will not the Baptists of Raleigh wake up and go to work for Jesus? He gave his life for you. What have you done for him?

Raleigh, N. C. T. D. WATSON.

Home with love in it is a kind of paradise. I suppose with love out of it home is a kind of pandemonium. The sweetest hours of life are those when the heart is full of love, and those hours are almost as sweet in the recollection as in the present experience. In the day and night, and in times of reverie, we recall every look, every gesture, every word by which love was confessed to us, and I suppose, even in extreme old age, the heart never forgets the scenes and the memories of love's young dream. Such is the heart of man.—Dr. Stalker.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

Home Fertilizer

—FOR—

Cotton, Corn & General Crops

Used and endorsed by Leading Farmers in North Carolina and the South for the past twenty years. Read the following certificates, and send for pamphlet giving direction for mixing, testimonials, &c.

MARLVILLE, N. C., Sept. 20, 1893.

Gentlemen: The chemicals I bought of you for making "Home Fertilizer" continue to give satisfaction. I only use it under cotton. You know I must think it good, or I should not have used it so long. This makes 16 or 17 years that I have been using it, and its use has made me able to pay for it cash, not on crop time.

Yours truly, THOS. S. EVANS.

CHERAW, S. C., Oct. 16, 1893.

Messrs. Boykin, Carmer & Co.:—

It gives us pleasure to say we have been using your Home Fertilizer for more than fifteen years continuously, and expect to continue to do so. Of course, we are entirely satisfied that it pays us to use it.

Shutting the Door.

One of the wonderful things about our Lord Jesus Christ's words is that the meaning of them deepens and widens just as our hearts and lives deepen and widen. Not long ago a young Christian fell into great distress about not being able to pray more earnestly; he went often upon his knees, he used full petitions, he knocked loudly at heaven's door, and then went away empty and unsatisfied.

"Have you followed the Master's rules?" asked an old preacher to whom he told his trouble. The young man said he thought he had. "You entered into your closet?" "Yes." "How about shutting the door? Did you shut out all your business worries? all your plans for pleasure? all your self-esteem? Was all your earth silent before God when you sought him in that little secret temple?" The young Christian felt with a thrill that the speaker had found out the secret of his discomfort in prayer.

Dear young readers, I need hardly remind you that your first daily duty is to "enter into thy closet," but, when there, let your first petition be, "Now, Heavenly Father, help me to shut the door." And, having shut it, watch and guard it, for just as surely as you enter that closet, your great enemy begins by clamor or by wiles, by force or by craft, to break down the door and put to rout all your devotional thoughts and feelings.—Forward.

Good Reading for Democratic Times.

A year ago, The N. Y. Tribune announced that in the four years of trial, of new experiment, discussion of great national topics, and observation of the effects of Democratic supremacy before the country, The Tribune would lead in the presentation of the Republican view. The friends of the Republican party were asked to aid the final triumph of Republican principles by seeing that the people read the Republican side of the story. Evidently, the friends of the party have responded. The Tribune claims the largest weekly circulation of any paper in the United States, and challenges the country to prove to the contrary. The Tribune has gained by making its paper al most a Statesman's Manual and a most admirable one. It takes the deepest interest in public questions. Roswell G. Horr's articles are especially valuable. Mr. Horr came out ahead in his great debate with Senator Stewart of Nevada on the Silver question in The Tribune. He always states the Republican view with frankness, points out the probable consequences of a change in the tariff and silver policy of the country, and evades no issue and conceals no fact bearing upon the subjects discussed. His thorough treatment of fundamental principles will aid every reader to a better understanding of profound and important issues. Friendly to the old soldiers, devoting much space to agriculture, and printing every week superb and absolutely unequalled Market Reports, editorially able and entertaining, The Tribune is a great paper and worthy a place in every home. It illustrates the news of the day profusely. Thousands of Democrats take it for its articles on public affairs and its purity, decency and freedom from smut. Every Republican should have it. An illustrated Premium catalogue and specimen copies are sent free to applicants. This year, The Tribune includes a valuable historical picture in its list, painted expressly on the order of that paper. Every one of our readers can receive The Tribune in combination with his own local paper if he desires, on reasonable terms.

A Sunny Face.

Wear it. It is your privilege. It has the quality of mercy; it is twice blessed. It blesses its possessor and all who come under its benign influence; it is a daily boon to him who wears it, and a constant ever flowing benediction to all his friends. Men and women, youth and children, seek the friendship of the sunny faced. All doors are open to those who smile. All social circles welcome cheeriness. A sunny face is an open sesame to heart and home. By it burdens are lightened, cares dispelled, sorrows banished, and hope made to reign triumphant, where fear, doubt and despondency held high carnival.

Get the glow and radiance from such nearness to the throne as God permits to his own. Bring from a holy and divine communion, a face luminous with light, and let it glow and shine on all around. A little child on the street of a great city, wishing to cross at a point where the surging throng and the passing vehicles made the feat dangerous to the strong, and especially so to the weak, paused, hesitated, and then asked a sunny faced gentleman to carry her across. It was the sunny face that won the child's confidence. Childhood makes no mistakes. —Selected.

Singing Sand.

There are a few beaches in the world on which are found "singing sands;" so called because of a prolonged musical sound heard when walking through the sand or stirring it with a stick.

One of the best known beaches where the phenomenon occurs is at Manchester, about twenty-five miles from Boston. Another place is on one of the Hebrides Islands. Some of the sands were sent to an American scientist last year for examination. One portion was sealed in bottles, and another sent in bags. The latter lost their peculiar properties, but the former sang sweetly on being stirred. No satisfactory cause for the curious sound has yet been discovered. One peculiarity of these musical beaches is that they occur in comparatively small patches, and the sound is not always of uniform loudness. It is said that along the shore of the Carribean Sea there is a place where a disturbance of the sands makes a noise like the barking of a dog.—Christian at Work.

Beware of Bad Books.

When Mr. Spurgeon was a little boy he was very fond of reading. Once a book, which was not a good book, was loaned him. His father punished him for reading it. He himself said afterwards, "I should like to be able to forget even the half I read in that book: but I cannot; it sticks to me like glue. Bad books are terrible things."

Remember this, boys and girls, and be careful what books you read.—Ex.

We have read of a battle against cannibals gained by the use of tacks. They had taken possession of a whaling vessel and bound the man who was left in care of it. The crew, on returning, saw the situation, and scattered upon the deck of the vessel the tacks, which penetrated the bare feet of the savages, and sent them howling into the sea. They were ready to meet lance and sword, but they could not overcome the tacks on the floor. We brace ourselves up against great calamities. The little tacks of life, scattered along our way, piercing our feet and giving us pain, are hard to bear. A pastor was absorbed in studying the question of socialism, when his wife came in with despair on her face, and said she wanted advice about the servants. "Oh, my dear," he replied, "I cannot give my time to little matters like domestic service. I am trying to solve the social problem of the universe." "Well," replied the wife, "you solve the problem in the kitchen, and I will promise you to solve the problem of the universe in twenty-four hours." Really, it is easier to dispose of those great questions which cover the world than it is to meet and successfully overcome the little worries which present themselves day by day.—Rev. A. C. Dixon, in "Milk and Meat."

The Homiletic Review for February is replete with the discussion of subjects of interest to the ministry. "The Use and Abuse of Wit and Humor in Preaching," is the subject of an interesting article by J. Spencer Kennard, D. D., of Chicago. Dr. Robert Balgarnie, of Bishop Auckland, Eng., gives a second paper on "Our Trinitarian Prayers." Prof. T. W. Hunt, of Princeton, sends a helpful contribution on "English Literary Reading," in which he gives a list of works that are essential to the literary education of the busiest men. Dr. John Hall, the famous Metropolitan Preacher, answers the question, "How I Prepare My Sermons." Dr. William Hayes Ward continues his series of papers concerning "Light on Scriptural Texts from Recent Discoveries." The various departments and sections, are as usual, very well filled with instructive reading. Published monthly, by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York, at $3 00 per year.

A Greensboro Report.

Dear Sir and Brother:—Just one year ago I began to treat myself with the Electropoise. I have not taken a single dose of medicine of any kind in that time. For several years I had poured down every abomination that doctors, druggists and old women suggested in the vain hope of recovering my lost health. I went down hill all the time and was fast sinking into the grave. For over thirty years I suffered inexpressibly with torpid liver and indigestion; that disappeared entirely as soon as I began the Electropoise treatment. I was so stiff and rheumatic that life was largely despaired of. Diabetes had depleted my system, and an impoverished state of the blood caused numerous carbuncles of most painful and long standing nature. I suffered in this condition for two years. I fought the battle faithfully, and to day am a healthful, vigorous man; probably as fully restored as it is possible for one of my years (61), and constitutionally ruined by drug to be. A number of most notable cases of improved health could be given among my personal friends and acquaintances. I have not had on the 'poise now for two months, but it is "loaded" and ready for business.

Yours truly, L. W. ANDREWS.

The Pastor's Duty.

It is a pastor's duty to see to it that as many families as possible in his congregation take a religious paper, and preferably, as a general thing, their denominational paper. I believe those denominations are wiser which expect their pastors to present regularly the claims of their papers to their people.—Dr. William Hayes Ward, editor of the Independent.

Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, recommends Japanese Liver Pellets for constipation and sick headache. Small, mild, easy to take. 50 pills 25 cents.

The sick who languish, craving rest;
All forms and states of misery
Reveal a neighbor's need to thee.
—William K. Palmer.

We cannot minister while heart-fever of any kind is on us. We may go on with our work, but we cannot do it well, and there will be little blessing in it. Discontent hinders any life's usefulness. Jesus loved Martha, and accepted her service because he knew she loved him: but he plainly told her that her feverishness was not beautiful, and it detracted from the worth and the full and acceptableness of the good work she did; and he pointed her to Mary's quiet peace as a better way of living and serving. Anxiety of any kind unfits us in some degree for work. It is only when Christ comes and lays his hand upon our heart, and cures its fever, that we are ready for ministering in his name in the most efficient way.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

There is need of preparation. The life must be holy that Christ will employ. The vessel must be clean that the King will use. The heart must be broken through which God's love may flow. Some one gives a consecration prayer: "Lord, take me, break me, make me!" and tells the story of a golden cup which had been made out of old gold coins. These had lost the image and superscription originally upon them, and were then thrown into a melting-pot and wrought into a beautiful cup. So ofttimes a human life has lost its beauty; and then the Master takes it, breaks it, and makes it over again in form of beauty. Then the King will use it.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

For Weak Nerves,
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

It is particularly useful in making weak nerves strong, as it contains necessary elements of nutrition for the nervous system, obtained from natural sources.

No, brother, we do not mention that our pastors have "large congregations" when they preach, because we do not regard it as news. If it be news, it is a reflection upon the pastor and the church. It is equivalent to saying that his having a large congregation is so unusual a thing that when he does happen to have one, it is an event that needs to be recorded. In the same way we do not tell of any given pastor that "he is doing well," as if he did not generally do well, and as if others failed to do well to such a degree as to make his case call for special mention. We rallied an honored pastor lately on a paper's publishing as an item of news that he had "preached an interesting sermon." He preaches no other kind.—Western Recorder.

Christian Giving.

I very highly appreciated the extracts furnished the RECORDER from the speech made by Dr. Carroll at the Union Meeting of the Mt. Zion Association in December. I wish it could be read by every Baptist in the State. But alas! that such a small per cent. of them read the RECORDER. I think it would be wise to adopt Dr. Williams' suggestion and put it into tracts and scatter them broadcast. Surely no one can doubt that it is the duty of every child of God to give of his means for the spread of the gospel, if he has even casually thought upon the matter as he studied the Word. I believe that this has been a long neglected feature of our religious development.

The pulpit and religious press owe it to themselves to educate the people upon this practical element of Christianity. There are preachers of the gospel (the whole message) in our day who try to teach the people their duty upon this subject; but while they are faithfully trying to arouse the people from their lethargic indolence, others are pouring out their contempt upon "so much preaching about giving" and "always calling upon the people for money, money, MONEY." Their cry really seems to be for popularity and favor among a class that are always averse to anything that calls for sacrifice or effort on their part, and they are generally pretty well paid for their giant effort (?) before they leave the grounds, when some one who never gave a quarter in all his life comes up to sympathize with his heaven-born views! This class of croakers will harp on the need of more preaching about love, the power of the Holy Ghost, justification, atonement, &c.

Well, I suppose it might benefit a great many of us to go home with them and have our spirituality renewed. We would generally find a church in debt, a pastor with an empty larder, the people instead of being in the Sabbath school, roving over the country desecrating the holy Sabbath (for if they were to study the Bible in the Sunday-school they would soon want a new preacher), a dead spirituality among the membership and a chilling indifference one toward another.

Some of our Associations have not abandoned the custom of reading statistical reports from the churches, and I hope they never will, but it is real amusing to hear the report of a church of a hundred members read with blank financial statistics, and then with a foot-note added, "But we are all spiritually alive"!

It is good to preach often about love, the atonement, justification, &c., without which there could be no gospel. I believe that these themes are too often sadly neglected in our day, but "all theory" will not do. We want to learn how to practice our religion. And these highly essential characteristics are more often proven by practice than by arguments. One might say he had love for his fellowman and sound it in pathetic tones, "but if he hath this world's goods, and seeth his neighbor have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" Pure love is demonstrated in compassionate distribution to the wants of those who lay claims upon us through the gospel. Without these "bowels of compassion" being opened, it would be hard to convince a genuine Christian that our natures had absorbed these other essentials, however truly important they may be.

I believe in giving, and believe our people need a steady course of education on this subject. If I did not believe in it, I would at once join the "Hardshells," and fire a continuous volley of contempt upon every phase of evangelical church work, and ask Jehovah to stop the maddening cross of the one hundred and fifty millions of people engaged in such beneficence.

If you want to find a live Christian church united in the bonds of Christian fellowship, dwelling in peace at home, and wooing the affection of the ungodly to a crucified Redeemer, you will have to go where self-sacrifice and endurance for Christ's sake are taught and practiced as an essential part of pure and undefiled religion. All other conditions of peace and rest are portending messengers of death from indolence and sloth. A perfect knowledge of God's compassionate sufferings and self-denials for us brings us under everlasting and unbounded contribution to every creature of his. The keener our sense of God's beneficence to us, the deeper we feel a debt of gratitude that we only can pay in deed to "these little ones" of his.

The pastor who does not preach missions will sooner or later die himself and his church, and it will be a natural death.

C. W. BLANCHARD.

New Denominational Attachment.

We not infrequently hear the expressions, "He is a strong Baptist," "She is a stanch Methodist," when the meaning may be reduced to this, each has a very strong denominational attachment. They who are of any denominational persuasion wholly from conviction are comparatively few. No man can be a stanch Baptist without giving attention to the distinctive doctrines advocated by Baptists. And this necessarily requires some investigation of the teachings of the New Testament. The great body of the church membership in every denomination is made up mostly of those who are influenced by mere taste, social influence, or denominational attachment. Not long ago while in conversation with an intelligent Methodist preacher I asked the question, If he did not believe that immersion was the primitive form of baptism, and to my surprise, he gave this frank reply: "I don't know, I haven't given the subject serious attention." Here we have an example of a leader in a denomination—one who appears to be a Methodist either through taste or denominational attachment, and not through any strong conviction based upon the teachings of the New Testament. Would this not be the confession of thousands, were they honest enough to tell the unvarnished truth?

To some people, the idea that you have been "reared a Baptist" seems to be a conclusive argument for accepting Baptist principles and joining a Baptist church. If there is any force in such an argument, what should be the duty of the heathen when the gospel is presented unto them?

Some time ago there was published in a Southern paper an article (from one of the Atlanta pastors) which contained an argument as follows: "I am a Methodist because I was reared a Methodist; my parents were Methodist; I had access to a Methodist library; I attended a Methodist Sunday-school; and it was just as natural for me to be a Methodist as for oranges to grow in Florida." This preacher (who doubtless gloried in the doctrine of man's free agency) was hardly aware that he was advocating an iron scheme of necessity as firm as any ever held by Hobbes or Spinoza.

Let us put the same course of reasoning into the mouth of a lawyer as he pleads a case at the bar: "This man is a thief because he was reared a thief: his parents were thieves; his brothers are thieves; he has had access to only low, vile literature; his associates were all thieves and scoundrels: and it is just as natural for him to be a thief as for oranges to grow in Florida." Would this course of reasoning be likely to save the criminal from the penitentiary? And yet this is the kind of reasoning used by thousands who would feel deeply insulted were it suggested that they were not of any denominational persuasion through conviction.

He that wishes to be really a Baptist, let him earnestly search the Scriptures for the truth, and in all his investigations let him observe the principle contained in that noble exhortation of the Apostle Peter, "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and with fear."

Rev. D. W. Conway.

No better man has lived in our county than the above who died July 20, 1891. He was in his seventy-fourth year, and had been an humble minister of the Cross for more than thirty years, having been ordained Feb. 7th, 1857, by Elders William and James Bradshaw from old North Catawba church.

Always quiet, unpretending and earnest, he impressed all with his implicit trust in God. It may be said of him, he never proved false to a trust reposed. I shall never forget the comfort of his counsel. He was untiring in his efforts for the advancement of the cause. As a result of his labors of love, many churches were built up, when, but for his pioneer work, none would be to day. Truly a good, though comparatively unknown, man has fallen, and surely "his works do follow him." May those who remember him live to imitate his noble example. Peace to his ashes.

Commendatory Resolutions.

Reedy Creek church, in conference on Saturday before the first Sabbath in January, 1894,

Resolved, That whereas, Elder D. D. Edwards of Morrisville, N. C., has served us so faithfully for the last seven years, and has so much endeared himself to us that we part with him reluctantly. Yet a change may be for the best, and we cheerfully submit and say the Lord's will be done, and take pleasure in recommending him to the brethren and sisters as a faithful, efficient and worthy minister of the Lord, and pray that God's blessings may rest upon him, and that the Lord may choose his fields of labor for him and give him many souls for his hire.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER with a request to publish and that the same be made of our church record.

W. Y. CHAPPELL, Mod.
R. A. YOUNG, Clerk.

New remedies are being constantly introduced to the public, but Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup still maintains its pre-eminence.

Ordination.

On Jan. 7th, 1894, at the request of the Mt. Zion Baptist church (Tar River Association), a presbytery, consisting of Revs. J. W. Sledge, W. A. Smith, and deacon W. B. Joyner, met, and after having examined Rev. G. W. May, he was ordained to the full work of the ministry.

The ordination sermon was preached by the writer, and the charge and presentation of the Bible were impressively done by Bro. Sledge.

Bro. May is now in school at Cedar Rock Academy, and hopes, at an early date, to begin a course at Wake Forest College. We wish for him a useful life in the Master's great work.

La Grippe Again.
The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.
ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.
In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe.

SWEETWATER, TEXN., June 23, 1893.
My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health.
J. T. BARROW,
Pastor First Baptist Church.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunningham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of Germetuer relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

Rev. J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 24, 18.3: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

Orphanage Notes.

As the Orphanage is an institution of the Baptists of North Carolina, it would seem especially appropriate that some news of interest should occasionally appear in the columns of their organ, the BIBLICAL RECORDER. The Executive Committee met on Wednesday, Jan. 31st, and found the Orphanage in good condition and all the officers doing their work well. With the present judicious and economical management, and the support of Baptist people in North Carolina, there is no reason why the struggles of 1893 should be repeated.

La grippe has had its hold on some of the boys and girls for several days, and two cases developed into pneumonia, but all are better now and the prospect is for continued healthfulness which has ever charactorized this locality.

Seven have been received into the Orphanage church within two months by experience. The orphans have a splendid opportunity to learn the business side of the Lord's work in having a church of their own, and in being allowed to formulate plans and discuss and vote in their conferences.

Among the 180 orphans here there must be varied gifts, insomuch that all departments of labor, whether Christian or secular, may receive additional force from those who go out year by year qualified in a measure for life's work. With sufficient means the Orphanage might be made a splendid industrial school for the training of the children for the various pursuits now open to them. There is an industrial department, but it needs appliances before it can be put fully into operation. An engine is needed, first of all. The friends of the Orphanage should be liberal in their contributions so that the engine can be purchased at once. Orphans are taught farming, sewing, printing, washing, ironing, cooking, &c. Certainly these are important industries, and yet this does not afford a field for the exercise of the varied gifts of so many.

It is to be hoped that the day of criticism of the Lord's work and institutions is past, and that the day of help and co-operation has dawned. God has dealt very mercifully with the critics, but some departments of his work have suffered seriously. May the wounds be healed, the chasms filled, and the Lord's work be established in the hands, minds and hearts of his people.

DIED.

SMITH—Thomas Smith departed this life at his home in Wake county January 17th, 1894, aged about thirty-five years. He leaves a wife and three children and many other near relatives and friends to mourn his loss. He professed faith in Christ when quite young and joined the Baptist church. He was a consistent member until his death. He bore his sickness with much patience, and said just before he died that he was reconciled to the Lord's will, though he hated to leave his family. His funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Hutchinson; in the presence of a large crowd of friends and relatives. B. A. SMITH.

GRAVES—After a brief illness of pneumonia, Sister Theresa L. Graves died at her home in Selma, Johnston county, N. C., Saturday, Jan. 20th, 1894, at 10:35 p. m. Sister Graves (nee Cooke) was born in Jewett City, Conn., Aug. 15th, 1845, and came to this State soon after our civil war, making her home with her brother in Selma. She was married to Mr. D. H. Graves March 10th, 1869, and Selma has since been her home until on the evening of the 20th she left us for the home of the redeemed. Her father, Rev. John B. Cooke, was a Baptist minister of enviable reputation. He had pastorates at Jewett City and Hartford, Conn., and at Chickopee, Mass., and near the close of his life was called to serve a Baptist church in New Orleans, La. Sister Graves became a Christian and a Baptist in early life, and also qualified herself for a life of Christian usefulness. She united with Selma Baptist church July, 1879, by letter from the First Baptist church of Lewiston, Maine, just about one month after the organization of our church, and during the pastorate of the sainted Rev. W. M. Wingate, D. D., and she henceforward gave her prayers, tears and best efforts to build up her church and forward the cause of him whom having not seen she loved. She seemed to be fond of music and music teaching, and many taught by her have gone out from us, and some are still with us. She led our church music until her health so failed that she could not get out to services regularly, and then she showed a willingness to do what she could. Indeed, she was always ready to every good work until she was called to rest. She sometimes passed beyond her ability, perhaps, so willing was she to do for her church and the good of others. She leaves a husband in loneliness and five children without a mother in the earthly home, but she left all under obligation to come to her "over there," saying, "All is well, and I wish you to meet me in heaven."

GOODWIN—Miss Annie Goodwin, in her fifty-second year, daughter of Mr. James Goodwin and Catharine Goodwin (nee Elliott), of Perquimans county, and sister of Mrs. E. Burke of Chowan county, and Mr. John Goodwin of Norfolk, Va., died at the residence of her sister, Mrs. E. Burke, January 16th, 1894, of brain trouble, after confinement to her bed for more two weeks. All was done for this kind Christian lady that could be done by a loving sister, kind friends, and two able physicians, who were at her bedside every day during her sickness. But it seemed that an Allwise Creator saw that it was best to take this estimable and Christian lady from earth to heaven. She was a devoted sister to the one that she had left behind. The writer does not think that he ever saw two sisters so devoted to each other.

This dear Christian lady was a member of the Methodist church at Centre Hill, having connected herself with that church about the year 1863, and was a member at the time of her death. No one could associate with her without being impressed with the gentle spirit that at all times characterized her Christian life. Being resigned to the will of her Heavenly Father, we believe she was ready to meet him. The deceased was a kind lady in her sister's home, where she had lived for more than thirty years, always ready to assist her sister in anything that she had to do in her domestic affairs. She was never heard speaking ill of any one, nor fretted nor grumbled, but took everything quiet and easy, and was beloved by all who knew her. She was a dear lover of small children, and it was her delight to do all she could for their pleasure and comfort.

There was universal sorrow when the spirit of this estimable Christian lady winged its eternal flight to God who gave it. She saw life on its bright side. Her sister, to whom she had been of so much consolation for many years, will miss her; the church will miss her; the Sunday-school will miss her; all will miss her; for none knew her but to love her.

To the bereaved sister, brother, neices and friends, we can say, while we mourn with them in their loss, we must remember that our Creator died also.

Her remains were taken to the church near by, followed by a large concourse of friends, and her funeral was preached by Mr. Robbins, of the Hertford circuit, from John 14: 1-3. Then the remains were taken from the church to the cemetery, near her sister's residence, by loving and sorrowing friends, and laid in a lonely grave to await the resurrection morn.

While with deep sorrow we say that she is dead, yet with the eye of faith we see her not dead, but only gone before. A devoted and affectionate sister, an exceptional friend and neighbor to all; but alas, she is gone. Her sister, brother and friends can see her no more on earth, but can meet her in the sweet by and by.

For she who meekly bears her cross
A golden crown awaits,
And father and mother who have gone before
Welcomes their daughter at heaven's gates.

Tributes of Respect.

At a meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Pollocksville, Jan. 20th, 1894, the following resolutions were adopted:

1st. In the death of Sister Susan Burns, the Society has lost a faithful and earnest worker.

2d. That while we with deep sorrow feel the loss of her presence and aid, we sorrow not as those having no hope, feeling assured that our loss is her gain.

3d. That our sympathies be extended to the grief-stricken son in this his great affliction.

4th. That these resolutions be spread on our minutes and published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

MRS. SARAH HAYWOOD,
MRS. H. J. WARD,
MRS. LINA BELL,
Committee.

WHEREAS, An all-wise Providence has seen fit to remove by death our pastor, Rev. T. M. Leary, who was also a member of our church.

Resolved 1st, That in the death of our beloved pastor, Beres church recognizes the loss of a valuable member, a Christian man who was quiet in life, humble in spirit, consistant in conduct, and faithful in Christian work.

Resolved 2d. That while we realize our loss, we bow with Christian submission to the will of him who doeth all things well. We mourn but we do not murmur, believing as we do that our loss means gain to our departed brother.

Resolved 3d, That our sincere and heartfelt sympathies be extended to the bereaved family, and further that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family and also published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER and North Carolina Baptist.

Adopted Jan. 27, 1894.

Important to Farmers!
Yes, it is very important to all farmers to plant the best and earliest seed potatoes they can buy. To do this, they must buy the EARLY SIX WEEKS, the earliest now in cultivation. If farmers would plant this potato they would always get their crop in market in time to get seven and eight dollars per barrel. We planted this potato for the last two seasons, and selling our crop for nine dollars per barrel. This potato grows so quick the Esquimau would almost have time to mature a potato crop if he planted the Early Six Weeks. In the South two full crops can be grown in one season. Its size is large and handsome. We have one thousand barrels for sale. One lb. 40 cts.; 3 lbs. $1.00; by mail, postpaid. Peck, $1.10; bushel, $3.00; barrel, $7.00; by freight or Express. Send your order in at once before they are all sold, and give them a trial. Address all orders to

The Home Circle.

Amen.

I cannot say,
Beneath the pressure of life's cares to day,
I joy in these;
But I can say
That I had rather walk this rugged way
If Him it please.

I cannot feel
That all is well, when darkening clouds conceal
The shining sun;
But then, I know
God lives and loves; and say, since it is so,
Thy will be done.

I cannot speak
In happy tones; the tear drops on my cheek
Show I am sad;
But I can speak
Of grace to suffer with submission meek,
Until made glad.

I do not see
Why God should e'en permit some things to be,
Who He is love;
But I can see,
Though often dimly, through the mystery,
His hand above.

I do not look
Upon the present, nor in nature's book,
To read my fate;
But I do look
For promised blessings in God's Holy Book,
And I can wait.

Library Etiquette.

Books! books! books! What pleasure they may give, and yet what annoyances they become when misplaced, or irretrievably loaned, or hopelessly ruined! Good Housekeeping has made a few mild remarks to guests about these library friends of ours,—remarks which many a hostess has longed to make herself. Hear them:

"It is bad form for a guest to take books from the book-cases without permission. In many instances they remain in the guest-chamber to be replaced by some member of the family who requires them for immediate use. Magazines, periodicals, papers, are for the library table, and should be left there. Order and consideration for the desires of all are among the canons of good society. The best seat by the cheerful blaze should be for the invalid or elderly person. Age and sickness demand a courtesy that should be on all occasions extended to them. It is their prerogative. 'Don't fail in proper attention to elderly people. Don't stand before the fire to the exclusion of the warmth from others. Don't fail in good manners in anything.'

There are three articles that should be chained to the library table,—the paper-cutter, scissors, and pencils for family use. It is the displacing of these little instruments of usefulness that disturb the disposition, irritate the temper, and are among the causes of the hasty word and the unkind thought.

"'The borrowed book.' What a text for a sermon! said a clever author. If books are borrowed, mar them not; neither turn down the leaves, and, above all, be careful to return them in as good a state of preservation as when borrowed. To write on the margins is unpardonable, vulgar, ill bred. And so the library has its etiquette, social laws, and good form. In this inviting place the inmates enjoy the calm repose, the new books, the fire-light's sparkle. Here they pen the loving words, and in this sanctum our intellectual life grows, spreads and digests. It is the room of sweet disorder, where dead authors lie and give us all their gems of thought and intellectual life."—Standard.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is known by its works. The experience of half a century proves that no other preparation of the kind stops coughing and allays irritation of the throat and bronchial tubes so promptly and effectually as this.

One Mother's Mistake.

"It seems to me," said a woman lately,—one whose sons and daughters are grown and out in the world,—"that if I had my children to bring up over again, I would give up everything, and devote myself to each till he was five years old.

"What I did was to employ nurses—what a travesty of the tenderly significant world!—from infancy to about that time, when I looked after them myself.

"One of my children—he is a married man now—cherishes still a most unreasoning fear of the dark, even of passing the open door of an unlighted apartment, because, forsooth, years ago in his babyhood, a nurse urged him to sleep, lest a wolf should come out of the dark and get him.

"A second son will carry to his grave a nervous dread of laughing, born of a practice by another nurse of showing her large, white, glittering teeth in a mirthless grin when, as an infant, he fretted. I caught her at it one day, and instantly sent her away; but the mischief was done, and I have been helpless to combat it. And my nurses were no worse than my neighbors.

"A child's care-taker should be a child-lover; and who loves a child like his mother? I long to say to every young mother I know: 'Stay with your babies, if you possibly can, until they are big enough to know what is going on about them.'"—Exchange.

The Best Men Wanted.

"Yes, sir; we want some good men, men of first-class character and ability to represent us. Among our representatives are many of the noblest and best men in America, and parties of that stamp can always find a splendid business opportunity at our establishment." That is the way Mr. B. F. Johnson of the firm B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., stated the case in reference to their advertisement in this paper.

Two Sides of Matrimony.

Said an unmarried friend, as we watched the careful attention with which a young lover wrapped a light cloak around the form of his sweetheart, every look and gesture showing the service to be a delight, "I should like to know how many men, ten years married, would, unasked, assist their wives to adjust their wraps!"

I made no reply to my cynical friend, but when a few minutes later we heard the pretty sweetheart say:—

"Thank you for the lovely evening, the music has been an inspiration."

I smiled wickedly and asked—

"How many wives ten years married show their appreciation of an evening of pleasure in that way!"

The craving of a woman's heart for loving attention is as natural as the need of a rose for rain and sunshine. Yet let it be remembered that as a rose, though still a rose, would lose half its beauty without its perfume, so a wife, be she ever so dutiful and cumbered about much serving, has lost half her loveliness if she has laid away her manners with her wedding gown.

I cannot see why a woman who was given tact as a birthright will ever sell it for that pottage, "plain speaking."

"How do I look, father?" I once heard a lovely old lady ask as she stood dressed for church.

"Thee always looks well to me," was the answer, "but other folks might like it better, were those white threads off thy gown." Show me a lover of twenty years whose delicate tact could do better.

"Excuse me," "please," "thank you," are little words and trifles in themselves, but they are stitches in the seams; little trouble to take them, but oh! the difference to the patchwork.—Baltimorean.

A Cool Head.

Nothing conduces to a successful meeting of emergencies better than a cool head, with a feeling of perfect confidence that everything is going to come out all right. Whether things are "coming out all right" or not, at least the feeling of quiet self-control makes one better able to work toward the good result. To a mother this self-possession is invaluable. In a large family small events calculated to upset the domestic machinery are constantly occurring. It seems to be a law of nature that children should continually have hair breadth escapes and come within an inch of losing their lives. But it is equally a law of nature that they should escape. And whenever the critical moment arrives in her own life, or in the life of another, it is important for a woman to remember that the very worst thing she can do at that moment is to lose her head.

To do that means to be helpless instead of helpful, to be a drag instead of an assistance. In an emergency one should rather seem heartless than inefficient. There are always ten people ready to cry or faint or shed tears over the sufferer where there is one who stands coolly by and sees the way to help him. Affection and sympathy are often best proved by ignoring them, particularly when the moment arrives which calls for action and not tears.—Harper's Bazar.

Dandruff is due to an enfeebled state of the skin. Hall's Hair Renewer quickens the nutritive functions of the skin, healing and preventing the formation of dandruff.

Couldn't Stand the Shock

"You know, Dorothy, these biscuits of yours," he began, as he reached across the breakfast table and helped himself to the fifth. "Yes?" said his wife, with a weary, feeble smile. "Ah! they're nothing like mother's." "No?" And the smile was gone. "No. Not a bit. You see, mother's were heavy and gave me dyspepsia, while yours are as light as a feather, and I can eat about—why, what's the matter, Dorothy?" She had fainted.—Kate Field's Washington.

An Old Song.

When giants lived in ancient times,
Sing heigh, my boy, sing ho!
In good old England, or foreign climes,
Sing heigh, my boy, sing ho!
They carried things with a high old hand,
Nor strong, nor weak, could before them stand,
And they killed whom they pleased throughout the land,
Sing heigh, my boy, sing ho!

But the giants didn't have things their own way when Jack-the-Giant-killer arrived on the scene. You remember the story. Recollect, too, that every age has its giant-killer. We have our giants in the form of all sorts of dreaded diseases, supposed to be incurable. Our Jack is in the form of Dr. Pierce, who has proven the expression "incurable diseases" to be a fallacy. Can you imagine more potent weapons to assist a woman in killing the giant-disease, than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription? It's the only guaranteed remedy for all functional disturbances, painful disorders, and chronic weaknesses of womanhood. In female complaints of every kind, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. It's simply a question of the company you prefer—the Giant or Jack!

We want to say a word for the brother that "bothers the life out of you." You often see him and run away from him when you can. He has a church to build, a school to support, a lot of missionaries to clothe and feed, or what not. He always comes at just the wrong time; but nearly always he has a good cause, and is burdened beyond measure for its success. If you have a cup of cold water, give it to this man, but not in his face. Many of the martyrs of this age are to be found among the brethren who have to beg for the Lord's money.—Baptist.

Thoughtlessness.

Farmer Simson was an exceedingly mild-natured man, and would find excuses for the shortcomings of his neighbors, for the faults of his horses and, in fact, for every unpleasant thing that came in his way. He purchased a cow and had great difficulty in keeping her in the pasture.

"She's kind of a rovin' critter, but she means well," he said, after a walk of several miles in pursuit of her.

One morning he was milking the cow, when she began to kick violently, upset the stool, sent the pail flying, and all the milk was spilled.

The farmer got up, and contemplating the ruin, said gravely to a witness of the disaster:

"Well, now, that's the worst fault this cow has."

Then with a moment's meditation, feeling that perhaps he had been unnecessarily severe, he added: "That is, if you can call it a fault; maybe it's only thoughtlessness."—Youth's Companion.

An old peasant in Northwest India learned by heart the first chapter of St. John's Gospel. After his harvest was over he would go out year by year into the villages around and repeat what he had learned. In eight years he had brought some four hundred of his countrymen to embrace Christianity and receive baptism.—Parish Chronicle.

CAST OUT, the disorders, diseases, and weaknesses peculiar to women—by the prompt action of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. A woman's beauty depends on her health—beauty in this case can be purchased. A bad complexion, a muddy skin, a wrinkled face and sunken eyes, follow the disorders of the womanly functions. Cupid is in demand for healthy woman — not for sick and ailing ones. The "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful, invigorating tonic, and a strengthening nervine to be used in all those distressing troubles which make woman's life miserable. You'll find relief from sleeplessness, backache and bearing-down sensations. It's a medicine prescribed by an eminent physician for those nervous conditions brought on by functional disorders—such as Nervous Prostration, Excitability, Fainting Spells, Dizziness, and St. Vitus's Dance. In every case of "female complaint" if it doesn't benefit or cure you have your money back.

Ballinger, Texas, Nov. 28.

The Good & Reese Co., Springfield, O. Gentlemen: The 20 ever blooming roses you sent me for $1, arrived yesterday in the most splendid condition, and allow me to say that I was absolutely surprised at the size of the stalks and the amount, length and thriftiness of the roots. I have wondered many times how you could afford to send out such roses for such a small price. Every home in the land should have their yard full of ever blooming roses at this price.

Yours,
Judge C. H. WILLINGHAM.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 20, 1893.

The Good & Reese Co., Springfield, O. Gentlemen: I wish to thank you for the excellent assortment of roses contained in your Rainbow Collection. On May 1 I planted them, 19 of them lived. About six of them bloomed in June since which all have bloomed either monthly or perpetual as true to their color. On Sept. 1 I counted 108 buds and blooms on the 19 roses. They were much admired by my friends and neighbors, and allow me to thank you for furnishing this source of pleasure so cheaply. Very respectfully,
E. D. SMITH.

THE public has got into the habit of thinking that the majority of the people of the United States live and will continue to live in rural districts. It is far wrong, as statistics show. "In 1850 one eighth of our population lived in cities of more than 8,000 inhabitants; now considerably more than one-fourth." It is certain that more than one fourth live in smaller cities, towns and villages. The country has flocked to the city despite many warnings; and just now this sudden immense increase in municipal population is the occasion of much discussion among students of American government. It is stated that in the North, particularly in those States in which the largest cities are, villages are abandoned, communities depleted, whole districts deserted, and the soil is untended and fruitless, all because of this sudden gravitation to the city. No wonder that in the presence of these conditions men are contemplating the problem of the city; for the city is going to be, if it is not now, the ruling force in our affairs, and the solution of its problems in the beginning will be most salutary.

When it is realized that the State of New York owes much of its greatness to the great city in its Southeast corner, and that that State, thus made great, now influences national politics in an appalling disproportion, the danger of the city to the nation is more apparent. If New York is to exert a dominating influence on the National government, how important it is that New York City itself be pure. Who does not recall the "snapper convention" and its Chicago struggle, or even the recent Hornblower rejection, with somewhat of fear. It has often been said that none but a New Yorker can be elected to the presidency by the Democratic party; and that party has shown its faith in the statement by nominating its presidential candidates for twenty years from that State. But this is a mere tendency; only an earnest of what may shortly be, unless the tide of immigration from Europe and emigration from the country is checked, and of what will eventually be, whether the tide is checked or not. The cities are destined to control our government, and they are becoming powerful by the depopulation of the rural districts. The city has far more influences for evil in it than the country; city politics are far more liable to corruption than rural politics. What can be done now to counteract those influences? is the problem of the city.

A LITTLE reflection on present methods of municipal politics will persuade any one of their utter disregard of the object of city government. A mayor, or a board of aldermen, is to be elected; the citizens who vote the Democratic or Republican National ticket immediately draw the party lines, and nominate candidates for city offices on National platforms and international policies! What has a mayor of a city to do with National affairs? How foolish it is to vote for a man for mayor because he is a strong Democrat! Yet this is the present method, and in the primaries of the city of Raleigh we have known citizens to be debarred because there was a suspicion that they were not precisely in accord with a majority of the citizens of a ward in National politics. The same remarks apply to county politics, and would be applicable to the State, if United States Senators were elected by popular vote. It is often the case that incompetent and unworthy officers are preferred to excellent ones for the inane reason that they believe in protection or free silver. What have such things to do with the government of a city? Surely it is enough to have to consider National policies once in four years, without bringing them into every election of petty officers, whose election or defeat can have no National effect.

If these useless discriminations were eradicated from county and municipal elections, politics would no longer menace the city, and the present problem would be much nearer solution. In the election of city or county officers men and not platforms should be the one consideration, and if there were a platform, it should have to do with the adjustment of local taxation and the properly punishing of evil doers, and not National finance, taxes and policies. It can now be easily seen how many mistakes have been made: "bosses" and "rings" have secured control over cities because the voters have overlooked the essentials to good city government, for the sake of National platforms, on which the municipal elections had absolutely no effect. Would it not be a much better state of affairs if politics were disregarded in all local elections in city, county and State? Would it not be much better if the controlling motive of our votes in local elections were good local government, instead of high or low tariff? The questions answer themselves

THE citizens of the South and West are now more independent of parties and party leaders, and less influenced by prejudice, than they have been since the first election of Lincoln; and the independent press is more popular than ever before. We wish we could say that there has been a corresponding diminution of partizanship; there has been, no doubt, some diminution.

It is said that the ideal representative government is of a people of individuality of thought and unity of aim; that is, of a people, each of whom "thinks for himself" and strives according to his knowledge for better government. They may differ widely as to means, but have a common end in view, the betterment of the race. Of course individualism may be cultivated to too great an extent; any one may become an egotistic crank, but there is scarcely any danger from that. Now this widespread disregard of former inviolable party ties is a tendency to individualism, but if the apostates ally themselves to another party, the beneficent results of individualism will not be realized. What is needed is conservative independence, with a more extensive knowledge of the principles of government and less regard for party ties among all classes of citizens. In former years the division of the voters into two great bodies, which voted, often without regard to principles, according to the dictates of the leaders of the party of its fathers, was little better than the impersonal loyalty of the Roman citizens, who, although they were pre-eminent in law, were enslaved by the Cæsars. They voluntarily enslaved their mind, and the temptation to enslave them physically was too great. But to be independent in thought doesn't require one to be a cynic, or a despiser of politics; for political parties are a necessary evil: it does require one to rise above a party when he differs with it in principle and whenever his conscience dictates. It does not require, nor can success be attained in hasty action; the radical independent is dangerous. Conservatism and wisdom and success, though slowly, go hand in hand. And if individualism, independence and conservatism were the moulding influences of men's politics, our government would be more democratic. The time has come when tradition and prejudice must give place to principles; when citizens must exercise the right of suffrage regardless of the party lash, looking only to the performance of their duty as moulders of the policies of the government. What that duty is, is best learned by study and investigation without prejudice, and not by listening to the confessedly prejudiced harangues of partizans.

WE ARE among the few who believe that President Cleveland's policy in the Hawaiian affair was both wise and just. The government of the Hawaiian Islands was taken from the former ruler by citizens of the United States; and by force. It is true that that ruler was not acceptable to those citizens, and it is equally true that those citizens had by their industry and superior advantages of mind acquired a large part of the property of the Islands. But are these reasons why the United States flag should have been used to depose the queen? If the United States citizens had been persecuted or unduly and unprovokedly interfered, a declaration of hostilities by the United States would have been in order. But these citizens resident on the Islands and holding allegiance to the queen, although they still held their citizenship in the United States, were allowed the privilege of voting in Hawaii. When they exercised that privilege they became a part of the Hawaiian government, and no longer had reason to look to the United States for protection, unless they were harassed by the queen. They should not have asked to be protected from themselves. The exercise of the right of suffrage implies the right and the obligation of self-government. If the United States citizens desired to establish a government of their own, it was no concern of ours, while they had the privilege of the ballot; and Cleveland is right in holding that reparation (not restoration) should be made if our flag was concerned in the dethronement of the queen; and in removing all American governmental influences that opposed or discouraged the queen.

There is still greater objection to annexation, which the preceding administration favored. A recent writer in the Forum, who treats the entire question in a masterly manner, and most disinterestedly, says, after stating that the population of the Islands is 90,000: "Of this whole hybrid and heterogeneous brood the most highly civilized portion, comprising Americans, British, Germans and Norwegians, number less than 14,000; natives and half-castes amount to 40,600; Chinese, Japanese, and a mongrel species of Portuguese, constitute the rest—36,000. Of pure Americans there are less than 2,000 altogether." Can we afford, for the sake of 2,000 Americans, to admit that heterogeneous brood, situate in the midst of the Pacific, to Statehood, which they would surely demand? There are 40,000 of them certainly no better than the oft denominated "savage and brutal" queen, who, according to our Constitution, would eventually have the constitutional right to demand the privileges of American citizenship. The Islands would be a troublesome charge on our hands, while formerly and now we have all possible advantages from them, and share none of the responsibility of educating, protecting and governing them.

FIRE INSURANCE.

A large proportion of the dwellings in North Carolina are, doubtless, insured against loss by fire in some fire insurance company. Prudent men, now-a-days, almost always carry some insurance.

It will, perhaps, be within the mark to say, that in a fourth of the cases in which insurance is carried, if a fire were to occur, nothing could be recovered under the policy. And why? Because some of the numerous matters exist which avoid the policy.

Now take down your fire insurance policy, which perhaps you have never read, and read it over, not omitting the fine print. In most of the policies it will be seen that the following matters, among others, are named in the policy as avoiding the policy:

(1) Any material fact in writing not correctly represented;
(2) Over valuation of the property;
(3) Subsequent insurance without permission;
(4) If, being personalty, it is removed without permission;
(5) If property be changed so as to increase risk;
(6) If the property be sold;
(7) If policy be assigned;
(8) If title to property be changed in anyway;
(9) If assured be not sole owner of property;
(10) If interest of insured in property be not properly stated;
(11) If building be and remain unoccupied ten days;
(12) If fire-works, benzine, petroleum, nitro-glycerine, more than twenty five pounds of gunpowder, or more than one barrel of kerosene oil be used or kept on the premises.

Quite a long list. And, even in case of fire, there being nothing to avoid the contract, the company is not answerable, if such fire occurred by reason of riot, or insurrection, or from lightning, or by reason of a wind, cyclone or tornado blowing down the building.

To which it should be added the further condition that suit must be brought within one year after the fire; and, in case of fire, the company has the option to replace the building, or to pay three-fourths of the face of the policy provided the property is worth the insurance; and if not worth the amount of the insurance, then three-fourths of its cash value.

Some of the conditions in contracts of insurance our courts have held to be void, as against public policy. For example, No. (2) above. If one overvalue his property, this will not avoid the contract, unless the over-valuation is fraudulent and intentional.

And so, perhaps, No. (12); the mere having any prohibited explosives on the premises would not avoid the contract, unless such explosive caused the fire. Let us illustrate by means of a few examples:

Mrs. Sugg insured her dwelling, and after that time took out other insurance without notifying the first company. As a matter of fact she did not think of it and had no intention to injure the insurance company. But, our court said that it was so written in the contract. So Mrs. Sugg received no insurance money when the house burned. See (3) above.

So take (6), (8), (9), (10) above. The contract which one makes with an insurance company to the effect that he is the sole owner in fee of the property proposed to be insured, and that there are no incumbrances on it, is binding on the insured, and an error in either of these particulars avoids the contract.

Mr. Cuthbertson, in Union county, after his building was burned, sued the company; and, it appearing that he ignorantly signed an application for insurance in which he stated that he owned in fee the land on which the house stood, whereas, in truth and in fact, he had built the house on land leased by himself, he did not recover his policy.

A dwelling recently burned in Oxford, upon which were several mortgages, all unknown to the company in which insurance was taken. The owner did not know that he had no right to mortgage his house, after taking out insurance on the same, without permission of the company. Of course, he was entitled to nothing after the dwelling burned; but the company generously compromised with him and paid something.

How many men know they ought not to suffer their insured residences to be vacant ten days without a "permit" from the company? And yet, no doubt, if a fire occurred after the ten days and while the insured property was still vacant, no insurance could be recovered. Of course, this is on the supposition that the policy requires that the house shall be occupied. It would then be, no doubt, a "continued warranty."

Such clauses are not inserted in policies of insurance taken on barns, stables and other houses not intended to be occupied. In these cases the rate of insurance is higher generally than when the building is occupied.

Now, in a case that Hornthal & Bro. brought against an insurance company, it appeared that the insured made an approximation of the amount of their previous insurance to the agent of the defendant company. It also appeared that the company was not correctly informed by the agent. But our court said that the plaintiffs, in these circumstances, ought to recover on the policy.

Let us consider section (5) above. Suppose that after insurance is effected, the insured property is altered so as to increase the risk. That is to say, suppose that another building is placed so near as to be in the fire limit; or the pipes run into the sides of the dwelling instead of into well-secured flues or chimneys; or suppose, indeed, that the dwelling is greatly added to or enlarged without permission, and such addition increases the risk, in case of a fire, under these changed conditions, perhaps no damages could be recovered.

In fine, no man ought to mortgage or otherwise encumber his insured property; or take out additional insurance on the same; or add to it; or carry explosives, &c., on the premises; or permit a house that is insured as a dwelling to remain vacant more than ten days without permission from the company carrying the insurance.

When applying for insurance, if it is asked of the agent, he will attach a "lightning clause" to the policy, by the terms of which, in the event of fire by lightning, the company is liable.

Sometimes, if not always, the insured agrees that the ashes shall be properly secured or emptied a safe distance from the dwelling. In the event of a fire, because of failure to comply with this agreement, the company would not perhaps be answerable.

The statement and agreement that suit shall be brought within one year after the fire, is not a statute of limitations. But it is a binding contract. And if a party delays to bring suit more than one year, and the delay be not caused by the act and conduct of the company, perhaps the insured could not maintain his suit.

In this connection, and referring to the recent article on "Telegrams," it is proper to say that the recent ruling of our court is, that the party seeking damages against the telegraph company, because of error in delivering a message, must make the demand of the company in sixty days,—not that suit must be brought within that time. If the demand be made in sixty days, so as to put the company on its guard, suit may be brought as in other like cases, under the statute of limitations. So that, on the whole, it is to be observed that people should exercise great care in matters pertaining to insurance, for the contracts of insurance companies are not illy drawn.

Your void policy of insurance and your last year's almanac are equally valuable.

The General Catalogue of Wake Forest College.

ITS BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—SOME REMARKABLE FACTS—MILITARY AND CHRISTIAN HEROISM.

Dear Recorder:—I have just been looking through the "General Catalogue of Wake Forest College," prepared with so much labor by Dr. Taylor, and comment as follows:

1. There seems to have been about three thousand students educated wholly or in part at the College since its organization in 1834-5. Of this number very few have switched off the track in their career through life and made wrecks of themselves. On the other hand, I think it doubtful if there has ever been an institution for educating the young in all our country that has sent out so great a variety of talent and successful attainments, in proportion to the number. In almost every avenue of life we find these sons of Wake Forest climbing to the top rung of the ladder of usefulness and distinction.

2. In examining these biographical sketches, as prepared by Dr. Taylor, of each individual student, our memory is aroused from its silent slumbers to active visions of the past, and proudly, though sadly, contemplates the brilliant and glorious achievements of such a host of young men who were prepared and inspired within the classic walls of Wake Forest. I know of no other institution so limited in resources that has produced such grand results.

3. In our late civil war many of these youths distinguished themselves for bravery and gallantry, winning the admiration of the highest military commanders in Gen. Lee's army and those in the West.

They were seen as privates in the rank, commanding companies, regiments, brigades and divisions. Many of them poured out their young life's blood upon the altar of their country, and left us the legacy of their brilliant achievements upon the fields of hard contested battles.

THE HERO OF PLYMOUTH, N. C.

John G. Jones of Person county graduated in 1862, and hastening to the front of our armies, threw his body and soul into the bloody contest. See him in command of the Thirty-fifth Regiment of North Carolina Infantry before the frowning forts of the enemy at Plymouth, N. C., charging and leading his men through the port holes, planting his flag within the ramparts of the enemy, triumphant in victory, capturing the fort, and winning his promotion to a Brigadier Generalship. But few instances of more daring intrepidity are recorded in the annals of history.

After passing through many of the bloodiest battles of the war, in June 17th, 1864, before Petersburg, in that memorable struggle, where so many of our brave soldiers fell, our hero fell at the head of his command and yielded up his life for his country. I mention this one instance as illustrative of what I have said in regard to the action of the sons of Wake Forest in the war. A great many others are equally worthy of mention, but encumber this brief narrative. General Jones was a younger brother of the Rev. R. B. Jones so well known all over the State, who also graduated in 1861, and after a most successful career as a minister, died in 1868, and lies buried in the College cemetery.

4. Again, looking over these short sketches, we find many of these students distinguished in civil life, not only in this State, but scattered far and wide over our broad domain. Some of them presidents of banks, presidents of railroads, of business corporations, capitalists, engineers, prominent as editors, journalists, merchants, physicians, machinists and artists, and not a few following the quiet, sequestered walks of the farmer. Again, many of them in our legislative halls, members of Congress, judges and justices of the Supreme Court, one of our class mates at present Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Tennessee. Some are high in position in the general government, ministers plenipotentiary and consuls to foreign governments, useful and distinguished in almost every department of life as lawyers, professors and presidents of colleges and universities in this and other States, teachers in academies and high schools all over the land, and superintendents of asylums; some of them as the foremost scholars of the country. Doctor W. Gaston Simmons, LL. D., who died March 3d, 1889, the senior professor at Wake Forest, after giving more than thirty years of his valuable life to his alma mater, was one of the most eminent scholars of this country. Dr. T. B. Kingsbury, editor of the Wilmington Messenger, and the most profound English scholar of this State, if not in America, regarded Dr. Simmons as the peer of any man in scholastic attainments. Had he chosen the profession of law he might have been a distinguished jurist. Dr. Simmons has two sons who graduated from Wake Forest, one the president of the female college in Eufaula, Alabama, and the other professor in William Jewell College, Missouri. He has also a daughter, Miss Eva Belle, who went through the full course at Wake Forest, and is the only lady in the State that I know of who has received the degree of A. B.

5. The most useful and highest sphere of life that these sons of Wake Forest have been called to fill is that of the ministry of the gospel. So, again looking through this catalogue, we see the names almost on every page of some of the most remarkable men in modern history. I fully believe that no institution of learning in this country ever furnished to the world such a host of consecrated and useful men.

Going back to 1845, Matthew Tyson Yates took his A. B. degree, and on March 15th, 1857, he sailed as missionary to China, and the first to go from the State of any denomination. For more than forty years he spent his eventful life preaching to the millions of that far off heathen land and translating the Scriptures in their own language, and was called the model missionary of the world. He was honored and esteemed by all the civilized nations of the earth, and at one time was under official appointment of the British government. He died at his post March 17th, 1889. When he first sailed it took several months voyage to reach his destination, but he lived to visit his native country when it required only about four weeks to make the trip, so great are the triumphs of transportation.

The preachers going out from the College since Dr. Yates' day are now scattered all over the world. Not only are they found in every nook and corner of this State, but in the other States and territories—in Mexico, in South America, in Africa, in Japan, in China, in India, in the isles of the sea, everywhere, standing up as moral lights and preaching the everlasting gospel. Go where you will over North Carolina, stop over on Sunday in our towns and cities, you can hear the voice of these representative sons of Wake Forest proclaiming to the large congregations that old story of the cross. Go into our largest cities, New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Kansas City, Louisville, Augusta, from the shores of California to the

THE BIBLE AND "LEARNING."

The intellectual and the spiritual have always been at war. Christ was despised because he was uncultured; the Pharisees could not abide the idea that one so lowly born and humbly reared was to be a leader among them. Besides they knew signs, and Christ seemed to them incapable of giving a sign that was worthy of their advanced learning. Wherever he went the fiercest opposition came from the intellectual leaders, and the respect, which the learned always command, engendered opposition on the part of the uneducated. But Christ went his way, losing as little time as possible in disputing and arguing with the learned ones, and gave himself to the poor, whose life of labor deprived them of opportunity for education. The intellectual thought they had won the fight; learning was triumphant, and no doubt many of those questioners thought well of themselves. They didn't anticipate that the civilized world would wonder at their stupidity in the presence of Christ, nineteen centuries later.

But that warfare begun so long ago is not yet over. A part of the intellectual world is still contending that Christ's word doesn't agree with their advanced investigations; they are ready to claim a victory on all occasions. There are many men of great learning who cannot reconcile science to the Bible, and for this reason they consider it anything but a work of divine inspiration. But they scarcely ever view the Bible in the proper light. If their science had been exposed to the investigation and discussion of which the Bible has been the subject and object for centuries, we doubt if it could be reconciled to anything. The fierce light that has been thrown on the Bible in this century, and the thousands and thousands of books that have been written on it, would have long since destroyed or improved any human fabrication. And all the while science has remained in the hands of its friends, and even then it has been wonderfully improved, and some say is about to be reconciled to the Bible, which is above improvement, and to which all things will eventually be reconciled.

We do not contend that all is known about the Bible no more than that science has been fully developed; but it is needless to say that more, far more, is known of the former than of the latter. There are mysteries to many of us yet, and there will always be mysteries. But the Bible is so much older than science that we do not well see how anyone could expect them to become reconciled. Suppose they had been reconciled in perfect agreement fifty years ago; one or the other would be grossly wrong now. And it will be the same fifty years hence; what is scientifically accepted now will be false then. Thus it is: Science, human, always capable of improvement; the word of God, perfect. We do not wish them reconciled until scientific investigators and theorists cease their occupation.

But there is danger that this difference, in that it is made of importance by learned men, will detract from the Bible in youthful eyes. Let them think of the Pharisees, who were full of seemingly laudable criticism, but who were very foolish. Let them think of the changes and the uncertainty which characterizes all human affairs, and, on the other hand, the storms that God's word has endured unharmed, the investigations it has undergone, unimproved. It is very attractive to some to think that they are above and are different from the generality of people and their views; and for this reason many a brilliant young man boasts infidelity only to regret it in his more sober days.

But the warfare will be kept up. People will be crying that the Bible and an ever-varying science are not reconciled when judgment day comes; attempting to reconcile them, a perfect and unchanging dispensation with human, temporal and changing ideas and theories. Yet there are many engaged in investigation for the truth's sake, and they are not searching in vain. Buried cities have been exhumed, and many objects which confirm heretofore unsubstantiated biblical statements. Progress is being made every day; but it will be of little value to Christians, for they should not depend on things temporal for the strength of their faith. Yet they may remove the props that support scientists and sceptics, and thus do a great work. But we do not believe that Christ will convert many sinners by such means, for he would rather his followers show him and his grace so strongly in their lives that there will be no need of further proof. Works among men will do more to destroy the force of the arguments of science than a century of investigation and discussion.

We cannot all of us be learned. Many must go through life without that higher temporal knowledge which men aspire to, and which commands so much respect. Science is a difficult matter to keep up with, and no one man has sounded its "heights and depths." But all can know Christ and his work; the divine fount is ever flowing, and who thirsts for knowledge of God and Christ will not seek it in vain; for the Holy Spirit is poured out for the humble and lowly just as abundantly as for the great ones in human affairs. One does well to study, but God's word should not be overlooked by any student. We may learn much, but nothing so beneficent as a faith in Jesus Christ can be acquired.

BETWEEN CHURCH-MEMBERS.

Country churches have a decided advantage over a majority of city churches in that the formalities, which a foolish generation have incorporated into social laws, have no existence in them. It does one's heart good to see the heartiness with which the brethren and sisters of country churches greet one another; there is a living brotherliness among them. While, on the other hand, the mechanical formality of some city churches is not only unchristian, but really senseless. The members of a country church are always acquainted with one another, are not in the way of temptation to division socially, and know what real sympathy is. They are an example to all church-members. But we do not mean to have it understood that they do not have their differences, and that they are unchristian in them; still, we believe they are as a whole more brotherly because they are more thoroughly acquainted, and are more ready to sympathize with one another in time of trouble.

We do not believe that a good Christian will require a formal introduction to a new brother in the church before he speaks to him in public. Yet this has often been an excuse for unacquaintance among church-members. And some church members even require an introduction to a new pastor. These things have been brought about by social laws, conceived in foolishness, and designed by people who think themselves better than others. There is one Christ for us all, and it is a fact of history that he dwelt among the lowly, that he himself was meek and lowly. His law is, love thy neighbor; and if we love Christ we will keep this simple law, despite all the social laws on earth. Let it not be said that church-members "do not know" each other; let it not be said that an inane law of men is preferred by any one to the law of Jesus.

Again, church members often have quarrels. They refuse to speak to each other, each holding that it is the duty of the other to apologize or make reparation. They smother their imagined wrongs in silence, and never a word of prayer to God that he may repair injuries is uttered. This is unchristian. Church members should not bear malice; and there is a way to avoid and remedy it. No one should refuse to take all his troubles "to God in prayer," whether they are his own or some one else's fault. It will never do to smother anything of the kind. The pastor or a mutual friend should know your grievances, and you should not be ashamed to tell them. You are not a tale-bearer if you tell the truth, and it is so much better than injuring yourself and your church by bearing a brother malice. A warfare among church-members does far more harm than all the arguments of infidels and agnostics; and for Christ's sake and our own, it should never exist. If you are positively sure that your brother is wrong, it is your duty to tell him so; if he is not persuaded, God will settle the matter through his church. An erring brother should be corrected, and if he is wilfully erring he is unchristian and unworthy of Christ, and should not be allowed church-membership. But it is always well for one to look prayerfully for the beam in his own eye before he complains of the mote in his brother's.

"I FEEL like I imagine one feels who is about to try the high seas in a birch canoe," said a young man on the threshold of a promising career. The simile is apt, but the young man should console himself that his position is no worse than that of the rest of mankind. Some are facing the waves, some are in their midst; others are nearing the farther shore; all are in frail barques, the tide is against them, and the sea is rough. But there is a pilot and a chart, and with them none can make a mistake. The waves may threaten, but with Christ in him, and Christ's Book to guide him, the young man cannot be without consolation or without hope under the blackest clouds or before most powerful "breakers." "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Win the crown, and nothing is lost.

JONATHAN M'GEE HECK.

Although we were aware that Bro. Heck's illness was fatal, and had expected his death for several days, we were none the less sensible of the great loss that befell the city, the State, and the denomination, when the announcement came that he had passed away at 11:30 a. m. on the 10th inst. at Philadelphia, whither three months ago loving hands had borne him, with the prayers of a great multitude, in quest of relief.

Jonathan McGee Heck was born in Virginia (now West Virginia) May 5th, 1831. He received the best education that the locality afforded, and afterward sought higher instruction at Rector College. At the breaking out of the war he was enjoying a large practice at law, his chosen profession, and had already attained eminence as a citizen, being Colonel of the State militia. He cast his lot with the Confederacy, was one of the signers of the Virginia declaration of secession, and followed the fortunes of the South throughout the long struggle. Even at this time he manifested remarkable executive talent, distinguishing himself as an organizer of his State troops.

At the end of the war Col. Heck came to Raleigh, N. C., and began the reconstruction of the fallen fortunes of himself and his adopted State. He was one of the organizers of a company to develop North Carolina resources, and attract worthy immigrants. Afterwards he became interested in agricultural and mineral development, and in this amassed that fortune which enabled him to do so much benevolent work among all classes. He never lost sight of his duty as a citizen, and though he never held nor sought public office in North Carolina, he bore the burden of many difficult civic positions with grace and usefulness for the sake of his State. But he was better known to us as a pillar of the Baptist denomination in North Carolina.

A descendant of a family noted through generations for devotion to the Christian religion, it is not surprising that he easily became chief among North Carolina Baptist laymen. We know of no layman who has been so honored and trusted by the denomination as was Bro. Heck; and no man could have borne these trusts and honors more worthily and gracefully than he. It is worthy of note here that his distinguished son-in-law, the lamented Pace, stood second only to him among North Carolina Baptists. Bro. Heck had been President of the State Convention, was President of the State Sunday school Board, was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and President of the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College. Large of means, he was free handed in benevolence; the Heck-Williams building of Wake Forest College being an enduring testimony to his liberality and his Christian love.

A citizen of affluence, culture and refinement, an honored soldier and patriot, a Christian of undoubted zeal and consecration, large of head and heart, determined of purpose and noble in spirit; the passing of his life deprives the State of one of its most substantial citizens, the denomination of one of its strongest pillars. Sanguine of temperament, earnest and faithful in duty, and discreet in execution, the inspiration of his presence in dark and trying times will be greatly missed.

Nothing in this life could be of more consolation to us who mourn his death than the gentle spirit with which he bore the agony of his lingering illness. When he was strong enough, he spent the hours writing letters to his brethren whom he would not see again on earth, to the Sunday-school and the church in which he had been a faithful steward of the Lord for a generation, and which he had done so much to upbuild, and to the Convention in which his timely counsels had so often been blessings. Truly

"His dying hours brought glory to his God."

We mourn his death as of a friend, a brother and counselor; and we join his family and many friends in their sorrow, awaiting the unfolding of the promise of our Lord and Saviour—"What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." We have not lost him long; he has only gone before to receive the crown which awaits the faithful.

The funeral was preached from the First Baptist church of this city on last Sunday afternoon, Drs. Taylor, Carter and Skinner taking part in the exercises, after which an immense concourse of sorrowing friends conducted the remains to Oakwood cemetery.

IT doesn't seem business like to be thinking of sending out more missionaries when the Board is already struggling under a debt, and money is unusually scarce. Yet we believe that Bro. Bryan is wise in advising that twenty or thirty more missionaries be sent to the fields this year. A church, like a man, doesn't realize what it can do until it labors under the stimulus of what seems an overpowering burden. Great things must be attempted before great things are accomplished. There's no telling what we can do when we are pushed,—"in a corner." The fields are ripe, and the harvest must be garnered; the work must be done, for the night cometh. We cannot afford for our own sake, for the heathen's sake, for Christ's sake, to hesitate in sending the blessed gospel to the perishing. If we haven't the money on hand, if it is not even "in sight," we can trust to God and do our best. We fear many of our people are relying on human means too much now; they are unwilling to undertake anything that they cannot see the end of. We must work more by faith and prayer.

If you have not money, pray God to move some one who has to give it freely. Christ's saving love must be heralded to the nations of the earth, and there are but two means to the end: prayer and faith; do your part in these, and the works will follow.

WE publish in this issue an article from Bro. W. C. Tyree on the Ministers' Relief Board. It should be read by every Baptist in the State. There is no more deserving enterprise within the denomination than that to make the decline of those men, who have served man nobly and well by serving God faithfully through many years, as pleasant as possible. God promises to take care of his servants, and he fulfills that promise through his children. A preacher in North Carolina seldom has the opportunity to accumulate anything for an evil day; he does very well if he educates his children. But they should never want for the necessaries and the comforts of life. The Ministers' Relief Board has done much good work, but it needs more power in order to do as much as it should.

WE believe in a cheerful religion. No people should be happier than Christians, and unhappiness among them always leads us to think that they want faith. It is not recorded that Christ ever smiled; yet that has but little to do with the question. Christ was weighed down by sorrow; he bore the sins of the world; and he may, and he may not, have smiled. It is certain that he knew a divine joy in his glorious work. Christians have their crosses to bear, but if they do not bear them willingly and cheerfully, they are only menial servants; they are not performing their work in love, which is the mainspring of joy.

Something of the "doctern" and the "religen" of "Old John Henry" does much to make a dark world brighter to the struggler against adverse circumstances:—

"A smilin' face and a hearty hand
's religen 'at all folks understand."

....Rev. Samuel Saunders, who is the pastor at Murfreesboro, arrived on the 7th. He serves Seaboard on first Sundays and Saturdays before; Mt. Tabor, third Sunday and Saturday before; second and fourth Sundays, Murfreesboro, says the Index. We extend him a hearty welcome to North Carolina.

....It is probable that Rev. F. C. McConnell, the popular Assistant Secretary of the Home Board, will take part in the next commencement exercises of Wake Forest College. He has been asked to deliver the address before the Literary Societies, and we hope he will accept. Dr. Conwell of Philadelphia recently declined to deliver the sermon before the graduating class.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews of Moyock, N. C., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Second Baptist church, Berkley, Va., (South Norfolk), and began work on the 11th inst. This church will occupy Brother Matthews' full time, and he gives up his North Carolina charges. He may serve the church at Mulberry, five miles from Portsmouth with afternoon services. North Carolina regrets to lose him.

....We have received the second number of the Young People's Leader. Among the leading writers are Dr. Lansing Burrows, "Rev." W. L. Poteat of Wake Forest College, who tells quite interestingly "How a Land Wasp Stored Fresh Meat for Her Young," Revs. F. C. McConnell, C. H. Jones and Dr. Whitsitt. The editorials are sensible, and tersely expressed. The Leader is worthy of the place it seeks. Prof. Poteat can make a mighty good talk, and write splendid articles, but so far as we know he does not lay any claim to the title of Rev.

....Our readers have often heard that the "Gospel Mission" was modeled after the plan of the Inland China Mission. The following interview of Dr. Pritchard with Rev. Jno. M'Carthy of that Mission should settle the matter beyond doubt: "I asked him (Mr. M'Carthy) if he knew Bro. Herring. He stated that he did, and that he was satisfied he was making a mistake in the method he had adopted of conducting his new Mission. I told him I had heard that the 'Gospel Mission,' as it is called, was modeled after the plan of the Inland China Mission. He said that was a mistake; their plans of work were, in some respects similar, but the money basis of the Mission was very different. He confirmed what we had heard, that the real source of the movement is Dr. Crawford."—Charity and Children.

.....Dr. A. E. Owen writes an article in the last issue of the Religious Herald on "Representation in the Southern Baptist Convention." He seems to think that the number of delegates from a State should be determined by the amount of money that State gives to the objects of the Convention. This is mercenary, plutocratic, and grossly wrong. Amounts of money should have no part in the question; money does not represent Christianity, nor churches, nor anything Christian, and should not determine the number of votes in anything except a meeting of stockholders. And if it is regarded in that light we are sure every Southern Baptist is an equal stockholder in the Southern Baptist Convention, whether he is able to give money to the work or not.

.....If young people, or old people, or middle-aged people need instruction, there are thousands of teachers, hundreds of preachers and millions of parents charged with that duty. And if they fail in it, there is no reason to believe the editor of an "organ" in Boston or any other other city will succeed.—Western Recorder. This involves the question which the Convention expects North Carolina to decide this year. Our admirable contemporary has taken a decidedly strong stand in the matter, and many of our brethren in North Carolina, particularly the older ones, stand with it. If the teachers, preachers, and parents will do the work (and there is no doubt they can), the societies have no place. But will they do it?

.....Rev. R. T. Bryan spent a busy day in the Master's service in Raleigh last Sunday. In the morning he addressed the First church on the results already accomplished in China, and at night he delivered a splendid discourse at the Tabernacle from the unique subject, "Having a Name Without Reality." At both services large audiences were in attendance, and every one seemed greatly interested in the speakers words. Bro. Bryan is different from the majority of missionary lecturers in that he delivers the best missionary talk we ever heard, and never charges anything for his eloquence, he doesn't believe in taking up collections, and prefers the prayers and the sympathy of his hearers to all other offerings. He addressed the Ladies' Missionary Society Monday afternoon. Bro. Bryan has travelled from Maryland to Florida in the last few months inspiring the people to a larger interest in mission work, and will now take a much needed rest at his home in Durham.

Demands on the Foreign Mission Board.

Dear Brethren:—The demands upon your Board of Foreign Missions for reinforcements in some of our fields are so great that we feel it our duty to lay the matter before you. Out of a large number of applicants to go to foreign fields, the Board has closely examined many, and decided that ten at least are worthy and if possible should be sent out this fall. Some others are already under appointment waiting to go. These men and women are among our very best, consecrated and anxious to start on the work to which they feel God has called them.

The Board, after waiting, praying and carefully considering the matter, has passed the following:

"Inasmuch as the committee on New Missions and Missionaries has reported ten applicants worthy of appointment, and as our fields in China, Japan and Africa greatly need reinforcements, therefore,

Resolved (1), That we instruct the Corresponding Secretary to present this matter to the associations, churches and individuals, as far as practicable, and see if they can be induced to make such an increase in their regular contributions as will authorize the Board to send out this fall those who are ready and approved.

(2) That Bro. R T. Bryan be requested to take part in pushing this forward movement, and also Dr. R. H. Graves when he arrives in this country."

Now, in presenting this great work to you, we feel that God's hand is leading us to go forward. The fields are white, the laborers few. We have prayed God to send others. They stand before us, saying, "Here am I, send me!" The whole question, then, is, what will we, God's people, do?

Our plan is this: We wish individuals, churches and associations, who will make an advance in their regular contributions, to notify the Secretary of the Board, so that we may have some definite idea of what our people are willing to do. For example, if a church has been giving for Foreign Missions ten dollars, and will raise it regularly to twenty; or fifty dollars, and will raise it to a hundred; or one hundred, and will raise it to one hundred and fifty or more, then send us word. So, also, with an individual, or missionary society, or association. Many of our business men could easily give an additional fifty or one hundred dollars annually. The same is true of many associations composed of churches which are financially weak.

Those who desire to go are from different States—Maryland to Texas. Your State can easily increase her contributions sufficiently to send one or two. Every State has churches and individuals who could alone do this. The work is God-given. If we honor our Father, he will honor us. Resolve at once that you and your church will act, and never stop until the notice is given us, and the money is sent, and the missionary is on the field giving the gospel to the dying souls for whom Christ died. Then you cannot stop. You will have a work in which you will rejoice more and more. Who will be the first to respond? What individual or church?

Fraternally,
R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec.

P. S. A list of those responding to this appeal will be published in the Journal from time to time, unless we are requested not to do so.

Comfort in Trouble.

My heart is filled with thankfulness. There are many good and true servants of the Lord in the State. Many of them have written me in the past thirty days. I have never felt so drawn out in heart to the brethren. They know our anxiety, the burden upon us, and the work we are trying to do.

The Convention instructed the Board, and the Board instructed me. Hence for thirty days I have devoted head, heart, energies, and time to an honest effort to secure the debt of $5,000 now on the Board. I have written to hundreds of the best men and women in the world about it. They are all in sympathy with this work. Many of them have told me what they will do. We are in sight of victory. But all will be lost unless we secure all—the full amount.

"Dear Bro. Durham:—Please inform me to whom of my brethren you wrote with reference to indebtedness of the Board, and send me a copy of propositions made to them. I purpose aiding you with them, but must know what you said to them, so when I take hold I will help, not hinder. If I hear by Monday, I will devote the next week to the work. Yours truly, ———.

February 10, 1894."

"Dear Bro. Durham:—Your letter of Jan. 20th to hand. I verily believe your plan to raise the desired amount will succeed. I think the hand of the Lord is in it; I do not only believe it, but know it.

I was about making a trade a few days ago, which would have required all or about all the money I had on hand. Last Monday at noon, while talking to the Lord about it, I was struck with the thought to stop (it was lawful) for a few daws. I did not understand it. Your letter explains it all. So by the help of God, I will respond. I hope you will find ninety-nine men in the State who have felt about it as I do. So I feel it a privilege to take part in coming up to the help of the Lord in this most indispensable part of our mission work. Put me down for fifty dollars, and by His help I will respond.

I hope the other brethren will do the same. If we have the will, it will come. May the prayer of us all be that the Lord will help us to deny ourselves for this end.

Yours fraternally," ———.

On Saturday last I send a statement to hundreds of our pastors, and, in a few days, I will, I hope, hear from them all. Time is short. We must succeed, or lose all that has been done. Brethren and sisters and churches, in all parts of the State, are taking part in the Convention's proposition.

Help us, please, at once, if you can, and get others to help, if it is in your power.

Relief of our Aged Ministers.

I was requested by the last Convention to expand some simple thoughts, which I briefly presented during the discussion of the report of the Ministers' Relief Board, into several articles for the RECORDER.

It was not because there was any special merit or force in my short speech that this was done, nor is it because I think so that I comply with the request; but the Convention seemed to feel that this Board which represents a comparatively new object has not been brought as prominently before the Baptists of the State as its importance demands, and does not share as much of the sympathy and liberality of our people as it needs and deserves. I should like in this article to emphasize the fact that the object of this Board, to provide for our aged and disabled preachers, is proper and legitimate work for the Convention to engage in. Some of the brethren think that the Convention is burdened with some things which do not come within the scope of its real design, and that these outside objects consume so much time in our annual meetings, that the objects which properly belong to the Convention, do not and cannot receive as much consideration, as they should have. I think this is true, and I believe it would be well as a wise brother expressed it for the Convention to unload itself of these outside objects, which are good and important, but have no real claim on this body. But I am quite sure that the support of our poor and disabled preachers is not one of such objects; for it really devolves upon the Convention to provide for them. The practice of the apostolic churches should guide us in this matter and we see that they unitedly and in combination provided for the poor saints. The first thing for which Christians were called on to contribute, was the relief of poor Christians. The first burden God put on the churches was to support the disciples, who, on account of persecution or famine or other misfortune needed assistance. Before there was any call for contributions to missions, before there was any occasion for Christians to exercise the grace of liberality in that way, God imposed this duty. It was not left to individual Christians to support the poor disciples about them, nor for individual churches separately to take care of their own poor; which at that time in some places was impossible; but all the Christians in all the churches, were repeatedly urged by the apostles to contribute to the general fund which was disbursed where it was needed. If the apostolic churches engaged in such work, if these churches collectively cared for the poor saints at that time surely the care of our poor and needy preachers is a work which belongs to our Convention, the only common, general organization through which our churches work; surely it is as plainly the duty of the Convention to do this as it is to do mission work. It might be asked, why should the Convention care for poor preachers and not for other needy Christians? In reply I would say it is better for each church to take care of its own poor because in this country this is generally possible, and if in any case it should not be possible neighboring churches would aid; for it would be impracticable, owing to the proportions of such a work and the trouble which it would involve, to have a State fund for the general poor. But it is practicable to care for our disabled preachers for they are a comparatively small and separate class, who have peculiar claims upon the denomination as a whole.

For these and many other reasons which I need not mention the distinction is justifiable. It might also be urged that other denominations make such provision for their disabled preachers and the Baptists of other States do so and this shows that it is a general opinion among Christian people, that the care of our needy preachers should devolve upon the churches collectively, and should be arranged for through some general organization. Now if this is and ought to be a part of the Convention's regular work it ought to be as regularly and generally brought before the churches composing the body as any other board, and the churches should be expected to contribute as regularly to this as to any other object which the Convention undertakes. If this is and ought to be one of the boards of our Convention whose claims are as just as any of the rest, there is no reason why it should not be regularly presented and properly considered and discussed at all of our Associations. Surely if the Convention has undertaken this work the churches ought to support it. They should make it one of the regular objects to which they contribute and if they take public collections for the other boards they should take public collections for this; if they appoint committees for the others they should appoint a committee for this. If it is the duty of one church to contribute to it, it is the duty of all; for the beneficiaries are scattered all over the State and they have labored in all sections of the State, so it is as much the duty of one section as another to care for them when they are no longer able to preach and have not the means of support. We hope, therefore, that our churches may feel that loyalty to the Convention requires that they should not neglect this important part of its work and we trust every church which has not heretofore contributed will do so this year. In another article we shall urge other and perhaps stronger reasons for general and liberal support of the board.

Seminary Dots.

Dear Recorder:—If there is one thing in the life of a student that he dreads above all things else, it is examinations, and he always feels relieved when they are over; such is the case with the students of the Seminary at this time. The intermediate examinations closed the 31st ult. with the exception of one, "Pastoral Duties." We begin work to-morrow on the second half of the term. To-day is missionary day, as the first day of every month is set apart for that special work. This is the only Seminary in the country that sets apart a special day for that work. These meetings are extremely interesting and instructive. The object of these meetings is to create greater missionary interest, and keep the subject of missions burning in the hearts of the men who will soon go out from this place to lead the people in every good word and work.

We had a very instructive paper read today by Bro. Thomas A. Johnson of Lynchburg, Va., on the subject, "Means of Awakening and Maintaining in the Home Churches Greater Interest in Foreign Missions."

Dr. Jno. R. Sampey, our much-loved and efficient teacher of Old Testament and Hebrew, is quite sick. We miss him very much in the class-room, and we pray for his speedy recovery and full restoration to health, so that he may soon greet us again with his usual pleasant smile.

Dr. Broadus returned to us much refreshed after a short visit to Florida. The Florida brethren gladdened his heart with a liberal contribution to the "Students' Aid Fund." He asked for $180, and they gave him $200.

Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., will lecture in the city Friday night, Feb. 2d, to the delight of a majority of the boys of the Seminary.

Rev. B. W. Spilman filled the pulpit of Broadway Baptist church last Sunday night, to the satisfaction of all who heard him, in the absence of the pastor, Dr. W. L. Pickard. Our North Carolina brethren capture the people wherever they go. We hope that the churches in our State will not allow Kentucky to keep all of our best men; but if our brethren don't keep a sharp look-out, these Kentucky brethren will be laying violent hands on some more of our brethren as they did our Bro. Lynch. And ought they not to be satisfied with him?

I wish I could say something that would induce more of our brethren to come here. We have only fourteen here from North Carolina. Now, that ought not to be, and it would not be as it is, if the brethren only knew what they are missing by staying away. One of our best men said to me the other day, "I would not take a thousand dollars for the good I received last year in Homiletics." I believe a man will get a foundation for work here that would take him twenty-five years to get were he not to come. There are twenty-two years saved, to say it will take him three years to take the course here. We ought to have a larger representation from our beloved State, and we are looking and working for it to take effect Oct. 1st, 1894. Brethren, come, we need you here; and above all, you need the benefits that this institution offers you, and lay hold of them at once. Were I to try to exaggerate the benefits of the Seminary, I would make a failure.

THOS. J. HUDSON.

A Memorial to Dr. Wingate.

The Franklinton Baptist church is engaged in erecting a beautiful and commodious meeting house, upon the most beautiful lot in the village; and, when their work is done, they desire it shall include a memorial to the late Dr. W. M. Wingate. It is the intention of the church to set aside the bay-window of the new church to be filled with such a memorial in stained glass. We think this memorial window is call for, and is appropriate, because Dr. Wingate's talents, Christian virtues and public services are worthy of such recognition, and because of the further fact, that this great and good man organized the church here, and was its first and only pastor for more that twenty years.

The church here is not large, nor rich. They are building, not alone for themselves, but for the future; and, while they do not ask, in this public way, for a contribution from any one, they have thought there might be many of those who knew and loved Dr. Wingate, who would take pleasure in giving something to erect the beautiful and appropriate memorial to one whose labors and talents contributed so largely to the growth of Baptist principles and opinions in North Carolina.

We hope to complete, pay for, dedicate and occupy our new meeting-house by the end of the coming summer.

A prominent brother recently asked the chairman of our building committee this pertinent question:

"Where do you expect to get the money to pay for your new church?"

The answer came without one moment of of hesitation:

"We expect to go down into our pockets and get the most of it!"

This is our plan, and we are following it, and mean to follow it to the end. But if there are those who would like to honor a great man gone from us, let such persons send their contribution to Hon. N. Y. Gulley, Chairman Building Committee, Franklinton, N. C. BAYLUS CADE, Pastor.

An Explanation.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—In the RECORDER of Jan. 24th, appeared the following:

"It appears that there is more religious zeal than Christianity round about the Yadkin river in Caldwell county. The Methodist, Adventist and Baptist churches of one community became crowded, and had to have the courts settle the matter. The case has been compromised to the satisfaction of all parties," &c.

The following are the facts in the case:

The Methodists had nothing to do with it. They have a good house on the opposite side of the river some half mile away. In 1882 Rev. Reuben Coffey deeded an acre, more or less, of land on the east side of the Yadkin river, to be free to all Protestant denominations believing in the articles of the Christian religion. So far as I know, the Baptist is the only denomination that ever had a church organization on the lot until the Adventists, a few years ago, made a rent in the Baptist church. The old log-house, which had been free all the while to all denominations, became unfit for use, and no one cared to repair it. The Baptists procured a lot just large enough, and just on the edge of the old lot to set a new house on, using the old lot for a yard and hitching ground, but when they built their new house, by mistake, put one corner on the old lot. The old lot being free to all Protestant denominations believing in the articles of the Christian religion, the Baptists did not want to build a house they could not control.

The Adventists continued to use the old house until it was unfit for use. Then they began to build a new house on the old lot about thirty yards from the Baptist church, leaving the old log-house standing, making three houses on less, perhaps, than a quarter of an acre of land. About one-half the old lot is almost worthless, being a river hill bluff, leaving a narrow strip of bottom, just enough for one church building and room for vehicles and horses.

The Baptists protested against the Adventists building another house, and some of the brethren were willing to help them buy a lot elsewhere, but they would build, and they seem to glory in dividing Baptist churches, and then to build an Adventist church-house almost under the shadow of the Baptist meeting house. They have done just that thing in several localities.

The Baptists consulted a prominent lawyer, and he held that the Adventists could not build legally on the old lot, as they do not believe in all the articles of the Christian religion—immortality of the soul and eternal punishment of the wicked—and he further held that as the Adventists had no organized existence when Reuben Coffey made the deed in 1882, they originating in 1833, hence were unknown to the mind of the maker of the deed. An injunction, restraining order, was obtained and the work stopped till the matter could be heard in court. The case had been on docket for three or four courts (with several witnesses), and the cost was accumulating rapidly, and was likely to fall heavily on some body, and no assurance that the matter would end this side of the Supreme Court, hence it was thought best by both parties to drop it, paying each their own witnesses, and share equally in the court cost; the old log-house to be removed, and appointments not to conflict, &c. The Adventists are at liberty to finish their house and use it. But it would be very nice in them to move somewhere else, as there is not room for two church-houses, and their course savors so much of ambition and spite. Then they have to build a free meeting-house, one they cannot control when finished. There are good people among the Adventists, and it is a pity they pitch their tents right beside other churches almost invariably and cause great hardness and division, but the Lord can overrule all for good.

I. W. THOMAS.

Hibriten, Feb. 7, 1894.

Sketch of the Life of Rev. R. M. Sessoms.

The subject of this sketch was born in Bladen county, April 5, 1817. The earlier years of his life were spent on the farm of his grandmother, Sister Mary Davis. His chances of an education were very limited, as his parents both died when he was quite young. After he grew up, he purchased a farm near Hickory Grove Baptist church in Bladen county on Big Swamp.

He accepted Jesus Christ as his Saviour and united with Hickory Grove Baptist church in 1844.

On Feb. 11, 1849, he was married to Miss Sarah J. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Robeson county. There were born to them fourteen children, twelve of whom are now living.

Soon after his conversion he entered the gospel ministry, and was one of the early pioneers in the work in this part of the State. He was licensed to preach in 1853, and ordained on May 11, 1856. Since that time he has been in the field of his Master. He has done a great work in this part of the vineyard. He never charged anything for his preaching: he preached, pay or no pay.

He organized the following churches, viz.: Shady Grove, Sandy Grove, Brown Creek, and Gallead, in Bladen county, and Zion's Tabernacle and Cedar Grove, in Robeson county, without any aid from the Board.

In 1869 he moved to Smith's Bridge in Robeson county, where he spent the remainder of his days in doing his Master's work.

In February, 1893, he was taken sick. This, with the many toils and cares of years gone by, moved his footsteps swiftly towards the tomb. On Jan. 23, 1894, at five o'clock p. m., this man of God, surrounded by his dear wife and children, ceased to breathe. He died in the triumphs of the gospel faith, and in hope of the blessed immortality beyond the grave. On Jan. 25th, his remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery.

He was a man loved by all who knew him, and a Christian of broad and lasting influence for good, and one who exerted all the influence, which God gave him, for God's cause and kingdom here in the world. He was used as clay by God to anoint the eyes of many who were blind, thus causing them to see. Thus we see, though he be dead, he yet speaketh. Thousands perhaps are ready to say, "He was the instrument in God's hands of winning me to Christ." "He was a Christian in deed and in truth," can be truthfully said of him. Oh, for more such men to day!

A captain true was he,
A soldier of the Cross;
A man from sin set free,
This world must bear the loss.

Literary.

The Century and St. Nicholas fully sustain their excellent reputations. We are not surprised at their great popularity, as they are worthy of a place in every family.

The Cosmopolitan for February introduces a famous European author to its readers—Valdes of Madrid, and the artist Marold, of Paris, well known as a French illustrator. The number is unusually attractive in every respect.

The Preacher's Magazine for February contains excellent articles by Dr. Joseph Parker, Rev. Mark Guy Pearce, Dr. R. A. Watson, Dr. Guyler. Among other contributors are Dr. Maclaren and Rev. John Edwards. Wilbur B. Ketcham, 3 Cooper Union, New York. $1.50 per year.

The February issue of the Treasury of Religious Thought is worthy of a commanding position among the religious magazines. Its table of contents is well filled with matter, excellent, varied, and adapted to all the readers for whom the Treasury is prepared. Yearly $2.00. E. B. Treat publisher, N. Y.

"Are We a Plutocracy?" This is question which W. D. Howells, the distinguished novelist, considers in an article published in the February number of the North American Review. Mr. Howells maintains that if we have a plutocracy it may be partly because the rich want it, but more because the poor choose to allow it.

A larger volume than ever before, now numbering over 360 pages, but sold at the same price as when, in the Forties, it printed only 60 pages, The New York Tribune Almanac for 1894 comes to us this week, revised, rearranged, freshened up to date, and enriched by the addition of new features. The book contains an almost unlimited array of statistics on every conceivable subject which concern the whole people of the United States, with much which interests only the political parties or other large bodies of men or women.

A new volume of essays and addresses by Professor John Stuart Blackie, entitled "The Ideal of Humanity in Old Times and New," will be issued at once by the Fleming H. Revell Company (New York). The subjects treated are, "Women," "Wisdom," "Christian Unity," and several others of equal interest. The same house will issue early in January, a new work by Dr. Geo. Smith, the distinguished writer on East Indian and Missionary subjects, entitled "The Conversion of India, from Pantaenus to the Present time, A. D. 192—1892," being this year's course of "Graves" lectures on missions, delivered before the New Brunswick Theological Seminary.

Dr. N. B. Cobb, who recently resigned at Dunn, preached there on last Sunday, by request of the brethren, to the largest congregation he has ever had there, and may continue to preach there on the second Sunday until they can make arrangements for the settlement of a pastor.

Gulf of Mexico, and you will find these sons of Wake Forest ranking in eloquence and pulpit attractiveness with any on this continent—many of them young—born into the world since this scribe passed the noontide of life, but have already become beacon lights in the moral firmament.

A CHRISTIAN HERO.

John Lamb Prichard of Camden county took his degree in the class of 1840, and was ordained to the ministry two years later. For twenty-two years he ranked among the foremost preachers of this State and Virginia. The First Baptist church at Wilmington, one of the most beautiful church edifices in the South, stands as a monument to his energy and zeal in elevating the Baptist standard equal to any in "the city beside the sea." It was in 1862 this city was visited by that fearful plague, the yellow fever, which devasted the homes of the rich and the poor.

"Pallida mors aequo pulsat pede Pauperum tabernas regumque turres."

The black pall of death hung over the city. Those that could, fled to places of safety. Scores were daily tumbled into carts and carried off to the potter's field. Our hero was urged to flee from the doomed city and save his valuable life. He refused to leave his flock. When all his brethren of the ministry had deserted, he alone remained administering to the sick and dying, going from house to house by day and night. But at last, on November 13th, 1862, just as the cloud of death was rising from its death work, the summons came, and John L. Prichard was called from earth to glory.

When the hero of Quebec was floating down on the bosom of the St. Lawrence to make a night attack on that formidable citadel, repeating the lines of the poet Gray—

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
All that beauty, all that wealth ere gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour,
The paths of glory lead but to the grave," said he would rather be the author of that poem than to be the victor of Quebec. Although he gained the victory, he did not live to receive the plaudits of his countrymen.

How much more glorious died our hero, exclaiming, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me in that day."

Such are a few of the results of the grand work of this institution, and which appear to be really phenomenal to be accomplished in so short a space of time. Where is there a Baptist parent in the State who would not be glad to have his son educated here, to have his name enrolled among this galaxy of shining stars?

How time flies! I was for some years familiar with Dr. Wait, the founder of the institution. Have often listened to his interesting stories of his struggles to lay its foundation. How he used to ride over the State in his old high-wheel gig—sometimes with his wife and only child, the present Mrs. Brewer, and the mother of one of the present faculty of the College, and also of the President-elect of the Baptist Female University. I knew the second president of the College, Dr. William Hooper,—"clarum et venerabile nomen,"—whose grandfather, Wm. Hooper, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence from this State. I knew Meredith, the publisher of the first religious journal in this State—The Interpreter—and the founder of the BIBLICAL RECORDER. I knew Charles W. Skinner, the wealthy planter, who so freely poured out his money to carry on the work, and the father of Dr. T. E. Skinner, now of Raleigh, also William Crenshaw, the father of Major John M. Crenshaw, who was the first student to register his name on the rolls of the College, and whose handsome portrait adorns the walls of one of the Societies. Besides, I knew several others of these fathers of the College, all having crossed over the river to their eternal rest.

Observations and Reflections.

BY M. P. M.

DR. PRITCHARD'S "SLIP-UP."

In the Charlotte Observer's Sunday edition of the third Sunday in January, our good Bro. Pritchard, writing on the Waldenses, makes a "bad slip." Dr. Protchet, the representative of the new colony of Waldenses now settling in Burke countyin North Carolina, was in Charlotte recently and addressed the people of that town upon the history and sufferings of his people in Italy, in which he took occasion to say that most people thought his people originated with "Peter Waldo in 1170," but they "went much further back than that." With this statement, our usually correct Bro. Pritchard agrees in his religious department in the Observer. I tried to vindicate history along this line in the same paper, but "they are not publishing Baptist history" just now, and my "little piece" was not acceptable to them, and so it went to the "waste-basket," hence I go to the RECORDER with my "vindication of history."

The truth is, Dr. Protchet's people have no connection with the "ancient Waldenses," and never did have, but originated as the outgrowth of the work of Jerome and Huss, whose first confession was promulgated in 1508. In the introduction of this confession which they presented to the king, they state that they were not "Waldenses," as the term was applied to that ancient people, "although they were persecuted under that name." In the Reformation under Luther and Calvin, these people united with them in 1529 and partook largely of the doctrine of Calvin, hence are very much like the Presbyterians. These "modern Waldenses" were also Pedobaptists and never practiced anything but "sprinkling for baptism" and "infant sprinkling," while the ancient Waldenses were Baptists in every essential feature, and maintained "pure doctrine" in the valleys of the Piedmont for more than one thousand years. In 1686, Louis XIV issued an edict which resulted in the expulsion of all those faithful witnesses for the truth who were scattered throughout Holland and other and adjacent countries, and took the name of Mennonites and afterward Anabaptists. In 1889, the king of Holland appointed Drs. Ypiege and Dermont to look into the history of the Dutch Baptists; and after careful investigation, they reported to the king as follows:

"We have now seen that the Baptists, who were formerly called Anabaptists, and in later times Mennonites, were the original Waldenses, and who have long in the history of the church received the honor of that origin. On this account, the Baptists may be considered as the only Christian community which has stood since the days of the Apostles, and as a Christian society preserved pure the doctrines of the gospel through ages."

This statement from non Baptist authority ought to settle the question. It is natural that the modern Waldenses should desire to have the honor of belonging to so noble a people as the ancient Waldenses proved themselves to be through centuries of severest trial and persecution, but they are not entitled to any such honor.

"SOCIAL PROBLEMS."

In most of our churches these questions will "bob up," and must be met. The dance, the card table, and other like questions arise, and "what attitude should the church assume toward them?" is a question often asked. Ought Christians to take part in or encourage such things? The old and oft exploded statement, "I can't see any harm in it," has to be answered. Such church-members never think to ask, "What good is there in it?" Such a question as that puts a great deal more conscience into these matters than is wont to be put there by many people. You may quote the Word of God bearing direct upon the subject, but often it falls upon listless ears because it is not the truth in the premises they are looking for, but something to quiet what little conscience they have on hand. "Shun every appearance of evil" has no influence with them because the question with them is not one of usefulness but of salvation—how far can I go and yet be saved? And if they can persuade themselves that they can indulge and yet escape, all argument or Scripture is lost on them. Alas! that such a state of affairs exists with so many of our congregations. Surely this is a day of worldly Christianity, if indeed Christianity it can be called.

"THOSE PASSPORTS TO HEAVEN."

Our sympathizing brother, J. Pressley Barrett, who "parts his name in the middle," need not have announced that "he is not a Baptist,"—he evidently needs a "sassiety" or something else to "straighten out his theology"—it is badly unhinged when he talks about the churches "furnishing passports to heaven" for millions of earth's inhabitants. I do not know what denominational affiliations our friend has, but his statement is "unadulterated popery," and I cannot let it pass unchallenged. [Dr. Barrett is a minister of the Christian church, and for a number of years in the past was editor of the Christian Sun of Raleigh, the organ of that denomination in this State.—EDITOR.] As to his arguments (?) against young people's societies, I have covered all the points made in my notice of Bro. Blanchard's article on "Church Annexes." So it is not necessary for me to take more space in reviewing this last communication. I would not have referred to it all but for the "bad break" on doctrine our friend makes. I am glad to have anything said upon the subject of young people's organizations. It is a question from the discussion of which the friends of the movement need not and will not shrink. If there is any valid reason why we should not have such organizations, we shall be glad to have them, but all this talk about "shelving the church" and displacing the church with societies is "mere twaddle," and does not deserve serious argument. Of course, there are abuses of these organizations, but that is no argument against the right use of them. I have known churches to have fairs, suppers, etc., for the purpose of raising funds to pay the pastor and other things, who never thought of having a society of any kind—not even a Sunday-school: will our good friend contend, therefore, for the abolition of the churches? I trow not. Let us meet the question squarely and fairly.

The Work at Mountain Creek Church.

Dear Recorder:—Having been requested to write something about the work at Mountain Creek church, I will write a few lines about the Lord's work there. For some time they did not have any pastor; their former one Rev. C. A. Jenkins, having resigned. They now have as pastor Rev. J. T. Riddick, who is a student of Bethel Hill Institute, and a most excellent young man. The church work is prospering in his hands and the Sunday-school is built up through his earnest efforts.

Brethren pray for the church and their pastor that God may continue his richest blessings upon them, and that through the instrumentality of the church and their pastor many souls may be brought to the glorious light of the blessed gospel of the Son of God.

Yours in Christ, G. U. DUNCAN.

Bethel Hill, Jan. 30, 1894.

Caldwell County Association Union.

The Union Meeting of the Caldwell County Association met with the Fleming's Chapel church on Friday before the fifth Sunday in December, 1893.

The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. M. L. Beach, a young brother, who promises to become a useful minister of Christ.

Rev. J. F. Crisp was elected Moderator, and —— Beach, Clerk.

The following subjects were discussed:

1st. Is it according to the Bible to retain a member in full fellowship who refuses to help support the church financially?

2d. What is real advancement in a church?

3rd. The Christian's duty in the salvation of sinners.

4th. The work of the Holy Spirit in human redemption.

All the above subjects were discussed with great freedom and zeal, and in a spirit that was calculated to leave a lasting impression on the hearers, the church and community generally. The following named brethren took part in the discussions: Revs. Isaac Oxford, J. S. Gwaltney, H. M. Croom, Prof. R. L. Moore of Amherst, Finley Coffey of Lenoir church, M. L. Beach and L. C. King. All the speeches were pointed and spirited, and showed that the subjects had been thoroughly studied by the speakers.

The last subject mentioned above was deferred till Sunday morning and was discussed in a most able and instructive manner by Rev. I. W. Thomas, pastor of Lenoir church.

While all the speaking was excellent, we must say that the speech of Rev. J. S. Gwaltney on the subject of the real advancement of the church was by far the best the writer remembers to have heard on the subject.

Rev. H. M. Croom, the pastor of the church at which the meeting was held, was at his best, and seemed to enter into the work with all his soul as he does in every good work.

On Sunday at 11 o'clock Bro. Gwaltney preached, and all seemed to feel that the committee on religious exercises had made no mistake in their selection for that hour.

AMICUS.

There is no journey of life but has its clouded days; and there are some days in which our eyes are so blinded with tears that we find it hard to see our way or even read God's promises. Those days that have a bright sunrise followed by sudden thunderclaps and bursts of unlooked for sorrows are the ones that test certain of our graces the most severely. Yet the law of spiritual eyesight very closely resembles the law of physical optics. When we come suddenly out of the daylight into a room even moderately darkened, we can discern nothing; but the pupil of our eye gradually enlarges until unseen objects become visible. Even so the pupil of the eye of faith has the blessed faculty of enlarging in dark hours of bereavement, so that we discover that our loving Father's hand is holding the cup of trial, and by and by the gloom becomes luminous with glory. The fourteenth chapter of John never falls with such music upon our ears as when we catch its sweet strains amid the pauses of some terrific storm. "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. I will not leave you comfortless."—Dr. Cuyler.

The helmsman does not steer for the sunshine. If the sun shines on him during the voyage, well and good; but, if not, he keeps the vessel's head pointing toward his destination just the same. We must keep on our course steadily through darkness and storm and clouds just as much as through the fair weather and pleasant circumstances.—Booth.

Saved Her Life.

MRS. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

Used and endorsed by Leading Farmers in North Carolina and the South for the past twenty years. Read the following certificates, and send for pamphlet giving directions for mixing, testimonials, &c.

MARLVILLE, N. C., Sept. 20, 1893.

Gentlemen: The chemicals I bought of you for making "Home Fertilizer" continue to give satisfaction. I only use it under cotton. You know I must think it good, or I should not have used it so long. This makes 16 or 17 years that I have been using it, and its use has made me able to pay for it cash, not on crop time.

Yours truly, THOS. S. EVANS.

The Soldier's Testimony.

Among the touching incidents of the Crimean war comes the following:

The battle was over. All day long it had raged, but now the conflict had ceased, the victory was won. Upon the solemn battlefield, among the wounded, the dying and the dead, lay one who had fought bravely and well through the battle's wild alarm. The dimness of death was upon his eyes: it icy hand was stopping the slow beating of his heart, and checking the current of his blood. He was dying, and he knew it, and now in the quiet evening he lay silent, waiting for the end. Searching for the live among the dead, two of his comrades found him there, and with gentle hands lifted him to carry him to the camp. All tender as they were, the movement was more than he could bear, and stifling the moan upon his lips, he bade them lay him down and let him die in peace. They laid him down, and stood beside him with uncertain will. It seemed so cruel to leave him there unattended and alone, to die, and yet to carry him further was to hasten his death. And so they left him, and hurried on their way of mercy. An officer soon after, passing by, saw him and stopped.

"Shall I get you a drink of water, my poor fellow?" he asked gently.

"No, thank you, sir."

"Have you any relative or friend to whom you would like to send a message? I will gladly take it."

"I have not a friend in the world."

The officer was silent. He had stood by many a dying man, but never yet one who had not some loved name upon his lips. Kneeling down, he wiped the death damp from his bronzed forehead with pitying hand.

"Is there nothing at all I can do for you, my poor fellow? Do you wish for nothing?"

Slowly the dying man opened his eyes and looked into the kindly, sympathizing young face, "There is one thing, sir, I should like," he murmured. "In my knapsack—my Bible."

Opening the knapsack, the officer took out a little, well-worn Bible.

"Is there any particular part you wish to hear?" he asked.

"The fourteenth chapter of St. John—near the end—you will find—something about peace."

He turned over the leaves, and found the place. "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." Fitting words for that solemn battlefield! The dim eyes opened and a look of radiant happiness fell upon the soldier's face. The cold lips moved with broken, murmured words, and the officer bowed his head to listen.

"That peace—is mine! Heaven is—mine! That Saviour is mine!"

The night closed round, drawing its pall of darkness over the dying and the dead. Motionless and still with upturned face and folded hands, lay the dead body of the friendless man, with his little, worn old Bible lying on his breast. And they laid him in a nameless grave in a strange and far-off land.—Christian Guardian.

"Holiness Unto the Lord."

Baron Stow of Boston once preached from the words: "In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, 'Holiness unto the Lord.'" The sermon was of a practical character, and enforced the truth that in every transaction of life, in everything in which we engage, this should be the great principle which should govern us. "Inscribe these words," he said, "on every implement of trade; on the yard sticks upon your counters; upon your scales and measures; let it be written at the head of every page of your day-book and ledger—'Holiness unto the Lord.'"

There was a man in the audience, a stranger, who was largely engaged in the liquor business. As Mr. Stow closed his sermon, he said: "Some one has remarked that he can judge of the propriety of an idea if he can paint it out on the wall. Let us apply this text: inscribe it over the entrance to the house of God, 'Holiness unto the Lord:' nothing could be more proper; let it be inscribed over your court-houses and colleges, over your hospitals and charitable institutions, and nothing could be more suitable. But suppose we inscribe over the entrance to a drinking saloon or gambling-house the words, 'Holiness unto the Lord:' or suppose we go down to the wharf, and inscribe on those casks of liquid fire that burns men's bodies and destroys their souls, 'Holiness unto the Lord'?"

He closed here. The liquor-dealer went out cursing the preacher and the sermon. That single question had a more terrible effect on that man's conscience than a whole hour's denunciation of the liquor traffic.—Christian Safeguard.

True Attainment.

Men are found who are very ready to defend themselves from the falsehood of slander, who swallow with great relish as big falsehoods of flattery. There is a vast difference between slander and flattery, but it is not always a difference of truthfulness or falsehood. A modest man may not appreciate his own excellences, and so may resist words of commendation.

There are people who would do well to consider some passages of Scripture which bear on this matter. How Job regarded flattery may be seen by such utterances as these: "He that speaketh flattery to his friends, even the eyes of his children shall fail." And again he says, "Neither let me give flattering titles unto men, for I know not to give flattering titles; in so doing, my Maker would soon take me away." We are told in Proverbs that "a flattering mouth worketh ruin," and Paul could declare, "Neither at any time used we flattering words." A just man must resist the falsehood of overestimates.

The really Christly man delights in the honor of his Master, and in all the honor which comes to him for his Master's sake; but he must be pained at the dishonor which comes to the Master by the undue exaltation of his own graces or services, for this is to belittle the standard; to bring it down toward the low level of his attainments. Who has not been sickened and shamed by the claim to perfection made by spiritual pigmies, deformed as miserably as they are dwarfed! Paul said of himself, "Not as though I had already attained or were already made perfect." No, the standard of possibility is above, way above. It is a higher, grander thing than has been realized. Possibly, the nearer we approach unto it the farther we may seem to be from having attained to it. The chiefest apostle says, "I forbear lest any man should account of me above that which he seeth me to be, or heareth from me." To prevent his own exaltation there was given him "a thorn in the flesh, a messenger of Satan, to buffet him," lest he "should be exalted above measure." An humble disciple is the best exaltation of the Master. Greatness bearing the yoke of service to men, is the nearest approach to Christ, which this world will see.—Christian Inquirer.

Getting Men to Believe.

How shall we secure belief in the Bible in the case of those who have never yet been led to believe? It may be set down as a well-established fact that argument will accomplish nothing. In most cases it drives men farther away. The man who is ready to argue is in most cases going in directly the opposite direction from that of belief. Non-belief in the majority of instances is due to lack of acquaintance with the facts. Few persons who really know the contents of the Bible are unwilling to accept it. Our first duty, therefore, should be to make known as best we can the essential ideas of this great collection of books. But here arises a serious difficulty. Non-belief is due in many instances also the confusion which has come to exist among men between Bible truth on the one hand and the distorted conceptions which are palmed off upon an unsuspecting public for Bible truth.

Scepticism finds in these distortions the best soil in which to grow. The second obligation, therefore, which rests upon us, is to clear away the rubbish and to teach as Bible truth that which can, beyond a doubt, be shown to be real Bible truth. Patience and prayer must accompany the work both of teacher and taught, and with patience and prayer misconceptions will be laid aside, while truth in all its fullness and all its power will exercise the influence which only truth can exercise.—The Biblical World.

A Dangerous Temptation.

One of the most perilous experiences of a young convert is in dealing with the suggestion that he is not converted. To make the suggestion is one of the favorite modes of attack used by the adversary. If he can succeed in getting a young Christian to listen to it, and go into analysis of the case, he is very sure of cooling that convert's zeal, if not of bringing his Christian life to an end. Be on your guard against his whisperings. Instead of looking at yourselves, look at Jesus. Meet the approaches of Satan as Luther did. When the devil said to him, "You are no Christian," he replied, "Well, that's none of your business."—Michigan Advocate.

To think of religion in any other sense than as a state of self-denial, is knowing nothing at all of it; for its whole nature is to direct us by a light, and knowledge, and wisdom from God; which is all contrary to the darkness, ignorance, and folly of our natures.—Law.

Appendicitis.

This is not a new disease, but it is a comparatively new discovery. Our fathers knew nothing of it. That there was an "appendix," or little blind pocket, attached to the human entrails, has been known since anatomy has been studied, but it is probable that deaths from the drifting into this pocket of undigested substances were, until lately, attributed simply to "inflammation of the bowels."

But it is well recognized and admitted, now, that very many deaths do occur from the lodging of seeds and similar substances in this peculiar little recess, and an operation to extirpate it by cutting it off entirely is the only remedy as yet known. The operation is generally successful, but is dangerous and sometimes has fatal results, as in several cases which have lately been brought to the public notice.

A learned physician, of rather radical views, queried, the other day, in a conversation with medical associates, whether it would not become necessary, some time in the future, to operate upon all new-born babies, and cut out the appendix from their bowels during infancy, to save them future danger and trouble. But he was, surely, rather ahead of his age, and his friends suggested that he was becoming a surgical "crank."

But it is certain that a great many people are more careful than they need to be in swallowing the seeds and pits of fruits. Some go so far as to take the seeds out of grapes, lemons, etc., before eating. Thus does science, always peering into the secrets of nature, perpetually warn us of new dangers that threaten life.—New York News.

Too Learned a Congregation.

A preacher will usually satisfy the minds at which he is really aiming. If he were so unfortunate as to have in his congregation three or four theological professors, the probability is that he would be ruined as a preacher! Every paragraph, every sentence, every statement, every illustration in his sermon, would, with too great probability, be framed with the vision of those scholarly monsters before him.—Christian Leader.

Unceasing Ministry.

We all need sympathy, human kindness, cheer, fellowship, the thousand little things of human love, as we go along the dusty road of life. These small coins of affection are the brighteners of every life that is blessed by a rich friendship. It is this unceasing ministry that your heart hungers for as its daily bread—not great gifts and large favors, but a gentle kindliness in your friend which shall bring cheer, satisfying inspiration, comfort, uplifting hope, and strength to your soul every time you look into his face.—*Rev. She Knew What to Ask.

A West Washington young lady, who has been married but a few weeks, had her first experience at "going to market" the other day. After she had succeeded in making several laughable blunders, as young wives are apt to, she approached a poultry dealer and asked the price of chickens. Being told by the dealer, who also handed her a fine pair of live birds to examine, she quieted their fluttering as best she could, and then, applying her nose to them and giving them an audible smell, said in the most innocent manner: "Are you sure they are fresh, sir?"—Washington Post.

Religion in the Home.

Family piety is the basis of the whole religious fabric. If there is decline at this point, all fancied advances at other points are vain. The Canada Presbyterian says: "Our church membership is increasing; societies for the promotion of charity, missions and spiritual improvement are multiplying; the Sabbath-school occupies a more prominent place in the work of the church, yet, if religion be declining in the houses of our people, all these are but evidences of fictitious growth, and not of solid prosperity."

New Testament Studies—No. 1.

BY HIGHT C. MOORE.

THE NEW TESTAMENT.

1. Title. The books now grouped under the general head—New Testament—were not thus designated until long after they were written. Testament ordinarily means a will, but as applied to Scripture, it means a covenant. God made a covenant with the Hebrews, and the Old Testament is the record of his dealings with them. The new covenant promised in the prophets (Jer. 30: 31) was alluded to by Christ (Luke 22: 20) and Paul (2 Cor. 2: 6; Heb. 8: 6) as secured by the death of Jesus. The Greek words in these passages meaning new covenant were translated into the Latin Novum Testamentum (whence the English New Testament), and applied to the collection of twenty seven books written by the disciples of Christ, which may properly be called the Scriptures of the New Covenant.

2. Language. The entire New Testament was written in Greek which was the language of culture and commerce in all the civilized circles of the world. Matthew was also written in Hebrew and the other books were soon translated into several tongues.

3. Writers. Eight inspired men wrote all the books of the New Testament. Fourteen books (if we include Hebrews) were written by Paul; five by John; two each by Luke and Peter; one each by Matthew, Mark, James, and Jude. Six of these were apostles—James, John, Jude, Matthew, Paul, Peter; two were evangelists—Luke and Mark; all, except John, suffered martyrdom.

4. Divisions. The New Testament is divided into History, Doctrine, and Prophecy. History includes the first five books—the four Gospels giving four distinct views of Christ, and the Acts giving a sketch of the first forty years of the Christian church under the leadership of Peter among the Jews, and Paul among the Gentiles. Doctrine includes the fourteen Pauline Epistles, ten of which were addressed to churches and four to individuals, and the seven Catholic Epistles by James, John, Jude and Peter, which were circular letters sent out to all the churches. Prophecy contains only the book of Revelation, the Apocalyptic Epistle, which is a prophetic outlook into the future.

5. Order. The order in which the books appear in our English Bible is that of the Latin Vulgate, a version of the Scriptures executed by Jerome at Bethlehem direct from the Hebrew during the closing years of the fourth century. The order is not chronological, but it is convenient to have the Epistles between the Histories and Revelation. Recent critical editions of the Greek text follow the order found in most of the older Greek manuscripts—Gospels, Acts, Catholic Epistles, Pauline Epistles (Hebrews standing just before the Pastoral Epistles), and Revelation.

6. Chronology. It is impossible to fix the dates of composition with perfect accuracy. Learned critics differ widely from each other. Hence the following dates, the result of the most recent and critical investigation, may not be entirely correct, but may useful for reference and comparison. James was written in A. D. 50; 1 Thessalonians in 52; 2 Thessalonians in 53; Galatians, 1 and 2 Corinthians in 57; Romans in 58; Philemon, Colossians, Ephesians in 62; Philippians in 63; Matthew, Mark, Luke, and Acts sometime between 65 and 70; 1 Timothy and Titus in 66; 2 Timothy in 67; Hebrews, 1 and 2 Peter, Jude, and Revelation about 68; John's gospel and three Epistles between 90 and 95.

7. Sections. Each book of the New Testament was originally written in large capital letters, and there were no paragraphs, punctuation marks, or spaces between words. Hugh de St. Cher adopted a division into chapters which superceded those in previous use and appearing in the early editions of the Vulgate and Coverdale's English Bible thus became universal. The verse division was made by Henry Stephens while on a trip from Paris to Lyons and first appeared in 1551. Nine years later it appeared in the Geneva Bible and has since been almost everywhere received.

8. Canon. The only Scripture of the early Christians was the Old Testament. For an account of the teaching and works of Christ they relied more on oral testimony than written record. But in the second century the Gospels and Epistles, first kept in two separate volumes, were rescued from the mass of general literature. The complete canon as we now have it was virtually fixed at the end of the second century, though the first council of any authority to sanction it was the Third Council of Carthage in 397. This decision was accepted by the Western Church, and the New Testament has since stood as one book regarded no less genuine and authoritative than the old Jewish Scriptures.

9. Versions. Many have appeared; a few deserve special mention. The Peshito, made in the second century, is a Syriac version of the whole Bible, that of the New Testament being the first ever undertaken. The Vulgate, translated from Hebrew into Latin by Jerome in the fourth century, was practically the only Bible of western Christendom for a thousand years. Wycliffe's translation of the New Testament appeared in England in 1380. Luther's New Testament, published in 1522, is now the version of most Protestant nations in Northern Europe. Tyndale's was the first English translation to exert a permanent influence on subsequent versions. His New Testament was published in 1526. Coverdale's was the first English version issued under royal sanction. Of this edition, twenty-five hundred copies were burnt by the Inquisition. The Geneva Bible was the first to be printed in Roman type and divided into verses. It also contained a Bible Dictionary and expository notes. Its New Testament appeared in 1557. The Authorized Version, executed by forty-seven scholars under the direction of King James I. between 1607 and 1610, is a lasting monument to the "simplicity, dignity, grace, and melody of the English Language." The Revised Version undertaken in 1870 and completed in 1884 by two companies of European and American scholars, is more accurate than the old version, but less pure and popular.

Washington—Pantego—Bell-Port.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—A few lines from this end of the State may not be amiss, as doubtless there are some interested in the Master's work down this way. I will begin with Washington.

I have just completed my first year here. Contrary to my expectations, the health of myself and family has been very good. As Washington, from a Baptist stand point, is a hard field, the question is often asked: are you making any progress? and I am very glad to be able to answer it in the affirmative. At the Association of 1892, the church reported, no addition, no contribution to any of the objects, except one dollar contributed to the minute fund. During the year just closed we have had eight additions by letter, and two by experience, and the church has contributed to Home, Foreign and State Missions, and also to the Orphanage. Our congregations are, proportionately, larger than any other in town.

All this is encouraging, but there are many things that are discouraging. Our number is small, and some of these are careless and indifferent.

Our great need is a better house of worship, and this we must have. We have concluded that the best thing to be done is to remodel the old house, for which we have drawn plans, which, if carried out, will give us, practically, a new house. We are poor, but have faith enough in our brethren to believe that when we have done what we can, that they will come to our rescue. We hope to be able to commence the work in March. Is any one feels like helping us, if they would send a contribution now, it would help us to make the start. Contributions can be sent to T. J. Lathan, cashier of the bank of Washington, or to me.

PANTEGO.

A while back, Dr. J. W. Bullock requested me to come down to Pantego, and preach for them, and also to visit and preach at Bell-Port. Having a desire to visit these places, I accepted the invitation and went down. I never think of Pantego, but in connection with "Bob" Peel. You remember how hard he struggled to build a house there? Well he succeeded, the house is there, and a small band of believers, as monuments to his untiring zeal and consecration. There is a work to be done there now for the Master. The people gave me a hearty welcome, and I had very good congregations to preach to, and they seemed anxious to have regular preaching.

BELL-PORT.

This is the terminus of the "Pamlico Div. W. & S. R. R.," and is a new place. There is no church of any kind here, and the people seemed more anxious for preaching than any I have been with in a time. As there was no public building of any kind, we secured a large oyster house, and some friends cleaned it up and improvised benches and I preached there on Sunday the 21st ult., and monday night. I found several Baptists, and a strong desire for a church. I think as the field is now unoccupied, that we ought to occupy it at once. I am quite sure that a church could be constituted, and with a little outside help, a house built this year. D. V. I shall visit them again the third Sunday in this month.

Yours in the work,
DUNCAN MCLEOD.

A Good Reflection.

CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 18th, 1893.
THE BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.
Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen:—The two 54 inch reflectors have been received and placed in position. They have been thoroughly tested and give perfect satisfaction. Our audience room is 48 by 80, with ceiling 30 feet high; with your reflectors we can see to read with ease in any part of the room. We had two reflectors of another make and firm in the former building that was destroyed by fire, but they did not give satisfaction. When it came to lighting our new building our Building Committee agreed not to buy the reflectors we had had, but to try yours. We are pleased with the change.

Respectfully yours,
J. W. WARNSHUIS, Pastor,
First Reformed church.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, that the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. La Grippe Again.
The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.
ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.
In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe.
L. STUART.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 13, 1893.
About two years ago I had a severe spell of 'grip,' and was induced by my relatives to try Royal Germetuer. It soon cured the 'grip.'
MRS. GEO. TISDALE.

SWEETWATER, TENN., June 23, 1893.
My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health.
J. T. BARROW,
Pastor First Baptist Church.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of Germetuer relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

Rev. J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 3d, 1893: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

TRADE MARK
ATMOSPHERIC OXYGEN BY ABSORPTION
"cures when all else fails."

From Bro. Tobias Bright, Forest City, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—I am out on my work, and, as usual, am happy in it. Since the first of January I have visited about one hundred families, preached thirteen sermons, and held some special meetings for the young people in my churches.

At this point (Cherryville) we constituted a Baptist church on the first Sunday in June, 1893, with seventeen members. We now have twenty-five members. Yesterday as I passed around, I took over one hundred dollars in subscriptions toward building a Baptist church house. So far we have had to hold meetings in a house owned by what is known as the Northern M. E. church; but these twenty-five poor Baptists and their friends are going to build the Lord a house in Cherryville.

I am trying to preach regularly at six places this year. At all these places we have churches, except one, the Academy at A. C. Miller's cotton-mill at Shelby.

Brethren, let us in the east and in the west put our shoulders to this great Baptist wheel in North Carolina and make this the best year in our history. Our motto should be "North Carolina for Christ."

Your brother in Christ,
TOBIAS BRIGHT.

Forest City, Feb. 6, 1894.

DIED.

HINSON—Eunice, little daughter of F. M. and A. B. Hinson, died Feb. 1st, of membranous croup. She was sick only thirty-six hours, and was just fourteen months old. May the Lord let us so live, that we may again see her in heaven. PARENTS.

PRICE—On Jan. 31st, 1894, at the home of her father and mother, Walter and Susan Price, of Elizabeth City, N. C., Pattie, their oldest daughter, departed this life, aged eleven years. Pattie was an unusual child—bright in books, affectionate and lady-like to all, she was greatly beloved in the church and her Sunday-school. She learned music almost as by intuition. She could sing and play anything she ever heard. Her spirit, pure and beautiful, has joined with the angels in the sweeter songs of glory. It is not strange that a child so lovable should be the pet of a home. Certainly her soul shines among the brightest around the Heavenly Father's throne. C. S. B.

JONES—Died at the home of his mother, in Chowan county, Oct. 18th, 1893, Bro. Hezekiah Jones, in the forty-eighth year of his age.

His mother, Mary Jones, died seven weeks afterwards, in the seventy-ninth year of her age. Sister Jones had been a widow for twenty-two years, and her son Hezekiah had lived with her all these years and taken care of her. No son was ever more faithful to a mother than he. He was truly a good man. He may have had enemies, but the writer did not know them.

Brother and Sister Jones were earnest Christians. Both were members of Ballard's Bridge church for many years. Loved ones and many friends are left to mourn their loss. The Lord bless the sorrowing ones.

Important to Farmers!

Yes, it is very important to all farmers to plant the best and earliest seed potatoes they can buy. To do this, they must buy the EARLY SIX WEEKS, the earliest now in cultivation. If farmers would plant this potato they would always get their crop in market in time to get seven and eight dollars per barrel. We planted this potato for the last two seasons, and selling our crop for nine dollars per barrel. This potato grows so quick the Esquimau would almost have time to mature a potato crop if he planted the Early Six Weeks. In the South two full crops can be grown in one season. Its size is large and handsome. We have one thousand barrels for sale. One lb. 40 cts.; 3 lbs. $1.00; by mail, postpaid. Peck, $1.10; bushel, $3.00; barrel, $7.00; by freight or Express. Send your order in at once before they are all sold, and give them a trial. Address all orders to the

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, God in his providence has seen fit to remove from our midst by death our beloved sister, Theresa L. Graves, who for twenty-one years has been a member of our church and Sunday-school, be it, therefore Resolved 1. That in the death of Sister Graves the church lost one of its brightest lights and best laborers, and the Sunday-school one of its most earnest and faithful teachers.

Resolved 2. That her work for our church and Sunday-school be held in grateful remembrance, and her example held up as worthy of imitation.

Resolved 3. That we do hereby tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family; and while we, with them, do deeply mourn the loss of one who by her Christian life and upright character has so justly won our love and esteem, we bow with submission to the will of him who doeth all things well, and hope that so great a loss may be sanctified to our spiritual growth.

Resolved 4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our church record, one to be sent to each member of the family as a token of our esteem, and a copy sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Smithfield Herald for publication.

Comfort for Laborers.

It is enough, if, at the close of day,
Thou, resting wearied limbs, canst truly say,
"I have walked humbly with my God this day,"
It is enough.

Though failure, oft repeated, dim the light
Of high resolve, wherewith thy youth was bright,
If each fresh morn thou gird thee to the fight,
It is enough.

Though hopes which made the world seem half divine
Fade in thy clasp and suffer slow decline,
If thou for others' hopes exchangest thine,
It is enough.

. . . . . .

Though thou hast longed in vain to find a friend
Whose glance thy heart's sore loneliness can mend,
If thou hast loved thine own unto the end,
It is enough.

Though death should come ere half the projects vast,
Which seemed thy life's breath, into form are cast,
If without wrath or fear thou breathe thy last,
It is enough.

And when the Dark shall flee before the Day,
And God shall comfort thee in His great way,
Then thou at last in utter peace shalt say,
It is enough.

—Dorothea Hollins.

Who Deserved the Whipping?

In one of the current magazines Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher cites an actual case of a father's interference with the mother's government of their child and shows its pernicious effect upon their offspring. When parents seriously differ on these matter there should be some compromise among themselves whereby unity may be preserved in the presence of the children. The dialogue quoted has its counterpart in too many homes:

"Mamma, please give me another piece of pie?"

"No, darling, one piece is enough."

"Half a piece—please, mamma!"

"No, Freddie, no more."

"Just a very little piece, mamma, dear?"

"No, Freddie, no!"

"Do give the child a piece," says the husband. "I'll risk its hurting him."

And the mother gave it! What else could she do?

"Mamma, may I go out to play?"

"It's very chilly and you have a cold. I do not think it is best."

"Bundle me up warm, mamma, and I won't take any cold."

"I fear you will. You must play indoors to day."

"Just a little while—please, mamma?"

"No, Freddie, you must not go out to-day."

"Do let the child go. What a girl you are making of him. Women never were fitted to bring up boys. Dress him warm and let him go. It will do him good."

And Freddie went out!

"May I have my blocks in the parlor, mamma?"

"No, Willie, make your block house in the dining-room. Miss L. is an invalid and I want the parlor very quiet."

"I will be very quiet."

"You will intend to be, but you cannot help making some noise, and as Miss L. very rarely goes anywhere I fear she will be very tired at best—so be a good little boy and play in the dining-room this afternoon."

"I won't make a bit of noise or tire her one speck."

"You must play in the dining room, Willie, and not say any more about it."

"Nonsense! It will do her good to see a happy little face, and give her something beside her own pains and aches to think of. Let him bring his blocks into the parlor."

And he brought them in!—The Standard.

The Most Gorgeous Treasures of Arabia.

What a splendid picture it brought before your mind! You read the glowing descriptions of the secret treasures which the genii of the ring spread before Aladdin's gaze. You perused this favorite story of yours in "Arabian Nights" when a boy, and your imagination pictured brilliantly for you everything that the words suggested.

That was when you were a boy. To-day, possibly, you are unable to do it. Shall we tell you the reason why? Most probably because your liver is sluggish, dizziness, and constipation. Do you want to cure all these troubles permanently, make your liver active, your imagination lively, and in general enjoy things as you did when a boy? All you have to do is to use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, the smallest and easiest to take, and they are the cheapest because they are guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. What more can you ask?

The Real American Girl.

The truest, best and sweetest type of the American girl of to day does no come from the home of wealth; she steps out from a home where exist comforts rather than luxuries. She belongs to the great middle class—that class which has given us the best American wifehood; which has given helpmates to the foremost American men of our time; which teaches its daughters the true meaning of love; which teaches the manners of the drawing-room but the practical life of the kitchen as well; which teaches its girls the responsibilities of wifehood and the greatness of motherhood. These girls may not ride in their carriages, they may not wear the most expensive gowns, they may even help a little to enlarge the family income, but these self-same girls are to-day the great bulwark of American society, not only present but of the future. They represent the American home and what is best and truest in sweet domestic life, and they make the best wives for our American men. I have no patience with these theories that would seek to place the average American girl in any other position than that which she occupies, ornaments and rightfully hold: the foremost place in our respect, our admiration and our love. She is not the society girl of the day, and she is better for it. She knows no superficial life; she knows only the life in a home where husband, wife and children are one in love, one in every action. She believes no woman to be so sweet as her mother; no man so good as her father. She believes that there are good women and true men abroad in the world, and, thank God, her belief is right. And that man will ever be happiest who takes such a girl for his wife.—Edward Bok, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Doubling the Collections.

In a small town in the Midlands there is a rich congregation which is not characterized by a lavish liberality.

Time after time the minister has vainly appealed to his people to contribute more generously to the funds of the church. The members would, indeed, give something, but it was nearly always the smallest silver coin of the realm that was placed on the plate.

A shrewd Scotchman, who had recently come to the place and joined the church, was not long in noticing this state of affairs, and a remedy soon suggested itself to his practical mind.

"I'll tell you what," he said, to one of the officials, "if you make me treasurer, I'll engage to double the collections in three months."

His offer was promptly accepted; and, sure enough, the collections began to increase until, by the time he had stated, there were nearly twice as much as formerly.

"How have you managed it, Mr. Saddyman?" said the pastor to him one day.

"It's a great secret," returned the canny Scot, "but I'll tell you, in confidence. The folk, I saw, maistly gave three-penny bits. Weel, when I got the money every Sabbath evening I carefully picked oot the sma' coins and put them by. Noo, as there's only a limited number of three-penny pieces in a little place like this, and as I have maist of them under lock and key, the folk maun give saxpances, at least, instead. See, that's the way the collections are doubled."—Spare Moments.

Are You Safe?

Two little girls were playing with their dolls in a corner of the nursery, and singing as they played:

"Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast;
There by his love o'ershaded
Sweetly my soul shall rest."

Mother was busy writing, only stopping now and then to listen to the little ones' talk, unobserved by them.

"Sister, how do you know you are safe?" said Nellie, the younger of the two.

"Because I am holding Jesus with both my hands—tight!" promptly replied sister.

"Ah, that's not safe," said the other child. "Suppose Satan came along and cut your two hands off!"

Little sister looked very troubled for a few moments, dropped poor dolly, and thought seriously. Suddenly her face shone with joy, and she cried out:

"Oh, I forgot! I forgot! Jesus is holding me with his two hands, and Satan can't cut his off; so I'm safe!"—Day Spring.

Some Remarkable Volcanoes.

There are volcanoes all over the world. They occur all along the Pacific coast, on the western side as well as the eastern, all the way from Bering Strait to New Zealand. There are volcanoes in Africa, in the Mediterranean, the West Indies, and even amid the eternal ice and snows that surround the southern pole. Iceland is especially noted for its volcanoes, which have burst forth from time to time in the most fearful eruptions. On one occasion the volcano of Skaptar Jokull poured out a stream of lava which, flowing into the bed of the river, dried it up. The flowing lava followed the bed of the river until it came to a leak, which it filled up, and, soon after, it reached a tremendous abyss over which a magnificent waterfall had formerly plunged. Here, too, the lava took the place of water, and formed a cataract of fire which must have been a grand and awful sight.

Of course all volcanoes are not of the same age. Many have been formed within the last few centuries, and we have descriptions of several from eye-witnesses who watched their formation.

About the middle of the last century there lived on the elevated plain of Malpais, in Mexico, a planter by the name of Jorullo (pronounced Ho-rool-yo). All had gone along quietly enough in that neighborhood up to June, 1759, when, under the plain, were heard terrible subterranean noises. The earthquakes followed, and continued for two months, and presently the ground burst open, a terrific eruption took place, and a volcano was formed upon the Senor Jorullo's plantation. When Humboldt visited the spot about forty years afterward, he found, in addition to the principal volcano, an immense number of little oven like vents scattered over the plain, and still hot and smoking.

Just to the north of Naples in Italy is the beautiful bay of Baiæ, on which anciently stood a little town called Tripergola. In the years 1537 and 1538 a great many earthquakes were felt in the vicinity, but on the afternoon of Sunday, the 29th of September, 1538, fire burst out of the ground, ashes, mud, and stones were hurled out, and, in a single night, a volcanic mountain 440 feet high was thrown up, very near the town. Its fires speedily died out; the Italians call it Monte Nuovo, or the New Mountain.—Ewing Gibson, in St. Nicholas.

The city of Bath, Maine, recently suffered a loss of over a half million dollars by fire.

IT TAKES YOUR MONEY—only 25 cents to buy a glass vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—but then you get a lasting benefit and a permanent cure of your Bilious or Sick Headache, Constipation or Indigestion, loss of appetite, and all those troubles which follow a disordered liver.

The time to treat an inactive liver is before it becomes a disease. If these tiny Pellets were in every day use people would be germ-proof. The germs of disease make their entrance to the system through the liver—your health and well-being depends on the liver.

If you suffer from wind and pain in the stomach, giddiness, costiveness, disturbed sleep, you get immediate relief from the use of "Pleasant Pellets."

They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money returned.

Think of the thousands of hopeless cases which must have been cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, before its proprietors could be willing to say, as they do: "For any case of Catarrh, no matter how bad, which we cannot cure, we'll pay $500 cash."

HAD Shakespeare lived in these latter days, and in the United States, he would have had better cause for assigning "the law's delay" as a reason for disgust than the delays of his time afforded. It is assigned, and not poetically either, as the reason for many high crimes. The murderer is not at all convinced that he is taking his life in his hands when he attempts the destruction of his fellow-man; the embezzler knows only too well of the "cities of refuge" just beyond our Northern and Southern limits; in fact, no ordinarily sane man transgresses the law without some hope of immunity, or at least of escaping punishment for many months. And his hope is by no means groundless. Precedent is the sole constitution of England, and to most men everywhere it is law. Which of us searches the statutes for guidance? Which of us knows where to find the statutes, and how to interpret them? It is all unwritten law to most of us; we know the penalties that have been imposed for certain actions, and govern ourselves accordingly. And if one man escapes the clutches of the law for a year, however condign his final punishment, another reasons that he may escape for longer, regardless of the statutes. It is here that the great trouble arises: Too great a length of time intervenes between the crime and the punishment.

Delay is even more marked in civil cases than in criminal. We have known suits to stand for years, and some of them are standing now. And we do not have reference particularly to North Carolina, for the United States Supreme Court is so wofully deliberate in reaching decisions that no one interested cares to have a case brought before it. The matter should be remedied. If court dockets are over-full, there should be more courts; if the system of unanimous verdicts is the cause of undue delay, it should be modified. There is a right and wrong of every question, and it is injustice to the right to delay the punishment of the wrong. We believe our courts perform their functions as ably and speedily as those of any other State, but that is no reason why we should not complain when France disposes of her criminals in six weeks, and America allows hers to go unwhipped of justice for twice as many months. Let it be said, however, that whatever the law's delay may encourage, none but the vicious will have hope of final immunity; and that however slow justice may seem, we never have reason for "taking the law in our hands," except by means of the ballot—the primal instrument of self government.

THERE is nothing so characteristic of the times as the importance that is attached to figures. Books, registers, almanacs, and newspapers are full of them. Everything, from the number of dogs in our back lots to the number of drunkards on our streets, from the number of cigarettes smoked by young men to the number of loaves of bread that the race consumes, from the number of beggars in the land to the amount of money in our treasuries, is told us in figures. He who has not a memory for figures must carry a memorandum, if he would keep up with the times. The statistician, the politician, the theorist, blend history and prophecy in figures—the unchangeable witnesses to the past, measure is of the present, and indices of the future. If any prophecy is reliable, it is the prophecy of figures. And even when the figures are not appreciated, and it is often the case that they are not, they have a convincing power. All the abstract logic that men may command cannot overcome the arguments of the statistician. There is a notable exemplification of this before the country now. Free trade is ideal in theory; the leading economists agree that the presumption is in in its favor; the very constitution of the earth, the distribution of men, soil and products, lead us to believe that all the world should have the benefits of its varied climates, conditions, etc., untaxed. Every one acknowledges that free trade, or a revenue tariff, which has no legitimate regard to trade, however protective it may happen to be, would make the cost of living less, and hence would advantage the poor man and the wage-worker. But the apostle of protection shows the New Englander that it would lower his wages as well as the cost of living, the Westerner, that his wool would sell for less, the Southerner, that his coal and iron and sugar would fall in value; and thus he gets their votes. Whether the figures are given fairly, or whether they represent results of decidedly different conditions in other countries, is of little consequence to the apostle; and they generally serve to carry his point, as is witnessed by the recent announcement that when the tariff bill passes the Senate there will be no free list.

It was once a rule without exception that figures never lie; but it has fallen into disrepute since men began to deal so largely in them. They do not lie, but they can be converted into lies; false conclusions can be drawn from them, and they can be made to insinuate a thousand things that are untrue. Due regard should be had to statistics, but all the conditions of which they are results should be weighed in reaching conclusions; and few, indeed, are they who can do this properly.

WE may be rather late in the day in attempting to define the very abstruse term—seigniorage—yet we presume there are more than one among us who have used and abused the term without knowledge of its meaning; and, moreover, the public mind is just now drawn to the subject apropos the new Bland bill.

If the silver bullion, purchased under the provisions of the Sherman law, now in the National treasury, were coined into money, it would amount to about $55,000,000 more than it cost the government in Treasury notes when purchased; that is, by coining all its silver bullion the government would net $55,000,000, less the cost of melting, moulding and stamping, which is comparatively small. This $55,000,000 is the seigniorage in Mr. Bland's acceptance of the term, which is also the general American acceptance. But this is a very recent application. Heretofore the word has been used to designate the charge the government made for coining the bullion. The seigniorage represented the difference between the value of the bullion—the raw material—and the commercial value of the coin—the raw material manufactured by the government into money. There is quite a difference between Mr. Bland's application of the term and the statements of economists; in the former the seigniorage varies with the market price; in the latter it is a fixed charge. But the economists didn't calculate on the rise in the price of gold or the fall in silver; they anticipated that a dollar in silver would always represent a dollar's worth of bullion, and labor in manufacturing into proper form, and would have practically the same relative value to gold that it had twenty-two years ago. But now circumstances have altered cases, and we must accept the general definition: Seigniorage is the difference in the cost of bullion when purchased and the face value of the same bullion when stamped with the approval of the government. Of course, in natural conditions the seigniorage should be consumed in manufacturing the dollar, as its very existence implies that the dollar of which it is the residue, is worth less than its face value, the amount less being the amount of seigniorage which is in existence. And therein is the reason why we have no gold seigniorage—in Bland's sense of the term;—the gold dollar is worth its face value.

Now that we have defined the term as best we could, some general observations may be timely. We have just stated that, if the government were to coin all its silver bullion, "it would net $55,000,000, less" etc., etc. But suppose the United States desired to annex Canada by purchase from England, and should proceed to coin its silver bullion for the purpose of buying it. It would have no seigniorage. For England considers only bullion value, and would melt down and weigh the silver as soon as received. A suggestive spectacle: In our own eyes we have $55,000,000 more than we have in England's eyes. And for the sake of international convenience the greater European governments have no seigniorage, even in their acceptance of the term,—making no charge for coining, because whatever they coin will be melted down as soon as it gets into the hands of another nation. "Although the charge for coinage must give the coin additional value at home, the moment it is sent abroad it is worth no more than the same weight in bullion."

As to the Bland bill: Mr. Bland proposes to issue certificates on the bullion in the treasury, redeemable in silver when coined. Notes on the bullion were issued when it was purchased. Have we the right to issue two notes on one dollar? This is scarcely less reasonable than Bland's proposition. If the Treasury note for $100 that the Western miner received for his bullion was issued on a $100 worth of bullion, how much is there left of it for the certificates to be issued on? The proposition doesn't seem equitable, and though coinage may seem no less so to some, we think the bullion in the treasury and the seigniorage thereof should be made into dollars as speedily as possible. As it is now the bullion is absolutely useless, will not pay debts, nor redeem the very notes which were issued on it. In such times as these, a time of bonds and demand for more bonds, we cannot afford to hold useless any resources so available.

Christ in the Church.

The Introductory Sermon preached Dec. 7th, 1893, by Rev. Dr. J. W. Carter of Raleigh before the late Session of the Baptist State Convention held at Elizabeth City.

Text, Rev. 1: 13—"And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man."

The book of Revelation is a book of lightnings, and thunders, and fires, and earthquakes, and plagues, and pestilences, and deaths. In the first chapter we have a striking introduction to the succession of startling visions which follow.

Patmos was a little, lonely, rocky island in the Ægean Sea. It was a kind of public prison. It was a Roman Botany Bay. John, the apostle of love, was banished for the gospel's sake to desolate Patmos. At that time he was the last of the apostles. The others were all dead. John was an old man, but he was not too old to suffer for the truth. When he was sent to Patmos, the enemies of the Church doubtless thought that they were done with him, and that he would give them no more trouble. His brethren probably feared they would never hear of him again. But his sojourn on lonely Patmos was the grandest part of his whole career. Angels visited him. Heaven came down to him. The curtain which concealed the future from mortal gaze was lifted, and it was the privilege of John to follow the Church through the labors, conflicts and sufferings of coming ages, and onward to final triumph. He "was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." He heard a trumpet-like voice behind him. He turned and looked, nor did he look in vain. He saw seven golden candlesticks, and in the midst of the candlesticks there was the glorified Son of God. His appearance was awful and commanding. His voice was like the blended roaring of many commingled waters. In his right hand he held seven stars, while a sharp, double edged sword proceeded out of his mouth. The sight was more than John could bear. He fell to the earth as if he had been dead. But the glorious Christ came and bent over him in sympathy. Though he was so dreadful in appearance, yet there was gentleness in the touch of his hand, and love in the pulsations of his voice. He said, "Fear not: I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth and was dead: and behold I am alive forever more, Amen; and have the keys of hell and death."

When the meaning of the vision was explained to John, he was told that the seven candlesticks were the "seven churches of Asia." Then a golden candlestick fitly represents a church of Christ. The resemblance between the two is very evident. Gold is a pure and precious metal. Men toil and sweat, fight and bleed for it. They often give their lives for it. The fact that the candlesticks which John saw were made of gold implies purity and preciousness. Much more was meant than would have been meant, if the candlesticks had been brass or pewter. Surely a converted membership is suggested. If people of all kinds, classes and conditions, the bad as well as the good, the unrighteous as well as the righteous, the unholy as well as the holy, and the unconverted as well as the converted, may be properly gathered into the church, then the church is not a golden candlestick, but is rather like the image which Nebuchadnezzar saw in his dream, and which consisted of gold, silver, brass, iron and clay mingled in strange and unnatural proportions.

The candlestick is a light bearer—not a light giver, but a light-bearer. You might carry it in your hand, and still grope in densest darkness. Unless it bears the burning candle, no light shines forth from it. The church is also a light-bearer. Christ is the true "Light of the world." He is the infinite source of spiritual light, and it is for the church to receive the light which he gives, and diffuse it abroad through the nations of the earth. The church is not so much a light-producer as a light-reflector.

Now, notice the position of Christ. He was in the midst of the candlesticks, or churches. Not one of them could monopolize him. He did not belong to one more than to the others. But he was in reach of all. "And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man." The last time he was ever seen on the earth, he was walking in the midst of his churches. The subject which I get from the text, and about which I want to talk to you, is

CHRIST IN THE CHURCH.

1. Let us notice that Christ in the church is a fact. It is not a fancy, or a fiction, or a mere theory, but a fact. It is a fact of the gospel, and a fact of Christian experience. It is a fact which inspired truth teaches, and which believers enjoy. Paul, the apostle of doctrine, in writing to the Colossians, said, "God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory." Col. 1: 27. Here we find that Christ in his saints is the great mystery of the gospel. The same apostle, writing to the Galatians, condensed his own experience into one verse, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2: 20. Paul said, "Christ liveth in me." Christ is in all believers, and believers form the gospel church; therefore, Christ is in the church. Now, is not this conclusion forced upon us by God's truth? I do not see how we can escape from it unless we reject the positive teachings of Scripture. The apostle Peter was writing to believers when he said, "Ye also as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 2: 5. Here the church is compared to a house. It is built of believers. They are lively or living stones. The church is a living building, because the life of Christ pervades it from foundation to turret, and throbs in all the stones of which it is composed. How different from the simple truth is the complicated theory of Roman Catholicism. It declares that Christ has made a vast deposit of grace and merit in the church. This deposit is sufficient to last the church forever; but it is kept under lock and key, and pope and priest carry the keys. The grace is supposed to flow forth through a huge pipe called the pope, and this great pipe branches off into smaller pipes called archbishops, and these branch off into many smaller pipes called bishops, and these branch off into ten thousand still smaller pipes called priests; and through this network of pipes the poor sinner can suck grace enough to save his beleaguered soul, provided that he will turn the screw, as often as he is in need, with a dollar.

But the gospel establishes very little machinery. It teaches that all believers as individuals come into spiritual union with Christ through faith. They are in him as the branches are in the vine, and he is in them as their life and hope and joy. Because he is in them, he is in the church.

2. Christ in the church is not a barren fact. It is a blessed and fruitful fact. It produces results which are precious and glorious.

(1) It accounts for the preservation of the church. The church is already the oldest organization in the world, and is destined to endure until time shall be no more. When it was established, the Roman empire was in the zenith of its power and greatness. Rome ruled the known world. The Roman legions were almost invincible. The Roman eagles waved from the forests of Germany on the north to the deserts of Africa on the south, and from the river Euphrates on the east to the British isles on the west. But the church was small and weak. The men and women who professed faith in Christ, and preached salvation in his name were few in numbers. They were a little company of despised Jews. It looked like hopeless presumption for them to think of making any serious impression upon the deeply-rooted Judaism and firmly fixed Paganism which filled the world. A man who would have said that the infant church would outlive the empire of the Cæsars, would have been regarded as insane. But we know what has come to pass. The Roman empire went down in crash and disaster, and the throne of the Cæsars turned to dust a thousand years ago; but the church still lives and grows.

The ruthless ravages of death have continued through all these centuries. Christians die, but sinners are converted to take their place. Great workers fall, but Christ's work goes on. The membership of the church is changed almost entirely in each period of thirty years; but the church still continues. In this fact we probably find the fulfillment of our Lord's prophecy in Matt. 16: 18—"And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." It is often said that "the gates of hell" are the powers of wickedness, and claimed that the forces of evil cannot prevail against the church of Christ. That is doubtless true. But is that the exact truth that Christ meant to teach? I think not. It is true that in our version the word "hell" is used; but in the original the word is not "gehenna"—the place of final punishment—but "hades," the state or condition of the dead. It seems to me that what Christ meant and said was that death, physical death, should never destroy his church. The ranks of his people, though thinned by death, would be filled by conversion. Brethren whom we love pass away, but the church still stands, and down to the end of time will stand.

"Like some tall cliff which lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale and midway leaves the storm;
Though rolling clouds round its breast are spread,
Yet eternal sunshine settles on its head."

If the church could have been destroyed, its destruction would have been accomplished long ago.

Persecution has done its utmost. Pagan Rome and Catholic Rome exhausted their immense resources in desperate efforts to crush the struggling church. Armies of martyrs died for the faith. They languished in dungeons; they hung on gibbets and crosses; they bled on scaffolds; they perished in the flames. But the church still flourished. For a long time force and fraud, fire and sword were employed by the enemies of Christ's kingdom; but the church, founded on the Rock of Ages, could not be consumed. It is the threshing-floor on which persecution has worn out all its flails, and the anvil on which persecution has broken all its hammers. But after all these ages of blood and anguish, the church still survives.

The church has also suffered more than tongue or pen can tell from the unfaithfulness of professed Christians. Some good people are almost tortured into hysterics by the bold blasphemies of Robert Ingersoll; but I honestly believe that one Christless, graceless preacher can do more injury to the gospel than ten Ingersolls. Some pulpits still thunder against Tom Paine, though he has been dead more than eighty years. But it is my positive conviction that one contentious, domineering deacon can hinder the Lord's work far more than Tom Paine. This is one instance in which the living dog is more formidable than the dead lion. When church-members are careless or worldly, when they are negligent or indifferent, or when they are false or dishonest, they do strengthen the arms of the enemy and check the enlargement of Zion. When amid the convulsions and agonies of the French revolution, Madame Roland—"the brave and beautiful wife of Roland," as Carlyle calls her—was led to the guillotine, she exclaimed, "O liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!" So those who love the Lord often have occasion to say, "O religion, what evils and wrongs are done in thy name!" But the church still remains, and is marching on from victory to victory.

Now, how can we account for its continued existence? There is one fact which explains it all, and that is Christ in the church. But here an objection may be offered. It may be said the argument proves too much, and therefore proves nothing. We may be reminded that Mohammedanism, though more than twelve hundred years old, still lives and is making proselytes; and that Roman Catholicism, though older still, exists to day and is still powerful. It may be argued that if the church lives because Christ is in it, then it must be true that he is also in Roman Catholicism and Mohammedanism, because they still live and win converts. But the cases are not parallel. Mohammedanism and other forms of false religion fall in with the weaknesses and corruptions of human nature, but the true church opposes them. They propose to give human nature the kind of religion it likes, if it will give them its support. They make large concessions to human nature to secure its approval; but the church rebukes human nature, and tells the sinner that he must repent and be born again. It condemns the very forces upon which they depend. It rejects the helps by which they are kept alive. It is natural for stones to roll down the hill. If they are not stopped by some sufficient obstruction, they rush downward with increasing momentum. The farther they go, the faster they go. They perhaps acquire a force which may carry them far out on the plain. But whenever you see a stone rolling up a hill, you may know that it is not self-moved. Now the perverted religions that I have mentioned are merely stones rolling down hill. But true Christianity is a stone rolling up the hill of human nature. The hill is high and long and steep, but the stone still rolls upward and increases in size as it goes. Is it not moved by Almighty power?

Sometimes men say, "We do not believe in miracles. We read of them in the Bible, but we reject the record. The miracles that we hear of occurred far back in the remote past. Why are they not repeated now? Show us a miracle, and we too will believe." Well, I think that I can show you one, for if I am not mistaken, there is one continued miracle. When Jesus ascended to the Father's right hand, his disciples were few in number and poor in purse. Their leaders were eleven plain, poor men. They had not been taught in the schools of earth. They were mostly fishermen. The world, the flesh, and the devil were against them. Scribe, priest and Pharisee were against them. Jew and Pagan, Greek and Barbarian were against them. All the governments of earth were against them. Wealth and fashion, poetry and philosophy were against them. It looked as if they were doomed to utter failure. But they went forth and told "the story of the Cross." The doctrines which they taught were heart-humbling and unpopular. The world hated the truth which they preached. But the Lord was with them. He blessed their labors, and sinners were converted. They grew in numbers and strength. The more they were oppressed and persecuted, the more they multiplied. Now, when we consider the circumstances, do we not see that the continued preservation and triumphant progress of the church in spite of such opposition, required the exercise of divine power as truly as any miracle that Jesus ever performed?

A flame, kindled on the very bosom of the ocean, and assailed by all the winds and waves, yet blazing higher, burning brighter, and enlarging the circle of its radiance from age to age, was surely kindled and sustained by the power of the Infinite.

Roman history tells us that when Julius Cæsar followed Pompey from Italy into Greece, he had not ships enough to convey all his army at once. He crossed the Adriatic sea with part of his legions and sent back the vessels for his remaining forces. But their return was delayed until Cæsar was impatient and anxious. One dark and stormy night he disguised himself and went on board a small vessel bound to the coast of Italy. The voyage was almost made. The ship came to the entrance of the harbor, but could go no farther because the sea was rough and the winds were contrary. The men worked long and hard at the oars, but could not enter the harbor. They, at length, decided that they might as well give up and turn back. Then Cæsar threw off his disguise and revealed himself. To the ship-master he said: "Fear not, for thou bearest Cæsar and his fortunes." When the sailors saw him and knew him, they were stimulated to still greater efforts.

Now we may regard the church as a ship

PERSONAL WORK.

We have had no little to say recently in regard to individual work on the part of Christians. But we cannot say too much. We know that many church members are remiss in one essential of Christ's teachings; that, while they are devout in worship and upright in conduct, and thorough in doctrine, they, as workers, are very light workers, to put it mildly.

We have gotten into the habit of leaving what is commonly accepted as "pastoral work" to one man—the pastor. He is expected to do all the church-visiting, do all the consoling among the poor and the sick, and to explore all the needs of a pastorate. We do not intend to convey the idea that church members are divided or exclusive, but it is a sad fact that many of them never make any but social calls. They visit those whose society they enjoy, but when it comes to bringing joy to those who most need it, they are never to be seen. The pastor has much to do in caring for even a limited flock, and he should have the assistance of every one in his church in visiting in Jesus' name. Especially is this needful in those pastorates to which the pastor has opportunity to come only once a month, and then to remain only two days. It was only recently that we heard that a church desired to change pastors because their regular pastor didn't live in the community, and could not do personal work among them. If they had visited among themselves more, if their intercourse had been more Christian, and less social, there would have been no grounds for a change of pastors, as the spiritual condition of the church was not his fault; although, whenever a church can afford it, they should have a resident pastor.

It is among the poor that personal work by church-members is most needed; for they need the example and the spirit of Christ more, if possible, than any other class. We have read this winter how the rioters in our larger cities denounced Christianity, how they despised Christian work, and derided preachers of the gospel. The trouble with them was they had heard what Christianity professes to be, and seen what it was as lived by some rich church-members. Personal work among them would do much to reconcile them to humanity and draw them to Christ; let them once know that the essence of Christianity is love for God and love for fellow man, let them see this exemplified in human lives, let them know that self-sacrifice in the name of Jesus is a characteristic of Christians, and we have no fears for their redemption from their present position in regard to Christianity.

Among the poor in small communities, be they church-members or not, there is always room for some Christian to bring joy through Christ. They may not entertain one as he is entertained in the halls of the rich, but there is a sublimer joy in doing Christ's will; in a consciousness that you have brought light where there was darkness, in that you have done what Christ bade us all do, whether it has required sacrifice of your own pleasure or not. And what greater pleasure can man have than in bringing pleasure to others?

But there is another and a stronger side to the subject. Personal work is a means of growth in grace. We may be very benevolent so far as money is concerned, and yet we are not benevolent in the true sense of the word. Give your money, and give it personally, and give your good wishes with it. There are many Christians who give freely, and yet know nothing of personal work, and therefore are not as benevolent in their gifts as they should be. Personal visitation is healthful religious exercise. It strengthens the Christian, and through him strengthens the cause.

Our Father is a personal father, and Christ is a personal Saviour. The Ten Commandments are personal, the great commandment is personal, and Christ died "for every man."

Let us no longer leave this duty to our pastors. It is something that would be sacreligious to think of paying to have it done; men should never be paid in worldly things to touch the human heart and uplift the soul, for they cannot do either if they would do it for pay. Supporting a missionary in the church may aid the pastor, but the missionary has a field of his own, and it doesn't cover the duty of church-members. We cannot escape it; we must do work—missionary and charitable—among the poor and sick. We must show Christ in us, if he is in us. We cannot destroy sociability, and we would not destroy it, if we could; but there is something higher than social friendship—something that is made secondary to friendship by some—that must distinguish the follower of Jesus, and that is love, the motive force and the genius of charity.

"HAVING A NAME WITHOUT REALITY."

Rev. R. T. Bryan recently delivered an address in Raleigh on the above theme as applied to the Chinese forms and customs. He told us of the great show without reality the Chinese youth make of obedience to parents; of the selfish benevolence of that nation, and many other characteristics. But he failed to mention certain peculiarities of American life that have great names, but are in reality vain and profitless.

The Wilmington Messenger remarked in a late issue:—

"One of the last jokes is that any one should have supposed that hand-shaking means conversion. It means generally an evanescent sympathy, a temporary emotion. Think of any one supposing that Ingalls was changed in life and soul by a friendly shake of Sam Jones's hand!"

We dare say the press-agent who sent out the report concerning Mr. Ingalls was perfectly sincere in his statement. Some evangelists never require more from a penitent than a shake of the hand to be counted among "the converted." They have the name without reality, they convert numbers by a shake of the hand, but when it comes to reality the numbers dwindle; the "convert" goes through a form, but has no real change of heart. Such are the results of certain species of professional evangelism.

The "charity" ball has recently had an airing in North Carolina. They had one in New York first, and, we suppose, the contagion spread. It had a beautiful name; the poor were to be relieved and the rich were to enjoy themselves thereby; but it had no reality, so far as charity is concerned. People must learn sooner or later that charity consists not in money so much as in love. Before many years we shall expect beggars to petition "social sets" to have charity balls, because the rich enjoy them so greatly, and the poor are helped; it will then be asserted that it is the duty of the rich to have charity balls, and that they are under obligations to the poor because the latter make a charity ball useful, giving the rich an excuse for indulging in dancing. They have a good name—a good excuse, apparently—but there is none in reality. And the Chinese beggars, who demand alms because it is meritorious to give them, are a warning of what the charity ball may become.

Bro. Bryan referred to the Chinese social code; they are the most polite people on earth, viewed from the standpoint of one who believes in forms and ceremonies. They lose half their time to be polite. There is much in this that may be said of the society leaders, the moulders of the code of politeness, the makers of etiquette, in modern society. It is said that one has to study several months, has to have the training of an experienced society leader, before he can enter certain "sets" of society without danger of disgracing himself, by some negligence of style or disregard of forms. Their functions have great names, they gather together the sons and daughters of the great, but in reality they are mockeries of civilization. They are polite (?) because it is the fashion to be polite, and not for politeness' sake.

Truly there are many things in civilized life that have beautiful and attractive names, but in reality are more dangerous than beautiful. There are church-members who are pillars of the church in name, who rent pews, and pay their pastors well—too well,—but in reality they are nothing so far as Christianity is concerned; and when that day comes when all things are revealed, when the good is winnowed from the bad, when deceit is no longer possible, the mockery of many a social form and religious pretence will appear worse than nothing.

A PROMINENT minister recently remarked to us that in his opinion a funeral service should consist more often of a sermon preached from the Bible on the life of the subject of the funeral. That if it could be shown how Christ moulded the character of the deceased, in what respects his life was a testimony to the grace of God, much good would be done. There are people who attend funerals, but never come within hearing of a pulpit on other occasions; and their mind is more receptive, more liable to listen then than at any other time. If in the presence of these the Christ in man can be demonstrated, it should be. An address on the life of a Christian without references to Christ, without exemplifications of Christianity, must be unworthy indeed. Every life is a sermon, and if it didn't speak in existence, some one can speak for it when it is gone—a warning or a testimony.

THE latest development in the matter of giving honorary degrees has turned up in Georgia. The Great Eastern Colored Baptist Association of Georgia recently voted the titles of D. D. and LL. D. to two of its members. We do not blame the Association, as we do not see that it does not know as well who should be a Doctor of Divinity as many a small college that has the charter-right to distribute the same degree broadcast.

We have seen it stated that there are not more than six Baptists in the South who are really worthy of the title—Doctor of Divinity. Who these six are we do not know, but we are certain that the South would be none the worse off, if not one of its ministers had the title. We are really glad our colored population are using the title so freely that no importance will be attached to it.

FROM the Examiner we learn that the Home Mission Society of the Northern Baptists is in debt to the amount of $313,595 91, of which $95,795 91 is due April 1st. They expect to receive $88,000 in February and March.

Our Southern Home Board closed its last year's work comparatively out of debt. North Carolina must raise $5,000 by April 1st on State Missions. How small our burden seems when compared with that of the Northern brethren! Yet they will raise the debt, without a great struggle, and continue their good works. They know how a debt stimulates liberality as well as thrift. There is a lesson for us in their hopefulness under what appears burdensome. Let us to the work now, and pay our missionaries, State, Home, and Foreign, and send out more.

IT IS related that there have been times in the history of the Waldenses when there was a sufficient number of men among them to reproduce the Bible from memory, each being assigned certain parts; so that even if their Bibles were destroyed by Roman Catholic fires they would not be without the word of God. We like that story. Memorizing Bible verses is one of the best Christian exercises we know of. It should be begun in youth and continued through life. We may not memorize the entire Bible, but we will know how to live better for what we have memorized. We haven't the Catholics to fight so much as Satan in general, and a rich store of biblical knowledge will withstand the longest seige.

The more the people know of the Bible the less potent will be the critics, who know too much; and the people must be the great bulwark against the attacks of the critics, just as the people destroyed the power of Rome in the Reformation, when it was said

"So papists refuse
The Bible to use,
Lest flocks should be wise as their guide."

When flocks study the Scriptures as much as their guides, when the Bible is the guide of Christians, we shall not be troubled with critics or papists.

....Dr. W. W. Landrum baptized nine candidates on the 11th, who made professions of religion in a recent meeting in his church at Richmond, Va.

....Every North Carolina Baptist should read Dr. A. T. Robertson's article on our fifth page. Dr. Carter's sermon and the missionary letters are of unusual value.

....The Western Recorder states that the oldest man in America is a negro living in Osage City, Mo. His name is Richard Hoops, and he was born in Chatham county, North Carolina, in 1770.

....Rev. J. F. Tuttle desires to state that in his letter published in the RECORDER of the 7th inst. two words were misspelled: grateful and inaugurated. They were oversights of the proof-reader.

....Bro. R. F. Beasley, a member of the present Senior Class at Wake Forest, and one of the editors of the Student, is also editor of the new Union county paper, The Monroe Journal.

....Mrs. J. M. Heck has returned to Raleigh from Philadelphia, where she left her daughters, Misses Fannie and Susie, in charge of specialists. We are glad to know that both are improving.

....Our subscribers are requested to be as prompt as possible in renewing their subscriptions for the year. Attend to the matter now, while you have it in mind, and save us trouble and expense.

....Rev. J. L. Sproles has resigned the pastorate of the church at Shelby to take effect in April next. Bro. Sproles' two years work at Shelby has been greatly blessed of God; in that time the membership of his church has increased from 281 to 406.

....Dr. Geo. Dana Boardman has resigned the pastorate of the church in Philadelphia, which he had been serving more than twenty years. Increasing age made it impossible for him to execute the duties of so large a pastorate.

....Rev. A. T. Howell of Holdcroft, Va., writes: "I love my old native North Carolina and her dear people. My heart still beats for old Wake Forest; may she abound in prosperity. I have a splendid field, and am blessed of the Lord."

....We have heard with great regret of the business failure of Bro. E. Frost. We hope his embarrassment is only temporary. Bro. Frost's benevolence is well known, and his interest in the Orphanage has been a blessing to that institution.

....We were glad to have Rev. S. W. Hall of the Orphanage in to see us last week. He attended the Anniversary exercises at Wake Forest College. We were glad to hear very encouraging news of the condition of the Orphanage from him.

....The forthcoming number of the Wake Forest Student will contain an article on journalism by Reau Folk, a former student at Wake Forest, now a prominent Tennessee editor; also an article relative to the early history of Wake Forest by Hon. Sanders Ingram.

....Prof. Oscar J. Peterson, who graduated from Wake Forest College in 1892, has been elected to the Chair of Mathematics in the North Texas Baptist University. Bro. Peterson has been teaching in North Carolina since he graduated. We wish him success in Texas.

....Rev. R. T. Bryan attended the anniversary exercises at Wake Forest College last week and enjoyed them greatly. Saturday night following he delivered a missionary address before the College, and on Sunday spoke of the "Social Condition of Women in China."

....Mr. C. B. Edwards, Jr., son of our esteemed Bro. C. B. Edwards, and Miss Maggie D. Ferrell, daughter of the late A. L. Ferrell, were united in marriage in Raleigh, the 14th inst., Rev. A. M. Simms and Dr. J. W. Carter officiating. We extend congratulations.

....The new house of worship at High Shoal, Rutherford county, is to be dedicated next Saturday; and the house just finished at Henrietta is to be dedicated next Sunday. Rev. C. Durham is to preach the sermon at both places. Our representative, Bro. Caddell, will be present.

....The Seminary Magazine for February is on our table. The number is unusually attractive. An excellent photograph of Dr. Tichenor is reproduced, and Dr. Burrows writes of the good man's work. The contributions, symposiums and departments are interesting and instructive.

....A brother writes us that Rev. J. O. Gough, who attended Wake Forest College last year, is preaching two Sundays a month at Manning, S. C., and two at Providence, S. C. He also preaches every Sunday night at a union chapel, Acolu, S. C., and at Dudley's church Sunday afternoons.

....According to the United States census reports there are 800 more organizations of Regular Northern Baptists than there are church buildings. In the South there are 2,800 unsheltered Baptist church organizations. There are more of the latter in Texas than in any other State. This means that we cannot do too much for home missions. Responses to Bro. Vann's recent call are timely.

....Dr. Kerr B. Tupper, of whom many exaggerated reports concerning the coalition of Baptists and Disciples were recently circulated, has received a call to the pastorate of Washington Avenue Baptist church, Brooklyn. Dr. Tupper is a Southerner, a graduate of our Seminary, and has been in the ministry twelve years, during which time his labors have been greatly blest. He is now pastor of a large church in Denver, Colorado.

....Dr. Russell H. Conwell, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, which is the most largely attended Baptist church in America, lectured in Association Hall, New York City, last week, for the benefit of Twenty-third Street Baptist church of that city, Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr., pastor.

....The Board of Missions, at its meeting March 20th, will appoint the delegates to the next session of the Southern Baptist Convention. Those who expect to go had best send their names at once to the Corresponding Secretary, Bro. Durham. All arrangements ought to be made early.

....Rev. G. W. Greene writes very hopefully of the work in China. Their many friends will rejoice to know that the health of himself and wife is better than in years. Bro. Greene has so far mastered the language that he has been assigned full work for this year. He writes: "The report for the past year is encouraging, the number of baptisms reaching 109."

....Rev. L. H. Greene writes: "We have had a glorious revival of religion at Mine Creek church, two miles west of Bakersville, which lasted a fortnight. The membership was increased half a hundred, forty-one being by baptism. It is said to be the best meeting in the history of the church." We rejoice with our brother at this glorious outpouring of the Spirit.

....The only Japanese mission in New York City or Brooklyn is supported by the Hanson Place Baptist church, Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D., pastor. Bro. Dixon recently baptized six converts of the mission. The Hanson Place church raised and expended on churches and mission stations $26,000 in the last year—more than some States give to State, or Home, or Foreign Missions.

....It seems that it is necessary to remind our friends that anonymous communications, even in regard to marriages that we have no knowledge of, cannot be published. In this instance our reason is obvious. It would save trouble if every one of our readers would take a few minutes "off," and contemplate the standing matter in minion type on the first column of the first page.

....On the 12th, Bro. J. C. Caddell received his second serious injury in six weeks, while travelling for the RECORDER. Entering Charlotte, N. C., on the Carolina Central Railroad, he was struck on the forehead and cheek by a rock thrown by a miscreant through a window of the cars. Though painful and disfiguring, the wound is not dangerous, and he will be "on his rounds" this week.

....Rev. J. L. White of Asheville is assisting Dr. Pritchard in a series of revival meetings in the Tryon Street Baptist church, Charlotte. Rev. E. W. Oakes, as noted in a recent issue, has been holding revival services in this church several days, and has done much good. Bro. White's power is well-known, and no doubt the Lord will greatly bless his labors in Charlotte as he has elsewhere.

....Rev. J. N. Booth of Union, S. C., is arranging to have a revival in his church in March, and is making efforts to have Bro. N. B. Broughton of Raleigh to aid him. Bro. Booth has been at Union a little less than one year, and he says in many respects it has been the most pleasant period in his ministry. He writes: "The North Carolina brethren on this side the line (in South Carolina) are doing well according to all reports."

....A little after 10 p. m. on the 13th inst. we received the following telegram from the North Carolina Baptist: "Partially burned out to night. List ruined. Please call on our delinquent subscribers to help us issue as usual. Loss several hundred. Editorial room destroyed." As the RECORDER of the 14th had at that time been printed, and every copy placed in the mails, it was impossible for us to comply with the request. The issue of the Baptist for last week was delayed only three days, and from it we learn that "all material is damaged, by either fire or water or smoke," and the records are confused or lost. If we mistake not, this is the sixth time that Baptist papers have been injured by fire in ten weeks. We have assured Bro. Oates of our sympathy. See his announcement in another column.

....At Wake Forest College last Friday was devoted to the celebration of the fifty-ninth anniversary of the excellent literary societies connected with the institution—the Philomathesian and Euzelian. The forenoon was given to holiday, the afternoon to debate, and the evening to oratory, as has been the custom for years. The question for debate was: "Should the President and the United States Senators be elected by direct vote of the people?" and the debaters were: Affirmative, R. L. Freeman, South Carolina, Senior; M. P. Davis, Booneville, N. C., Junior; negative, W. H. Sledge, Leaksville, N. C., Senior, and W. C. Newton, Wake Forest, Junior. All the debaters showed thorough acquaintance with the question, and did credit to themselves and the occasion. At the conclusion of the debate the audience was requested to decide by vote which of the two sets of debaters presented the best argument, and their verdict was favorable to the negative. Mr. R. H. Carter was president, and Mr. T. W. Elliot secretary of the debate. The evening exercises were opened by Mr. Jno. H. Carr, who, with a neat address, introduced Mr. J. D. Robertson, the representative orator from the Euzelian society; subject, "Discontent the Mother of Progress." Mr. J. E. Yates was the orator from the Philomathesian society; subject, "Cross and Crescent." We have not the space to do justice to the debaters or orators. It is sufficient to say that the fifty-ninth Anniversary was fully up to the standard of those of preceding years. After the orations, the large audience was invited to the annual reception in the literary halls, where the evening was passed very pleasantly. Fair women, weather, music, and speakers, did much to make the exercises throughout unusually delightful.

Shall We Reinforce Our Missions?

BY REV. R. T. BRYAN.

"How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?"

The needs of the heathen are calling for help. Our missionaries are pleading for reinforcements. Men and women are saying, "Here am I, send me"—are even begging to be sent. The Board is anxious to answer these appeals, but cannot do so, unless the churches furnish the money. The Board, at the last meeting, approved of ten men and women as worthy of appointment and instructed our Secretary, Bro. Willingham, to bring this matter before the churches, and see if such an increase in the regular contributions to Foreign Missions can be secured as to enable the Board to appoint and send out these missionaries by next fall.

We have a great God. He is calling us to a great work. We are a mighty host, a great people. Shall we send these reinforcements? Who will answer? The answer must come from the churches, saying, send them, and we will support them by increasing our regular contributions to Foreign Missions. Will our churches answer? That depends upon you, dear reader. Will you say, I will pray more, I will increase my contributions? Will you talk it up and not down? Will you try to get every one with whom you come in contact to pray for this matter and to give more? Brother editors, will you help us? Brother pastors, more depends upon you than upon all others. Will you bring it before your churches and try to get them to pray over it, and make an increase in their contributions? Will you make an effort to get every member to give something, be it ever so little?

If all would give even a small sum, our Board could easily pay off the debt and send out over fifty men and women. Will you help, brother deacon? Brother Sunday-school superintendent, what a lift you and your dear children could give us; will you help? God has abundantly blessed some of our people with thousands and millions; will you, God's wealthy children, ask him to allow you to invest some of your money in this enterprise? Lastly, but not least, will you, dear sisters, lend us your tender-loving but strong hands? We expect an affirmative answer from you all. We are trusting God and the Baptists. God will not fail us. What will the Baptists do?

This appeal is not for special objects and special contributions, but for an increase in our regular contributions to Foreign Missions, so as to enable our Board to pay off all debts and send out, at least, some of the consecrated men and women who are begging to be sent, and for whom many urgent appeals and earnest cries from heathen lands are daily calling.

"He who gives to a special object, does well, but he who gives to the general fund, does better," Now, who will write our Secretary, Bro. R. J. Willingham, at Richmond, Va., and say, send on the reinforcements, I will help with my pen, my tongue, my money, and my prayers? "Not by might, not by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

One Sunday in China.

The first Sunday of the year 1894 was a day of peculiar privilege and enjoyment. Let me give a brief account of the services of the day. The chapel where the Canton church meets is three miles from where I live. I hardly felt equal to walking that distance and back, over stone pavements and through streets always crowded. So I called a boat and went a mile and a half down the river, then walked a mile and a half through the city. Arriving at the chapel, I found a prayer meeting in progress, led by Dr. Graves. Usually the Sunday-school occupies that hour; but the first Sunday of the month, being communion Sunday, a prayer-meeting takes the place of the Sunday-school. After the prayer-meeting, the pastor of the church at Shin Hing, Bro. Fung Chak, preached on the crucifixion of Christ. It was a sermon of great power, moving the congregation more than any other sermon I have heard in China. Closing, he exhorted the preachers present to make the cross very prominent in their preaching. After the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered by Dr. Graves and Pastor Fung King Him, of the Canton church. Permission was given for such brethren as should be present at the afternoon service at another chapel to examine candidates and receive members.

We then returned a mile and a half to the residence of Bro. Simmons, where we ate an appropriate Sunday dinner, that is, one that was cooked on Saturday.

The chapel where the afternoon service was held is just in the rear of the residences of Bro. Simmons and Dr. Graves. Here we were joined by the rest of the family, who had come thither in a boat. Usually the service is introduced by another Sunday-school, but on the days when the Lord's Supper is celebrated there is not time for the Sunday school. Pastor Fung Chak preached again, this time on the resurrection of Christ, another sermon of high excellence. After the sermon, Dr. Graves, for the Canton church, gave an opportunity for the relation of Christian experience, and our second daughter, Pansy, nearly ten years old, came before the church. Dr. Graves gave her a very searching examination, translating her answers into Chinese. She was then received for baptism.

The ordinance of baptism was administered in the baptistry of the chapel by Bro. Simmons. First he baptized three little Chinese girls from the boarding-school, one of them totally blind. These had been received by the church the previous Sunday. Another was ready for baptism, but had not yet received permission from her parents. Then Pansy was baptized, Bro. Simmons repeating the formula first in Chinese and then in English.

I should have mentioned that in each of these services the collection had its proper place, as in all the services of our Chinese churches.

There was then barely time to hurry home and eat supper before going to the night service in English, participated in by all the missionaries of all denominations. This was the beginning of the daily services to be held in connection with the observance of the Week of Prayer. The sermon was by Rev. H. V. Noyes, of the Presbyterian mission, and the subject assigned was "Pentecostal Power." It was eminently appropriate to the occasion, and rich in gospel truth. We are hoping for large spiritual results from these services now in progress.

Canton, China, Jan. 9, 1894.

Letter from Rev. T. C. Britton in China.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—As we have just entered upon a new year, I will give you some lines about our last year's work. During the three or four months of beautiful weather that we had in the spring and fall, we made special efforts in preaching to the people in the country villages and city suburbs. It was the custom to take some copies of the Gospels and Acts to sell to those, who could read and might want them, making it our special point to embrace the opportunities for speaking the word to the people. And we were thankful to find so many of these opportunities, for we consider them as doors opened by the Lord for the gospel. We could often preach to ten or twenty together on the street, or in an open place in a settlement, to five or six around a table in a tea shop, to three or four in the field at work, to one plying his trade alone, and to the sick and aged in their homes. But in the midst of this work, how deeply we felt, "What are we among so many?" We can reach but such a small part of this great city and the surrounding country with our present force. And in the places that we can reach, we have time and strength to speak the gospel to such a few of those who would be willing to give us a hearing, if we were reinforced sufficiently to give them an opportuninty. How long before our people, moved with compassion for these multitudes as Jesus was, will mightily exert themselves to give them the gospel at his command? May the Lord hasten the day! While I was working outside, our native preacher carried on the chapel services in the day, and helped about them at night. He also takes Thursdays for visiting, principally among his acquaintances, to try to lead them to Christ.

We have had much sickness among our church members lately. But it has been gratifying to see how faithfully they have attended the Sunday church services, which are held especially for them.

I want to tell you some of the announcements that the native preacher made, just before preaching one Sunday morning not long ago. One was that Bro. Herring had arrived in China again. The native brethren and sisters in this part of the country, among whom Bro. Herring labored so faithfully, love him dearly. Another announcement was concerning the son of a widow lady, who is a member of our church. His father was for some time the Baptist preacher here. The young man was expelled from the church, and went deep into sin, which was a sore grief to his mother. But, true to a Christian mother's love, she had never ceased to pray for him. The preacher told us the glad news that this wayward son had shown decided evidences of repentance. And, as he spoke of it, he almost broke down, while he with the mother wept for joy. A third announcement was, that work had been begun at Wongdai, a large town ten miles from this city. A Baptist lady lives there; and her husband, although not a church member, offers to furnish a room for preaching and lodging for the preacher, as often as we can go. This gentleman's proposition is especially encouraging to us, since the idea is so common in this section, even among church members, that persons must be paid for whatever they do for the Lord's cause. It is our purpose to make monthly visits to Wongdai at present. The last announcement was, that a gentleman, named Sz, had been attending our night preaching regularly, and was being instructed in the way of salvation. Our night services continue to be well attended, and we are hopeful that good is being done.

Perhaps you have heard about the session of our Baptist Mission Conference, which was held here in last November I suppose there were more Baptists present than had ever been in Soochow at one time before. It was a real delight to have our brethren and sisters of the other stations in Central China with us, to hear them tell of their experiences, methods of work and views on various subjects, and to worship God together. It lasted three days, and I believe that lasting good was accomplished. Among other things done, there is one that I regard as very important, viz, steps were taken towards getting our churches in Central China to organize into an Association.

For some weeks I have been giving a portion of my time to the study of the Chinese government. Our Baptist force being so small here, I have gone ahead with the study of the language and work among the people, since we have been in China, to the neglect of preparing myself on the government of the country. Our neighbor and fellow North Carolinian, Dr. J. W. Davis, who is a Presbyterian and has given special attention to this subject, is kindly giving a course of lectures on it. He has been in China about twenty years, and seems to be well acquainted with its government. I am trying to lay a good foundation, and hope to build up a sufficient knowledge of it.

The last day of last December completed our fifth year in this country. How thankful we are to the Lord for allowing us to live here and labor for him during these years. Surely his mercies and blessings bestowed upon us have been many, for which we thank God, and take courage. In taking a special object for prayer at our daily worship during this first week in the year, we asked the Lord this morning to send forth laborers into his harvest. Will not all who see this, join us in that prayer, and do all they can to reinforce us this year for Jesus' sake? Fraternally,

T. C. BRITTON.

Soochow, China, Jan. 5, 1894.
(P. O. Shanghai.)

Letter from Rev. G. P. Bostick in China.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We are rejoicing these few days in the company of our brethren—Herring, Royall, Crocker and Blalock—who reached us day before yesterday, just the day before a snow-storm began. They had a stormy voyage across the Pacific and up the coast from Shanghai to Chefoo. But they had good weather for the overland journey from Chefoo here. They are all now in Pingtu about 160 miles from Chefoo, and they think they are far into the interior, but those of us who have travelled 125 miles still further west and yet not reached the western border of even this one province, know that they are far from the center of this great empire.

The brethren at home can scarcely imagine how heartily we here do welcome these new recruits in this far-off land of darkness. We have had two afternoon prayer-meetings of rejoicing and thanking the Lord for his goodness and mercy to us and to our brethren whom he has brought in safety to us. These brethren all are in good health after the long voyage, except slight inconvenience from vaccination which they endured in Shanghai. I never saw Bro. Herring in better health or spirits. He is specially delighted to be back among these people. These four brethren will all soon be down to the study of the language. Bro. Herring will have to study this dialect for a few months before he can preach in it as it is altogether different from the Shanghai language. There are now sixteen of us here for the winter, including the three babies.

The Crawfords and ourselves had meant to be in Chiiching, a city eighty miles southwest from here. We thought we had arrangements about completed to rent a house; but the landlord proved untrue, and the whole thing failed, as many of our business dealings with them do. They are very unreliable. It is a very difficult thing to rent and settle in a new city in China.

We are now temporarily fixed up in a Chinese house in Pingtu. It has neither plank-floor nor glass window, but we are comfortably fixed for the winter. We rented so very late here (the 9th of December), that we could not repair now; besides we may yet get off to some other city next spring or early autumn, but this is entirely uncertain.

We mean to do the best work we can here for the Lord while we are here, and if other places are not opened to us, we shall rejoice to work where the Lord puts us and leave results with him and for other reapers whom he may send.

We are all well and happy in our work. Many and abundant have been the blessings of our Father during the year now so near to a close, for which we are profoundly grateful. Every year brings new tokens of God's goodness to us.

May God's blessings abide upon you and all the Lord's work.

Fraternally, G. P. BOSTICK

Chefoo, China, Dec. 26, 1893.

Ten Brethren Speak.

In reply to letters sent out giving statements of the debt on the Board, and the Convention's instructions about the same, many brethren have written me. These letters were not written for publication; but I am reasonably certain that those who wrote them will, under the circumstances, excuse me for giving them to the public. They are better than anything I could write. This week I can give only a few of them.

One of the best young dentists in the State, speaking for his little weak church, says:

"Your statement was duly received. I have seen Bro. J. E. Jones, and we agree to say that the Hillsboro church will become responsible for fifty dollars of the amount to be paid according to the specifications in your letter.

Wishing you success in the cause, I am yours truly, J. S. SPURGEON."

Hillsboro church was, many years ago, aided by the Board; and now, in the time of the Board's distress, this little church speaks out nobly.

The Missionary Bishop of the Green River Association says:

"In reply to yours of 25th, I must say that I did not at first see, nor do I at present, unless the Lord is my helper, how I could give fifty dollars. But the more I have thought of it, the more I am impressed with the conviction that I ought to do it. Therefore, I will be responsible for the fifty dollars, to be paid by April 1st, on conditions that the entire debt is paid. Every consideration demands that this be done at once. The missionaries have done their work; the Lord has greatly blessed it; and now we ought to do our part.

I am yours in Christ Jesus our Lord,

C. B. JUSTICE."

The faithful and wise representative of his county in the Legislature, and one of the best known men in the Chowan section, says:

"Your letter asking me to assume fifty dollars of the Convention's indebtedness to State Missions, has been received, and I have thought seriously over it. I am in debt more than I can pay at present; made so by a loss by fire August, 1893; but I am also in debt to my Maker and Preserver more than I can ever pay. After much reflection and prayer, I have decided to divide my means, and pay some to my earthly creditors and some to the cause of my Master. When you have ninety-nine others, let me know.

Yours in Christ, W. P. TAYLOE."

The best Moderator the King's Mountain Association has ever had, the wise legislator, the successful manufacturer, and farmer, says:

"Although I have given during the past year considerably more than my usual contributions to charity and the church and its enterprises, and though I am making no money, only running the mills in hope of better times, I cannot refuse to say to you that on April 1st you may count on the fifty dollars asked for, under the conditions stated in your letter. Yours truly,

H. F. SCHENCK."

There are nineteen other first class lay moderators of Baptist Associations in our Convention. Some are farmers, some are merchants, some are doctors, some are lawyers, and some are in the school room, and when they all unite with the King's Mountain Moderator, there will then be added $—— to the Moderator's fund on State Missions. Farthing, and Hoffman, and Bridges, and Spainhour, and Gresham, and White, and Burrus, and King, and Smith (of Liberty), and Eddings, and Covington, and Albright, and Parham, and Smith (of Little River), Royal (of South River), and McKennon, and Bowers, and Thomas, and Aydlett are, like Moderator Schenck, greatly honored by their Associations, and are deeply interested in this proposition. How many of them can do like Moderator Schenck, I do not know, but my expectations are large. We will hear from them all soon. Moderator Royall (of the Central) is only one out of twenty three preachers in the Convention called to preside over a Baptist Association last year, and he says he can be counted on for fifty dollars. The other twenty-two will be heard from. Our moderators don't have much chance to speak in in the Associations, but now here is a splendid opportunity. They are all good men, and they know when to speak and what to say.

The big-hearted, "hard-shell" Treasurer of the Tar River Association says:

"I will see that you get fifty dollars from Scotland Neck by April 1st. I am so anxious for our work to go forward. I do pray you may find the other ninety-nine men to help you. Truly yours,

NOAH BIGGS."

The learned and successful teacher of Greek at Wake Forest College says:

"I think I can, with the aid of my churches, undertake to raise fifty dollars by April 1st. I will make my own contribution through the churches, and forward to Bro. Boushal as I collect.

Yours fraternally, W. B. ROYALL."

Chapel Hill's great Bishop says:

"I write to say that you may put down Chapel Hill church for fifty dollars on the conditions mentioned. Hope you may get it all. The Lord help you.

Fraternally, J. L. CARROLL."

The eloquent and venerable Bishop of Tryon Street church, Charlotte, says:

"My deacons voted to raise fifty dollars for the indebtedness of the Board within sixty days. Yours fraternally,

T. H. PRITCHARD."

Newbern's thoughtful and wise Bishop says:

"I shall try to secure you fifty dollars on the debt. Fraternally yours, RUFUS FORD."

A well equipped and consecrated country preacher says:

"Put me down for fifty dollars.

Fraternally yours,

I. P. HEDGPETH."

And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of the brother who has already sent a check for $250, of a number of others who say they will pay $50, of some who promise $40, some $30, some $25, some $10, and some $5. The time is short—only thirty eight days remain in which to make good the Convention's proposition. Fifty dollars now will be worth more than one hundred dollars at any other time. Who will help now?

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

Christian Assurance.

Sometime ago I noticed this subject touched upon in the RECORDER. I had hoped some of the brethren would write an article upon it; and now while still waiting, I merely wish to give a short Bible-reading on the subject.

How the believer may know that he is saved, and eternally saved:

1. Sins removed to the extreme. Psalms 103: 12.

2. Blotted out and the sinner redeemed. Isa. 44: 22; 43: 1, 25.

3. They shall not be mentioned to him, he shall live. Ezek. 33: 16; Mic. 7: 19.

4. Christ died for him, Rom. 5: 8, 9; and has become his advocate. Heb. 9: 24, 26, 28.

5. He was elected by God's love. John 3: 14—17, 36. He knows he believes as well as he knows he breathes; therefore he recognizes that

6. It is a present salvation. John 5: 24; 6: 47; 17: 2, 3, and 1 John 3: 1—6, 9. Then that

7. It is an eternal salvation. John 10: 27—29; 1 John 4: 9, 15—17, with 5: 1, 4.

8. Then he may know it. 1 Jno. 5: 9—13.

From these the reader may readily look up the references, and will find the blessed book full of assurance, notwithstanding the fact that a great many of God's children do not believe it. Truth remains truth whether we believe it or not.

W. J. HOPKINS.

Mooresville, N. C.

The Late Col. J. M. Heck.

Editor of Recorder:—I have read with sincere sorrow in the News-Observer-Chronicle of yesterday, the announcement of the death of Col. J. M. Heck. And I come, as one who loved and admired him, and ask permission to place my poor tribute to his memory in the columns of the RECORDER, his own church paper.

There are others, doubtless, who, out of the abundance of their hearts, will speak words of sympathy for his dear, loved ones, so greatly bereaved, and who will tell of the love and esteem in which he was held by those with whom he came in daily contact.

I shall speak of him as I knew him—the kind, attentive, and affectionate son. Having been a neighbor to Mr. and Mrs. George Heck, the parents of Col. J. M. Heck, and having lived for a short while as a member of their household, I bear willing testimony of his thoughtfulness and care for their comfort. Surrounding them with the comforts of a good home and its conveniences, he would visit them often, and always with some delicacy or reminder of his affectionate care.

After the death of his father, Col. Heck's conduct towards his step mother was all that a warm, generous heart could wish—attentive, affectionate, deferential. Many times have I heard his dear step-mother say, after one of his visits, "Jonathan was always a good boy." And before "Good-night" was said, she would have him take the Word of God and read aloud its precious promises and kneel in prayer around the family altar. This was always done. Knowing these facts, and seeing him in the family circle, it is not strange that I should admire him greatly.

His was the religion that was not boastful. His good deeds live in the hearts and memory of those who knew him best. He was content to do that which he believed to be his duty, and faithfully he performed it.

Truly he was a Christian in religion, giving of his means in a quiet way wherever he could do good. As a Methodist, and a member of a Methodist Sunday school, the writer has listened often to his voice in the Methodist Sunday-school, pointing the little ones to Christ.

Truly he was a great man. One to whom he had been a sincere friend wrote during his late illness: "He has been a father to the orphan. I know his crown will be full of stars." Beautiful tribute, and so well deserved.

To his family, I offer my heartfelt sympathy, and point them to their father's God for that solace which he alone can give.

A Phenomenal Success.

One of the most convincing proofs of the popularity of Miss Holley's (Josiah Allen's Wife's) new book, "Samantha at the World's Fair," is the announcement by the publishers (the Funk & Wagnalls Company, of New York,) that, although the work has scarcely been in print three months, the sales have reached the phenomenal figure of more than 60,000 copies. This is a success rarely attained in the publishing arena, and assures a triumph for the book almost unequaled.

Rev. J. L. Sproles Resigns.

Dear Recorder:—I write to announce that on last Sunday morning I gave my people notice that I desired to close up my work here by the first of April.

When I came to Shelby I found the church numbering 281 members. The Lord has greatly blessed us. We now number 409. I have, during my pastorate here of two years, received into the fellowship of the church 175. Actual increase, 125.

Our church here has contributed during my two years pastorate $4,000 to all objects. Practically there is no debt hanging over us. The Lord has greatly blessed his cause here. Our church now is stronger than ever before in its history. Although the work is difficult, yet a pastor has many godly, consecrated men and women to stand by and hold up his hands.

Since coming into the great Baptist State of North Carolina I have grown to love her every interest. If it is the Lord's will that I shall labor further in her midst, I shall be delighted. My plans for the future are not yet matured.

May the RECORDER ever live to advocate orthodox Baptist principles and best methods of work.

I am at a loss to part with the many noble men and women here in this part of the Master's vineyard, yet I feel that the work is now in such condition that I can well lay it down. God can and will raise up some other servant to take hold and carry it further. Truly, J. L. SPROLES.

Letter from Bro. Oates of the N. C. Baptist.

Clerks of Associations, Presidents of Baptist Institutions, Secretaries of Baptist Boards, and Baptists generally, will confer a favor on us by sending whatever records, reports, catalogues, &c., they may be able to spare.

Those having copies of the North Carolina Baptist of Vols. 1 and 2 will confer a favor by corresponding with us.

We will continue, not missing an issue, and replace our losses. We trust our subscribers will aid us.

Fraternally,

JOHN A. OATES, JR.
Managing Editor of N. C. Baptist.

The attention of RECORDER readers is directed to the new advertisement of Messrs. W. H. and R. S. Tucker and Co., leading dry-goods merchants of Raleigh. One excellent feature of their extensive business is that of selling dry-goods by mail. Write them for anything kept by a strictly first-class dry-goods establishment.

sailing across the broad ocean of time. The voyage is long and stormy. The winds are high and rude. The waters are tempest lashed and furrowed. The sails are often rent and torn. Many times it has seemed that the good ship would be lost. Perhaps Christians, as they have looked out on the dark prospects, have felt their hearts sink within them. But the ship cannot go down because Christ is on board. The voyage will continue until the anchors will be dropped into the waveless waters of the fair haven of peace, and the sails will all be reefed and furled by angel hands.

2. Christ in the church explains the moral power of the church. In 2 Cor. 10: 4, we read: "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." In our spiritual warfare we must not fight with the sword or any earthly weapon. We must not depend on force or cunning. The Krupp gun may batter down massive walls and sink iron-clads, but it cannot soften hard hearts and bring stubborn spirits into subjection to Christ. Physical force may compel the reluctant worshipper to drag his unwilling body into the outer court, but cannot bring the rejoicing soul into the holy of holies. If we are soldiers of Christ, let us gird ourselves with the truth, wear "the helmet of salvation," "the breastplate of righteousness," and the shoes made of "the preparation of the gospel of peace," bear "the shield of faith," and wield "the sword of the Spirit." The church, armed with its moral weapons, is equipped for a career of glorious conquest, and is more than a match for its proudest enemies. It publishes and circulates the truth. It proclaims that the "word of God" is the infallible "rule of faith and practice." It preaches the gospel. It teaches "the way of salvation." It holds up Jesus as the only Saviour, and exhorts sinners to seek refuge in him. It loves with the hearts, serves with the hands, and speaks with the voices of all in whom the divine Christ dwells. Believers "watch and pray," live and labor. The Holy Spirit works by and through them. The Lord answers their prayers, accepts their services, and gives success to their efforts. The unconverted are brought to repentance and salvation, and the growth of the church is assured. It is not strange that the church marches on from victory to victory. One fact accounts for it all, and that is Christ in the church.

Men sometimes declare that the influence of the church and the power of the pulpit are declining. It is said that they are wasting and waning forces. But I do not believe the statement. At the present time, when education is so cheap, when schools and teachers are so numerous, and when books and newspapers are so common, people do not look to the ministry for some kinds of instruction for which they formerly depended on the pulpit. But in the realm of moral truth and spiritual teaching, the pulpit has lost none of its ancient power. Never was the sanctified and consecrated pulpit more effective than it is to-day. If the Bible has a firm grip on the heart of the preacher, and he has a good grip upon the Bible, he will also have a sure grip on the people. The gospel is as truly "the power of God unto salvation" as it ever was; and every year the church is leading armies of souls to Christ. Never before were so many missionaries sent out, so many churches organized, so many schools established, and so much money contributed to the kingdom of Christ. As we look out on the lands and peoples we see that the church is advancing its lines and extending its influence in all directions. Germany is slowly reforming the Reformation; Sweden and Norway are stirred by the truth; Italy tires of the grievous yoke which it has worn so long; in Mexico the day dawns; in India thousands turn to the cross; in China ancient conservatism gives way; Japan turns its face towards the sunrise; the isles of the sea receive the gospel; and Ethiopia is beginning to stretch up its dark and scarred hands to God.

"The morning light is breaking,
The darkness disappears;
The sons of earth are waking
To penitential tears.
Each breeze that sweeps the ocean
Brings tidings from afar,
Of nations in commotion,
Prepared for Zion's war."

The power of the church to influence and uplift, to bless and save, cannot fail, because Christ is in the church. A generation ago an European author wrote a book in which he announced a new and strange theory. He insisted that the fervor and earnestness of the apostles gave the church an impulse which has not yet died out. He contended that the fiery zeal and enthusiasm of the apostles were all the capital that the church ever had, and that the church has been spending this capital for eighteen hundred years. The capital is not all spent yet, but it is greatly reduced. The church has been steadily losing its original strength ever since the days of the apostles; and when the impulse which it received from them shall be exhausted, and the moral capital which they left to it shall be spent, then the church will surely die. But there was a vast mistake in the calculation. The largest factor of all was left out. Christ was not considered. He is infinitely greater than the apostles; and he is in the church, therefore the church will live and conquer.

There is a legend which has come down to us from the early church. It may be only a creation of fancy, but it illustrates the truth. It is said that when Paul was in Greece a renowned philosopher met him in debate. It was a battle of giants. It was Titan against Titan. But the philosopher thought that he had gained a complete victory. He said: "You will hear but little more about this superstition. I have given it a death blow. It will die now." But years passed away, and the religion of Christ grew and spread. The philosopher was surprised. He said: "How is this? I thought that I had killed this new fangled religion. I proved that it is all folly. Now why doesn't it die?" When the philosopher was old and gray, his daughter was converted, and even his wife would creep through the gloom of night to meet with the despised company who praised Christ and prayed to him as their Lord. Then he was startled. He said: "I cannot understand this. Years ago I showed that the religion of these Christians was all nonsense and foolishness. I thought that I had killed it. And now here it is in my own family." When the philosopher was still older and grayer, he himself bowed at the foot of the cross for pardon. Then he said: "I understand it better now. I thought that I had beaten Paul. But now I see that it was not Paul that I was fighting, but Paul's Christ; and he has conquered me, and I will praise him for it forever." Christ is in the church, and no man can contend with him.

Julian, the Roman emperor, was a scholar, an author, and a philosopher. But he is known as Julian the Apostate, because, though a Christian mother had taught him that Christ was Lord and Saviour, he afterwards relapsed into paganism. He hated the gospel, persecuted believers, and called Jesus "The Nazarene." But at the early age of thirty-three he fell fatally wounded in a battle with the Persians; and as he was borne bleeding from the field he exclaimed, "O Nazarene, thou hast conquered; O Nazarene, thou hast conquered." The Nazarene always will conquer. You who are living without Christ are exposing yourselves to utter overthrow. You are fighting a hopeless battle. The chariot of salvation is moving along the highway of the ages. It will bear you to glory if you will rest yourself upon it. But if you oppose its progress, or stand in the way of it, it will roll over and crush you. Christ now holds out the golden scepter of his love. If you will come to him in penitence and faith he will accept and save you, but if you reject him you will have to go down beneath the iron scepter of his power. All must submit to him. "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little."

3. Christ in the church is the unfailing pledge of the complete triumph of the church. Here our appeal is to prophecy instead of history. Surely the glorious enlargement of the church is plainly foretold. Long ago, in the time of Moses, and when the Israelites were in the wilderness, the Lord said: "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Numbers 14: 21. Again, speaking through an inspired psalm-writer, he said: "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Psalms 2: 8. Isaiah was the sublimest of poets and prophets. In his upward flight he seemed to soar above all height, and in his majestic march to walk with the stars beneath his feet. He said: "And it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us his way, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Isaiah 2: 2, 3. Habakkuk said: "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Habakkuk 2: 14. John tells us that in one of the visions of Patmos he heard great voices in heaven saying, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ: and he shall reign forever and ever." Revelation 11: 15.

Many of the prophets were hated and persecuted. But they forgot their sorrows, when splendid visions of the future prosperity of the church floated before them. Sometimes they were in the deepest distress. As they sat upon the Mount of Vision, they looked out upon scenes of death and desolation. Their hearts were almost breaking within them. But suddenly they would catch a glimpse of the future glory of Christ's kingdom, and then their tears would cease to fall, their sighing would be turned into gladness, and they would rejoice aloud in their God and his promises to his people.

I know that we must be careful in our interpretation of unfulfilled prophecy. We must not suppose that we are prophets. We are liable to be vastly mistaken where we are very confident. But if the faithful prophets teach anything concerning the future, they surely declare that the church is destined to enjoy a period of unparalleled increase and enlargement. In stating this conclusion I make no attempt to settle the questions at issue between pre-millenarianism and post millenarianism. There are some things that I don't know. There are many questions which I can't settle. I always discount the opinions of a man who thinks that he knows everything. Once I heard an elaborate lecture on the resurrections and judgments. The lecturer told us how many resurrections there would be, who would rise in each resurrection, and what the results of each resurrection would be. He also told us how many judgments there would be, where each judgment would be held, who would be judged on each occasion, and what the ultimate results of all the resurrections and judgments would be. I found myself instinctively shrinking from a man who seemed to think that he knew everything. But when somebody in the audience asked a hard question, and the lecturer frankly confessed that he could not answer, I breathed a sigh of deep relief to find that, in the illimitable universe of God, there was one thing which that marvelous man did not know.

After making all reasonable allowance for mysteries which we cannot explain, is it not clear that the prophets have foretold a bright future for the church? Have they not promised that the church shall win mighty victories and make glorious advances, through the power of the gospel, either before the second coming of Christ, or else in connection with the final coming of the Lord? But how do we know that these far reaching promises will be fulfilled. I answer that there is one infallible guarantee of their complete fulfillment, and that is Christ in the church. All power in heaven and in earth is given unto him, and because he is in the church, all that he has promised will be brought to pass.

4. Christ in the church is the conclusive proof that his people shall dwell with him forever in the heaven of light and love. In the life that now is, they are always tried and tempted, often poor and lowly, and sometimes hated and persecuted. But there is an exalted destiny before them. "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (2 Cor. 4: 17.) Christ, when the shadows of the cross were falling darkly around him, said, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." (John 14: 23.) Pouring forth his longing soul in ardent prayer for his disciples, he said: "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me." (John 17: 24.) The heroic Paul, looking away from the mingled present to the untroubled future, said: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." (2 Cor. 5: 1.) The angel said to the inspired exile in Patmos: "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." (Rev. 7: 14–17.)

In the present life believers are often followed by mockery and ridicule. Enemies sneer and scoff at them. Their failings are denounced, and their weaknesses are ridiculed. But you have never seen them at home. Here they are "strangers and pilgrims." They are struggling on along a weary journey through an unfriendly world; and, of course, are often dust-stained and travel soiled. But just wait until you see them at home, robed in white, crowned with honor, and walking on gold; and then criticise them if you can. Now a practical question arises: Is there any proof that they will come to glory? Yes, there is. It is Christ in the church. He lives with them here, that they may live with him hereafter. Because he is in the church, they shall be glorified with him.

Now, brethren, I have tried to tell you that Christ is in the church; and that his presence and power in the church accounts for the preservation of the church, explains the moral influence of the church, and will secure the ultimate triumph of the church and the complete salvation of all believers. We are gathered here in the annual meeting of our State Convention. We have come from our scattered homes and our varied fields of toil—some from the cloud-capped mountains of the west, some from the fruitful hills of the central region, and some from the broad levels of the east—and are assembled here near the coast-line, where the continent loses itself in the ocean. We are also convened within a few miles of the historic spot where the first Baptist church in North Carolina was organized. One hundred and sixty-six years ago, a band of faithful men and women established a little church. The beginning was feeble, but the growth has been wonderful. We now number more than a quarter of a million. Truly "the Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad." May the divine Christ who was with the fathers be with the children also. May he preside in our Convention, uphold us with his grace, help us in time to come, and finally bring us to glory.

Look upon the bright side of your condition, then your discontents will disperse. Pore not upon your losses, but recount your mercies.—Watson.

A FRIEND

Speaks through the Boothbay (Me.) Register, of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of Ayer's Pills. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are in need of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills. They will do good."

MARLVILLE, N. C., Sept. 20, 1893.

Gentlemen: The chemicals I bought of you for making "Home Fertilizer" continue to give satisfaction. I only use it under cotton. You know I must think it good, or I should not have used it so long. This makes 16 or 17 years that I have been using it, and its use has made me able to pay for it cash, not on crop time.

Yours truly, THOS. S. EVANS.

The Denominational College as Bearing on Denominational Usefulness.

It is not the purpose of this article to discuss the merits or demerits of undenominational institutions. Baptists are not set for the tearing down or the building up of institutions that lie outside of their denominational life, although they may sometimes as individuals hold important relations with them. Whatever doubt may arise as to our duty to this or that institution of learning, no doubt obscures our duty to distinctly denominational schools. This obligation may be merely nominal and tacit, where the institution is simply a private enterprise with the Baptist name attached, or it may be strong and undoubted as where the school is established by the official action of the representatives of the churches. There is in such cases a kind of unwritten compact between the school and the churches, with the largest kind of freedom, however. Baptist boys and Baptist parents reserve the undisputed right to patronize whatever school they please. I wish to present some reasons why Baptist colleges deserve the patronage of Baptists.

1. As good teaching is done in Baptist schools as is done in any others. This is certainly true as a general rule. It is undoubtedly true of Wake Forest. Good teaching is not entirely dependent upon large endowment, fine buildings, fine apparatus, and crowds of students. These things are all advantages, but the man who occupies the professor's chair is more important than all these external appliances. He it is that is going to shape the mind and heart of your boy far more than all the surroundings of his college life, if he is a real teacher. Good teaching was done at Wake Forest when the broom-sedge and old-field pines grew between the red gullies of what is now a magnificent campus. Mark Hopkins could teach more from the end of a log than many men in the finest lecture hall. The best work for the poorest pay I know of is the teaching done by the college professor in the South. Sometimes it is poorly done, but more frequently it is nobly done, genuine teaching that tells. On the score of teaching, our Baptist colleges deserve patronage. And the helps for the teacher are increasing with improved apparatus.

2. It is a good thing for the denominational work in the future that Baptist boys should be in a Baptist atmosphere. This is not narrowness nor mere sectarianism. These educated Baptist boys are to be the pillars in our churches, the deacons, the leading spirits in associations and conventions. What an advantage for them to be thrown in their college days with sturdy Baptists of culture and power. Thus the denominational college is a weapon of great power in shaping the denominational life. Imagine the effect if all our deacons had been educated at Catholic schools.

3. Moreover, good will come from the association of the young layman and the young minister together in school life. Friendships thus started often continue in many helpful ways. It is a great mistake to consider the Baptist college simply a school for preachers. Great as this work is, it is not all that is involved in the scope of the Baptist college. We need educated laymen as really as we need educated preachers. Each reacts upon the other. The educated preacher stimulates the layman, and the educated layman stirs the preacher to greater effort.

4. In these days of pronounced and outspoken skepticism, no little good comes from being in a school where the Bible is not simply tolerated (let alone sinister infidelity in the professor's chair, or even open antipathy to Christianity), but where the Bible is sincerely believed, where the Bible is not apologized for as out of date, where no effort is made to explain away the supernatural element of the Scriptures.

Whether men know it or not, infidelity can be taught in almost any chair in a modern institution of learning as well as in a chair in a theological seminary. Not that the Bible rightly understood is inconsistent with science rightly understood. But we need the various sciences taught to our children by men who have sympathy with the Bible rather than by a sceptic or infidel. Scepticism wishes no better chance than to teach philosophy or any of the physical sciences or history from a sceptical standpoint. It is all done in the toning down or the shading or what is not said above suggested, &c.

5. The Baptist college is apt to have a wholesome moral atmosphere. This much is expected by the churches. It is usually true. Poor solace it is to a mother to get back her boy from college with mind well trained, but a moral wreck. This is not the boy she sent away from home. You have educated his mind, but his life is ruined. The Baptist college owes it to the parents to do the best that can be done for the moral training of the boys who are its pupils. No education that lets the boy tie himself up with bad habits, just so his mind is trained, is a good education. It is not the kind Baptist schools should give.

6. Many a boy is led to Christ at the Baptist college. The Christian boys find many ways of leading other boys to the Saviour whom they never owned at home. The college revival has been the epoch in many a boy's life. In the Baptist college there is a distinctly spiritual atmosphere. College life is cold enough at best with all the spiritual influences brought to bear upon it. But there is a decided and telling spiritual power in every Baptist college that stirs the life of some boys that feels its force and uplift.

7. The Baptist boy, educated at a Baptist college, ought to be no less efficient as a citizen of the State than if his education had been elsewhere. A Baptist boy with a well-rounded and developed mental, moral and spiritual discipline, is as high a type of the citizen as I know. If all these things are true, Baptist parents should seriously consider the question if the Baptist college has not the first claim on the boy, and if the Baptist college is not likely to do just the things for the education of the boy that are wanted. If so, the question of a few dollars one way or another ought not to be considered. Your boy is worth more to you and the world than a few dollars, or than any number of dollars.

True Genius.

I shall never forget almost the last thing Dr. E. G. Robinson said to us as we were about graduating from the theological seminary: "Gentlemen, the time has come when you must begin the duty and conflict of the work you have chosen; do not be troubled about your place, about whether or not you will ever be heard of. But be determined that, wherever you are, you do good work; and even though you may have a parish on the nether side of Kamtchatka, your good work will be heard of, and you will be wanted; for the world is on the perpetual lookout for good work." Thomas Carlyle said: "Genius is an immense capacity for taking trouble." George Eliot tells us "Genius is, at first, little more than a great capacity for receiving discipline." I read once how a certain prominent man, a Judge, wishing to have a rough fence built, sent for a carpenter and said to him: "I want this fence mended to keep out the cattle. There are some unplaned boards—use them. It is out of sight from the house, so you need not take time to make a neat job. I will only pay you a dollar and a half."

But the Judge, coming to look at the work, found the boards planed and the work finished with excellent neatness. The Judge thought the young man had done it that he might claim more pay, and somewhat angrily said: "I told you this fence was to be covered with vines. I do not care how it looks." "I do," said the carpenter. "How much do you charge?" asked the Judge. "A dollar and a half," said the man, shouldering his tools. "Why did you spend all that labor on the job, if not for the money?" "For the job, sir." "Nobody would have seen the poor work on it." "But I should have known it was there, sir. "No, I'll take only the dollar and a half,"—and he took it and went away.

Ten years afterward this carpenter was the successful competitor for a great contract the Judge had to give out—the man successful among the crowd of others seeking it. "I knew," said the Judge, telling the story afterwards, "we should have only good, genuine work from him; I gave him the contract, and it made a rich man of him."

I have walked and ridden in England along the roads on which William Carey, the great founder of modern missions, was wont to tramp, carrying to market his load of cobbled shoes. I had sat in his cobbler's shop, and explored the poor country villages in which a century ago he used to preach to little clumps of villagers, when he was an utterly unknown and stringently poor dissenting minister. Really I do not think you could crowd more than fifty people into the humble straw-thatched building which was his church. But when, in his later years, and when he had achieved so magnificently in India that his fame had become as wide as the world, he said to Eustace Carey: "Eustace, if they write my life, and say I am a genius, they will say falsely; but if they say I can plod they will tell the truth. Yes, Eustace, I can plod." And it was the painstaking plodding that did it all.

When Dr. Moffat came from Africa he was altogether surprised at the welcoming acclaim he met for the splendid Christianizing and civilizing work he had been doing there among the Bechuanas. In his surprise he said: "I never thought, when I was working in South Africa, to see a day like this. I simply did the work of the day in the day, and never thought that any one in England would think of me or it." But they did. You cannot hide, even in Africa, thorough days' works.

"If thou has yesterday thy duty done,
And thereby cleared firm footing for to day,
Whatever clouds may dark to-morrow's sun,
Thou shalt not miss thy solitary way."

"In the Observatory."

BY M. P. M.

"THAT CAIN AND ABEL MYTH."

If the Associated Press is to be believed, there is a "furor" in Chicago over a lecture by Dr. Harper of the Chicago University on the story of Cain and Abel in which he says that it is on a par with the "Trojan horse" and some other ancient myths. Dr. Henson has on his "war paint" and "blood in his eye," and will investigate. It appears to a man "off at the forks of the creek" that investigation might have been made with propriety some years ago, but the trustees, of whom the Doctor is one, did not seem to think so, until now this Scripture belittler has become a necessity to the University, and the trustees will find that Mr. Harper is very much like the mythical Trojan horse himself—he is so far into the great temple of learning that the whole thing will come tumbling down some of these "odd comeshorts." It may be said of this modern Ajax as Festus said of Paul, "Much learning doth make thee mad."

It is really a picture over which angels might weep—the greatest of all public spirited men lavishing money on what might become the greatest school of the age. This wealth seems now destined to become a curse rather than a blessing to the cause of righteousness and truth. We will not take too gloomy a view of the case. It is to be hoped that there are enough men who love truth on the board or trustees to see that such teaching is stopped or that he be discharged.

"A PERTINENT QUESTION."

Our neighbor of the "Old Dominion" can ask some very interesting questions and make some forcible remarks; but one of its most pertinent questions is, "How shall we improve our methods of Baptist work"? But who is to answer such a question? No one seems willing to try, and yet it is a question which needs to be answered and a problem which needs to be solved. Our Home Field, in a recent issue, gives some "startling statistics" along the line of the un-utilized force in our Southern Baptist Convention. In Missouri, not more than four hundred out of sixteen hundred churches, and in the greater State of Kentucky, eight hundred out of fourteen hundred and fifty churches make contributions to missions, and 40,000 white Baptists give all that is given in the State, while 110,000 give nothing! Dr. Gibson of Georgia says there are 80,000 white Baptists in that State who give nothing for missions. We have no means of knowing how bad it is in our own State, but as North Carolina has more white Baptists in it than any State in the Union except Kentucky, and as we give less for Foreign and Home Missions than Kentucky, or Georgia, or Missouri does, it is fair to presume that there are 100,000 Baptists in this State who do not give anything to missions. What shall be done about it? What is the remedy for this great failure among our people? With our church polity there is no way to compel the people. We cannot assess them as do our Methodist brethren. So what shall we do? One thing ought to be done: the pastors of our churches ought to be reached and brought to see the necessity of the case and induced, if possible, to see every member of his church or churches, and lay the obligations upon them in private. If after making an earnest effort along that line and could not reach the membership, then they should inaugurate a campaign of discipline and exclude from the church all those who cannot be induced to make contribution to the work. That might be considered severe, but severe measures are necessary sometimes.

"THAT SUNDAY-SCHOOL EDITORIAL"

I read your editorial on "Sunday schools" in a recent issue with more than "passing interest," possibly because I have come to think much along the same line myself in recent months, and also had occasion to speak of the trouble in our late Convention. Very much of what is called "teaching" in our modern Sunday-schools is nothing, if not a farce. It is not entitled to the dignity of the name. You "hit the nail on the head," that is to say, "you touched the weak point" in our Sunday-schools when you said, "Our great need is teachers." It is astonishing and painful beyond expression—the inefficiency of our Sunday-school teachers. This, so far as my observation goes—and that has been quite extensive since 1882, when I carried the burden of a secretaryship in the Sunday-school work in Missouri. I began to realize then that our greatest need in the Sunday-school work was "a normal" for the purpose of training teachers. I am now convinced that every well regulated school should have a normal department where an experienced and efficient teacher should give all his time to the training of teachers.

Another point you mention is pregnant with importance just now. "The difficulty of holding the boys and girls when they get too large for parents to make them go to Sunday-school, and yet not large enough to take a lively interest in the preaching." In mentioning that difficulty, you announce one of the most potent arguments in favor of young people's societies—something to tide them over that "goslin period," and I know of nothing more suitable to such a purpose than such societies. We have all seen many shipwrecks in that period of life, and I have no doubt that it was that condition of things which first suggested the formation of young people's societies. I am as fully convinced of the necessity of the one as of the other.

The annual meeting of the National Farmers' Alliance was recently held in Topeka, Kansas. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Marion Butler of North Carolina; Vice-President, J. L. Gilbert of California; Secretary and Treasurer, D. P. Duncan of South Carolina. The salary of the President is $5,000 a year.

Fragments of a Journey.

BY N. B PITTMAN.

I spent a Sunday in Greensboro. C. A. G. Thomas delivered the best sermon I have ever heard on systematic beneficence. I enjoyed preaching to his congregation.

I wanted to go to Raleigh and to Wake Forest. When I visit North Carolina again, I'll widen my plans so as to center at Wake Forest College.

I enjoyed preaching at Mt. Airy. Bro. Pruett has done excellent work at Mt. Airy. He has resigned. The church is strong. Here is a fine opportunity for the minister whom the church may call.

Rev. A. E. C. Pittman is my half-brother. He was ordained at Rennert in January. He makes the third son of Rev. A. R. Pittman in the ministry. A. McA. is in South Carolina. I am in Missouri. A. E. C. is at Plymouth, N. C.

At Lumberton I assisted in the ordination of Bro. J. O. Gough. He is a fine man full of good promise. Pastor F. H. Martin is in favor with the people.

My father was pastor in Lumberton from 1868 to 1878. Five male members were in the church in 1868. When he retired from that pastorate there were many members who were well off financially and spiritually, and there was a good sum on hand for the new meeting house in which the people now assemble for worship.

I preached twice at Ashpole church where I was converted. My father began his ministry here in 1859. Since that time Elder P. C. Connelly was pastor two years and Rev. J. A. Smith about four years. With these exceptions, my father has been the minister at Ashpole since 1859. He was born and reared in the neighborhood of the church.

It refreshes me to go to this old church. Here is my mother's grave. Here is the sweet and sad sanctuary of my memory. God bless the people there forever.

I enjoyed preaching at Rennert. Good people gathered there at McAlpine's Grove church to hear the gospel.

Twice I preached in Chattanooga—once in Central church of which the eloquent R. D. Haymore is pastor; once at the First of which gifted C. G. Jones is pastor. I also met W. A. Simmons of the Second church. These three pastors are native North Carolinians. C. G. Jones married Miss Rosa Jones, a daughter of my dear friend, Rev. F. H. Jones of Chatham, Va. I spent many happy hours in Chattanooga.

With best wishes for the BIBLICAL RECORDER, I close this hurried sketch of a happy journey.

Notes from the Beulah

Bro. Thomas, as is his custom, is keeping things on the move in his church in Greensboro. Being on the sick list at our last Union, he could not favor us with his presence, and we missed him very much. Our next Union meets with Shiloh, and as that church is centrally located in the Association we are looking for a large crowd and a good time.

Reidsville church, when last heard from, was still without a pastor; but a live church like that will hardly remain long without a leader. With such brethren, however, as Rominger, Allen, Alderman, and so on, they can keep up preaching services very well without a preacher.

Bro. Tucker of the Ruffin church, one of our most active and energetic brethren, is on the lookout for a pastor. The truth is, a part of our work in the Association is in such bad shape, it is difficult to get some of our vacant churches supplied. But we are working to get things in better shape, and hope that it will not be long now before we can get another pastor in the Association.

While pastors on other fields were securing their good things during Christmas times, this scribe was too. The ball began to roll just before Christmas, when he was made the recipient of a first rate overcoat. From that time on various things good and useful were given. Just a few days ago a beautiful quilt made by many friends, was brought in. Well, for all these things we feel thankful; and our friends do not know how much sunshine they, in this way, bring into our home and hearts. May the Lord bless them all. Our congregations in Milton are good. Prayer-meetings unusually well attended. Just entered upon my seventh year here.

The cry of hard times is still heard in the land, and so far as money matters are concerned, it is not a meaningless cry in this section. Money is very scarce, and will remain so until another crop is made; for the present crop of tobacco, the money crop of this section, is very sorry, and will bring but little money, not much more than enough to pay for making it. It is a good time for the Lord's people to make sacrifices for his cause.

You are putting lots of good things on the first page of the RECORDER. The times need and badly need, fair and honest discussion of the living questions. May the Lord guide you.

Sanford Funds Received.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Please allow me to acknowledge through your columns the following amounts, which have been given to help build a church in Sanford:

L. Richardson and W. E. Wilburn, $1.00 each; O. L. Stringfield, J. H. Lamberth, J. A. Beam, D. C. Murchison, T. H. Pritchard, I. T. Newton, W. H. Edwards, J. A. Stradley, Leon Lame, R. C. Thagard, W. E. Hall, W. H. H. Lawhon, W. A. Smith, E. E. Lamberth, A. T. Lamberth, L. R. Dixon, J. P. Boyd, Mrs. W. R. Hunter, Miss Mamie Bell and Miss Lizzie Thagard, 50 cents each.

The Baptists here are very weak. We are struggling to build a home and support a pastor. All contributions will be thankfully received and acknowledged through the RECORDER. Brethren, help us.

Moneys Received for the Advance Church Lot.

Dear Recorder:—Please credit in your paper the parties and amounts below for the Advance church lot:

Sam Foster, $5.00; Rev. S. F. Conrad, 2.00; A. W. Early, 1.00; Mrs. Rev. L. M. Curtis, E. C. Harrell, C. W. Mitchell, each 50 cents—1.50, A. G. Bazemore, R. J. Dunnigu, W. D. Hoggard, each 25 cents—75 cents; E. L. Rice, 10 cents, Total, $10.35.

Thank you, brethren and sister.

Brethren, this is an important mission point. Who else will help? We have not commenced the house yet, and we cannot do much without one. We cannot afford to go in debt. J. B. NEWTON.

A sensible woman will not fail to keep a bottle of Salvation Oil on hand for cuts and bruises. It is unrivaled. 25 cts.

Bob Burdette bids us remember that the good things in the world are always cheapest. Spring water costs less than whisky; a box of cigars will buy two or three Bibles; a State election costs more than a revival of religion; you can sleep in church every Sabbath morning for nothing, but a nap in a Pullman car costs you $2 every time; the circus takes 50 cents, the theater $1, but the missionary box is grateful for a penny; the horse race scoops in $2,000 the first day, while the church bazaar lasts weeks, works twenty five or thirty of the best women in America nearly to death, and comes out $40 in debt.—Onward.

You can buy a chimney to fit your lamp that will last till some accident happens to it. Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass" is that chimney.

You can have it—your dealer will get it—if you insist on it. He may tell you it costs him three times as much as some others. That is true. He may say they are just as good. Don't you believe it—they may be better for him; he may like the breaking.

La Grippe Again.

The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.

ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.

In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe. L. STUART.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 13, 1893.

About two years ago I had a severe spell of 'grip,' and was induced by my relatives to try Royal Germetuer. It soon cured the 'grip.' MRS. GEO. TISDALE.

SWEETWATER, TENN., June 23, 1893.

My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health.

J. T. BARROW,
Pastor First Baptist Church.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of Germetuer relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

Rev. J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 31, 1893: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

Johnston County Items.

The death of Sister Graves has made a vacant place in our church service, the Sunday-school, and missionary society. The members of this happy family are scattered since her death, and the home of Bro. D. H. Graves appears lonely now.

Since there are no "happenings," but things run according to the ordering or permission of unerring wisdom, how much we need grace while passing through this mystery to enable us to say, "Even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight."

Rev. F. H. Poston will preach for the brethren at Princeton this year, and the writer will go to Four Oaks. We will have a change now and again, though the Book tells us not to "meddle with those given to change." Prov. 24: 21. This may have no true application here, and we do not wish to be found guilty of "handling the word of God deceitfully." If this text has reference to the change in question, then "we" are guilty, and do not know how to cease meddling with ourselves! Possibly the term "given," in the text quoted, means to caution against allowing the desire for change to get possession so as to cause changes to become injuriously frequent. We believe our change will be for the good of the Master's cause in the county.

The little church at Wilson's Mills deserves credit. The church has had much less aid from our Mission Board than some other points. The membership is composed largely of mechanics and women, and only twenty-seven in number; and yet this "handful" did more for their pastor, missions, the poor, church building and the Orphanage, last year, than did some other churches with a fourfold membership and wealthier members. "These things ought not so to be," that is to say, the abler-to do churches ought not to lag behind the less able-to do in work and giving. This little church is out of debt, has two well attended weekly prayer-meetings, and a good "all-the-year" Sunday-school. The members seem to be daily growing in spiritual life, and this now small membership gives promise to become a large and very useful body in the distant future. A want of sympathy (outside) may retard its numerical growth, but their manner of life and work will tell "after many days."

This Johnston county field is a good one for much earnest labor, and we have but few workers. A quiet work of grace is manifest, however, and grace usually does its work quietly.

According to reports made to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, 53,991 conversions and 49,010 accessions to the churches have occurred in 117 counties of the States of Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Texas and Arkansas during the past five months.

Chickens Hatched by Steam.

A few years ago the suggestion that chickens would ever be hatched by steam would have brought down no end of ridicule on the head of the prophet, and yet to day, steam is recognized by experts to be the most efficient means of incubation. A clear illustration of this is found in the well-known Excelsior Incubator, manufactured by George H. Stahl of Quincy, Ill.

The original copy of the Declaration of Independence has been withdrawn from public exhibition in the State Department Library, at Washington, and placed in a tin box for filing with the archives of the Government. This was done because of the rapid fading of the text of the declaration, and the deterioration of the parchment on which it is engrossed, from exposure to the light and on account of its age. In lieu of the original document a fac simile will be placed on exhibition.

SUNDY—SHAW—On Feb. 8th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. J. M. Holleman, Mr. John S. Sundy of Titusville, Florida, and Miss Lizzie K. Shaw of Lillington, N. C.

DIED.

BAITY—Died at his home, Cross Roads Church, Yadkin county, N. C., on Feb. 6th, 1894, Mr. William D. Baity, aged sixty-five years. The deceased was a consistent member of the Baptist church, and much beloved by all who knew him.

PARKS—Sister Parks, wife of Col. Felix Parks of Wilkes county, departed this life Jan. 16th, 1894. She was born April 25th, 1818, and joined the Baptist church at Oak Forrest, and lived a consistent Christian to her death. She bore her long affliction of two years with great patience and Christian fortitude. She was a kind and loving wife, a tender mother, always giving good advice to her children, and was a faithful attendant at her church. She leaves an aged and afflicted husband, four sons and two daughters to mourn this deep affliction. May the Lord bless this providence to their good, and supply her absence by the abundance of his spirit and grace.

The burial services took place on the 16th inst., R. W. Wooten officiating.

GASKILL—Our brother Anson Gaskill departed this life at his home in Carteret county, February 4th, 1894, aged about sixty-five years. He leaves a wife and several children and many friends to mourn his loss. He was converted in the early part of his life and joined the Methodist church, but becoming dissatisfied, three years ago he joined the Smyrna Baptist church. He led an honest, pious Christian life. We feel that we have lost a good brother, but believe our loss is heaven's gain.

By request from his family, his funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. Y. Everton, a Methodist minister. His remains were interred in the family graveyard near his home.

E. C. BOBBITT.

HENRY—It is my sad duty to chronicle the fact that death has once more entered the home of Sister Matisha Henry of Lilesville, and has taken away another of her beloved children. This sorely bereaved mother has been called upon to give up three of her children within seven months. She has, within the last seven years carried to the "village of the dead" a devoted husband and six interesting children. How thick and fast the strokes have fallen, but with what Christian fortitude she bears them!

Charles Lee Henry died Jan. 21st, in the twenty-fourth year of his age. Something more than two years before his death, he professed religion and joined the Lilesville Baptist church. From the very first day of his Christian life he gave promise of great usefulness. His devotion to his church and consecration to his Master were "known and read" of all who knew him. A few months after his conversion he was instrumental in organizing a weekly prayer meeting in his church, which has been the means of developing the spirituality of the church in a wonderful degree. He was elected clerk of the church soon after joining it, and efficiently performed the duties of that office until forced by failing health to resign.

Just a little more than a year before his death he married Miss Lelia Byrd, who, after one short year of happiness, is left with a broken heart. May God comfort the young widow, the heart-broken mother, and the sorrowing brothers and sisters. It is refreshing to know that they all have the Christians hope to sustain them, and while they cannot have their loved ones back, they "can go to them."

PASTOR.

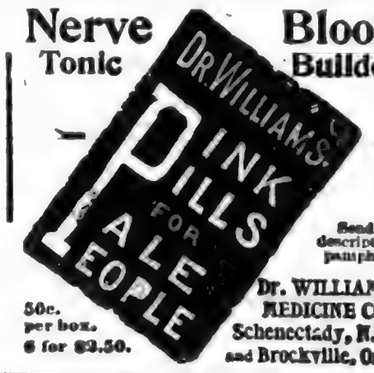
Tribute of Respect.

1881—1894. JONATHAN MCGEE HECK.

Our brother, J. M. Heck, Superintendent of this School from 1872 to 1875, and afterwards for the years 1880 and 1881, is not, "for God took him." He was born May 5th, 1831, and died in Philadelphia, Pa., at 11:30 o'clock a. m., Feb. 10th, 1894. His body was brought to this city, and at 11 o'clock a. m. last Lord's Day, was followed by many friends from the "Union Depot" to his former residence on Blount Street, thence at 4 o'clock p. m., it was borne to this church, where, in the presence of a large congregation, the funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Dr. J. W. Carter, assisted by Drs. T. E. Skinner and C. E. Taylor. At 5 o'clock his body was laid to rest in Oakwood Cemetery, to await the resurrection morn. Around the open grave many of this School sang, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," the grave was filled, flowers were placed upon it; and, then, the large number of people there gathered, from all the walks of life, turned in sadness to their homes. They could do no more.

Resolved 1*st*, That in the death of our brother, J. M. Heck, this School has lost a wise and faithful leader, friend and helper.

Resolved 2*nd*, That we extend to his bereaved family our deepest sympathies, and pray that the Master, whom our brother loved and served, may now give to each of them the consolations of his sustaining grace.



Resolved 3*rd*, That a copy of these statements and resolutions be made a part of the records of this School, and a copy sent to our sister, Mrs. J. M. Heck.

COMMITTEE.

The foregoing tribute was submitted by Rev. Dr. C. Durham in behalf of the committee composed of the Class to which the late Bro. Heck belonged, and adopted by the First Baptist Sunday-school of Raleigh, Feb. 18th, 1894.

Important to Farmers!

Yes, it is very important to all farmers to plant the best and earliest seed potatoes they can buy. To do this, they must buy the EARLY SIX WEEKS, the earliest now in cultivation. If farmers would plant this potato they would always get their crop in market in time to get seven and eight dollars per barrel. We planted this potato for the last two seasons, and selling our crop for nine dollars per barrel. This potato grows so quick the Esquimau would almost have time to mature a potato crop if he planted the Early Six Weeks. In the South two full crops can be grown in one season. Its size is large and handsome. We have one thousand barrels for sale. One lb. 40 cts.; 3 lbs. $1.00; by mail, postpaid. Peck, $1.10; bushel, $3.00; barrel, $7.00; by freight or Express. Send your order in at once before they are all sold, and give them a trial. Address all orders to the Worth While.

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows along like a song,
But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong;
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years.
And the smile that is worth the praises of earth
Is the smile that shines through tears.

It is easy enough to be prudent
When nothing tempts you to stray;
When without or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away.
But it is only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth the honor of earth
Is the one that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen,
Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is cumbered to-day;
They make up the item of life.
But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile,
It is these that are worth the homage of earth,
For we find them but once in a while.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The Rubbish Keeping Habit.

I visited an old house some time ago where everything wore a look of decay and ruin. Having occasion to go into the garret with a member of the family, I discovered an immense pile of rubbish, composed of broken old chairs, frames of broken mirrors, dilapidated washstands, ragged bedquilts which had been carefully washed and laid away, and a rusty and useless stove. A chest in one corner was filled with torn books which had neither beginning nor end, photographs from which the heads had been torn, a broken-backed and dog-eared album, half sheets of music, and pasteboard boxes, some without covers, and other covers without boxes.

"For what in the world are you saving all this rubbish?" I queried. "Why don't you sell the rusty stove for old iron, and the bedquilts to the ragman, and make a bonfire of the contents of this chest?"

The lady lifted her hands in protestation. "O you destructive creature!" she cried. "All these things may come handy some day. I always believe in saving everything. These pasteboard boxes, for instance, are handy in case you want to send away a photograph, and the old bedquilts would be just the thing to smother flames with in case of a fire. There is nothing like economy, you know."

"But this is not economy," I insisted. "Were you to sell all this rubbish to the ragman and the old iron man, it would bring you money enough to buy all the photograph envelopes you desire, with ready pasteboard backs, and hand-grenades with which to extinguish fire."

"I never heard of those things," she said.

"No," I replied, "people who have a mania for accumulating old truck never do keep up with the times."

The mind which is bent on saving a lot of useless and shabby old things becomes shabby and useless itself. It becomes incapacitated for earning and procuring the new and useful.

I once had a housekeeper of a country home complain that she had no room in the pantry to place her pans and dishes properly. I remarked to her that the two upper shelves were loaded with old medicine bottles, empty pill boxes, broken flat-irons and noseless teapots, and that she had better dig a hole in the ground and bury the whole mass, leaving room for her necessary articles. But she declared herself to be "too saving" to perform such and act. "Empty bottles often are handy," she said, "and I intend to have the flat-irons and teapots mended some day."

"But you never will," I said. "People who get into the habit of saving broken trash never get it mended. And you will never need more than two bottles out of that score. You would be able to think more clearly, and your mind would not become so tired over your work, if you had those two shelves cleared off. Unconsciously to yourself, this cluttered condition and the way you are obliged to crowd things in consequence, tax your mental powers."—New England Farmer.

A "Run-down"

and "used-up" feeling is the first warning that your liver isn't doing its work. And, with a torpid liver and the impure blood that follows it, you're an easy pray to all sorts of ailments. That is the time to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, to repel disease and build up the needed flesh and strength, there's nothing to equal it. It rouses every organ into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, braces up the whole system, and restores health and vigor.

For every disease caused by a disordered liver or impure blood, it is the only guaranteed remedy. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

$500 is offered, by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for an incurable case of catarrh. Their remedy perfectly and permanently cures the worst cases.

Naming the Baby.

Since the day in which the mother of the race cried over the head of her little boy, "Call his name Seth," naming the baby has been the prerogative of her daughters. Who does not sympathize with poor Katy, the heroine of Stepping Heavenward, as she sighed, "I expected to call the baby Raymond, but it seems that there has been a Jotham in the family ever since the memory of man!" It does seem hard that relatives should insist upon a young mother's handing down the heirloom of an ugly name. Yet it is quite as well not to offend the powers that be, especially if the little one's financial interests will suffer thereby. The gratitude of the husband when family customs are kept up rather than derided is of itself a sufficient reward for the sacrifice.

The next snare lying in wait for the mother might be called extraordinary combinations—the desire to atone in the middle name for the shortcomings of the first. Miss Woolson gives us an illustration of this in the case of Miss Macks, whose name was Ethelinda Faith, Mrs. Macks having thus combined euphony and filial respect—"the first title being her tribute to æsthetics, the second her tribute to the memory of her mother."

In choosing the Christian name it is well to consider the surname, its length, significance, and associations. The first day at school has been made more trying than need be because thoughtless parents have increased the conspicuousness of a peculiar and uncommon name by adding to it some unusual title, sure to be twisted into an annoying nickname.

The poetical nomenclature of literature and the prose of college catalogues and visiting cards do not harmonize. For this reason, if for no other, the custom of bestowing upon children the romantic titles of the heroes and heroines of fiction is to be deplored. Uncle Tom's Cabin has stood sponsor for too many Evas and St. Clares.

Long ago the question was asked, "What's in a name?" We answer, revelation of ancestry and a suggestion of individuality. Looking over the records in the family Bible, one can discover if the tendency of the race has been religious, political, or clannish, and what public characters have been its ideals. The good sense or the folly of the parents is exhibited in the Christian names of their children.

Dickens often speaks of the effect upon himself of the names of his associates. We expect a Solomon to know something, a Hercules to be strong, and are disappointed if a Lily is not fair. For this reason it is quite as well to avoid names that call for a certain harmony of temperament, physique, and career.

Plain manly and womanly names that make no pretensions are always pleasant to hear and speak. It is decidedly better taste to choose English in preference to foreign titles.—Helen Jay, in Harper's Bazar.

How to Train Children.

Be very vigilant over thy child in the April of his understanding, lest the frosts of May nip his blossoms. While he is a tender twig, straighten him; whilst he is a new vessel, season him; such as thou makest him, such commonly shalt thou find him. Let his first lesson be obedience, and the second shall be what thou wilt. Give him education in good letters, to the utmost of thy ability and his capacity. Season his youth with the love of his Creator, and make the fear of his God the beginning of his knowledge. If we have an active spirit, rather rectify than curb it; but reckon idleness among his chiefest faults. As his judgment ripens, observes his inclination and tender him a calling that shall not cross it. Forced marriages and callings seldom prosper. Show him both the mow and the plow, and prepare him as well for the danger of the skirmish as possess him with the honor of the prize.—Quarles.

For Headache and Indigestion,

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

A prominent physician of Buffalo, N. Y., says of it: "I have severe headaches, and it relieves them. I am fond of the pleasures of the table, and as a consequence of my indulgence there, I have to pay the penalty. It divides the penalty with me. Indeed it is an indispensable article to me."

Appreciation.

Each human soul is like a cavern full of gems. The casual observer glances into it through some cranny, and all looks dark and sullen and forgotten. But let light enter into it; lift a torch up to the walls, let God's sunlight fall into it and flood its open recesses, and lo! it will flash with crystals and with amethysts, and each separate crystal will quiver under the touch of brightness with a transporting discovery of its own nature. If souls do not shine before you, it is because you bring them no light to make them shine. Throw away your torch of conceit and hatred, lift up to them the light of love, and lo! they will arise and shine; yea, flame and burn with an undreamt of glory.—Canon Farrar.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the alimentary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being always attended with marked benefit.

Prayer is the door forever open between earth and heaven. Sooner than sound can reach a human ear through this lower atmosphere, the longing desire of the spirit rises to the heart of the eternal Friend. Whether we believe it or not, we are living in an invisible world, where our wishes are understood before our words are spoken.—Lucy Larcom.

Distribution of Baptists.

Dr. Clifford gathers from the Handbook of the Baptist Union that the Baptist membership is distributed as follows throughout the world: In Europe, outside Great Britain and Ireland, we have 84,694 members, but including them, the figures mount up to over 415,000. In Asia, there are 96,639, India, Burmah and Assam claiming the whole number, excepting some 7,000. Africa contains 3,357, Australia 16,580, South America 419, and the West Indies and Central American Islands, 43,453, and North America adds 3,431,048, so that the registered Baptist brotherhood is close on four millions.—The Watchman.

A. Golden, Druggist, Birmingham, Ala., writes: "Please publish some of the testimonials I have sent you for Japanese Pile Cure." Sold by Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C.

Every great sorrow is in a certain sense a lonely sorrow. It drives a man into the fastness of himself. No friends, however near and dear, can quite penetrate to the sacred chamber of his grief. They may come so near that he can catch the sound of their footsteps, and get a vague, sweet comfort out of the sense of their cheering him up, whispering, "Peace! peace!" Only Christ can do that. He is the one guest who can enter the sacred chamber of a great sorrow. The soul's sense of loneliness yields to him. The heart's sensitive reserve gives way. Christ enters, and thenceforth sorrow takes on a new meaning and aspect.—Episcopal Recorder.

LOOK OUT—for breakers ahead when pimples, boils, carbuncles and like manifestations of impure blood appear. They wouldn't appear if your blood were pure and your system in the right condition. They show you what you need—a good blood-purifier; that's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It carries health with it. All Blood, Skin, and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. It invigorates the liver, purifies and enriches the blood, and rouses every organ into healthful action. In the most stubborn forms of Skin Diseases, such as Salt-rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas, Carbuncles, and kindred ailments, and with Scrofula in every shape, and all blood-taints, if it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. And that makes it the cheapest blood-purifier sold.

A FEW years ago Gladstone, Bismarck and Blaine were the lights in public life of three great nations. To-day Blaine is dead, Bismarck retired, and Gladstone in the afterglow of his most glorious career. Three great men, the veritable kings of their time, are all but passed from the scenes which they have done no little to create. And as it appears now there is no one to take their places. The United States needs a great man now, a Moses to lead it from the toils of doubt and change, if it ever has been in need of one. England, while not in immediate need as a nation, will sadly miss Gladstone as a mediator between the throne and the subject; and Germany has not yet replaced the Iron Chancellor, despite the personal ambition of the young Emperor to assume at once that and his own proper position.

There have been but few generations of men in which some man did not rise high above his fellows in public life; but we have reason to think that the present in the United States will be one of the few exceptions. Whither shall we look for our great man—a greater, indeed, than Blaine? Cleveland is either very great or very rash to have taken the steps of his second administration; and he has yet to manifest abiding greatness. There is no great man in his cabinet, or under his appointment. McKinley is the idol of certain classes, but they are too limited to establish his claim to greatness; Reed is a partisan leader of undoubted ability, but he makes no higher pretensions; Sherman is a man of experience, but that is all that can be said of him; and Harrison has been too easily forgotten. Voorhees, Hoar, Gorman, Gray, Crisp, Wilson and a score of others have some pretensions to greatness, but none of them stand out prominent—individually great.

The fact is, all our men in public life fall far short of the standard of greatness set by a recent historical biographer. It is a day of the mediocre. Men are narrowed and stinted to stand becomingly on platforms, the man above his party is ostracised, the independent is a despised "mugwump," originality is treachery. We do not think that such a state of affairs necessarily presages evil. Platforms are good enough, if they are not ambiguous, and those who stand on them keep their pledges. A leader may mislead, but a platform can be studied by the people, and if it is based on wrong principles the people will have only themselves to blame; a leader is usually idolized, but a platform is regarded as a temporary instrument, designed for a specific purpose, and useless after its purpose has been accomplished. We need a leader now because of peculiar conditions. In an ideal State a leader would be impossible, and even now, integrity, decision of character and determination will supply our need.

SEVERAL weeks ago we remarked that notwithstanding the boasted grandeur of our Federal Constitution, it was not above misconstruction and misinterpretation by the highly intelligent as well as the uncultured and uneducated. Hon. Lafe Pence of Colorado confirms our observation in his recent woman-suffrage bill. Mr. Pence holds that according to the Constitution women are citizens of the United States, and have equal right of voting with men. His bill confers the right of suffrage upon women by law, instead of by amendment to the Constitution, as the vast majority of the male population think necessary. The well-known fourteenth amendment to the Constitution declares that a part of its representation in Congress shall be taken away from that State which denies suffrage to any of its male citizens, and the fifteenth amendment, equally well-known, provides that the right of suffrage shall be withheld from no one on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. In the fourteenth amendment no penalty is provided for the State that denies the right of suffrage to its female citizens; thus the State may do so with impunity. In the fifteenth, sex is not one of the specific conditions of the right, and if it is not a specific condition of the right of suffrage, then that right may be denied. Thus it would appear that the brilliant Colorado Congressman is egregiously ignorant of our Federal Consittution. But we have no idea that he is not aware of its every provision, and has studied the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments thoroughly. His fault is in his method of interpretation. He chooses to think, and he is not alone, that those prohibitive conditions not specifically expressed, however clearly they are implied, should not be considered; and it is true that in no instance does the Constitution say that women shall not vote. That it implies that they shall not, cannot be denied by any one acquainted with the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. Moreover, it is patent that in the days of Jefferson and the Constitutional Convention, women never dreamed of the ballot as a means of dominion, but were content to rock the cradle, and thus rule the world in a less ostentatious, but far more certain and an equally more honorable way. That they will have to be content with this latter means of dominion for many years yet, is not doubted, save by dreamers and overzealous female-suffragists.

A WOMAN, and a resident of Colorado at that, recently said in our hearing that, were the right of suffrage allowed the female half of our population, the purity of politics would be assured. It is not remarkable that she thinks so; yet her opinion is scarcely less than theoretical, and whatever of fact in the matter that has as yet been demonstrated, is decidedly contrary to her theory. It is a question with us that we would not desire to have settled in our community; for, while we are satisfied as to the politics and their impurity, we are not positive that their purification would be hastened by woman-suffrage. We are sure they would become more impure in the South, because certain classes of women would vote and certain classes would not, the voters being, with few exceptions, the uneducated and the thriftless. Whatever may be said of men, there must be caste among women; and the destruction of caste by the equality of the ballot would be distasteful and dishonoring to some classes, and would elevate none. Need we add that under these conditions the ballot would be corrupted, good women wronged, and civilization retarded? Of the North and East and West, we cannot speak; but we surmise that they would encounter the same obstacles so patent in the South. Politics must undergo a more enduring fire than female ballots for their purification.

Do women-suffragists—those who have made themselves heard over the land—have regard for the purification of politics? Would our female population, guided by Mrs. Lease, be above the methods of the male politician? Are Mrs. Lease's methods above reproach? Which one of us would be proud to have a wife or daughter in her position, although she is undeniably brilliant and eloquent as a leader and a speaker? Do women point to her with pride as an example of what is within the power of their sex? But it may be said that Mrs. Lease is not an equitable example. Surely some one would have taken her place, if she were not. She attained her present position as the apostle of woman-suffrage. To us she seems a very paragon of the woman in politics, but she is no more bent on their purification than is ex-Senator Ingalls, whose infamous utterance in this regard is notorious. Woman is well enough in her sphere, and no one is more ready than we to recognize her superiority in her proper fields, but there are fields which are unfit for her, and in which she is useless and dangerous; and pre eminent among them is politics.

THE petty strife recently waged between the President and the Senate, led by Hon. D. B. Hill, regarding their respective prerogatives in the appointment of public officers would be unbecoming considerably less dignified positions. Two nominees of the President for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States have been successively rejected with the same motives, by the same methods, and by essentially the same Senators, in the last few weeks. That the Senate had the right to reject them, that its highest duty was to reject them, if it deemed them unworthy the high office, we do not question. But we have good reasons to seriously doubt the motives which prompted the opposition in both instances. We have referred in a former issue to the rejection of Mr. Hornblower; what we said then is equally applicable in the case of Mr. W. H. Peckham, the latest rejected nominee. Mr. Peckham was nominated for the bench by Cleveland, so far as we know, because, through personal observation, he considered him fitted for the honor. We must believe this at any rate, inasmuch as Mr. Cleveland has made no declarations to the contrary, and his oath of office binds him to nominate only capable and worthy men. But the Senators acknowledge that their motives were either partisan, local or personal. The Republicans didn't hesitate to use the argument that Mr. Peckham was an ardent advocate of the Southern interpretation of the Constitution regarding State's rights; it is only natural that they should have opposed him also in hopes of widening the breach in the party at whose hands they have suffered defeat. The Democrats whom Mr. Hill led voted against Mr. Peckham because he had on several occasions, and in our opinion greatly to his credit, declined to support the nominees of the Tammany-Democracy of New York, one of them being the notoriously criminal Maynard in the election of last fall. It was said, moreover, that Mr. Peckham being sixty years of age, was too old to properly fill the position, although he maintains an extensive practice at law in New York City. But it is generally acknowledged that his greatest crime was that he was not a good and changeless Democrat. Does this unfit him for the judicial robe? If it does not, and no other reason for his rejection can be adduced, the Senators have been unfaithful to their offices. If Hornblower and Peckham were unfit, and so unfit that forty-one Senators perceived their unfitness without much contemplation, then Cleveland was wofully blind to Hornblower's and Peckham's faults, or wilfully untrue to his office. Somebody was wrong; Cleveland is suffering for it. The question is, is the penalty rightly imposed?

A Layman's Studies in the Life and Letters of Paul.

V. THE ORIGIN OF THE LETTER TO THE ROMANS.

M. Renan declared that Paul did not have the patience to compose a treatise. I think it would be truer to say that he did not see the need of it. The letter to the Roman church is his nearest approach to a formal theoretical disquisition. It has, indeed, been frequently so named, and much of the current interpretation of it proceeds upon that conception. It would seem at times to be taken as a series of theological formulas in language as coldly exact as that of a modern treatise on physics; and accordingly each separate statement, whether in the sphere of intellect or of feeling, is reduced to a formal proposition and interpreted with the severe precision of science. This point of view is responsible for what has not rarely come to pass: more is got out of this great letter than Paul put into it.

It must be admitted that the writer of Romans is calmer and more contemplative than in the Galatian and the Corinthian letters. His thought is not so trammelled by conditions of time and locality, and flows onward with more freedom and with less impetuosity. His passion is not stirred by actual attacks upon his character and apostleship. The atmosphere is cooler and not so charged with electricity, and the fierce energy of his personality is below the horizon. But, for all that, the letter is a real letter and not a speculative treatise, and to an open-minded reader who is not searching for a syllabus of systematic theology, it shows Paul, not concerned with metaphysics, but true to his unvarying practical aim of religious edification and the preservation and extension of the supremacy of Christ. The letter is, indeed, written in a style more objective and impersonal than that of his other letters, but we shall see that both its style and its contents were determined by the circumstances of the writer and of the church addressed. It need hardly be said that, without the knowledge of these controlling circumstances, no matter what our equipment beside, we should go astray in its interpretation.

It would be singularly curious and instructive, as Milman observes, to trace, if it were possible, the rise and growth of the Christian community at Rome, the initiatory movements of the religion of Jesus in its conquest of the mistress of the world. Who was the first to plant that mustard seed of the universal kingdom in the capital of the empire of the Cæsars? Was it one of the "sojourners from Rome" who marvelled at the fire of the new Pentecost at Jerusalem and were then baptized? Or was it some Pagan, weary of his idolatries, who had been attracted and won by the news which reached him on the currents of business of the young prophet of Galilee? Was the good soil found in the despised Jewish quarter of the Trastevere? or in the precincts of the Forum? What perils waited on its germination? What jealousies eyed its springing stem? When did the little company of believers discover themselves as distinct from Jew and Pagan alike, and enter into a formal communion to signalize their isolation? Was it at the time of the proposed edict of Claudius (c. 50 A. D.) looking to the expulsion of the Jews who were troubling the city "at the instigation of one Christ"? Upon this supposition, the letter of Paul was written only some six or eight years after the founding of the church. In that brief period, so mightily grew the word of God and prospered, the fame of their faith had spread through all the Christian world, and every passing year witnessed a sustained and ever-widening aggression upon the misery and vice of that corrupt social system in which the ends of the world were come together.

In the obscurity which veils the origin of the church at Rome, only two things are clear. The first is, that Paul was not its founder. Of this fact the Acts and the letter to the Romans supply abundant evidence. (Cf. Acts 19: 21; 23: 11; Rom. 1: 13; 15: 23.) It may be objected that the large number of salutations at the close of the letter suggests strongly an antecedent visit to Rome. The suggestion, however, is set aside by the positive statements just now referred to; and it is in entire accord with all the conditions of the case to conclude that the acquaintances whom he here mentions he had met in the course of his wide travels as business or pleasure called them back and forth over the highways of the Empire. The second fact is, that Peter was not the founder of the church. The historical value of the Romish ecclesiastical tradition that Peter not only founded the church, but presided over it as bishop for twenty-five years, has been surrendered, even by some Roman Catholic writers. The letter to the Romans itself implies the impossibility of Peter's presence in Rome before it was written; for it was one of the principles of Paul's missionary activities not to build on another man's foundation (Rom. 15: 20; 2 Cor. 10: 16), and according to the formal agreement mentioned in Galatians 2: 9, when four men, unconscious of the heroism of the transaction, divided the world into provinces for conquest, Rome fell not to Peter, but to Paul.

For our present purpose, the composition of the church when Paul wrote is more important than its origin. Was it composed mainly of converted Pagans or of converted Jews? If of Jews, were they Judaizers and hostile to Paul's gospel? As these questions are answered, the letter is interpreted. Those who hold that the Gentile element predominated, consider the letter a dogmatic exposition. To them the two sections of the doctrinal portion of the letter are but slightly related, the first section (chapters 1—8), which deals with the doctrine of justification by faith, being the essential part; the second section (chapters 9—11), which deals with the judgment of God in Israel, being a mere historical corollary to the first. On the other hand, those who hold that the Jewish element predominated and was hostile to Paulinism, regard the letter as polemic, and place the emphasis on the second section as disclosing the apostle's primary object, namely, to justify the substitution in Christianity of the Gentiles for the Jews. The first section is, accordingly, reduced to a mere introduction.

The truth seems not to be with either of these hostile camps. I think it may be taken as proved that the church was composed mainly of Jews who had as yet received no positive bias for or against the gospel which Paul preached. Having originated spontaneously, and having up to this time been unaffected by apostolic influence, the church at Rome was in the condition of the church at Antioch before the rise of the questions which were submitted to the council at Jerusalem. The Judaizers appear to have got no further west than Corinth. At Rome there was as yet no Pauline teaching to undermine. The question of Law or Gospel had not been raised. "The church remained in the simple untheological faith of the primitive days. It was virgin, and therefore neutral soil, which might easily be claimed by the first occupant. It was most important to Paul that he should take possession of it, and not allow himself to be anticipated. He will, therefore, himself expound his gospel to the church at Rome, before his adversaries come to present it in caricature. He will try to secure a favorable reception for his gospel and his apostleship" at the hands of brethren who, reared in Judaism as they were, might possibly find it difficult to accept both.

Upon this view the letter preserves its organic unity, and becomes intelligible. The second section, which treats of Jews and Gentiles in the state of grace, is seen to correspond with the earlier portion of the first, which presents them both in the state of sin.

Now as to the circumstances of the writer. He was at Corinth, in the winter of 57–58, on his third visit to that much loved church. The crisis there which had so deeply tried him is now overpast, and the visit, which appears from Acts 20: 3, to have extended over about three months, was a peaceful and happy one. He has reached the climax of his apostolic career. Standing near the western limit of his labors, in this season of reestablished friendships his eye runs over a line of churches stretching from Illyricum through Achaia, Macedonia, Asia Minor, and Syria to Jerusalem (Rom. 15: 19). He plans in this peaceful interval a great campaign for the triumphs of the Gospel in the remoter west. In his successive missionary journeys, Rome had been drawing him with an inevitable fascination, and the close of each one found him nearer to the brilliant centre of his "province" of Paganism. Now at length it lies next in his path to the west. It fills that horizon, and only a final visit to Jerusalem with a love token to preserve the connection of his work with the mother church, now separates him from the realization of his ambition "to preach the Gospel to you also that are in Rome." The impatience of a great spirit yearning for a high achievement breathes through those simple words, "After I have been there, I must also see Rome." But even Rome, at first an absorbing end, becomes a means, only a stage in his advance upon the west. His enthusiasm and courage will not stop short of Spain—Spain washed by the waters of the western ocean which in that time was the limit of the world.

The first step which this wise and heroic soul takes toward the accomplishment of these vast designs is the letter to the Romans.

Talks About Law—No. 26.

BY JUDGE R. W. WINSTON.

ACCIDENTS FROM SPRING-GUNS, STEEL-TRAPS, DANGEROUS MACHINES, AND THE LIKE.

It is a maxim of the law that one shall so use his own property as not to injure another.

Suppose that a man, being worried by trespassers, should set a spring-gun, and that some one should be injured thereby, would the injury be actionable? In a case similar to the above, that arose in England, the court said "that as such weapons are calculated to produce great bodily harm to innocent persons (for many trespassers are comparatively innocent), it is necessary to give as much notice to the public as you can, so as to put people on guard against their danger."

So, that it may not be doubted that, if one set a spring gun, with no notice of his intention so to do, and an innocent person be injured, he may recover on account of the injury.

So, in another English book, we read that a land-owner placed sharp spikes into trees in the lane of the hare paths, at such height that dogs would be injured in running against them. Plaintiff did not know of the spikes. His dog jumped a rabbit and ran it towards the dangerous ground. Plaintiff did all he could to stop his dog. But the dog, being fonder of sport than of obedience, ran into the woods and was killed by a spike.

Suit was brought to recover the value of the dog, and was won. But if guns were set in a dwelling-house to protect against burglars in such a way as not to shoot in the direction of a public thoroughfare, one would doubtless be not answerable in damages for shooting another if he let his usual visitors know the fact that he had set such a gun, and if besides he placed the gun in such a position that it would ordinarily shoot only such persons as were engaged in some unlawful entry, through the window, for example. "The general doctrine is that spring-guns and traps, placed by one on his own premises, but to the danger of others, are a nuisance."

In this connection, it is material to inquire if the injured party be a trespasser. If he is a trespasser on the lands of another, that is to say, if he is on the land without permission or authority, and is injured by defective machinery, or by falling in an old well improperly covered, or because of the owner carrying on any business in which he had the right to engage, in all such and like cases, the intruder can recover no damages. To entitle the intruder to recover in like circumstances, it must appear that such contrivances were placed on the premises with an actual or constructive intent to hurt.

The principle here laid down is one of importance to men owning lands or owning machinery. And in this connection the sign usually posted at the door of a machine shop, "No Admittance," stands the owner in good stead when intruders are injured, because they have due warning to keep out.

In a recent case reported in the 111th North Carolina Reports, the authorities are fully cited and the principles in cases of this kind considered. It is a well-settled principle, say the court, that a land-owner has a right to the exclusive use and enjoyment of his premises, and that he incurs no liability for injuries caused by its unsafe condition to a person who was not at or near the place of the accident by lawful right, and when the owner has neither expressly or by implication invited him there. In a New York case, a man went on the land of another to seek employment, and while there was injured by defective machinery. Even in this case no damages were given. So also where a man, who was employed to watch certain grounds, where excavating was done, took part in the latter work and was injured, it was held that he, being an intruder, could get no compensation therefor.

Another class of cases often arises. Two good neighbors will lose their tempers and strain their friendship because the chickens of one scratch up the garden, or wheat-field, of the other. The owner of the garden will set a steel trap, or drop poisoned food; or openly use the shot gun, and thus put the disturbing element out of the way. For this he would be answerable in damages. And when sued he could not set off so many bushels of wheat destroyed against so many chickens killed. The appeal must be made to Cæsar. It was the duty of the garden or wheat-field owner to sue the man having the chickens for damages in scratching up the seed. And each time the injury is repeated, to sue again and again. After the injury became to be wilful, perhaps the offending party might be arrested. I once tried a man charged with the criminal offense of poisoning chickens, by dropping poisoned wheat in his wheat-field. The defendant claimed that much injury had been done him by the chickens; but this plea did not avail him, and he was convicted.

Usually a few kind words, a little patience, and much forbearance settle all such cases better than the stern mandates of the law. But sometimes one old hen and a brood of chickens will sever the oldest friendships.

There appears to exist a greater desire to live long than to live well. Measured by man's desires, he cannot live long enough; measured by his good deeds, he has not lived long enough; measured by his evil deeds, he lives too long.—Zimmermann.

AUTHORITY—ONE THING NEEDFUL.

We Baptists recognize no ecclesiastical authority; the pastor, the deacon, the layman, are of equal power. They have different duties and privileges, but as Baptists one has no more authority than the other; as Christians they have equal authority to proclaim Christ, even though the pastor feels it his duty to proclaim him from pulpits, to devote his life to his service, and to perform offices that laymen cannot perform. But a Christian has as much power and right, and is as much obliged to proclaim Christ, by various means, but mostly by "keeping his word," as anyone. One may not be moved to make this proclamation his life's occupation, nevertheless he is a weak Christian who does not feel moved to carry the message by some means to all who have it not. But we all, having equal authority, have not enough; or rather having it, are not aware of it; and concerning this we wish to speak.

Jesus had called the twelve, after a night of communion with God,—the twelve who were to continue the work when he should soon leave it unfinished. He had prepared the soil, and sown the seed, and reaped a harvest. The newly appointed apostles were to prepare and sow and reap long after he had ascended to the Father, and to bring up others to succeed them in the fields. They were the first great workers, and they must needs be trained for the great task before them while the Lord was yet with them. So he gathered them on the Mount, and in the presence of a great multitude expounded the principles of that new kingdom which he had established, and for which they had looked so differently. Christ preached to them the "Sermon on the Mount," and to this day it is the grandest sermon that adorns any language. It has been said of it, and we believe it, that "though one were ignorant of his miracles and resurrection, yet reading this discourse intelligently he would find ample proof that Jesus was 'a teacher come from God.'" It is, indeed, unrivaled in our language. The meaningful beatitudes, the suggestive words in regard to alms, fasting and prayer, the advice as to how to advance the kingdom, the final promise and warning,—all are marked with the divine impress. And when he had finished, it is said, the multitudes were astonished. They had heard the profitless discourses of the Rabbis, with their laws and legends, and mazes of casuistry; but this man possessed a new attraction for them: "He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes." It was the authority of his sermon that made it possible for Christ to impress his words on their ears. However great had been the truth of the discourse, it would have but slightly impressed the multitudes if there had not been an attractiveness about the speaker that demanded attention for his words; they felt that he bore them an important message by reason of what they called the authority of his speech; we call it individuality and magnetism in these days. Whatever its name, it is needful now.

We know with what respect the learned are regarded; their authority commands it. We know how the great lecturers move their hearers; they have something to say, and they know how to say it convincingly. They feel the truth of their words as strongly as they desire their hearers to feel it; they are moved as they desire to move their hearers. So the preacher must have confidence in himself and faith in every word he utters; must feel that the gospel of love and the gospel of condemnation is as sure as he preaches it; must know that he bears a message to a people in danger before he can impress his hearers. In a word, he must have authority of manner and of speech—authority from on high.

When Napoleon inspired his soldiers beneath the pyramids with the cry, "Soldiers, forty centuries look down upon you," it was not the presence of the pyramids, but the authority in the exclamation of the General that encouraged them. When the plain monk, Luther, stood out alone against the world, turning his back on friends, facing the most powerful throne on earth, and set forth his theses against Rome; when he stood among the gathered rulers and pleaded for the gospel; when he overthrew Rome, and restored Germany to Christianity, it was the authority of the man, given of God, that sustained him. There were Huss and Reuchlin and Melancthon, but they lacked authority. Luther alone could speak with authority, and Luther won the greatest contest that ever engaged mortals, with that authority; for he knew, as he says, that God was in him and with him. He had authority and knew it.

Who speaks with authority has the ear of the people, convicts the sinner, and serves the Lord. We have not authority to save, but we have authority to proclaim the way of salvation; and it is the Christian's duty to proclaim it with authority.

A messenger hastes from the scene of battle; he tells us the enemy is victorious and will sack our city. We prepare. The messenger has no authority; we may not know him, but there is authority in his voice, and we feel its force. So even the least among men can tell sinners of the enemy and the city of refuge; he has no authority over others, but he has authority from on high to bear the message, for it has been given only to be borne. But he must feel the import of the message, he must be earnest, he must have faith, else the authority will be wanting, and his words will fall profitless.

We need this kind of authority; it is the authority of faith, and it grows as we work. Some preachers have lost earnestness in efforts to be dignified; others, by having too great regard for doubt and differences of opinion; others have become mechanical, being so used to preaching that the opportunity, and the duty of preaching with all their earnest might, on every occasion are forgotten. Christians need it, because many of them never felt it.

CONCERNING THE SUNDAY PAPER.

The secular paper issued on Sundays is receiving considerable local and general attention just now. The question is by no means of recent origin, however, as ever since the first Sunday edition of a newspaper appeared it has been a subject of discussion. But the Sunday paper has become so popular that at the present time it is the most carefully and elaborately prepared edition of the daily press. We do not care to defend the Sunday paper—it needs no defence at our hands,—but we think some facts regarding it may be instructive.

Those who oppose the Sunday paper are accustomed to regard its publisher wrongly. If there is sin, it is the reading public's sin, and not the publisher's. We may be sure if church members stop reading papers on Sunday the Sunday issues will be abandoned. The North Carolina publishers do as much as they can to keep the Sabbath by not publishing Monday editions; for the edition of that day is gotten up on Sunday, the Sunday paper being made on Saturday, with the exception of the comparatively small item of press-work. Which is better: To issue a paper on Sunday, and leave the matter of breaking the Sabbath to the conscience of the public, or to publish a Monday paper, and compel editors, reporters, printers, etc., to break the Sabbath? Or, is it best to publish papers only five times a week?

The Sunday paper, like the gates of the World's Fair, is at the mercy of the public conscience. The Fair was closed on Sunday by the people, after Congress and the courts had failed. Since then we have not doubted that the American people had regard for the Sabbath; they showed the power of their conscience then, and we can rely on it now. If any one is conscientiously opposed to the Sunday paper, let him inform the publishers, and they will discontinue it so far as he is concerned, and lower the price accordingly. It is not a question for publishers to decide, but for the people.

A Christian will not allow the perusal of a Sunday paper to interfere with his worship of God. A non-christian is liable to do far worse things than reading a paper on Sunday. That there is more probability of good to all classes in the Sunday paper than there is of evil, is indisputable. If there is not, the paper should not be published at all—Sunday nor Wednesday.

We do not believe that Sunday is a fast-day, a day of deprivations. We do not believe that it was intended that the day should be spent wholly in worship, no more than Saturday was intended to be without worship. It is unrighteous to work on the Sabbath, because God has told us to rest on that day; but he did not command us to put ourselves to pains. If a paper is wholesome, and if it is restful to read a wholesome paper, there is no sin in reading it on Sunday. The Sabbath was made for man, and man was made for God's glory every day in the week. We are aware that we are dealing with a question of conscience, and we have merely stated our own views.

"Religious Editorials for Sunday" have become a feature of one of our leading secular dailies. We hope the other daily papers will follow the lead of Dr. Kingsbury. Religious editorials in secular dailies are wholesome, because religion is always a good thing.

Bro. Durham has made a good beginning in raising our State Mission debt. Brethren, let us make a good and speedy ending of the matter.

Our readers will see from the list of appointments of Bro. Bryan on another page that we were mistaken in stating that he was going to spend sometime in rest. It seems that work is the only thing that he can do. We are very glad to note also that Bro. Willingham will be with Bro. Bryan, and lend his eloquence to the cause. We hope our brethren and sisters who are so favored as to live in reach of these appointments will attend. We wish these speakers could be heard by every one in the State.

Edward W. Bok's recent successful article in the Cosmopolitan on the "Young Man in Business," has interested all quarters of the country. Every writer seems to agree that the young man's hope for success is in doing what is before him well, all the while striving to do more and better;—not faithfulness merely, but excellence. We are glad so much interest has been excited in this direction. An encouraging editorial to young men is worth more than a hundred on politics. The one is heard and acted on; the other is read, and immediately contradicted or counteracted.

Our opinion of the "Basis of Union Between Baptists and Disciples," published in another column, has been requested. We approve the general statements of the "basis"; they are biblical: but as a "basis of union" they are too general. There are several denominations that could regard them as a basis of union, if the clause on baptism were omitted. Moreover, the "basis" does not touch our exegetical differences, and they are many; it does not touch "baptismal regeneration"; it does not touch our differences in regard to the workings of the Holy Spirit; and it is uncertain in regard to restricted observance of the Lord's Supper, called "close communion." All these things are important. Let there be no makeshift, no compromise.

The Independent of the 22d inst. declines to permit the "North Carolina resident" to prove, or attempt to prove, his maliciously false statements in regard to religious and social conditions in North Carolina. It assigns as the reason for its declination that it fears that, were the author of the article known, he would be lynched at the instigation of the Recorder. Every one will recognize this excuse as a miserably puerile pretence of a conscience-stricken editor, who, unable to substantiate his position, is too unmanly to confess his error.

We are perfectly willing for the editor of the Independent to believe the statements of "the North Carolina resident;" but we would remind him that he is preferring the word of one lone and confessedly cowardly man, to that of every respectable pastor and editor in the State.

We wish there were some lawful means of compelling people to substantiate their statements, or suffer for them. Until we have such means the North Carolina resident and the editor of the Independent, and all of their ilk, may continue to malign good people, and take refuge in miserable excuses.

We have seen it intimated that there are "leaders" in North Carolina who object to Seminary-educated ministers as pastors. We are glad we do not know any such "leaders."

It is utterly unwise for a man who lays claim to ordinary intelligence to entertain the idea that an education of the right sort is an objection to a man as a servant of God; and the world has ample testimony that our Seminary inculcates education of the right sort. If there is ground for objection it is inherent in the man, and not due to education.

We have feared for promising young men to go outside the State for an education, because it seemed like losing them forever, and we have always been glad to hear that they were coming back to labor among the people who know them best, and who, perhaps, did much to make their education possible. Let the young men come back to North Carolina from the Seminary, and while we will not promise them a city pastorate of large proportions, we can assure them of good fields and attentive, sympathetic and faithful brethren and sisters. We hope every young man who can, will go to the Seminary after he has been well prepared at Wake Forest; and we hope every one of them will return to us when he has completed his studies.

It is worth remembering that voluntary worship, religious liberty, and soul freedom have ever been the trophy of Baptists, as Bancroft expresses it. While most other sects have at one time or another endeavored to inaugurate a compulsory religion, Baptists have been content to simply invite those, who fully and freely agreed with them, to fellowship. We cannot depart from this honored custom now; for it would destroy the once distinctive characteristic of our relations with differing sects.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

SOME THINGS THE BRETHREN ARE DOING, AND TALKING ABOUT.

Sometimes I get off on the wrong foot, and things don't go well for a whole week. Then, again, I make a very poor start in the early part of the week, but come in on the home stretch. It was so last week. On the first part of the week the "grass was very short" indeed. Evidently the brethren were not expecting me till some weeks later; however, I was glad to see them, and will be on hand again before a great while. I always enjoy stopping at HIGH POINT.

I went to school there when a boy—not long ago certainly, but still it was when I was younger than I am now, and plenty of changes have taken place to afford at least a suspicion that some years have passed between then and now. The town has grown greatly, and so has the cemetery. Only a few who were there then are to be seen now. Then there was not a factory in the town; now there are more than twenty, of various sorts and sizes. Wooden houses have been replaced by brick ones, the streets are now longer and wider, and business increased more than tenfold. Churches and schools have gone along with other improvements in the town, so now each church has preaching every Sunday, and it looks as if all the boys and girls are attending school daily. The brethren are much encouraged in the work of the church, and the sisters love Bro. Weaver exceedingly. We hope this love may continue, and that he may not be enticed to leave them.

AT LEXINGTON

I found Bro. Carrick's little girl quite ill, and besides, on the day I was in the town Sheriff Leonard, a prominent citizen of the county, was buried. So, altogether, I found it rather hard to do my work. What I left, however, is in good hands. Bro. Carrick is true to look after the Recorder in his congregations, as he is to all other interests of the denomination.

IN CHARLOTTE

I found Dr. Pritchard interested in a series of meetings conducted by Bro. Oakes, who is preaching especially to members of the church rather than to sinners generally. The work of specialists is not to be depreciated, and yet it would seem that the line might, with the best of authority, be drawn at the work of preaching the gospel. Why preach that which is the power of salvation to every one that believes to any particular class of people more than to another?

The brethren at the Second church are somewhat "at sea." All regret having lost Bro. Austin, their former pastor, and are now casting about for some one to take his place.

the brethren were expecting me. Brother Jones is none the worse by having been assassinated in California summer before last. He has preserved his identity, and is now far from being a dead man. The people in Gastonia are thoroughly impressed with the worth of their pastor, and the cause of the Baptists is making progress.

Bro. L. L. Jenkins, who has been identified with the town in all the various interests which have grown up within the last fifteen years, took me behind a pair of nice horses and kindly looked up the Baptists, or rather went to see them, for he knows where to find every one of them; and by this kindness on his part I not only renewed all the old subscribers, but got a good number of new names.

Bro. Marshall runs the postoffice and also a newspaper, and then has plenty of time to play with his twin babies and talk to the brethren.

Bro. J. D. Moore has just completed the handsomest cotton factory in the State, and is now North to purchase machinery. This is the fourth cotton factory built here within the last few years.

The day after we left Shelby Bro. Sproles resigned the pastorate of the church. There are few churches in the State in which there are greater possibilities than in the Shelby church. The membership is large and intelligent, and their real strength would be a surprise to the church itself. Bro. Sproles has done good work as pastor, and we hope his successor may be one who will take up the work where it now is and continue the advancement of which the membership is so capable.

The church at Henrietta is now complete, and the brethren there are in the notion to have a man for all his time. This is wise, even though the brethren at Boiling Springs should have to look out for a new pastor. The Baptists ought to look closer to the cultivation of factory-towns than they have heretofore done.

The recent editorials in this paper on the subject of education are being discussed wherever I go, and the brethren want to know if they are still to be taxed to give college education to a few boys and girls, and they, too, the sons and daughters of men who in many cases are able to provide their education themselves. This matter is one for consideration, and will be decided by the people sooner or later. Forty thousand dollars would run four hundred schools in the State four months each, giving the teacher of each school $25 per month. This would help very much the poor children in the State, many of whom have little or no opportunity to learn to read and write.

Farmers are better off than they have been in twenty years. Most of them have plenty of meat and bread at home, and they are staying with it, giving merchants and railroads a rest that is getting to be painful.

Rev. J. Hartwell Edwards of Fayetteville has been in feeble health for a while, but is better now. Fifty members have been added to the church since he became its pastor. Wages of the men on the C. F. & Y. V. R. R. have been reduced ten per cent. Some of the brethren were not able to renew their subscriptions, but will do so as soon as possible. These men show a fine spirit, and they ought to do so, for the officials of this road have been unusually liberal to and considerate of the men in their employ.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Revival meetings will be commenced at Monroe next Sunday.

....Rev. D. M. Austin has been called to the pastorate at Lincolnton.

....We were glad to see Capt. W. G. Coleman of Churchill, N. C., last week.

....Lawyers Cooke, Timberlake, Pittman and Aycock were in Raleigh last week.

....Rev. R. A. Sentell has resigned the pastorate at Hominy, Buncombe county.

....The City Missionary Society of Richmond, Va., is in need of a city missionary.

....Rev. C. E. Beard has changed his post-office address from Edge to Winsl[ow], N. C.

....Rev. T. J. Taylor delivered what was pronounced a fine lecture on "Crooked Folks" at Littleton last week.

....Dr. Pritchard occupied Rev. J. L. White's pulpit at Asheville, last Sunday, Bro. White being in Charlotte.

....Rev. J. M. White has received a call to the pastorate of Lystra church, Mt. Zion Association. He will probably accept.

....A brother writes from Winston: "Bro. Brown is having a continual revival. Church was never in better spiritual condition."

....Dr. C. S. Blackwell was with Dr. A. E. Owen in a series of meetings in Court Street Baptist church, Portsmouth, Va., last week.

....We hope all those of our readers whose subscriptions have expired will renew as soon as possible. Time is money with a newspaper man.

....Dr. J. J. Hall, Rev. W. F. Watson and Rev. C. W. Matthews, all of whom labored in North Carolina last year, are now located in Norfolk, Va.

....Rev. R. G. Pearson's revival services at Davidson resulted in a total of 150 professions of religion. The spiritual condition of the community was greatly strengthened.

....Rev. G. H. Church of Statesville baptized several converts last Sunday night, he having preached a sermon on baptism before the administration of the ordinance.

....Rev. —— Macomson of Burlington, a blind preacher, preached on the 17th and 18th inst. at Olive's Chapel, and at Apex on the 20th and 21st, so we learn from Bro. J. M. White.

....Bro. R. T. Vann of Scotland Neck, N. C., speaker and singer and all-around genius of goodness, is to help the Sumter, S. C., pastor in a meeting during the month of April.—Courier.

....Rev. A. M. Simms of Raleigh has an excellent article in the Convention Teacher for March. It is entitled "Sunday-school Teachers in Relation to Other Departments of Church Work."

....Rev. Clarence Dixon, Dr. MacArthur, Dr. Wharton, and Dr. Bitting are doing evangelistic work in New York City. It is seldom that four such prominent ministers are gathered together.

....Prof. W. L. Poteat's excellent lecture before the Baptist Young People's Union of the Baptist Tabernacle of this city will be followed in the near future by one from Dr. Thomas Hume of the University.

....Dr. P. S. Moxom, until recently pastor of the First Baptist church of Boston, Mass., has accepted a call of the South Congregational church, Springfield, Mass. We are glad to know that he is settled, at least.

....Rev. M. L. Green of Ahoskie, N. C., is preaching this year at Fountain Creek, Mt. Vernon, Va., and Mt. Carmel, Elim and Pine Forest, Northampton county. He says he cannot afford to do without the Recorder.

....The Religious Herald says a great revival is sweeping over Petersburg, Va. There have been more than 250 conversions. The First Baptist church, Dr. Battle, pastor, has had forty additions. Dr. Battle is the leader of the meetings.

....Sister Tatum of China writes us regarding Sister Yates' health. She says: "Dear Sister Yates has been confined to her room the great part of the time since her return. For a few days she has been improving, and we hope before many weeks she may be able to cheer us by her presence in the home and church, as of old."

....Sunday the 18th inst. closed the second year of Rev. J. L. White's Asheville pastorate. He has been greatly blessed in his work, and the membership of the church now numbers eight hundred.

....An esteemed sister renews her subscription, and writes: "Your valuable paper, and Maj. Foote's able reply to the Hudson's 'Methodist Armor,' has made a Baptist of my husband since I last renewed my subscription."

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins has resigned the pastorate of the Brooklyn Baptist church, near Wilmington, N. C., the resignation to take effect on the last Sunday in March. Bro. Jenkins feels called to enter the evangelistic service.

....Our missionary friends in China will have an able representative in the person of Hon. Thomas R. Jernigan of Raleigh, N. C., recently appointed Consul-General at Shanghai. He will reach his post in May. We commend him to the confidence of the brethren and sisters.

....We greatly regret to hear of the extreme illness of the little son of Rev. C. M. Marchison. Brethren, pray for him, that God may spare the child if it can be the Divine will; but if otherwise ordered, that sustaining grace may be given him in his affliction.

....Rev. J. W. Rose was recently assisted in the ordination of the first deacon in the church at Cove by Rev. R. D. Carroll of Winterville, Pitt county. Since Bro. Rose moved to Cove, they have weekly service in the Baptist church there with good attendance.

....Rev. Dr. Felix has resigned the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Lynchburg, Va., on account of failing health; and Bro. Truett has resigned the pastorate of the College Hill church of that city, rendering vacant two good pastorates in Lynchburg. Rev. C. F. Scott will supply the First church two months.

....The Raleigh Christian Advocate, organ of the North Carolina Methodist Conference, and the Western Carolina Advocate, organ of the Western North Carolina Conference, have been consolidated, a stock company, Dr. Reid, President, owning the new paper. It will be published in Greensboro. We regret to lose the Raleigh Advocate as a neighbor, and extend our heartiest wishes to it in its new surroundings.

....The church at Marion, S. C., the pastorate of which Bro. Willoughby recently resigned, will not call a pastor until it gets out of debt. This is given out for publication "to save good brethren trouble, expense, and disappointment of writing or visiting Marion with a view to serving them at present." We hope the church will succeed in paying its debt very shortly; or, better still, will get a pastor who will help them pay the debt.

....We do not know of a better woman's missionary publication than Woman's Work in the Far East. It is published semi annually by the Presbyterian Mission Press in Shanghai, China, at a cost of fifty cents per annum. Sister Yates is editor in chief of the publication, and it has associate editors and correspondents among the Protestant denominations in all parts of missionary China. Every woman's missionary society should subscribe to this magazine.

....Rev. D. W. Herring writes: "Please say to our friends that our address (the address of all of us of the Gospel Mission) is Chefoo, China—simply this and nothing more, except it be via San Francisco. For wherever we locate, this (Chefoo) will be our post office: we send a messenger all the way there for our mail. The letter-rate of postage is five cents for one-half ounce or under; for any over that, another five cents." Correspondents will please take notice.

....The fifth instalment of Prof. Poteat's instructive Studies in the Life and Letters of Paul, the second of Bro. Hight C. Moore's New Testament Studies, which promise great help to young students of the Bible, and teachers, Judge Winston's practical exposition of the law concerning accidents from spring guns, traps, dangerous machines, etc., Bro. Van Deventer's excellent article, The Missionary Race, Bro. Boone's article on the Western North Carolina Cherokees, Bro. Durham's "Acts of the Brethren," Revs. Porter's and Crocker's letters about the work on their respective foreign fields, the former just in time for the missionary societies, whose topic for March is Brazil, Some Things that Annoy a Preacher, by "Reminder," who is sensible and godly, and the proposed Basis of Union Between Baptists and Disciples,—these, together with many newsy letters from various fields, and our usual quota of denominational news notes, are in this issue.

....We have the following news from Bro. Porter in Brazil: Mr. Ginsburg has been arrested by the Brazilian authorities on false charges. He was in the midst of a good meeting at the time, and left five converts awaiting baptism. Mrs. Ginsburg accompanied him to prison. Brother Porter has written to the United States representative at Rio de Janeiro, and asked for protection of American interests. Rev. J. J. Taylor, the missionary at Rio, when last heard from (Jan. 11th), was ill with yellow fever, with prospects of recovery. Bro. Porter is alone in the active service, and asks the prayers of all people to help him in this responsibility. He has rented a large house at Juiz de Fora, and the crowds who press to hear the gospel are increasing all the time. The war in Brazil makes it difficult to get justice from the authorities. Brother Guisburg was arrested on suspicion that he was not friendly to the government. What the outcome will be cannot be predicted, but we can assure our readers that the Brazilian government will not interfere with subjects of the United States to any great extent. We have battleships in the harbor to protect our citizens.

Ten More Speak.

Last week ten brethren spoke to the RECORDER readers on State Missions. Each one made a fifty-dollar speech. This week ten others speak, and their speeches are worth five hundred dollars in paying the self-sacrificing Baptist preachers, missionaries of our Board, on work for the Conventional year ending Nov. 1st, 1893, and five thousand dollars in stimulating Baptist energy, liberality, and the cause of our Master in the State.

There are more than twenty others now ready to speak, but only ten can speak each week. I have the pleasure of knowing that I am now giving to the RECORDER the best articles it has ever published. They remind me of the name of one Book in the New Testament, "The Acts." These are the acts of the brethren. The Lord reward them. Many are praying for the success of the Convention's proposition, and prayer is being answered.

The successful lawyer and singularly clear-headed Moderator of the Chowan Association, Bro. E. F. Aydlett, says that we can look for fifty dollars from Elizabeth City on the Convention's proposition.

The popular and successful pastor of Wadesboro, Rev. J. Q Adams, says:

"We raised for the debt $60.50, which will be sent you by 1st April. I wanted to make it $100, but you know the cry of 'hard times'"

The young Bishop of the Edenton saints, Rev. John E. White, says:

"It is with pleasure that I am able to write you this morning that we raised fifty dollars without difficulty. The amount will be forwarded by our Treasurer within a week. God is blessing us here, and we are preparing to build a new and larger house of brick. I pray that your strenuous energy in this mission debt may meet with entire success."

The thoughtful and solid lawyer, the wise and faithful legislator, and the courteous former President of our Baptist State Convention, Hon. C. M. Cook, called at the Mission Rooms a few days ago and talked over the needs of our mission work. The Treasurer will, in a short time, acknowledge Louisburg's amount.

The new young Bishop of Roxboro, Rev. H. T. Williams, says:

"We will try to raise fifty dollars in March for State Missions."

The President of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute, Murfreesboro, Prof. John B. Brewer, one of the most successful educators ever reared in the State, was in to see us some days ago, and his check for fifty dollars is always good.

Rev. B. Craig, the beloved Bishop of more than one church, says:

"I have been in person to see some of my best members, and some have said they would help. One brother said he would be one of ten to raise fifty dollars. I am looking for the other nine, and hope to find them. May the Lord put it into the heart of his people to pay the Convention's debt."

The faithful Bishop of Aulander, Rev. L M. Curtis, says:

"I think you can rely on Aulander for fifty dollars. I am working on another fifty dollars at my other churches, and have twenty-five dollars of it already in sight. I hope to get the other twenty-five dollars, making one hundred dollars from my field." Bro. Curtis counts two men in more ways than one. He is the only one hundred-dollar man that has spoken up to date. It is true one check for $250 has been received, and another for the same amount from another brother is expected.

Rev. L Johnson, the young and successful Bishop of Rockingham, says:

"Yours to hand. Will give the matter my immediate attention. I hope to make the amount, fifty dollars."

Only thirty-one days now remain to complete the Convention's proposition. All money must reach the Treasurer by 1st April. But I must be off (Friday 10 o'clock a. m. Feb 23d) to Rutherford county to be present at the dedication of two new houses of worship—High Shoals and Henrietta. At the first-named, thirty-four years ago, I professed faith in Jesus Christ and was baptized. Here my father and mother, and others of the family now gone, were members. In about a quarter of a mile of the beautiful house of worship, which is a monument to the good taste and large liberality of Rev. G. P. Hamrick and the Henrietta people, once stood my father's dwelling. This is a new church and their first house of worship. I have always loved the people here, and as I grow older, I find I love them more and more—as I love no other people. Thoughts of years that are gone fill me, and I must stop. C. DURHAM.

Rev. G. W. Rollins Dead.

Rev. G. W. Rollins died on Friday, the 16th of Feb., 1894, and was buried at Concord church in the presence of a large concourse of people. The writer conducted the funeral services.

Brother Rollins had been preaching about forty-six years. The writer has known him ever since he commenced preaching, and can say that he was a good preacher, and has done a great deal of good. His counsel was often sought by the brethren. He was a safe guide in church matters, also in the Association.

Brother Rollins contended earnestly for the faith that was once delivered to the saints. He had no use for the easy way of professing religion. He preached the old, old gospel of Jesus Christ,—that people had to repent of their sins and be converted, or they could not be saved.

When I think about the loss of such a man at the present day, I am made to exclaim, "How can we do without him!" My prayer is that God will raise up some one to fill his place. T. DIXON.

It is proposed to establish a depository of the American Bible Society in Raleigh shortly.

An Act of Kindness Recalled.

Dear Recorder:—The death of Col. J. M. Heck recalls to my mind most vividly an act of kindness done me by him, which I then and have ever since appreciated highly. It was during my struggle to build the new church house at Henderson, N. C. I had promised Dr. Skinner to preach for him at the First Baptist church in Raleigh on Sunday after the State Convention, that he might be away over Sunday. It was against the rules of the church to take a collection that had not previously been assented to. I was entertained at the hospitable home of the lamented Bro. Pace. Col. Heck came over Saturday evening. We talked over our needs at Henderson, and then Col. Heck and Bro. Pace put their heads together to help me to get some money for our new church the next day. The plan agreed upon was simply this: I was to preach and simply make a statement about our new church and needs. I did this, and then Col. Heck and Bro. Pace stationed themselves at the doors of the church with hats in hand to get whatever the people volunteered to drop in. The result was something like one hundred dollars. I shall never cease to forget their sympathy at that time. The stay in Bro. Pace's home was most delightful, and I still regard it as one of the oases in the desert of my history.

Now that Col. Heck's daughters are in the hands of physicians in Philadelphia, if I knew their address, I would call on them out of respect to the memory of their dear father. I am not far from Philadelphia. How true it is that "little deeds lie in the memory like coral islands, green and sunny in the melancholy waste of the ocean." I have a pleasant memory of Col. Heck and of Bro. Pace and his loved wife, and drop a tear of sympathy with the afflicted families.

New Brunswick, N. J., Feb. 22, 1894.

Missionary Mass-meetings in Tar River Association.

Rev. R. T. Bryan will speak as indicated below in the interest of the Foreign Mission work:

At Louisburg	March 14th,	p. m.
" Henderson	" 15th,	16th.
" Warrenton	" 17th,	18th.
" Littleton	" 19th,	p. m.
" Weldon	" 20th,	p. m.
" Wilson	" 21st,	p. m.
" Scotland Neck	" 22nd,	23rd.
" Greenville	" 24th,	25th.

Several of the following topics will be discussed:

(1) The magnitude of the field and need of the gospel.

(2) An inside view of missionary service, or how we work.

(3) Results already accomplished, or do missions pay?

(4) "Yon ming wu suh," or name without a reality.

(5) "John Chinaman"

(6) Some experience and observations.

(7) The life of a Chinese woman.

(8) The pastor as a promoter or hinderer in the church's zeal in foreign mission work.

(9) How can we get the individual members of our churches interested in Foreign Mission work.

Dr. Willingham, Corresponding Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, will be present and speak at some of the appointments.

The objects of the meetings will be to disseminate information, and no collection will be taken.

A Basis of Union Between Baptists and Disciples.

The Word of God is an all sufficient rule of faith and practice. It reveals that there is one Living Triune God—the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit—Creator of the universe.

That he made man in a state of innocence, who by transgressions, passed under condemnation.

That God provided salvation for his people, through his Son, Jesus Christ, who died for our sins, was buried and rose again for our justification, and ascended to the right hand of the Father, becoming a Mediator between God and man, and sending the Holy Spirit to convince the world, through the Word of Truth, of sin, of righteousness and of judgment.

That we must believe in Christ as the Son of God, repent of our sins, and be regenerated and led by the Holy Spirit to obey the commandments and ordinances of God.

That there will be a resurrection from the dead, and a final judgment at which the wicked shall be forever separated from the righteous, the wicked going away into everlasting punishment, and the righteous into life eternal.

That a church of Christ, by which title an organized body of baptized believers should be known, is composed of persons who have gladly heard the gospel, sincerely repented of their sins, heartily believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, and have been willingly baptized.

That the ordinances appointed by Jesus to be observed in his church, are: the Supper, commemorating his death, and the baptism, symbolizing his burial and resurrection.

That the officers, are: pastors, who are also called elders or bishops, and the deacons, who are the stewards of the organized membership.

We learn from the Wilmington Star that the meetings at the Baptist Chapel, South Wilmington, conducted by the Sailor Evangelist Dunlap, have resulted in more than sixty professions. At the close of the meetings there were between seventy-five and a hundred asking for prayer. Mr. Dunlap was associated with "Rev." Wm. Shaw, who was killed in the Henderson collision, at the Littleton meetings.

From Rev. W. E. Crocker in China.

Dear Recorder:—Our party of four arrived at Pingtu, North China, on the day before Christmas. Rev. T. J. League, one of our missionaries, met us at Shanghai, and his knowledge of the place and country was a very great help to us, especially in traveling the 150 miles overland from Chefoo to Pingtu. As some of your readers may know, we came on the Canadian Pacific railway and steamship line, instead of coming, as is usual, by way of San Francisco. This line has the advantage of being about 300 miles shorter than the other, besides the advantage of having no trouble in transfering baggage from the train to the steamer, and of a through trip on steamer all the way to Shanghai. Most of the steamers from America transfer their passengers at Yokahama, Japan, to another ship for Shanghai. Our voyage was a stormy one—for nine days out of the thirteen we were on the ocean, between Vancouver and Yokahama, we did not see the sun, and for three days the ship labored hard in a terific storm that blew icily from the northwest. But God brought us safely through, and as we steamed up the beautiful Yeddo bay, the same bay in which Commodore Perry's squadron lay when he opened the doors of Japan about forty years ago, the sun was just rising clear on the beautiful "sunrise kingdom" and beyond the green cliffs which rose up out of the deep blue water we saw piles of blue mountains rising, and in the midst of them, towering far above all arund rose the cone-shaped, snow peaked, sacred mountain of Japan, the world-famous Fuji Yama. To the south a great pile of smoke rested like a cloud on the peak of one of Japan's volcanoes which is still active. We stopped about twenty-four hours at Yokahama. Japan is noted for its cleanliness, and the beauty of its scenery. The people are small and they seem to suit their dainty little Island Kingdom. We went out about twelve miles into the country on the narrow-gauge Japanese railway. We visited Dai Butan, the great bronze image of Buddha. This image is forty-seven feet high, and sits in the open air in the midst of a beautiful garden, which we found (last of Nov.) in almost all the luxuriance of its summer growth. This image represents Buddha sitting in the attitude of repose and meditation, and was made about 800 years ago. We could not help feeling affected by this wonderful piece of ancient art. We spent on our way to Shanghai, one day at Kobe, and part of a day at Nagasaki. The Japanese inland sea, through which we passed, is said to be one of the most beautiful seas in the world—certainly it is very beautiful. The Japanese impress one as being rather quick and ready, than strong and deep. The Chinese on the other hand seem to be slow, but broad and deep. We had beautiful weather for passing through the Inland Sea and also for crossing the Yellow Sea to Shanghai. We spent about one week in Shanghai waiting for steamer to Chefoo. English influence predominates here among foreigners. Nearly every nationality in the world is represented. We saw Bro. Tatum and his excellent wife and found them faithfully at work. They are alone now at Shanghai of our Southern Baptist Mission. Bro. Bryan is expected to join them when he returns to China. Oh, the work is so very great and the workers so few! "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth more laborers into the harvest."

The distance from Shanghai to Chefoo is about 500 miles. One is impressed with the immense size of China. She is like a great unwieldy monster on the map of Asia lying asleep. When will she awaken? At Chefoo we saw the summer residence of Dr. Yates—Chefoo has become to be a summer resting place for many of the missionaries, especially from the South. North China has a very bracing atmosphere. There is a great deal of beautiful bright sunshine, and the air is clear. It has about such a climate as Kentucky, except it is not so changeable. Our trip westward from Chefoo to Pingtu was made on mules and donkeys and occupied nearly five days. Donkeys and mules are the palace cars of China. Our Chinese dress, heavily wadded and some of it lined with lamb's wool, made us able to sit on our little donkeys and defy the bitter cold.

We found here at Pingtu Dr. and Mrs. Crawford, Bro. and Mrs. Sears, Bro. and Mrs. Bostick, the Leagues and Miss Fannie Knight. What a hearty welcome they did give us, and how sweet it was to us after so much travel. We of the Gospel Mission have to open up three or four new stations westward from here and in places that are not and have not been occupied. Bro. W. D. King having identified himself with the Gospel Mission has just arrived from Hwanghien, and as soon as the spring opens we wish to move westward. Some of us are busy on the language.

Fraternally, W. E. CROCKER.

Resolutions of Thanks.

Resolved, That we, the regular Baptist church at Henrietta, do hereby tender our most hearty thanks to the person who, in the goodness of God and from the kindness of his heart, presented us with a nice church organ with which to praise God.

Be it resolved further, That we tender our sincere thanks to our brother, J. O. Bell, for his kindness in this matter, and also for paying the express charges, &c., on the organ, and that these resolutions be published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and a copy given to Bro. J. O. Bell, and through him to our unknown benefactor.

Done in conference.

Japanese Pile Cure costs you nothing if it does not cure you; samples free. Guaranteed by Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh.

From Rev. George J. Dowell.

Dear Recorder:—My wife and I are both here, busy and happy in our work. Some of our friends, not knowing our location, will read this in your valuable columns. Our people are very kind to us and we feel that we have made some strong friends.

I serve two churches in the country, as well as this, the Second Baptist church, in town—Yates, and Rose of Sharon, formerly served by Rev. C. A. Woodson, and this, served by Rev. A. A. Butler prior to my coming. The country churches try to raise their finances monthly, and we all like the plan. The Second church raises her finances weekly.

We have no need of an "annex." "Hundreds are not turned away at every service for want of room." We are in earnest, trying to liquidate a debt which is hampering our work, and when it is lifted we shall expect smoother sailing.

Still, God is with us, "the Lord of all." Our meeting before Christmas was a success. Some sixteen have united with us in a short while. The Sunday-school has increased. The attendance upon prayer-meetings is excellent. The congregations are growing large. Our people are growing hopeful, and speak encouragingly of the outlook. To God be all the glory.

Yours in Christ, GEO. J. DOWELL.

Resolutions of the Franklinton Baptist Church.

Upon the retirement of Rev. Dr. John Mitchell from the pastorate of the Franklinton Baptist church, that church adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, Our pastor, Rev. John Mitchell, D. D., has resigned the pastorate of this church, to enter upon the work of the Board of Ministerial Education; and whereas, we appreciate his faithful and affectionate ministry among us; and whereas, we desire to make some permanent record of our sense of loss in his resignation, as well as of his Christ-like walk and bearing during the whole time of his pastorate; therefore

1. Resolved, That we give up our pastor with unfeigned regret; our only reconciliation to the decision he has made, being found in the fact that he deemed it to be his clear and unmistakable duty to enter upon the work of ministerial education, to which he has been called.

2. Resolved, That we gratefully appreciate his ministry amongst us, it having been able, untiring, affectionate and tender; and we commend him to his new work, and to all our brethren, as an "Israelite in whom is no guile," praying that God may grant him many years of life, and great usefulness in our Lord's kingdom.

3. Resolved, That, when our new church building shall have been completed, we shall owe its completion very largely to him, he having given towards that work his entire salary for two whole years.

4. Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the church, and a copy be furnished to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and to the North Carolina Baptist.

Ordination.

Bro. Bailey:—A large and attentive congregation assembled in the new church at this place Sunday night, February 4th, to witness the ordination of Rev. J. W. Cobb. Rev. R. H. Hedgpeth preached an appropriate sermon, the writer offered the prayer and Rev. A. R. Pittman, in his usual earnest way, delivered the charge and presented the Bible. After singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," the candidate pronounced the benediction.

The church at this place, under the care of our beloved young pastor, M. L. Keiter, is planning for more work and better work, along all lines, as well as trying to finish one of the best houses in the county.

Fraternally, C. P. MCGUGAN.

Resolutions in Regard to the Resignation of Pastor Jenkins.

The church in conference passed the following resolutions of respect in regard to the resignation of the pastor of Brooklyn Baptist church:

WHEREAS, Our pastor, Rev. J. T. Jenkins, feels that he is called to do evangelistic work, and whereas he has tendered his resignation to take effect on the 25th of March, 1894; therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby declare and publish to the world that we know of no cause whatever for separation except the one given above, and with him we would send our best wishes and our prayers.

From Moncure, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Perhaps a few words from this point will not be amiss.

Brother L. R. Dixon is in charge of the work at Gum Springs, and is doing a good work. I think he has the love and confidence of the whole church. Bro. W. H. Edwards is holding the fort at Merry Oaks to the satisfaction of all who hear him. He is the right man in the right place, and is doing a good work.

Respectfully, W. W. MOORE.

New Testament Studies—No. 2.

BY HIGHT C. MOORE.

PALESTINE IN THE TIME OF CHRIST.

1. Size. It is 144 miles long and from 25 to 90 miles wide. Its shape is that of a truncated triangle. Its area is about 9,000 square miles. The river Jordan is on the east, the Mediterranean sea on the west.

2. Surface. A branch of the Lebanon range of mountains sweeps southward through the entire length of Palestine, broken only by the plain of Esdraelon in Southern Galilee. The altitude of the mountains ranges from 2,000 to 9,000 feet. Skirting the Mediterranean is a narrow plain interrupted by Mount Carmel on the north. Lying on the east is the Jordan valley connecting the Sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea.

3. Soil. It was exceedingly fertile to the crests of the mountains no less than in the well-watered valleys. It supported 6,000,000 inhabitants. Fruit and grain grew in luxurious abundance. It was a "land flowing with milk and honey."

4. Climate. Palestine, though semi-tropical, presents in its limited area almost every variety of climate from the Artic Circle to the Equator. The crest of Mt. Hermon, 9,000 feet above sea level, is covered with perpetual snow; the heat at the Dead Sea, 1,300 feet below sea level, is almost as intense as in Central Africa. The prevailing climate is mild and the winters are short.

5. Provinces. There were three in Palestine proper: (1) On the South, Judea, the centre of Jewish conservatism and aristocracy, the seat of the Hebrew capital and holy temple. (2) In the centre, Samaria inhabited by a Jewish Assyrian people with their own laws and religion, and cut off socially and commercially from the rest of the world. (3) On the north Galilee with its mixed population of Jews and Gentiles.

6. Position. Situated at the southeast border of the Mediterranean, Palestine was virtually the corner stone of three continents and the gateway of ancient land commerce and travel. Four great highways crossed it, one of the most important connecting the very fertile valleys of the Nile and Euphrates.

7. Pursuits. The chief industry was agriculture; vineyard, garden, and field were cultivated with zealous care. Shepherds and traders also abounded, and there were smiths, carpenters, masons, weavers, tailors, fishermen, scribes, musicians, etc. Each Jewish youth was taught some special craft.

8. Government. It was a part of the world empire of Rome, had Roman governors, and paid heavy tribute into the treasuries of the Imperial City. At the time of Christ's birth, Herod the Great held away from Egypt to Damascus and from the Mediterranean to Syria. Upon Herod's death his kingdom passed into the hands of several governors appointed by the Roman power. The most important of these (though not immediately succeeding Herod) were Pontius Pilate over Judea with headquarters at Cæsarea and Herod Antipas over Galilee at Tiberias. A heavy foreign yoke and despotic rule caused much political unrest among the Jews, and they longed for the promised Deliverer.

9. Religion. Three great religious parties were in existence: Pharisees, Sadducees and Essenes. The Pharisees were the most numerous and influential and were regarded as the flower of Jewish piety; but their true characteristics were a lax inward morality, a false sanctity, a base hypocrisy and externalism. The Sadducees included a majority of the priesthood and the higher classes of the people, thus being the priestly-aristocratic party of the Jews. They opposed the Pharisees in that they rejected the Oral Law and the doctrines of the resurrection, eternal life, and the existence of angels and spirits. Their worldliness, arroganoe and severity gave them little favor with the common people. The Essenes, numbering 4,000 in the days of Josephus, were an association of ascetics, simple in their habits, refusing to drink wine and eat flesh, clothed in white linen, abstaining from marriage, never taking oaths, detesting slavery and commerce, and living in retired and solitary districts. While there was something worthy in their life and views, their religion was yet "a morbid enthusiasm for technical purity and a morose retreat from the world." Other schools of religious thought flourished, but they were comparatively small and unimportant.

10. History. Numerous wild and warlike tribes were living in its borders at the dawn of authentic history. Abraham dwelt at Sychar 2000 B. C. It was subjugated by the Jews under Joshua 200 years before the fall of Troy. "Gideon and Achilles, Elijah and Homer were cotemporaries." The Jews were masters of the country for 850 years. During the next 650 years the sceptre of its power passed successively to Babylon, Persia, Egypt, Greece and Rome. In A. D. 70 the Romans under Titus sacked its cities, devastated its country, enslaved its citizens. "It has changed owners 18 times since Christ and anybody can have it but the Jew." The Turks have ruled it for five centuries. Its fertile fields and populous cities and extensive commerce and splendid wealth are no more; it is now only a land of ruins, attractive mainly to the devout pilgrim, the curious traveler and the biblical student.

Life in itself is neither good nor evil, it is the scene of good or evil, as you make it; and, if you have lived a day, you have seen all; one day is equal, and like to all other days; there is no other light, no other shade this very sun, this moon, these very stars, this very order and revolution of things, is the same your ancestors enjoyed, and that shall also entertain your posterity.—Montaigne.

The Missionary Race.

"On the Anglo Saxon race is laid, to a large extent, the responsibility of maintaining and spreading evangelical Christianity." "The Anglo-Saxon race is the great missionary race." "Evidently it is chiefly to the Anglo-Saxon race that we must look for the evangelization of the world." These and similar remarks have caused me to ask what authority the writers had for such a position.

In this paper I will try to give some reasons for saying that the Anglo Saxon race is the great missionary race.

The first missionary society organized, the British society for the propagation of the gospel in 1701, was the work of Anglo Saxons. While it is true other people have been active and deserve praise (the Moravians have one missionary for every sixty of their members), it is also true that the first to hear and respond to the Lord's command to give the world the "bread of life," in modern times, were the Anglo Saxons.

The Anglo Saxons are doing more for the spread of the gospel than any other race. In the missionary conference in London in 1888, of the 140 missionary societies represented, 120 of them were Anglo-Saxon, 20 were Continental. Of the 1,579 members of the Conference, 1,534 were Anglo Saxon. That meeting brought out more clearly than ever the extent to which the work of giving the gospel to the world rests on the English and American people, and how nobly they are meeting the demands of the situation.

The Anglo-Saxons largely occupy the mission stations now in operation. Of 11,388 stations in foreign lands, 10,608 of them are occupied by missionaries from Great Britain, Canada, and the United States, the number from the United States being the largest. From these facts, bold and gratifying as they are, we conclude that the Anglo-Saxon race is the great missionary race. When we think of the great mission work, we will think of Anglo-Saxon organization. When we think of the progress of the glorious gospel, we will think of Anglo-Saxon energy and enthusiasm providing voice, hands and feet for the diffusion of the truth.

The Anglo-Saxons have a language best suited to mission work. The Indian Witness says, "The Roman alphabet is bound to prevail." A German, conspicuous for his ability, who believed the English language inferior to some others, and studied it to show its inferiority, said: "It contains the cream and essence of its predecessors and contemporaries. It is the best, the most forcible, the one language of all that have ever existed most suitable to become a world language." As Balaam saw the favored condition of Israel when he gazed upon them on the "top of the rocks, and beheld them from the hills," as he looked down upon them from "Mt. Pisgah," and saw that the Lord was with them, as he looked from "Peor," and saw how goodly were their tents and tabernacles, he could but say "He hath blessed, and I cannot reverse it," so this scholar could only bless and utter a prophecy which is even now being fulfilled. In 1801, the English language ranked fifth in number; in 1890, it ranked first. The Asiatic is being awaked by the voice of this wonderful tongue. As he sees its treasures, he realizes how desirable it is for mental food, how pleasant and good to make wise, and he is possessed with an appetite his mother tongue cannot appease. There is a demand for schools for the study of English. To day there are six American colleges in the Turkish empire. Where the missionary goes, soon the demand for schools for the study of English is felt.

The Anglo-Saxons have an enthusiasm which fits them for mission work. Who but Americans could in so short a time transform Jackson Park into a very wonderland. She gathered up the achievements of the past, augmented them with her own genius and gave the world the Columbian Exposition, showing how well she is qualified to accomplish gigantic enterprises when fired with enthusiasm. If nature has a secret, her progressive spirit would seek it out. If victory is yet to be won, Anglo-Saxon enthusiasm makes her children willing to enlist in the cause.

Dr. Strong says: "The Anglo-Saxon race has three supreme characteristics all united in one which will make the world ready for the coming of the Lord." To them is committed more than to any other the work of lifting the world up to God, preparing humanity for the restoration of the power lost in the fall. God does not call us to a forlorn hope, but cheers with a prospect of glorious success. The words of God to Joshua are ours, "Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses."

The Anglo-Saxon race is the most compassionate race. To them more than to any do want, squalor, sorrow, and the direful effects of sin appeal. The Hindoo in Chicago was shocked at the killing of a cow and hog for food; and denounced the religion of a nation that committed such deeds, but he did not object to the cry of the dying beneath idol cars, in the Ganges, and on funeral piles. What race but the Anglo-Saxon would have conceived the plan of rescue being executed by the Salvation Army!

The training schools, the humane societies, the missionary societies, the Bible and tract societies, are all for the uplifting of humanity, and are creations of the Anglo-Saxon people.

"Do you hear the children crying, O my brother,
Ere the sorrows come with years,
They are leaning their young heads against their mothers,
And that cannot stop their tears."

These words from the lips of an English woman looked an answer from the people, and they said we will wipe away their tears.

Is there another nation that is putting so much money in churches and institutions, all of which show their interest in humanity and their faith in God?

They sail seas, climb mountains, plough the desert, endure hardship and brave danger, that they may be instrumental in saving some one. The Hindoo and Mohammedan minister to the poor out of pure selfishness to gain merit for themselves; the missionary does it out of sympathy and in the spirit of philanthropy for the glory of God.

The Anglo-Saxon race has the most vigorous religious life, as is brought out more more forcibly in Dr. Strong's "New Era" than I can do it. If we have a religious life through which we can more clearly see our duty, that increases our responsibility. If God has given us ears to more quickly hear his voice, that puts us under obligation to respond. If God has opened our eyes to see the needs of the world as no other nation sees it, he must expect us to do the work he puts before us.

Do you slumber in your tent, Christian soldier,
While the foe is spreading woe through the land?
Let us arise! All unite! Let us in our might!
Let us arise! Speak for God and the right.

Worthy Modesty.

Modesty in prayer meeting is shown by quietly taking one of the empty front seats, instead of crowding into one of the "chief seats" in the back of the room. By this modest act on the part of one who is willing to render service, the leader is encouraged, added warmth is given to the exercises, and a good example is set by the willing hearer. Modesty in this line is a trait as commendable as it is rare.—Sunday-school Times.

How to Be a Pastor.

Determine to become a pastor, cost what it may. If you are shy and bashful, conquer your diffidence; a man has no business to be a shepherd if he is afraid of the sheep. If you are naturally reserved and reticent, unlock your lips. Go and talk with your people about anything or everything until you get in touch with them. It is not best that a minister should talk exclusively about things spiritual. Talk to them about their business, and show your interest in what they are doing.

Watch your chances to put in a timely word for your Master. You are Christ's man on Christ's business. If you can only gain your point by going often to the house, then go often. One soul wins others. You can reach the parents sometimes by reaching the son or daughter.

Personal conversations with individual souls will train you to be a closer, more suggestive and practical preacher. They will make you colloquial and simple and direct in the pulpit. Half of all the preaching is fired into the air. You will gather most precious material for your sermons by going out among your people and finding out what they are doing, what they are thinking, what they are suffering, and what they need.

Devote a portion of every day to pastoral service. To visit a large congregation consumes a vast amount of time; but can you spend it more profitably elsewhere? Be on the lookout for sermon hints wherever you go; one hour with a live man may teach you morethan two hours with a dead book.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

The Office of the Law.

"So that the law hath been our tutor to bring us unto Christ." Gal. 3: 24.

Tutor or schoolmaster is more correctly rendered "pedagogue." The office of a pedagogue was not to instruct and control but simply to accompany the child to and from the instructor proper. The pedagogue or servant was to see that the child did not delay or step aside while on the way to school; he was to see to it also that no danger should befall his ward in the way from outside parties. As soon as the child was brought to the real teacher, the pedagogue had no more control over it. The teacher assigned all exercises, so this is the office of the law. It is negative to keep us from turning aside and as soon as we get to Christ, the law is powerless.—Rev. A. M. Oroxton, in Texas Baptist-Herald.

Only the Scars Remain.

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc.," writes HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

The Eastern Band of the Cherokee Indians in North Carolina.

There are in Western North Carolina about three thousand Cherokee Indians. When the United States government decided to remove the Indian tribes west (in the Indian Territory), they sent a military force with transportation wagons to gather them up and take them to their reservation. Many of them were unwilling to go, and hid themselves in the forests until the removal was over. It was ascertained by the United States Congress that a considerable body of them were left behind, and they settled upon them a reservation of 75,000 or 80,000 acres of land, situated in Swain county, N. C. They do not own the lands in severalty, but they are protected in their ownership so that they cannot be dispossessed of it. Each head of a family can select a sufficient quantity of land for his wants, and improve it, and the improvements give him a title to hold it his life time and transmit it to his children. But he can sell his improvements and the purchaser has all the rights of the former settler. The lands of the reservation are very good, and much of it is in original forest, and is heavily timbered with very valuable timber.

They have a government of their own. They elect a chief, who serves four years (I think), and they have a council consisting of seven. They make laws for the regulation of their own tribal affairs. But they are citizens of the State, and are entitled to suffrage, and are amenable to the laws of the State. They have churches, and have some native preachers among them. They are nearly all Baptists, and have a Baptist Association. They have very good school facilities.

The United States government has established a school at Cherokee (formerly called Yellow Hill), which is kept up by the government, and then there are three other schools (probably more now) scattered through the reservation. The Cherokee school is designed to be a training and industrial school.

Those Indians are rather averse to hard work. The men are fond of hunting, and the squaws are frequently to be seen sauntering about with a little bag on their shoulders. They dig roots and gather herbs and barks, rather than till the soil. They have capacity for learning some things remarkable well. They can generally learn to sing, to recite, to draw, &c. They are very fond of being exhibited. They are very imitative. The writer had twenty of the girls in Judson College in Hendersonville, N. C., for three years, and they soon learned to imitate the white girls so perfectly that a stranger could hardly distinguish between them. They were quite fond of playing jokes in that direction. A large per cent. of them are mixed blooded. In some instances they are mixed with negro blood. But most generally with whites. Many instances have occurred where white men have married squaws to get the benefits of their reservation. Quite a number of cases occur in which white women have married Indians. Their ex chief, who died about a year ago, Chief Smith, married a white woman. Three of his daughters were with us at Judson College. Lottie Smith was considered a beauty.

They do not seem to increase in number, owing mainly to emigration. It is quite common for them to go to the Cherokee tribe in the Indian Territory.

Respectfully, J. B. BOONE.

Letter from Rev. J. O. Alderman.

Dear Recorder:—Since handing in my resignation as pastor here I have learned that even among preachers there is a gravitation towards cities—shall I not call Concord a city, it having over five thousand inhabitants? When some three years ago I resigned my field in Pamlico county I could not find a successor. But I don't find it necessary to advertise for one this time. However, cities do possess some advantages. And for the brother that can live on the field here and develop it, Concord offers some inducements. But it will require some little time to develop the field fully. And it cannot be rapidly developed, humanly speaking, by any but a good man—one that is a good preacher and also a good pastor.

The town has a population of over five thousand. It has three cotton factories, one roller flour mill, and two or three wood working mills. It has a national bank, and no bar-room. It has for several years been a "dry" town. It is as good a town morally as any I ever saw. It has three Methodist churches, two Lutheran, one Presbyterian, one Episcopal, one German Reformed, one Baptist, besides some four negro churches. It has a large and well-equipped seminary for negro women. It is the county seat of Cabarrus county.

The church here is quite young, being not yet ten years old. It has a neat, comfortable building, costing about $1,200 or $1,500, and being about five years old. On this is a debt of some $800. During the last two years the membership has increased from some sixty to about one hundred. During the same time there has been cause for only two cases of discipline. The congregations are decidedly the largest in town according to membership. Even the prayer meeting services are attended by more than a hundred as a rule, and often by two hundred or more. The Sunday-school is growing. The church last year contributed to all the objects of the Convention, found in the minutes of the Association standing third in amount of contribution. Its membership contribute according to financial standing more liberally than any church I know. They love and appreciate their pastor more than is ordinarily done. There is large room for good in the town. There is a future before the Baptist church here in Concord. A former pastor, Brother Bostick of China, was largely instrumental in securing the suppression of bar-rooms in Concord. Its present pastor brought down upon him the imprecations of many by securing the suppression of the sale of tobacco, cigars and cigarettes on Sundays. Since December 20th, 1893, the drug stores have not sold tobacco, cigars and cigarettes on Sundays. We feel that God is blessing us.

Bro. Bailey will excuse me for saying that the RECORDER has had some splendid editorials lately, especially the one on "The Bible and 'Learning.'" Also some of us admire the fearless presentation of some current events on the initial page. And "Talks About Law" find readers among others than farmers. Age is but ripening the RECORDER into more and more fruitful editions.

What a Little Girl Did.

A good many years ago, a little girl of twelve years of age was passing an old brick prison in the city of Chicago, on her way to school, when she saw a hand beckoning from behind a cell window and heard a weary voice asking her to please bring him something to read.

For many weeks after she went to the prison every Sunday, carrying the poor prisoner a book to read, from her father's library. At last one day she was called to his death-bed.

"Little girl," said he, "you have saved my soul; promise me that you will do all your life for the poor people in prison what you have done for me."

The little girl promised, and she has kept her promise. Linda Gilbert has been all her life the steadfast friend of the prisoner. She has established good libraries in many prisons, and visited and helped hundreds of prisoners; and from the great number of whom she has helped 600 are now, to her certain knowledge, leading honest lives. Prisoners from all parts of the country know and love her name, and surely the God of prisoners must look upon her work with interest.

And all this because a little girl heard and heeded the call to help a suffering soul. —Christian Inquirer.

The impediments of Christianity are more within than without to all classes. Nothing kept a Jew out of the kingdom except what ultimated in this, "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life." The excuses so many times made for not becoming a Christian, because of outward circumstances—an unfriendly environment, are all based upon the unwillingness of the heart to serve Christ there, as he may open the way for them. A Christian resistance can be made to all the evils about us, in one place as well as in another. What we do can be done for him there as well as anywhere.—Christian Inquirer.

In the March number of the Baptist Teacher, President Greene introduces a personage who has been much maligned and wrongly understood by those who measure the early Bible Characters by the nineteenth century standard. Jacob is fairly dealt with in that issue. Prof. Nordell sets forth in a clear and convincing manner the practical value of inductive study as applied to the Bible. Doctor Judson gives interesting information with regard to the plans and management of the Judson Memorial Sunday-school, which in many respects is a model worthy to be followed. Mr. Fennell's suggestions to teachers who use the Inductive Quarterlies are full and thoroughly helpful. Miss Dimock's hints to primary teachers are practical and pointed. Price, 50 cents in clubs of five or more to one address. American Baptist Publication Society.

Catholic Priests of Brazil.

"When nations are to perish in their sins,
'Tis in the church the leprosy begins:
The priest, whose office is, with zeal sincere,
To watch the fountain and preserve it clear,
Carelessly nods and sleeps upon the brink,
While others poison what the flock must drink:
Or, waking at the call of lust alone,
Infuses lies and errors of his own;
His unsuspecting sheep believe it pure,
And, tainted by the very means of cure,
Catch from each other a contagious spot,
The foul forerunner of a general rot."

I ask every reader of the RECORDER to study the above lines from the pen of Cowper. True to the letter, they give a vivid and correct picture of the Catholic priests and the people of Brazil. How true the first two lines! Had I time and space I could easily and conclusively show how, in a great measure, the present civil strife in this country is due to the influence which the Romish church has had upon the people. I am actually surprised that these people are no worse than they are. Some time ago I said in the RECORDER that the priests here are the most corrupt men I ever saw. I now make the assertion with doubled emphasis. They swear to chastity and celibacy but live as libertines. Every person here knows and can point out large families of children whose fathers are priests. They profess to be teachers and leaders of the people, but do all in their power to keep the people in ignorance and in darkness. They profess to be humble, but in all the world there cannot be found men more arrogant. They preach charity, and yet will persecute to the death. Even in this city they have so prejudiced the people against Protestants that almost every time I go out on the street some one reviles me. The other day, Miss Bruce, a Methodist missionary, and one of the best ladies I ever knew, while walking the street in this city, was actually struck by a boy, simply because he knew her to be a Christian. A native Methodist preacher was severely stoned recently in the city of Uba. These priests preach good works and lavish millions on the temples of their idols, and yet I have seen them turn away with a scornful smile when a poor helpless beggar would ask them for a penny. "They swear to poverty and extort by cunning and oppression from the people before they are born till years after they are dead." They see the poor suffer and languish, and helpless children die for bread sometimes, while they dress up thousands of images in fine silks, gold, gems and diamonds. Any one can murder his enemy, provided he pays the priest a certain sum of money. They take public collections from house to house, and the money is spent in fire-works, which are generally held on Sunday nights, a single one of which often costs $500.

Recently I saw a negro man going from house to house clothed in a long white gown and a long pole in his hand on the end of which was the image of a dove. By inquiry I learned that this dove was the Holy Spirit! The man would go to the door, present the image to the one who met him, this person kissed the image and put a collection into the collection-bag which the negro had in his hand. I need not tell you that I felt shocked at such profanation. One of the streets in this city is called "the Street of the Holy Spirit."

It grieves me to write so many bad things about these men who claim to be servants of God, and yet I have not told it all. In order to know fully, one must come and see for himself.

Below I give a clipping from a tract written by Rev. Z. C. Taylor of Bahia, and published by the Foreign Mission Board, S. B. C.: "John Martin, at ten years of age, was stolen from his English parents by a Portuguese Catholic trader, and, entrusted to the Jesuits in Brazil to raise him up in the Catholic faith. They changed his name to Joao d'Almeda. His master was the celebrated Jesuit Anchetta, called the apostle of Brazil. This John Martin grew up to be greatest fanatic that ever lived. He wore seven chains around his body, seven iron crosses with sharp points next to his skin, lacerating himself every day, allowed vermin, mosquitoes, and filth to collect on his body, which he called a mule, prayed three hours a day, and lived on bread and water." This is what priestly education did for an English boy of Protestant parentage. This is the kind of education which the priests would have all the Brazilian children to receive.

A premium is placed on licentiousness by the erection of houses for offcast children. Any cruel and brutal mother can carry, or have carried, her helpless little infant to a door in the great high wall, the latch being on the outside, she can put the poor little creature into a basket, give the bell a tap and the wheel a turn, and the infant falls into the arms of a nun, and the mother is never seen nor known. I am told that a great many of these offcast babes are children of priests. But I am weary of recalling the crimes tolerated and even encouraged among these people. Reader, lay aside the RECORDER for a few moments, take up your Bible and read carefully Romans 1: 16-32. Here is a true picture of the Brazilian people as drawn by the hand of inspiration.

Brethren pray for us and pray for these people. Yours in His dear name,

SAMUEL J. PORTER.

Ordination of Bro. J. J. Adams.

On the last fourth Sunday (Jan. 28), Bro. J. J. Adams, from your State four years ago, was ordained to the ministry of the Missionary Baptist church to preach the gospel and have care of churches as pastor, he having been previously called to the pastoral care of the Baptist church at Leary, Ga.

The presbytery consisted of brethren E. B. Carroll and G. Tom West of Albany, and Dr. Brittain of Atlanta. After examining Bro. Adams on doctrine, and on some practical dealings and on the relation of church and pastor, they pronounced him fit for ordination. The proceedings were as follows:

Bro. Brittain preached the ordination sermon; Bro. Carroll presented the Bible and delivered the charge, and Bro. West offered the prayer.

Bro. Adams is well beliked, and a good preacher we believe he will make by God's help. He attended Wake Forest College some years ago, and is well qualified mentally for the great work that he has now begun.

Is it Right?

A few days since, our Sunday school secretary received a circular from the American Baptist Publication Society setting forth that any Sunday-school not now using them, may have its Teacher at thirty cents, and Advanced Quarterly at five cents per copy per year.

I regard this as a "whited wall" designed to crush our Convention Series. It looks to me unfair not to mention unchristian. It is a direct thrust at the Convention Series, whether these brethren mean it so or not.

There is no one who deplores a wrangle more than the writer, but it is very discouraging to superintendents, after having, by hard work, induced their schools to equip themselves with our own Series, for these brethren to come along and undermine all their work.

For fear some one will not understand, I will show where the conflict is. Many schools are using the Convention Advanced Quarterly at ten cents per copy per year The Society sends circulars saying that if we are not using its Advanced Quarterly, we may have it for five cents per copy per year. But, however, if we are using them, we must pay full price, ten cents. "See."

To the Sunday-schools that are within the bounds of the Southern Baptist Convention, our Sunday-school Board looks for co-operation. Let us all stand by the Board. The literature is better suited to our needs, being edited by men who are in sympathy with all the objects of the Southern Baptist Convention, and therefore brings the schools in touch with its work.

If we will all use the Convention Series, we will enable our Board to do a great work, besides reducing the prices of the periodicals, as it will likely do when possible.

Some Things that Annoy a Preacher.

It is not probable that any one would do anything on purpose to annoy a preacher. I reckon they are like the cow, which a man, sitting on a stool was milking. Suddenly she kicked him off of the stool, prostrate on the ground, and with him the pail of milk. He got up and good naturedly said: "That is not a bad cow. She did not intend to do wrong. If she had have thought about it she would not have done it." I do not think people would annoy preachers if they would think about it. Let us mention some things that annoy preachers, for people to think about.

Some people sit with their backs to the preacher. If you were talking with a friend and he were to turn his back to you, you would not feel like talking much more to him. Sometimes out of a small congregation four or five persons will sit on a bench in front of the pulpit, with their backs to the preacher. Sometimes they sit in front of him, but turn their faces another way, or drop their heads in sleep. If you were talking with a friend and he were to act in any of these ways towards you, you would consider it at least impolite, if not disrespectful.

Preachers have seen persons sit right before them, and during the sermon, be busy with their pocket-knives trimming and cleaning their finger-nails. Hymn books are often taken up and the leaves turned, and the music half way whistled or hummed. Notes are written and passed between young people. For this purpose all the blank paper in hymn books is often torn out. A great deal of whispering, and funmaking is indulged in. The preacher sees it all. A child sometimes acts in a way to attract the attention of the whole congregation; and I have heard preachers say, that they have heard children cry and scream while they were preaching. Once during the delivery of a sermon, a prominent brother took a memorandum book from his pocket, and with a short pencil in his fingers, busied himself in figuring up accounts. Churches have appointed committees to attend to certain business and report at next meeting. They have been known to neglect that business until the day for the next meeting, and then instead of meeting before the preaching hour to attend to it, they came just at preaching-time, and attend to it out of doors while the sermon is going on. Many people rarely ever get to church until after services have commenced. Others get there in time, but stay in the churchyard until after the sermon is begun, and then come in a few at a time, to the annoyance of the preacher and those who want to hear him.

"How is your church getting on?" "Pretty well, except that a few of our members want a new preacher." "Tell those few members, that they have a good preacher, and they had better keep him; and that it will do them a great deal more good to get a larger supply of the old religion, than to get a new preacher."

This was heard, and was thought good enough to report.

These are some of the things that annoy preachers. But I am sure that the people who do such things are certainly as good as the cow; they would not do these things if they would just "think about it."

REMINDER.

"You are old, my dear grandma," the little girl said
As she lay by the fire with Dolly.
"For as white as the snow are the hairs on your head—
Yet you always look rosy and jolly.

"Pray tell me, dear grandma, the reason of this
Why you always look healthy and spritely,
Why you never are pale when you give me a kiss,
Why you take such long walks morn and nightly!"

"The reason, my darling," her grandma replied
"Is simple, it needs no description.
I've always been well, for I keep by my side
A bottle of Pierce's Prescription."

All ages, and all conditions of womanhood will find just the help that woman needs, in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. That's a matter that's guaranteed. If it can't be done, then the medicine costs you nothing—its makers don't want your money.

For all derangements, irregularities and weaknesses peculiar to the sex, "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy so certain that it can be guaranteed. If it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy positively cures catarrh.

La Grippe Again.
The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.
ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 28, 1893.
In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe. L. MOORE—Died, on Wednesday, Feb. 14th, at the residence of her father, Mr. T. M. Moore, at Warsaw, N. C., in the twenty-seventh year of her life, Miss Annie Moore. A family is bereaved, and friends without number saddened by the death that is their loss, not hers.

As a teacher she had always won the lasting love of her pupils; as a woman she has given an example of the truest nobility. A member of Johnson's Baptist church, she lived a life of unwavering Christianity. Not soon will be seen a brighter, purer, nobler spirit than this which has passed beyond the range of human ken. But the memory of her life and of her character will linger long to be a blessing to all who knew her. W.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, It was the pleasure of her Creator on the night of Feb. 14th, 1894, to send forth his harvesting angel and gather into his garner Miss Annie Moore, one of the most ardent supporters of our Sunday-school; and, whereas, we deem it proper to show our appreciation of her services,

Resolved 1. That though we as a Sunday-school sustain a great loss in her death through her influence as a teacher and worker, yet we recognize in it the ruling of an Allwise Providence.

Resolved 2. That we have lost in her one who was noble in womanhood, brilliant in mind, ever cheerful and friendly, whose high Christian character was ever an incentive to those around to a higher plain and broader view of Christian life.

Resolved 3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this their sore affliction.

Resolved 4. That a copy of this be sent to the family and to the RECORDER, and that it be placed on record of the Sunday-school.

MISS BERTHA JOHNSON,
MISS ELLA BROWN,
MR. H. G. OWEN,
MR. G. F. HANKINS.

WHEREAS, It hath pleased God to take from earth to heaven our sisters Anna T. Keeling and Fannie Jordan, be it therefore Resolved 1. That in the death of these sisters our Society suffers a loss in their prayers, sympathy and support; but has gained abiding memories of them and an endearing influence which will speak through the years to come.

2. That we calmly acquiesce in the will of God, knowing that the hand which smites is lifted in wisdom and love, and smites only to bless. While we sit amid the ruins of sweet hopes we must wait and look for their resurrection at the last day.

3. That our heartfelt sympathy be extended to the bereaved families, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to each, also the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Society.

Important to Farmers!

Yes, it is very important to all farmers to plant the best and earliest seed potatoes they can buy. To do this, they must buy the EARLY SIX WEEKS, the earliest now in cultivation. If farmers would plant this potato they would always get their crop in market in time to get seven and eight dollars per barrel. We planted this potato for the last two seasons, and selling our crop for nine dollars per barrel. This potato grows so quick the Esquimau would almost have time to mature a potato crop if he planted the Early Six Weeks. In the South two full crops can be grown in one season. Its size is large and handsome. We have one thousand barrels for sale. One lb. 40 cts.; 3 lbs. $1.00; by mail, postpaid. Peck, $1.10; bushel, $3.00; barrel, $7.00; by freight or Express. Send your order in at once before they are all sold, and give them a trial. Address all orders to the

"As one Whom His Mother Comforteth."

Moaning I lay at the foot of the cross,
My load seemed too grievous to bear—
Longing for help and compassionate love,
I had carried my burden there.

I could not pray, I could only moan,
My heart was so wounded and sore;
I longed for rest, and I longed for home,
As I never had longed before.

But the Master had not forgotten his child,
He read the unsyllabled prayer,
He gathered me close in his loving arms,
And quietly held me there.

The gnawing pain at my heart grew less,
While the tears fell one by one,
And the burden that had so heavily pressed
Grew lighter, and then was gone.

—Jennie P. Rice.

A Bible for a Pistol.

"See, mother, see what I have brought you!" exclaimed a young Brazilian, holding up to view a well-bound, gilt-edged book. "Antonio Marques told me that the priest ordered him to burn it, but he did not like to destroy so good a book, and was afraid to displease the priest by keeping it, so I offered to trade my old double-barrelled pistol for it. I thought you might like to have the book, for they say it is all about religion, and you are so religious. It might be of use when you go to repeat your prayers for people who are dying."

The mother took the book from her son's hands, and slowly reading the title, "A Santa Biblia," said: "Ah! this is good; this is the 'Rule of Life.' I am glad to have it." Then beginning at the first of Genesis, she glanced over several chapters until she reached the tenth. "Yes, you are right, my son, here is just the kind of prayer I want. Here is a long list of names, and as they are all in the Bible, they must all be of saints, and some of them will surely help the poor creatures."

The youth frequently found his mother with the book before her when he came in from his work, and had he taken the trouble to look over her shoulder, he would have found her always reading the tenth chapter of Genesis.

The woman, who had a fame of knowing by heart a great many prayers, was often sent for to go even long distances to repeat them for the hope and comfort of the dying; and she was faithfully trying to master the long names so as to say them off glibly to serve as a prayer.

One day, as they sat taking their noon-day coffee, a messenger came from a neighboring plantation, begging her to go at once to see a young girl who was very ill. With book in hand she set out, and arriving at the house, a sad though not unusual sight met her eyes. A girl of about fifteen lay upon the bed, her beautiful black eyes looking strangely bright in contrast with the pale features. The parents and sisters, instead of caring for her, were wringing their hands and wildly crying out: "She is dying! She is dying!" The sick girl feebly stretched out a wasted hand, gasping: "They say that I am dying; teach me quickly how to die; tell me, what must I do?" The old woman gently shook her hand, and in a soothing voice, said: "Don't be nervous, dear; if you will repeat after me the Pater Noster, the Ave Maria, the prayer to St. Joseph, and the rest, and then a prayer that I have learned from this good book, you need not be afraid."

A sight never to be forgotten by one who knows that there is but one "name under heaven, given among men whereby we must be saved," was this death bed scene. The old woman, in clear tones, rapidly repeated among other things: "Shem, Ham, Japheth, Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan," and so on through the long list. The dying girl vainly tried to follow her as her voice grew fainter and fainter, for she was, with all her failing strength, clinging to this false hope, as she passed out into eternity.

Some years later the young man who had gotten the Bible in such a curious way married, and left the old house to live at the wife's homestead. One evening, as the old father sat in his usual place reading, the husband said: "Anninha, what is that book your father is always reading?"

"That," she replied, "is the Bible. He often tells me about what he reads, and it is very interesting. I wish I could read it for myself; but it is a French book, and I can only read Portuguese."

"If it is called the 'Holy Bible,' said he, "then my mother has it in Portuguese, for I gave it to her long ago. I never read it myself, but she used to learn things out of it for prayers. They never sounded very interesting to me."

"Could you get it for me, Josef" she asked.

"Yes, I will go over and ask mother for it to-morrow," promised he.

When the wife got the Bible, she carried it to her father, who was much pleased to find this favorite book in his native tongue, and, opening it at the New Testament, he began to read aloud. The young couple listened, and soon grew so interested that they begged him to go on, till they kept him reading late into the night. Deeply touched by the "old, old story of Jesus and his love," they began to read for themselves. Soon they learned that pardon and peace had already been purchased for them, and that what God required of them was not penances and a bondage to fear through life, and masses and the agonies of purgatory after death, but child-like faith and loving obedience—that godliness which gives promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come.

The son's first wish was to have his mother learn the good news, so he carried back the Bible, saying: "Why, mother, you never got the best out of this book! You only looked for something to die by, and it is full of good words to live by, as well. Let me read you some."

"No, my son," responded she, "I got what I wanted out of the book, and that is enough for me. I do not care to look for more."

"But, mother," pleaded he, "you would be so much happier if you knew the true way to live and to die."

"Hush, Jose," said the mother indignantly. "Do you dare to hint that I, who have taught so many how to die, do not know myself? Let me alone, and do not trouble me any more about the book."

The man went back to his wife troubled and disappointed. The more they studied the book, however, the better they understood that it was God's Spirit who had opened their eyes, and to him they must look to perform the same miracle upon their mother, that blind one leading the blind, and for this they are still daily watching and praying."—Children's Work for Children.

Tale-Bearing.

Hannah More thought that speaking ill was as bad as doing ill. If a tale-bearer repeated to her some gossipy story she would say, "Come, we will go and ask if this be true." The tale bearer might stammer out a qualification, or beg that no notice should be taken of the story, but the good lady insisted, and scandal monger and scandalized were placed face to face.

No one ever ventured a second time to repeat a scandalous story to the inexorable lady, who insisted that what was said of an absent person should be said in his presence.

The author of "The Five Talents of Woman" quotes several amusing anecdotes of tale bearers. One tells of a Scotch minister who rebuked one of his flock for her gossiping habit. It was in the days when a gentleman carried a "repeater," a watch which struck the hours and repeated the strokes on pressing a spring.

"Janet," said the clergyman, "I have warned ye often; ye are ower muckle given to scandal. Ye maun keep your mouth as it were wi' bit and bridle, as the Scripture saith."

"Aweel, minister," replied Janet, "sea I hae always keepit a watch upon my tongue."

"Hoot, Janet! It maun have been a repeater, then."—Companion.

Rest.

How differently men and women indulge in what is called a resting spell. "I guess I'll sit down and mend these stockings, and rest a while," says the wife; but her husband throws himself on the easy lounge, or sits back in his arm chair, with hands at rest and feet placed horizontally upon another chair. The result is that his whole body gains full benefit of the half hour he allows himself from work, and the wife only receives that indirect help which comes from change of occupation. A physician would tell her that taking even ten minutes' rest in a horizontal position, as a change from sitting or standing at work, would prove more beneficial to her than any of her makeshifts at resting. Busy women have a habit of keeping on their feet just as long as they can, in spite of backaches and warning pains. As they grow older they see the folly of permitting such drafts upon their strength, and learn to take things easier, let what will happen. "They say: "I used to think I must do thus and so, but I've grown wiser, and learned to slight things." The first years of housekeeping are truly the hardest, for untried and unfamiliar cares are almost daily thrust upon the mother and home-maker.—Domestic Monthly.

The entering wedge of a fatal complaint is often a slight cold, which a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral might have cured at the commencement. Therefore, it is advisable to have this prompt and sure remedy always at hand to meet an emergency.

Stone by Stone.

Tom and Robert were walking through the woods. They came to a stream of water; both stopped, deliberating what was best to be done.

"I am going to leap it," said Tom.

"I am going to work my way over, stone by stone," said the more prudent Robert.

Tom leaped, and, missing his footing fell into the middle of the stream, whilst Robert, working his way carefully from one stone to another, landed safe and dry on the other side.

Boys, learn the lesson while yet young; the shortest way often appears the longest. Do not try to leap across the stream of difficulties that separates you from the shores of success. Perseverance, diligence, and determination are all stones cast across the stream of life. A leap will bring you down among them, wounded and bruised. But, conquer them, stone by stone, and ultimately you will reach the other shore—the coveted land of success. Remember, do not leap; work your way across the stream, stone by stone.—Ex.

Farm Mortgages.

A good deal of cheap wit is often displayed by speaking of mortgages as a farm crop, the ease with which the crop can be grown, etc. Whether a mortgage should be considered derogatory to a farm depends wholly upon the purpose for which it is incurred. To purchase a farm and give a mortgage for some unpaid portion of the purchase money is wholly honorable and business-like. If this were not done many young farmers would never be able to make a start for themselves. To mortgage a farm for the purpose of putting on substantial improvements, such as good barns, under-drainage, etc., which will help it to have a larger earning power, is also quite right, but mortgages incurred for the purpose of meeting current expenses upon a farm that is not self supporting is the greatest folly in the world. Cut down the expenses until they are within the income, or it is only a question of time when the mortgage will absorb the farm.—Ex.

IT HAS often been said that the agitation of the silver question, begun in earnest in 1890 and now thought to be waning, has been fruitful of more discussion and successful investigation, so far as development of facts and conditions is concerned, than that of any problem that has confronted our Republic since slavery was made unconstitutional. A less popular subject would have become obnoxious long ago, but "free silver," having become the idol of the people, is the subject of as much thought, though temporarily of less agitation, as it ever has been. When Congress annulled the Sherman law and adjourned for rest, it did not dispose of the question; the people still awaited that "further legislation" which many of them had been led to expect. When the law-makers re-assembled, and assumed the discussion of the tariff—for thirty years of prime importance, and now as undetermined as ever,—the people still hoped for further legislation. There is now in the Treasury a little more than $127,000,000 worth of uncoined silver, and that is something to talk about. We believe the people will continue to discuss and investigate, and impatiently hope, until something is done—until it is empirically demonstrated whether free and unlimited coinage of silver under the conditions that prevailed prior to the limiting act of 1873, will precipitate financial ruin and national collapse, as the advocates of the present policy predict. That the great body of the people believe otherwise is indubitable. The silver question cannot be settled by legislative abandonment; for the people will not abandon it so long as there is discontent in the land, and discontent will exist in no small degree until every vestige of doubt as to the merits of unlimited silver coinage is removed, whether prosperity returns or not. They have learned to view the days of free silver and demand notes with enchantment lent by distance, and no present conditions can appease them.

While the respective conditions widely differ, the attitude of the European people in this regard is in a considerable degree similar to that of the people of the United States. The subjects of England are becoming convinced that theirs is not a safe state of financial affairs, despite the boasted British financial stability. The Germany currency commission has been discussing the question, and it was debated recently in the Prussian Lantag. Italy's condition of ruin demands a financial change, and what affects Italy is felt by France. It begins to appear that the wise financiers of two continents were mistaken after all, and that silver is a prime necessity as currency,—or, at least, that gold alone is not adequate to the burden, which experienced economists declared its very own. An international agreement is not at all beyond question; and if one is reached, that bothersome "pledge," now unfulfilled, will be redeemed to the satisfaction of all classes.

THE possibilities of peanuts have been found worthy of the pens of more than one man of distinction. Not to recall an erudite dissertation of former years, Mr. Edward Bellamy, nationalist and idealist, and forecaster of the cotton seed oil industry, has in an able article pointed out the uses of the peanut, its pre-eminent use being as an oil producer, instead of as a somnific, as we had been led to believe. But like most other things of profitable possibility, the producers of peanuts have been surrounded by a trust, which, trust like, robs them of all but a starving profit. Now Judge Walter Clark* has set forth the operations of this trust, and what is better and rather unusual, instead of decrying their soullessness and disparaging the legislative conditions which permit their existence, tells how their insidious efforts may be frustrated.

In Northeastern North Carolina and lower Virginia the peanut industry is one of the most extensive of the region, and, if Mr. Bellamy is to be believed, one of the most promising; it is certain that up to the last few years it was one of the most profitable. But at present farmers are greatly discouraged, being compelled to sell their peanuts to a trust, which by combination, like our tobacco trust, has so arranged that all peanuts must go through their hands before reaching the market. It claims to have a process of cleansing them, which is very expensive and intricate, and has educated the people to believe that this is true, and that it is essential to the fitness of the product. On the contrary, Judge Clark shows that this so-called process is, in the first place, a sham, and in the second, very simple and not expensive. In the present conditions, wrought by the trust, farmers are raising peanuts to sell at two cents a pound to a trust that handles them at a cost of one-fifth of a cent a pound, and puts them on the market at from four to seven cents a pound. This is an enormous profit even for a trust, and we are glad that the Judge has called the attention of the public to the evil, and suggested that the producers of peanuts combine, and build and equip their own "factories," as a remedy. It is refreshing to know that there is a trust which, though one of those "private affairs, with which the public have nothing to do," is at the mercy of those on whom it now imposes, and by whose oppression it has grown rich.

*Vol 14, No. 4, of The Bulletin, containing Judge Clark's article, and other valuable matter relating to the peanut industry, can be obtained on application by postal to the Department of Agriculture, Raleigh, N. C.

WHEN it is stated on authority that in one city in the United States the yearly expenditure for strong drink is $60,000,000, for its amusements $7,000,000, and only $4,000,000 for its schools, it is time for all good people to give the liquor question serious attention. We are aware that these deplorable proportions do not prevail throughout the land, but no one doubts that the sale of liquor does prevail to an alarming extent in all parts of the country, and the expenditure for uninstructive amusements is also quite unworthy of our civilization.

The liquor traffic must be curtailed by some means, if our nation is to be what every Christian and every worthy citizen desires it to be. And action must be taken in the near future, or new means for the imprisonment of criminals, prevention of crime, and protection of the insane, be devised. We do not speak as a fanatic. The matter is serious—quite as serious as the question of protective or revenue tariff. We have watched the efforts of the South Carolina authorities as well as we could at our distance, and have yet to form a favorable opinion of them. It seems to us that Gov. Tillman's efforts are in themselves an evidence of the futility of politics to cleanse a State of the evil. We do not believe that the prohibition question is a matter of politics in the usual sense of the word. Liquor drinking may be prohibited by general law, but it is prohibited only to certain classes. The vicious will drink under any system of that it is, first, a matter for Christians, laws that may be devised. We do believe every one of whom should discountenance the traffic; and second, for true citizens, who cannot but know that liquor drinking is inimical to every good interest. If these discountenance the traffic, none but the vicious will aid it, and it will languish from neglect. And if the rising generation is taught to abhor the drinker and the seller, the vicious class will be greatly diminished. But this is a slow process: something must be done in the meantime—now. Local option is as far as we can go and not mix with politics, and we believe that local option will do more than politics ever could; for it prohibits the sale of liquor by vote locally just as effectually as a general law would, and it has the merit of being on a platform to itself, and thus is offensive to no respectable class. A political party is not the only means of accomplishing anything in our country: there are other means just as effectual, and less exposed to opposition, and therefore more feasible.

ABOUT one sixth of the total mileage of the railways of the United States, representing a capitalization in bonds and stocks of about $1,750,000,000, has passed, since January 1st, 1893, from the control of the owners of the roads into the hands of the courts, to be administered by receivers. These figures show that the railways suffered more last year than any other business enterprise. In view of this it is not unusual that the great magazines are inquiring into the causes of such extensive failure in one branch of commerce. It is, indeed, remarkable that enterprises so vitally important to our commercial interests, enterprises that always have patronage, being the agencies of one of the great divisions of human industry—transportation,—should suffer greater loss than any other concern. And it seems more remarkable in view of the statement that the average decrease in railway receipts during the year was only three per centum—considerably less than that of the average business enterprise, and a great deal less than the average decrease in the receipts of general merchants.

A writer in the Forum states that the prime cause is ill management. A railway manager is in an equally responsible position as a cabinet officer. He is the general of a large and various army, and his duties require great executive ability; and this ability is not too abundant. Another notable cause is the effort of railway officials to gratify the demands of bond-holders for interest on their investments, in which all earnings are paid out, and nothing is left for stringent times. They must pay dividends promptly, or their stock will fall. Again, a railway is always rebuilding. New and more costly equipments have to be added as they are found needful, and the old stock, which once represented capital, on which bonds were issued, is replaced at greater cost. Thus the writer in the Forum shows that the cause of so many railway receiverships lay in the railway management. The stringent times were the occasion only. A writer in the North American Review discusses the question of "friendly" receiverships, which no doubt was suggested by the present condition of railway affairs. Receiverships amount to nothing, so far as their original object is concerned, in these times. The receivers are usually officers of the road, or are appointed at the suggestion of the trustees of the road, and have nothing to do with the management. They serve only to continue the former operations of the railway without paying its debts, and instead of being a guarantee of equitable adjudication, they serve only to force the creditors of the road to accept unfair compromises.

Young People's Societies.

Dear Recorder:—Among your many interested readers, I doubt if there can be found any who are more rejoiced than myself over the decided stand taken by the RECORDER in a recent editorial in favor of organizing the young people in all the Baptist churches in North Carolina. It is a step in a most hopeful direction. It is a progressive movement, and will help to bring the good old State into the march of progress that of late years has been sweeping over the whole country. Why should the good old State of North Carolina lag behind in respect to this and other movements that have been owned and blessed of God in the quickened spiritual life of people in other sections and States of this Union. The editorials in the RECORDER of late breathe a spirit of independence and of progress that must be highly gratifying to many North Carolinians living in the State and in other States who have witnessed in other sections of the country the beneficial results of young people's organizations. Of course, some good people are afraid of every new thing, and it is not a surprise to any to learn that the "movement" among the young people in our churches is being discouraged by some. They honestly think that this movement looking toward the organization of the young people will be an injury in some way to the cause of Christ. It is said that Cromwell, when arguing with his friends, would often say, "By the grace of God, I beseech you imagine for one moment that you possibly may be mistaken." So say I to those who cry out against the organization of the young people and against women's work in the church. I beseech you imagine for one moment that you possibly may be mistaken. It is the only thing to do. It will put one in a condition to impartially weigh the facts and arguments presented in favor of the other side of the question. It is a sure way of getting at the truth in respect to these matters now under consideration. It is the only corrective for the narrow policy pursued by some really good people.

There is a latent power in the churches that needs to be, and must be utilized and developed for the good of the cause of Christ in North Carolina as it has been utilized and developed for Christ's sake in other States. The societies among the young people and among the women are now the most hopeful feature of church life in this age. The young people's organizations or societies bring the young people together in Christ's name and work under circumstances which enable them to realize responsibility, and enjoy a freedom in worship which they do not have in the meetings with the old and more experienced Christians. We have a Tuesday-evening meeting for all the members of the church, and a Thursday-evening meeting for the young people only. It is impossible to say which of these meetings is most beneficial to the church, or which is most comforting and helpful to the pastor. Both are good. They are very unlike. In the young people's meeting the talks are very short, but to the point. So are the prayers and hymns. In the Tuesday-evening meetings it is not so. Custom has made it different there. And there is an old adage which says, "It is hard to learn old dogs new tricks." It is hard to get the old brethren to be brief. It seems almost wicked to them, if you ask them to make short prayers, or speak to the point and be brief. And as the older people set the example in making lengthy remarks and prayers, it looks almost like a failure if some of the young people get up and speak but a few words and sit down. But in the young people's meeting, it is not so. It is quite the thing. And, therefore, the young who have but little to say, do not hesitate there to say it. The result is increased activity, deepened interest in the worship of the Lord, and a quickened sense of responsibility. Pastors are greatly helped by these young people's meetings. In them they are closely associated with the boys and girls, and have opportunity to study their nature, disposition, mental operations and capabilities.

But I have to confess that there is one serious obstacle in the way of developing as much interest in young people's societies in the South as they have in the North. And that serious obstacle is the opposition to women speaking in public. I simply state a fact when I say that the meetings among our young people would lose four-fifths of their interest and helpfulness, if the women were to literally keep silence in the churches. For there are very few young men in the churches. Statistics carefully collected show that not more than five per cent. of the young men in this country to day are active Christians. Now if the sole dependence for successful meetings with us as with you in the South was upon the young men, I frankly confess that I do not think the meetings would last very long. For, instead of a great variety of talks and many voices, we would hear only a few voices and great sameness in the talks in the young people's meetings, and this would itself soon kill the meetings.

If you will make inquiry, you will find that at least four fifths of those who take part, aside from singing, in the young people's meetings in the North, are girls and young ladies. They do not so often venture to lead in prayer, though this is by no means uncommon with us, but they do not hesitate to recite Scripture verses and add a word or two of testimony, saying, for instance, something like this, "This verse of the Word of God expresses the sentiments of my heart this evening. 'I love the Lord because he hath heard my voice and my supplications.' For some time I have been praying earnestly for a certain thing, and recently the long-desired blessing came to me, and I feel it to be in answer to prayer, and I want to acknowledge the Lord's goodness to me in this matter. The blessing came when most needed. And I thank the Lord for it."

Short testimonies of this character make up the bulk of the talks made, and possibly they do not violate the spirit or words of Paul who said, "Let your women keep silence in the churches" any more than the teachings of women in the Sunday-school or the singing of the women in the regular church services violates the command to keep silent. If it does not, it is time we were finding it out. But woe be unto the pastor in North Carolina who advocates women talking out in meeting even this much. This, I say, is the serious obstacle in the way of having as good meetings among the young people in the South as they have in the North. But still you can have meetings and good meetings.

As to other features of the young people's work, I have only to say that if properly looked after, there is no feature of the work recommended by the Baptist Young People's movement, or the Christian Endeavor movement, that may not be of great value to the church. Even the committees appointed to call on the sick and leave flowers to remind them that they are not forgotten by their brethren in Christ, but are kindly remembered, have in very many instances been graciously used of God in the development of Christian sympathy and love among members of the church.

And when there is a desire on the part of the pastor to hold a short prayer meeting, either before or after the evening service, the organization of young people can be called upon to make any special arrangements that may be necessary to make the meeting a success. The young people in this way are the pastor's real helpers; they are relied upon by him as Cæsar relied upon his tenth legion. And they sometimes feel led of God to take hold of some special work and sustain it by personal sacrifices. Our young people, for instance, are now educating a boy in Burmah, and sustaining, through the Missionary Union, a native missionary there. They also make a thorough canvass of the entire church membership every month to solicit contributions for the missionary cause. They take from five cents to one dollar a month from the members in this way; and raise a great deal more in this way than the church could possibly raise by the old plan of taking a collection once a year for Foreign Missions. The young people themselves appoint their own collectors and hold frequent meetings among themselves for conference about the work. It helps the young people to have this responsibility laid upon them. It makes them put on their "studying caps." It develops their sympathy and calls forth their prayers and energies.

The older people have their work also, and in some things there is no discrimination as to sex or age made, but the church as a whole devises plans of work and executes them. "To every man his work" is a good motto for all churches. There need never be any wide chasm between the young people and the old people of the church because of the young people having an organization of their own inside the church. With the young people it is simply a question of doing something or nothing. For years, they have done comparatively nothing; now they are beginning to take hold vigorously of the work and worship of the Lord, and God's Spirit is evidently being poured out upon all flesh so that both our sons and our daughters prophesy. Some think that organizations of the young people make a chasm between the young people and the old people in the church. But did the holding of women's prayer-meetings in the days of Paul in Macedonia create a chasm between the women and men? No. Paul attended one of these meetings and did not raise any protest against such meetings. Why then should meetings held specially by young people create any chasm between the old and young in church life? The conclusion is this: encourage the young people to organize the young people's societies, and map out programs of their own to be followed in their meetings. Let them develop their own minds and hearts by such exercises. It will be for their good and add to the efficiency of the whole church. Let the pastor belong to the young people's society, but not attempt to run it, or map out every thing himself. That would defeat one of the objects of the organization. Let him leave the young people free to get up some things themselves. Let him simply exercise a fatherly watch-care, and occasionally give them the benefit of his thoughts even as he occasionally gets the benefit of their thoughts. Wise men can learn some things sometimes by conversing with fools. A pastor can sometimes get good suggestions from the young people. Let him keep in sympathetic touch with them. But do not let him "boss" them. The young people's meetings will often be an inspiration to him in his work. And he can utilize the strength, enthusiasm, vigor of hope, and spirit of enterprise found in the young, and make them tell for good upon the older people in the church, who will quicken their pace in the Lord's work when they feel and witness the activities of the young. "If this thing be of men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest haply ye be found to fight against God." I believe it to be of God, and congratulate the RECORDER on the stand it has taken in the matter. Let young people's societies be organized in all the churches.

The Prayer-Meeting.

I love it. I am always glad when Wednesday night comes so I can attend. I like it so much that I always go. Nothing but sickness, or absence from home keeps me away.

I love the prayer-meeting because I there meet my brethren and sisters in Christ, and can exchange social greetings with them. I love it because I love my pastor, and am delighted and edified to hear him expound some Scripture, discuss some Christian topic or impress some Christian duty. I like it, because it is a meeting thrown open to all the brethren. I love to hear them talk of the plain practical things that are a part of their Christian lives. I love to gather with all around the common mercy-seat in prayer.

When in these meetings I always feel that "It is good to be here." "A day in thy courts is better than a thousand." I go from these meetings and think with pleasure and profit of what was said by the pastor and brethren. They help me in my Christian life and work. My spiritual nature is strengthened. I take firmer hold on spiritual things.

The Uncertainty of Plans.

A young countess in Hanover, Germany, was a noted unbeliever. She was especially opposed to the doctrine of the resurrection. Before her death, she gave orders to have her grave covered with a slab of granite clamped to other stones, and that on the stone should be engraved the following words: "This burial place, purchased to all eternity, must never be opened." All that human power could do to prevent that grave from being opened was done. But a little seed found lodgment in a crevice of the stones that covered that body, and sprouted. The tiny shoot found it way between the stone side and the slab that lay on the top of the grave. It grew by degrees, and at last actually lifted the heavy slab, and forced the gravestones apart. Thus the grave was opened, after all, and that too without any miracle. A large tree growing there now attests the powerlessness of human plans. The people of Hanover are said to regard this grave with a kind of awe, feeling that it is a sort of prophecy of the great resurrection day that is yet to come.—Sunday-school Times.

Two Sermons.

It is fair to judge of a sermon, not only by the pleasure which it gives a hearer while listening to it, but by the abiding impression it leaves upon his mind. Two friends, on a recent Sabbath, went to hear two distinguished metropolitan preachers, and at the close of the evening were comparing notes as to the day's experiences. "I cannot exactly define the flaw in the morning's discourse," remarked one friend. "It was able, brilliant, and, in a certain sense, spiritual; but it sent me home to speculate and philosophize over matters which heretofore I had accepted in simple faith. It unsettled old beliefs, and gave me nothing satisfying in return. But from the other sermon," he continued, "I came away with a great longing to get on my knees before the Lord and implore him to make me the man he designed me to be, and then send me forth to wider service for the blessing of mankind. One preacher stimulated the mental faculties; the other quickened the soul's noblest aspirations. Which sermon was the better of the two? Which effect is more to be desired?—Congregationalist.

LOOKING FOR RESULTS.

We, living in a day of material tendencies, are apt to overlook the spiritual in many important phases of our religion. The unseen and intangible, however much sought after, are counted as nothing until they become within the grasp of the people, are known of men. We love the mysterious, but we do not value it. It has attraction for us, but if it does not become real and comprehensible, people have little use for it. We value the material only; it is a business-like world.

So in our religious conduct we expect results, real and comprehensible, from our prayers and faith and work in the Lord. The evangelist is happy, if the papers can truthfully announce that his exhortations have resulted in a hundred professions of religion, and therefore his meeting has been a great and glorious one. He is disappointed if a series of meetings are the means of the reclamation of only one backslider, and the papers are silent. He forgets the good shepherd who rejoices at the finding of one stray lamb. He looks for results, and large results at that. It is easy to account for this: Men love reputation, and the people, who judge by results, will not remember the evangelist if he does not "make a great impression." The people say he is successful, has great power, is blessed of the Lord, if his meetings result in large numbers of professions. But professions, we regret to say, may be the result of the effect of personal force and eloquence on an emotional nature, or very fear, or a sense of obligation. Such professions are of the flesh and not the spirit. There are but few of us who haven't seen exemplifications of this. Towns have been "shaken from the foundation," "the oldest and meanest of sinners" have made public their repentance, and given many evidences of regeneration, only to fall back in the old ways as soon as the eloquence of the speaker has spent its force. They do not fall from grace, for they never knew grace. They have forgotten the impressive manner of the preacher, and the solemnity of the occasion, and the impetus added by the sight of many others making professions. They become cold and hopeless. Their temporary good words and works are born of men, for they know not that all righteousness, all faith, does not come from a reformation of character, but from God. Their change began in the material power and hopes of the preacher, and their faith was material. We are not speaking generally, but in regard to special cases, in which it was evident that the workers were intent more on reforming sinners, and a great many of them at a time, than in impressing the saving grace of Christ, and working for his glory. They prayed for results, they worked for results, and they would have been greatly disappointed if great results had not been plainly visible. It was their will and their glory, and not the Father's. And the "convert's" good works were for his own sake instead of Christ's.

So, too, pastors are often said to be unsuccessful because their labors do not result in great and quick growth in their churches. And, on the other hand, those whose congregations are "large and increasing," are said to be successful. They may be, and they may not; we cannot judge; but no one has reason to say that a pastor is unsuccessful because his congregations do not increase, however strong a testimony to God's grace a large congregation may be. It is always a question whether success is attained through power of education and cultivated eloquence, or an earnestness born of love of God, and faith in Jesus' name. We forget that God's ways are mysterious, that his answers to prayers may be swift and evident, or slow, gradual and imperceptible, as he sees fit. There are such things as faith in God, and direct and unmistakable answers to prayer, but those who pray must not only be faithful, but also ready and happy to say "not my will, but thine," before the prayer is answered. A prayer may be ever so fervent and humble, but if it comes from a spirit that will be aggrieved and disappointed if it is not answered just as it is prayed, it will hardly be answered. God knows best, and all who call upon him should be willing to abide his will before they call him Father.

The pastor often longs for a season of revival. His church is not what it should be, —one continual revival. He prays earnestly, and fondly believes the time is at hand for a good meeting. Perhaps the meeting appears to fail; no backsliders reclaimed, no sinners saved. People call it a failure any way, and the pastor bears the brunt of it. But it may not have been a failure after all. The pastor's prayers may yet be answered most fruitfully. God's ways are mysterious. The pastor may learn by an apparent failure to rely more upon God and less on the power of his speech; the church may be humbled. More than these, invisible impressions may have been made that ripen into glorious results, of which the papers know nothing. We have heard of cases of this kind. An aged pastor had held what he thought a fruitless series of meetings; never in his career had his sermons had less visible effect. He thought there was something wrong with the church, as his efforts had been often blest. The church thought there was something wrong with the preacher. But the meeting was not fruitless. One lone boy had been convicted of sin, and inclined to Christ, but he didn't profess it then. He became one of our greatest preachers. The pastor, through whom he had received the impression that converted him, was dead, and the meeting forgotten, long before its results ceased; and they will never cease. Such results do not make a preacher successful in the world's eyes; they cannot be counted and accredited in the world's way. Thus it often is. God sows many seeds that are not counted by men, and he can sow as successfully through humble and unknown laborers as through men of great learning and eloquence. But our way of counting heads, looking for the material, instead of having faith in the spiritual, has made the former "unsuccessful."

"By their fruits" doesn't mean numbers and quantity, but quality. The fact that one preacher is the means of the conversion of a hundred souls is no more evidence of his spiritual power than the saving of one soul; for if one soul is saved, the meeting is successful, and the Good Shepherd rejoices. We should pray with faith in God, and should never abandon it, however long he may be in answering us. He knows best, and his own good time is far better than ours; and in his time every faithful prayer will be answered as it should be. It is well to save great numbers, but let us not despise the day of small things; let us not forget the parable of the good shepherd. Let us leave the counting to him, for whose glory we work.

IT isn't creditable to one's character or intelligence to say that the Baptists of North Carolina are contending for the destruction of the State University. They are contending for a principle—broad, well known and clearly defined. They believe that the present system is unwise and unjust, but they do not hold that destruction of anything is necessary to the correction of the system. We certainly hope that discussion of the principle will not lead to exaggerated statements, uncalled for imputations, or bad feeling. If Baptists are contending for anything, it is the abolition of inequitable and unwise appropriation of taxes, and not the abolition of any good institution.

BRO. MCDUFFIE speaks of the RECORDER'S strong position in regard to young people's societies on our first page. We have advocated them only so far as we have been able to see their good side. We do not endorse the general movement and a national organization. There is a need for something that will increase the zeal of our youth—between Sunday-school and church,—and for something that will excite the interest of our children in denominational history as well as doctrines, and we do not know but that young people's societies are that means. Therefore, have we spoken in their favor. They have been a success in other States, if we are to believe hundreds of testimonies, and we do not see why they should not do good work in North Carolina. We cannot but recognize the need of something of the kind; therefore let us have them, locally only, as an experiment, if for no other reason.

WE all feel like reorganising as the advent of spring becomes apparent. The winter, with its rainy days and muddy roads, is almost behind us once more. Let us redouble our efforts this year, and let us begin now. More for missions—all kinds—more for orphanage, for education, relief board, more for every good cause;—more prayers, if not more money; more work anyway. We are reorganizing our forces, and we want to have the RECORDER in more families this spring than it has ever been in before. Brother pastor, you can help us if you try; and now is a good time to begin. The North Carolina Zion is growing at the rate of a church a week, some one says, not to speak of the many new members being added to old churches. Surely we should grow more in the spring; everything else does. But be sure to quarantine against the spring epidemic—laziness—before you begin to make efforts to grow.

COL. C. H. BYRUM succeeds the late Dr. Benj. Griffith as Secretary of the American Baptist Publication Society.

A PROMINENT speaker addressing a Baptist Convention said not long ago: "There is no such thing as an 'out-of-the-way' place." The thought is not new; it was the consolation of the apostles wherever they went. But it is often forgotten by modern laborers who are fighting their way through wildernesses of sin, or struggling with apparently spiritless charges, or almost overwhelmed by the darkness pervading the lives of their fellows. But the Christian laborer is not alone; he may be beyond the reach of friends, or news of friends, but communication with God is never cut off. The so-called "out-of-the-way place" needs the light, and he who carries the light to it is blessed indeed. The occupants of temples, those whose eloquence have won the admiration of large congregations, are not necessarily in the kingdom." The saintly souls who go "first out from friends into darkness, carrying the blessed gospel light, though it cost them pleasant friendships and divides them from loved ones, they are the heroes in real life, they have the blessed assurance, "I am with you always." Jacob, a poor, lonely wanderer, laid his head upon a pillow of stone to rest in what seemed to him a desolate place, but before he left he was made to exclaim, "Surely, the Lord is in this place." And the Lord was there, and the Lord's abundant promises in Jacob were as safe there as anywhere on earth.

THEY who build a church rear a monument to God. The workers die, but the church lives, and their work ceases not. But we do not wish to speak of the spiritual aspects of a church especially. There are many temporal things that are worthy of attention.

Of all the houses on earth the greatest regard should be had in building a house of worship. It is a gathering place for human beings who love and seek comfort, and it should be as comfortable as possible. There should be self sacrifice among Christians, but the church building is not the place for the exercise of self-sacrifice. A comfortable building may not make a church spiritual, but it does aid in the success of a pastorate. It attracts people who are not spiritual, and thus brings them closer to God's power. It should be neat in every sense of the word. And just here there is occasion for many words. Some church-builders now are more anxious to make a church beautiful—in the popular sense of the word—than tasteful. Gaudy windows, which, by the way, we think must have been devised to prevent the audience from looking through them, handsome mouldings and costly wood-work, are often preferred to more ornate neatness. Plain simplicity without and within are more in accord with the gospel that should be taught from the pulpit than all the grandeur of a temple. And more than this, if any money can be spared, after the building has been made attractive and comfortable, it can be better applied to a mission station or an unhoused flock. We have not yet reached the time when our liberality finds vent only in grandeur. The Ark of the Covenant is as secure in a modestly neat building in these days as it was in the magnificent temple of David.

God is in the humblest house that is truly dedicated to him, and for this reason, if no other, we should design our edifices to please him, and not men, even as David did in his lofty structure, which excited the admiration of all Israel. While we do not approve of applying David's conceptions to modern edifices, we do not advocate the austere surroundings that speak of miserliness. There is a difference between simplicity and severity. Men must be attracted, and a church building helps attract them; but we need not go too far and make the building so attractive from a human standpoint that the divine will be overlooked, or so severely simple that man will be repulsed. No building is worthy of God, if that is what the temple builders aim at; and yet any building wherein two or three may gather in his name will be blessed with his presence. The edifice in which one may worship without reminders of the ills of the flesh—cold draughts, uncomfortable seats and bad acoustics—on the one hand, and on the other, without so much beauty and attractiveness as to compel our attention to the building instead of the pulpit, is the building for an active church. And this means simple neatness, sensibility, and Christianity.

THE Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention has at present about 180 missionaries under its auspices, fifteen of whom are in this country under appointment or returned temporarily. In addition to these there are native assistants in China, Brazil and Mexico. The missionaries are distributed as follows: Southern China, 17; Northern China, 18; Central China, 15; Africa, 8; Italy, 17; Japan, 4; Brazil, 19; Mexico, 81. All but three of the Italian missionaries are natives. These against the heathen millions, thousands of whom die each year!

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

THE MAXTON BRETHREN

are anxious to secure a pastor for their church. Laurinburg is also without a preacher. These churches could form a field that ought to delight any preacher who loves to live with good people, and who wants to do hard work and a plenty of it. The brethren at Laurinburg say they are in debt and think they had better devote their contributions, at present, to pay what they owe. This may work well in this instance, but as a rule it is easier to pay a church debt with a pastor than without one.

Bro. J. T. Elmore, who has been one of the brethren to support the work at Maxton, has just moved to Henderson, and now is road-master of the R. & G. and D. & N. Railroads. While the brethren at his old home regret to give him up, yet his promotion by the railroad authorities to a more responsible place as well as better pay, reconcile them to the loss they sustain.

Just a year ago I was in

where I remained thirty days for repairs, but judged from the brethren's kind treatment they had nothing against me for this. Since then Bro. Martin has continually grown in favor with his people. The membership now numbers some 300, and the outlook seems to be encouraging in every way. Then there was no school; now the Robeson Institute is thoroughly organized, and I see from a report by the Superintendent that 160 students have already been enrolled. I do not think there is a school in the State with a brighter future. The time was ripe for its opening, and its success seemed to be assured from the beginning. The building is complete in all of its appointments, and Prof. Duckett, who for many years has been a successful teacher in the State, is more than meeting the expectations of the friends and patrons of the school. Col. T. F. Toon is Prof. Duckett's assistant and is doing fine work in his department as teacher, and finds no trouble in dispensing some of the fine discipline which he so bountifully possessed in the days of the "Confederacy." Several boys from this school will be at Wake Forest next session.

I had not noticed before that so many nice little towns had been built up in recent years between Lumberton and WILMINGTON.

I found Bro. Oliver in rather poor health, but able to be at his work. I was delighted to see that the brethren were much pleased with their new pastor, and that they were really enthusiastic over some new and more systematic methods which the church has adopted for meeting the current and other expenses of the church.

Bro. Oliver realizes the magnitude of his work, and if he can only be blessed with the physical strength to carry out the plans and desires of his heart, he will do a fine work in the near future.

I do not know what the Brooklyn brethren intend now since they have no pastor. I can but hope some of the brethren who are so able and whose hearts are in the work will unite in this work and carry it to the success of which they are so capable.

I found Bro. D. L. Gore still enough to get a word or two. He said: "I never enjoyed reading the RECORDER so much before. The articles on the first page are the best I see anywhere."

OUR CONVENTION DEBT.

I am glad to find so many of our brethren concerned about this matter. A great number are asking how it is that the Sunday-school Supply Store has gotten in debt. By reference to the minutes of our Convention, it will be seen that in 1881, the Convention instructed the Sunday-school Board to establish a Sunday-school Supply Store, and for this purpose about one thousand dollars was subscribed by different individuals; but according to the report of the Sunday-school Board in 1882, only about two hundred and seventy five dollars of the one thousand dollars had been paid. The stock was bought, of course on a credit, and was kept as a running account of the "Sunday-school Board" until 1887, when the present Cor. Secretary was elected, and the Sunday-school Board and the Board of Missions were consolidated and called the "Board of Missions and Sunday schools." This debt, then, was brought over and became the property of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools and has been kept through all these years just as it had been done by the Sunday-school Board from 1881 to 1887, as a running account with the publishers. And now the publishers decline to carry it longer in this way, and we hardly think any one can blame them, for they have been kind and indulgent for a long time.

According to the report as read by the Corresponding Secretary at our last Convention, no part of our work has done better than the business of the Supply Store. The report shows that by an inventory at cost price, the assets of the Supply Store exceed all its liabilities by $341.97.

I write this as an answer to many brethren who desire to know just how the matter stands and how we came in possession of this debt. I find many brethren who are anxious to help relieve the Convention of what appears an incubus upon our work.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. Dr. J. B. Taylor of Salem, Va., is on a visit to Florida.

....Rev. M. P. Matheney recently held a series of meetings at Troutman's, Iredell county.

....Rev. J. A. W. Thomas has resigned the pastorate of his churches in Marlborough county, S. C.

....Dr. Kerr P. Tupper will remain in Denver, Col., having declined the call to a Brooklyn church.

....Dr. L. G. Broughton will be in Raleigh about the 13th, and commence a series of meetings at the Tabernacle.

....Bro. C. F. Reid who has been quite ill at Wake Forest is much better and his friends hope to see him out again soon.

....It is stated that the church at Waynesville, Rev. M. A. Jenkins pastor, has doubled its congregation since January 1, 1894.

....Rev. J. L. White's revival meetings in Charlotte were discontinued on account of the weather. They will be resumed in April.

....Dr. J. A. Mundy of Wilson will assist Rev. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton in a series of meetings the latter part of this month.

....The Baptist church at Statesville is making efforts to erect a chapel on a site recently given them by the Statesville Improvement Company.

....We congratulate the Senior Class of Wake Forest College on securing Rev. S. M. Poteat of New Haven, Conn., to preach the baccalaureate sermon.

....Rev. R. Van Deventer has been called to the pastorate of Reidsville, and is reported as considering the call favorably. He preached there on the 28th ult.

....Rev. M. P. Matheny has removed permanently to Gastonia, N. C., that point being most convenient for his present pastorate. Correspondents take notice.

....We were very glad to have a visit from Rev. W. A. Smith of Cedar Rock last week. He reported all his four churches in good condition and his school as flourishing.

....On last Sunday night Dr. J. W. Carter of the First church, Raleigh, began a series of sermons on the "Mysteries of the Bible." The series promises to be of great interest.

....The railroad men are reminding us that the time for the Southern Baptist Convention is not far off. We hope there will be a "large and enthusiastic" North Carolina delegation.

....We were very glad to have Dr. Mitchell in our office last Friday, on his return from a very encouraging trip in the eastern part of the State in behalf of the Board of Education.

....The new house of worship at Harrietta was not dedicated at the time appointed—Sunday, March 25th—on account of the severe snow storm. It will, perhaps, be dedicated in April.

...."The devil already has a good start in the family where no religious paper is taken."—Ram's Horn. Look around, reader, and see if you cannot find some such families.—Western Recorder.

....We congratulate Bro. Kedar Vann and wife of Sampson county on reaching the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, which event they celebrated recently. Our good wishes attend them.

....Dr. W. S. Black has resigned the management of the Oxford Orphan Asylum to accept appointment as Presiding Elder of the Warrenton district, made vacant by the death of Rev. S. D. Adams.

....The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools will meet Tuesday, March 20th, at 7:30 p. m., at which time delegates to Southern Baptist Convention will be appointed, and other business transacted.

....The Trustees of this school exercise just enough authority to be helpful to a teacher and not enough to hamper and embarrass the progress of the school—Prof. J. E. Ducket of Robeson Institute.

... Bro. L. G. Broughton writes from Roanoke, Va.: "Our meeting is still progressing—forty-six professions up to date. Will continue this week. Bro. C. A. D. Thomas is doing good preaching."

....Dr. Cobb had the assistance of Dr. Thos. Hume in the ordination of deacons in his church at Pittsboro on the 25th ult. Dr. Hume delivered one of his enjoyable lectures in Pittsboro the evening preceding.

....Dr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Sanderlin of Washington City celebrated their silver wedding, and the good Doctor's birthday, on the 22d ult. We tender congratulations, and wish them many happy returns.

....Rev. J. F. Love of Suffolk, who will aid Bro. Hunter of Raleigh in revival services this month, is an East Carolina boy, and a Wake Forest alumnus. His meeting at Suffolk last fall was one of the greatest ever held in that town.

....If any of the delegates or visitors to the Southern Baptist Convention wish to go from Dallas, Texas, on an excursion to the city of Mexico, they had best write to Rev. J. M. Carroll, Lampasas, Texas, for information about the trip.

....We have received a very interesting letter from China which we would be glad to lay before our readers, had we not sometime since determined to close the discussion of "Mission Methods." We are of the opinion that the relative merits of the methods in question will demonstrate themselves in their how good time, and just now no amount of discussion can do any good. Better preach the gospel of "Go teach."

....We have received an excellent little book—"Talks on Home"—by Rev. L. G. Broughton of Roanoke, Va. It is full of good advice aptly given. It can be obtained from the Sunday-school Supply Store, Raleigh, N. C., for 35 cents.

....The Wake Forest Student for February presents an excellent table of contents. Reminiscence, history, sentiment, fiction and humor are some of the things that constitute the number. The departments, as usual, are well conducted.

....The new house of worship at High Shoal was dedicated Saturday, Feb. 24th, 1894. Rev. C. Durham preached the sermon. The house is 40x60 ft., and 18 ft. pitch. It cost $1,225, and every dollar was paid before the day of dedication.

....Rev. J. A. Campbell of Poe's writes under date of 22d ult.; "My school is good. Several new boarders to enter next week. We have enrolled more than 160, representing eight counties. Our next Sunday-school Convention meets at Dunn in April."

....Ten men and women, approved and waiting, begging to be sent to reinforce the work where much needed on foreign fields, and our people have the privilege and responsibility of saying whether they can go to this field.—Foreign Mission Journal.

....Rev. J. M. McManaway of Big Stone Gap, Va., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Louisiana, Mo. We regret to know that our brother is going so far away, and hope he will not fail to let the RECORDER hear from him in his new field.

....Bro. Van Deventer desires to inform the brethren and sisters that they will find a welcome if they will come to Henderson to hear Bro. Bryan speak on the 15th and 16th inst. Let as many as can, go, and the Henderson church will entertain every one who will write Bro. Van Deventer that he is coming.

....We are glad to learn from Rev. G. M. Duke of Duke's, N. C., that in spite of disadvantageous circumstances his field is making good progress, and the outlook is hopeful. One of his churches—Maple Springs—gave him a good pounding recently, and another—Nashville—set him up to an overcoat.

.... Prof. O. J. Peterson desires to say that he did not accept the offer of a Chair of Mathematics in a Texas institution as we have stated. Our information was taken from the press. Bro. Peterson will remain at Clide, where he is principal of the High School, until next fall, when he will probably enter Johns Hopkins University.

....The Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle has a member of its Sunday-school—a teacher—who has not failed to be present at session of the school for thirteen years, and is now well-started on his fourteenth of faithful attendance. Bro. B. F. Faison is a member to be proud of; we believe he holds the record for promptness and faithfulness.

....Dr. William R. Harper says that the newspaper reports of his lecture were false; that rather than saying that the story of Cain and Abel was a myth, he practically held the contrary. We deplore the state of affairs in which "criticisms based on newspaper reports is unfair and unjust," and regret that anything at all has been said about the matter.

....The moving of the railroad shops from Laurinburg to Harnett will greatly weaken the Baptist church at Laurinburg. We hope, however, the brethren there will be able by forming an alliance with some neighboring church to keep up the interest which was so prosperous under the ministry of Bro. Kesler who has recently moved to Red Springs.

....The new monthly paper—Good Words—published at Franklinton, has offered to give all the money received in subscriptions during the month of March to aid in the erection of the new Franklinton Baptist church. One copy, one year, (monthly), 25 cents. Good Words contains each issue teaching points on the Sunday-school lessons by Bro. Baylus Cade.

....We note with pleasure in a recent issue of the New Haven (Conn.) Leader an extended account of a sermon by Rev. E. M. Poteat on methods of church work. The force of his remarks fell on church fairs, sociables, etc., which he said were excellent means to lift up the people socially, but unchristian as revenue makers. It is stated that "the sermon was widely discussed throughout the city."

....Rev. J. A. Mundy, pastor of the Baptist church, has moved into the "Pastor's Home" on Pine street. On Friday night he received a pounding at the hands of the members of the church, as well as some very handsome contributions to house-keeping from others not members of the church. He says he feels like he is at home.—Wilson Mirror, Feb. 23.

...."Attention has been called to the fact that Wake Forest is the only college in the State which has not a Young Men's Christian Association. Is this as it should be?"—Wake Forest Student. Yes; just as it should be. The young men's prayer-meeting is better, but is unattractive to some only because it has no presidencies, secretaryships, etc., to gratify personal vanity.

....We were very glad to see Bro. J. M. Hilliard for a few minutes last week. He was on his way to visit "home folks" at a church reunion at Green Level, one of Bro. Blanchard's charges. Bro. Hilliard held services for the first time in the new church at Ramseur on the 24th and 25th ult. The church was begun last September. He reports all his fields in a most encouraging condition, and says it pays him to work for the RECORDER because it always makes better Baptists of its readers.

Raleigh Baptist Progress.

A decided impetus has been added to the work of the Raleigh saints lately. We have never seen our city churches in better condition, and there is a concerted movement among them that is sure to bring glory to the Master. A city missionary was found necessary and secured January 1st last—Bro. A. D. Hunter. Since then the work at the East and West End Missions has been looking up mightily, and now comes the good news that Rev. J. F. Love of Suffolk, Va., is to aid Bro. Hunter in a series of meetings at the West End shortly. Bro. Hunter, with the aid of brethren from the three self-supporting Baptist churches has been holding meetings regularly at the Caraleigh Mills, south, and the Pilot Mills, north Raleigh. The city Baptist Missionary Committee, consisting of Brethren Broughton, Scarborough, Boushall, Pullen, Lambkin and Parish have recently bought a lot on the corner of Halifax and Johnson streets, an excellent location, and as soon as it is paid for a house of worship will be erected. Bro. Hunter is on the rounds canvasing, and he will see all the Baptists in town before he stops. We must have this mission in working order in a short while, for with it we will have a stronghold in every direction in the city, north, east, south and west, in addition to the First and the Tabernacle. Brethren Carter, Simms, Stringfield and Hunter are calculated to move things when they pull together as they are now doing.

Home Board.

"Times are distressing. Money is awfully hard to get. We can't press our people. They just haven't got it. They would give it if they could."

These are the ejaculations of loving pastors making excuse for the small and slow contributions of their churches to missions. God bless them and their churches. We know exactly how it is. But we could not know how hard times were going to get, and being placed here to think out the best use to which your money could be put, we have overestimated the amount you would put in our hands for use this Conventional year. Now what shall we do? What can we do? Already we have borrowed a considerable sum, and we must soon borrow again, unless those whose work it is shall speedily furnish us with the means. Many strong churches have not yet contributed. If they will increase their gifts to our work, they may thereby make amends for the falling off of contributions from the less favored. God says, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak."

One thing certain, unless there is a decided improvement, we shall come to Dallas with a debt that will greatly embarrass us. We have enlarged our work in many departments, and have not decreased at any point. This seemed essential to our prosperity. There is now the greatest demand upon us we have ever had, and the best opportunity for successful work. Brethren pray for us, and send help to us for Jesus sake. Send by express, post-office money order, postal note, New York exchange.

Bibles for the Destitute.

The applications to the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools for donations of Bibles and Testaments to families, and boys and girls too poor to pay for them, and to aid in starting Sunday-schools, have become so frequent that the Board at its last meeting authorized the following statement. This has been published in slip-form and sent to the Superintendents of the schools in our Convention, and now it is given to the papers and all urged to aid in this good work. Remember that the 3d Sunday in March is the time for this special collection in all of the Sunday-schools:

TELL IT TO THE SCHOOL.

Dear Superintendent:—At a meeting of our Board, held January 23d, 1894, the following was unanimously adopted, viz.:

"WHEREAS, The Board ought to put, during this year, 2,000 Bibles (25 cents each) into 2,000 families now without the Scriptures and too poor to pay for them, and 5,000 Testaments (6 cents each) into the hands of 5,000 boys and girls too poor to pay for them; and further, to aid, by donating a small supply of Bibles, Testaments and papers, in starting at least fifty new Sunday-schools, to be organized during April, May and June, in destitute neighborhoods; and

"WHEREAS, The Board is without the money to do these much needed things; therefore,

"Resolved 1*st*. That we urge every Sunday-school in our Convention to give one collection this year for the above object.

"Resolved 2*d*. That we ask every school (after due notice and information about the work given to the school the preceding week) to take said collection on the third Sunday in March next; and we ask every member in each school to give something to this worthy object.

"Resolved 3*d*. That a full report of all amounts given by each school and received by the treasurer, J. D. Boushall, on or before March 30th, 1894, be sent to every school that aids in this work."

There are many entire counties where no Bibles or Testaments are kept for sale; and thousands of families are destitute of the Scriptures, and are too poor to purchase them. We have many applications and letters showing these facts. A well-known Baptist preacher writes: "There is no place in my county where a Bible or a Testament can be bought. Many families are without the Scriptures, and are too poor to pay for them." Another letter, dated January 24th, from a brother well known, cashier of a bank in a railroad county-town, says: "Our pastor, in his talk a few nights ago, asked all, when they went home, to read a certain chapter in the Bible. A man who was present went to his boarding house and asked for a Bible, but was told there was no Bible or Testament in the house, and there never had been. Learning these facts, I sent him word that I would secure and present him a Bible. I left the bank and went at once to the stores in town to search for a Bible, but could find none. There is not a Bible or a Testament for sale to day in this town. Can you help us with some Bibles, Testaments and other literature?"

The Board has one hundred missionaries, preaching in more than 400 places. The 3,000 Bibles and 5,000 Testaments would put 20 Bibles and 50 Testaments into the hands of each missionary, and this would enable each to supply about five destitute families gratis, and twelve boys or girls in each neighborhood where he preaches. This would be a great work. If we could donate a few Bibles, Testaments and Sunday-school Quarterlies and papers to destitute neighborhoods where schools ought to be organized, the work could be easily established. We have many applications for such aid. This is our plan to do this part of the Master's work. We ask your co operation. Will you not submit this statement to your officers and teachers? If they agree to it, please let us know. If you can send a few words of commendation of this work, which I can use in the RECORDER, do so at once. We need the help of all. Forward the collection to J. D. Boushall in time to reach him by March 30th, and with it give the name of your school and the number enrolled, and the name and post-office of the Superintendent. Let me thank you and your school, in advance, for your aid in this work, which I feel sure you will render. Some individuals, not members of the school, would, perhaps, gladly help if some of the children were authorized by you or the school to see them. Perhaps the pastor would commend the object from the pulpit to the congregation, and ask the people generally to aid the school in supplying the destitute with the Scriptures.

The man referred to by the "cashier of the bank" was furnished a Bible, and has since professed faith and has been baptized.

We, the Superintendents of the four Baptist Sunday schools in Raleigh, most heartily commend the above to all the schools in our Convention.

Forward Movement for China.

Dear Recorder:—The good news that comes to us through your columns, and from various other sources, of the hopeful, enthusiastic work being done in North Carolina for State, Home, and Foreign Missions, seems to be a trumpet call to a quick, forward movement all along the line. Coming in this time of great financial depression, this liberality of God's people in giving, and this generosity in planning for larger things to be realized at once, indicates the finger of God pointing to regions beyond, and the Spirit speaks thus to his people to go forward. I believed this to be a call of the Spirit as soon as I received a recent letter from Bro. Bryan, telling me what God's people seemed willing to do, and how their hearts responded to his appeals for China. I praise God that his Spirit is using this dear brother to move your hearts so mightily towards China. As he pleads for this dark land, receive it as God's voice calling to you.

In the Foreign Mission Journal, the Baptist, and especially in the BIBLICAL RECORDER, I have seen how God is using Brother Bryan to move your hearts. Receive the truth from him as to China's needs, possibilities and expectations; and yield yourselves to God's Spirit as he moves you to do for China.

The North Carolina Baptists have large interests in China. Of their twenty-one missionaries sent to the foreign fields (including the Gospel Mission), there are sixteen in China. This is not only a great honor conferred upon North Carolina Baptists by God, but lays a corresponding obligation upon them. We, as missionaries of Jesus, coming from your midst, as brothers and sisters, sons and daughters, friends and acquaintances, members of the same great body of Christian believers, have bound your hearts to poor China and her people with living links of sympathy and love. You have given your sons and daughters, and you surely will give your unceasing prayers and all that you can of money to swell the great impulse and to increase the momentum of this move of interest for the extension of the Lord's work in China.

My heart responds to this trumpet call of the gathering of God's hosts in North Carolina, and I would return the answering note from Chinkiang, "China for Jesus!"

There are reasons for believing that God's time for an advance movement has come, as we review the field. Truly "the fields are white unto the harvest," and the Lord of the harvest is standing and earnestly calling for his people to enter quickly the many wide open doors into his harvest fields.

At the beginning of this year, our little mission band in their first quarterly meeting of this year in Yangchow, after reviewing the past year's work, and thanking God for his many blessings, cast their eyes forward upon the work of the present year, and in united prayer cried earnestly unto God, and this cry is unceasingly going up to God, "Send forth more laborers speedily, O Lord, into this vast harvest field."

New doors are opening to the gospel on every hand, and the hearts of the people are turning towards the gospel; the enemies of the Cross are rallying to oppose, in hot conflict, the soldiers of the Cross, and ere long the work done in years past, in China, will show increased evidences of good results, and the seed sown will yield a glorious harvest.

Speaking only of the Chinkiang mission (and what is true of Chinkiang is true of all our work, I presume), the beginning of this year finds us planning to enlarge our work as soon as possible, though our hands are now more than full, in the belief that brethren and sisters will be sent to our help soon.

Inviting fields of labor, some parts of which have never been visited by the missionary, lie close about us, and are urgently pressing upon our hearts the need for at least three male missionaries and four single lady missionaries for the two stations of Chinkiang and Yangchow. The men and women are ready to come.

Dear brethren and sisters, will you not arise in the power which the Almighty has given you, and press this work? Make it your daily and hourly prayer to God to furnish the means to send these missionaries, and not only contribute liberally yourselves, but enlist the interest of others?

Last night as I spake to a house full of eager listeners on the parable of the prodigal son, I realized that the Spirit of God is at work among the heathen, and that the time is fast approaching when heathen China will turn to Jesus. To-day, a native brother, a member of our Chinkiang Baptist church, who had come here to worship, and was returning to his distant home thirty or forty miles away, looked up into my face with tearful eyes and said, "When will you come to Ma Kia Chiao again?" Then I thought of the many villages all around his home, where the name of Jesus had not been heard many months ago, but are now learning for the first time from the lips of this rude countryman of a Saviour's love, and how eagerly they listened to our message when we visited a few places among them two months ago, and how they invited us to come again, I longed to go at once to preach to them again. But, alas, I cannot. Too much urgent work lies nearer home, which takes all all our time and strength.

But this field, and others besides, should be visited. Our need of immediate help is urgent. If not received soon, I fear that many golden opportunities and inviting fields which are ours, if we could only possess them, will be taken by the missionaries of other missions, who notwithstanding the hard times are regularly coming to reinforce their various missions. The men and women are waiting to be sent. What is lacking is only the money. And this I believe you will now give quickly, that their departure to the work may not be delayed.

The news of good meetings everywhere all over the State, and the enthusiastic session of our State Convention, show how the Holy Spirit is at work in the hearts of his people, and this news brought us a blessing of joy and encouragement these thousands of miles across the wintry waters.

We eagerly expect more and even better news soon.

From the Far West.

BY C. K. W. DOBBS, D. D.

I wish to keep in touch with the Baptists of the good old "North State." It was in Greensboro that I united with the Baptists in June, 1859, being baptized by dear John Mitchell, then missionary pastor at Greensboro and Hillsboro, under appointment of your State Board. Because of this past history (though, of course, not for that reason only) I love to read the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

Sometime since a good brother from the Atlantic seaboard wrote me saying, "It seems strange to have you writing from far off Oklahoma." Well, I confess it does seem somewhat strange to me also. And yet, after all, the "far west" is a relative term. Look at your map. Guthrie is just about the center of a line drawn east and west between Cape Hatteras, on the North Carolina coast, and Point Conception, jutting out into the Pacific from the California mainland. Indeed it is rather east, than west, of the half-way longitudinal line! Oh what a vast country is ours! Why I am, away out here in the "wild and wooly west," still two thousand miles by rail from San Francisco.

OUR AREA.

Oklahoma Territory, as originally projected and organized, was rather a small political bantling. It was a shrewd move that which opened to settlement and civilization that small area in the very heart of the old Indian Territory. True it was only about two million acres that President Harrison's proclamation of April, 1889, opened. But it planted civilization in the very midst of semi-barbarism, with the inevitable result that its influence would work outward. So it has proved. Addition after addition has been made until Oklahoma Territory has grown from 8,000 square miles to an area of about 27,000 square miles, or more than 17,000,000 acres. Of this land probably three-fourths may be classed arable. The western section is more suitable for grazing and stock raising. You will find by examining your map that this territory is watered by three considerable main rivers flowing from the west eastward. These are the Arkansas, the Canadian, and the Red. In the east, along these rivers, and their tributaries, the country is well supplied with timber. As to the agricultural value of our land, be it known unto you, that Oklahoma flour made from Oklahoma wheat, carried off the first prize over all competitors at the late Chicago Fair, while our corn captured the second prize over the exhibits from all the world! In the southern part of the Territory cotton was extensively and successfully cultivated the last two years, and our cotton was recognized at Chicago as second only to that exhibited from Mississippi.

POPULATION.

It is here, and from everywhere. Why one day I met men from twenty-two different States, and it was by no means a good day for finding men either! Gov. Renfrow, in his annual report to the Interior Department, said that our population reaches over the 200,000 mark. I am quite sure that the quarter-million figure will be reached by the time the Strip settlers get domiciled the coming spring. There are some cities and towns of considerable importance. The capital city, Guthrie, is a well built city of ten thousand people. We have fifty or more stone and brick business blocks which would do credit to any of your more pretentious cities. Oklahoma City is next in size and importance, and it has 8,000. Then I may mention El Reno, Perry, Kingfisher, Enid, Norman, Stillwater, Edmond—towns varying from 1,500 to 4,000 population.

THE CHURCHES.

The various denominations have rushed in, and their several Missionary Boards have shown commendable enterprise and zeal in seeking to pre empt the Territory for Christ. There are more that three hundred churches with probably 10,000 members. Of these the Baptist have 70 white churches with about 1,500 members. There are some 30 colored churches of our faith.

Our largest church is that at Oklahoma City, which has a membership of 160, worshiping in a handsome $5,000 frame, confessedly the best house of worship in the Territory. Our church at Guthrie is small, only 75 in number—but that gives us room to grow, you know. We expect to build a suitable house of worship for the Lord this year, if the Home Mission Society shall liberally help us, as we have reason to expect it will. The Board made quite a liberal appropriation to induce me to come out here as pastor.

EDUCATIONAL.

The Territorial legislature has established a University at Norman, a Normal School at Edmond, and an Agricultural College at Stillwater. These will have adequate endowments when the funds come in from the sale of the land sections reserved for educational purposes. There will also be realized from this source a common school fund which will place the public school system on a firm and creditable basis, abreast of any of the older States.

Guthrie, Oklahoma, Feb. 20, 1894.

A Doctrinal Issue.

Dear Brother Editor:—In preparing for our periodicals for the second quarter in this year we decided to give the next to the last Sunday in the quarter to the subject of baptism, instead of to Missions as heretofore. Rev. Dr. J. P. Greene, President of William Jewell College, Missouri, is preparing the lessons for the Teacher for this quarter, and he will prepare the one on baptism for that periodical. Rev. E. J. Forrester, of South Carolina, has prepared the one for the Advanced Quarterly, and it is one of the best I have ever seen on the subject. The smaller quarterlies will follow his lessons for the most part. I think the schools using our series will be very much pleased with the lessons.

Yours truly,
T. P. BELL.

Moneys Received.

Dear Bro. Batley:—Please allow me to acknowledge, through the RECORDER, the following amounts, which have been given in the interest of our church:

T. J. Cobb, V. L. Warren, R. H. Jordan, J. W. Cunningham, W. E. Daniels, F. S. Biggs, J. D. Boushall, Jno. Carter, twenty-five cents each;

W. C. Douglass, D. E. McKeithan, Mrs. J. J. Jenkins, C. A. Durham, L. A. Acres, Jno. T. Paschal, G. W. Foushee, Mrs. Eliza Foushee, "Avery Bros." "Green & Richardson," J. S. Hardaway, B. Gleaves, D. R. Campbell, J. C. Overdorf, H. T. Chapin, O. B. Stroud, Mrs. R. J. Buffaloe, E. G. Lineberry, E. S. Bostic, D. C. Rogers, C. V. Brooks, D. A. Moffitt, R. O. Fry, J. B. Stroud, Mrs. G. L. Merrill, A. B. Hunter, B. E. Mason, O. I. Hudson, Z. T. Smith, D. M. Poe, W. J. Ferrell, fifty cents each;

E. G. Harrell and Mrs. W. W. Vass, $1.00 each; "No name," $1.15; Apex Sunday-school, $2.50.

Brethren, we are weak and need your help. All contributions will be acknowledged in the RECORDER.

A New Cure for Asthma.

(Special to Ministers of the Gospel.)

Medical science at last reports a positive cure for Asthma in the Kola Plant, found on the Congo river, West Africa. So great is their faith in its wonderful curative powers, the Kola Importing Co., Vine and Baker Sts., Cincinnati, Ohio, are sending out large trial cases of the Kola Compound free to all sufferers from Asthma. Send your name and address on postal card, and they will send you a trial case by mail free.

Ministers of the gospel are invited to apply for special free treatment. Send card, letter-head or cutting from religious paper, showing your name as in the ministry.

The last thing of which man should be ashamed is a pure, religious life. Nothing else so lifts man up into the element of the supernal. By this he takes on a degree of the heavenly. Its price is above rubies. It is, and ever must be, the principal thing.—The Treasury.

The annual statement of the Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Company appears in this issue. As is shown by the statement, this is one of the most excellent companies in our section, and we are glad to note that its business in our State is increasing. Mr. W. S. Primrose, Raleigh, N. C., is the General Agent.

In ordering goods, or in making inquiry concerning anything advertised in this paper, you will confer a favor by mentioning the fact that you saw the advertisement in the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

Not Fruit-finding, but Fruit-bearing.

That the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools have reported a debt of nearly five thousand dollars on last year's work is perhaps known to every aggressive Baptist in the State by this time. That many adverse criticisms have been made upon the Board for incurring this debt, is a lamentable fact. We do not believe the members of the Board are infallible, or in any way feel that they are too good to be criticised, or above the need of it. Doubtless they are always glad for wise and discrete brethren to help them in grasping the situation of the work and aid in any way possible to further the progress of the Master's kingdom. But is there a just reason for criticising the Board for the debt reported to our late Convention? The writer will be pardoned for what he shall freely say in this article, when he asserts that only the situation as it presents itself to him after much prayerful thought gives rise to the expression. Our connection with the Board last year was simply that of an humble pastor and a sympathizing friend.

First, let me briefly notice the basis upon which the Board projected its plans and prosecuted its work.

The churches, first of all, formed this basis. Either in conference before the meeting of their respective Associations, or by their representatives at the Associations, each church did (or ought to have done it) make pledges to the Association for the support of these objects. (It is a matter of regret that many never make any pledges, nor do they as a rule ever pay anything.) Each Association files the reports of the churches in the minutes of the Association. The tabulated statistics from the churches show what the churches promise to do where pledges are taken. Or when there are no pledges taken, the report gives the actual amounts contributed by the churches in a previous year. From the pledges in the report of those Associations that take pledges, and the actual cash contributions of the Associations that do not take pledges, the Board always has its safest reliance for compiling a report to the Convention for its endorsement in the enlargement or lessening of its undertaking for another year. This, with the opening fields and the bright prospect of the Baptist cause throughout the State, has moved the Board in all its actions. With this understanding of the prospects of the work and forthcoming means to push it, the Convention in Raleigh, in December, 1893, endorsed the work of the previous year and laid the basis of the Board's actions for the year 1893 by stating the amount they were to spend and for what it should be expended. From a business view we do not see that any one could justly find fault with the Board for its report to the Convention, nor with the Convention for giving the instruction it did to the Board for the prosecution of its work last year.

Now, let us see if we cannot absolve the Board from blame for the debt:

1. Have all the churches that made pledges for this work for last year fully met their pledges?

2. Did all the churches that made no pledges really pay an equivalent amount to the year before? In the aggregate this might have been expected even in a year of financial stringency, for most churches had their numbers swelled last year by new members. Indeed the money panic would not have affected our churches in North Carolina during last year if we had not begun economy at the house of the Lord. Alas! too often this proves our sincerity as Christians. He will forego this duty to indulge a hundred other pleasures and comforts. But to the question; we do not believe the churches have all rallied to the needs of the Board as they definitely or inferentially promised to do. This has placed the Board in any other than a pleasant situation. If we would only try to place ourselves in their situation and realize their embarrassments, the cup of bitterness that so often pours out unjust vituperations on them would be filled with the oil of sympathy and gladness. Around our hearthstones and in our congregations, as well as in our secret devotions, we would ask the aid of our bountiful Father to help us share our part of the burden. And before the first of April, 1894, the Board would be out of debt, and they, with the faithful men of God who are now needing their own for labor already given, would send up one unanimous prayer to God for the faithful who had "come up to the help of the Lord."

Who is it that censures? Is it those who are conscious of having done their part? If such an expression is legitimate. That would be an exception to the rule. Indeed it would be unnatural. Do the innocent complain? Do they not wait, rather, and hope? Did ever a heart filled with earnest desire to do good satisfy its willingness to do? No, rather than blame, let us thank God for the situation. When the crucible is well heated, the pure gold is separated from the dross. The refiner is then in a fair way to reap the reward of his arduous labor. If anything conceals the beauty of our religion or questions its purity compared with that of our fathers, it is that it costs us so little. The fire of persecution and self-denials that characterized their work is so seldom met by us that it is a hardship when it does come, even in a modified degree.

Look again! We think the prospect itself justifies the effort that was made and the present call upon the people. And, too, God seems to sanction it by the unprecedented results that have followed last year's work among the Baptists of North Carolina. From one to two houses of worship are being dedicated every week. Many more churches are constituted than houses of worship dedicated, with a general call for enlargement of work in every section of the State. Every city presents a white field for mission work. In many of them at the private expenses of the existing churches, preaching is kept up, and new churches being organized. The multitudes have been attracted to Sunday preaching and pure gospel churches. What does all this mean? Why such rapid development? There is food for reflection here sufficient for a long article. We will summarize now. In our judgment it is the growing mission spirit which has been quickened by the energy of the Board and their earnest missionaries, together with the associated power of the Holy Spirit promised to such as went forward—"lo, I am with you alway." Let us who are enjoying this wonderful harvest beware lest we forget that the seeds had first been sown that made the ripe fruits.

In conclusion, we authorized the Board to do the work. They did it well. God approved and blessed their labors. Let us thank God and the noble agencies that have been used to accomplish the work, and send, instead of discouragements, the means that will relieve the Board's embarrassment, and bid them "go forward" with the noble work as fast as God will open the way.

Irregularity.

Is that what troubles you? Then it's easily and promptly remedied by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They regulate the system perfectly. Take one for a gentle laxative or corrective; three for a cathartic.

If you suffer from constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks, sick or bilious headaches, or any derangement of the liver, stomach, or bowels, try these little Pellets. They bring a permanent cure. Instead of shocking and weakening the system with violence, like the ordinary pills, they act in a perfectly easy and natural way. They're the smallest, the easiest to take—and the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

The cleansing, antiseptic and healing qualities of Dr. Sage's Catarrh remedy are unequaled.

New Testament Studies—No. 3.

BY RIGHT C. MOORE.

THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS.

1. Name. "Gospel, signifying originally "the reward of good tidings" and subsequently "good tidings" merely, has in the New Testament the specific meaning of "the good news of the kingdom," (Matt. 4: 23) and refers only to the message of salvation. Not until the time of Justin Martyr were the four narratives of the life and teaching of our Lord generally known as "The Gospels." The first three Gospels were in the eighteenth century styled "Synoptic," because they are largely composed of parallel narratives.

2. Chronology. No precise date can be assigned to either of the Synoptic Gospels It is certain, however, that they were all written about the same time, and a very few years before the destruction of Jerusalem in A. D. 70, John's Gospel not appearing till near the close of the century.

3. Similarity. The Synoptic Gospels resemble each other so minutely as to be noticeable alike to the casual reader and the special student. (1) There is a striking verbal agreement; for example, compare the three accounts of the healing of the paralytic. (2) "The method of narration is similar; most of the incidents are related in brief, compact, separately moulded paragraphs, which follow one another often in quite loose connection." (3) The series of incidents, presented by the three writers, are largely identical. (4) All have adopted the same general historical outline.

4. Differences. While there is found in the first three Gospels a striking similarity, there is yet a divergence sufficient to mark each writer's individuality and show the work to be from the hands of original and independent authors. (1) Each Gospel contains peculiarities of style and vocabulary, more plainly seen in the Greek original than in the English translation. (2) The same facts are often stated differently, sometimes amounting to apparent contradictions. (3) Each of the three contains material not found in either of the others. (4) A peculiar conception of our Lord is portrayed by each writer.

5. Common Material. Competent critics regard as accurate the following estimate by Reuss: "The text of Matthew contains 330 verses which are not found elsewhere; that of Mark, 68; that of Luke, 541. The two first have from 170 to 180 verses which are wanting in Luke; Matthew and Luke have about 230 or 240 which are wanting in Mark; Mark and Luke have about 50 which are wanting in Matthew. The total number of verses common to all three is only from 330 to 370."

6. Sources. Matthew, as an apostle and constant follower of Christ, could gather materials for his gospel from a rich personal experience. Mark, the evangelist and companion of Peter, doubtless based his work on the teaching of the impetuous apostle. Luke, the beloved physician and associate of Paul, was very probably aided to a large extent by his cultured companion in the authorship of the book which bears his name. The similarity of the books to each other is traced to one of three sources: "The gospels are either dependent (1) on one another, or (2) on a previously existing document (or documents), or (3) on the oral gospel. Each of these theories have their ardent supporters, and it is impossible to satisfactorily account for the resemblance of the Synoptic Gospels to each other.

7. General Outline. The following analysis of the Synoptic Gospels by Stevens will be found useful for reference and study. (1) Birth and early years of Christ: Matthew 1, 2; Mark ——; Luke, 1, 2. (2) Baptism, Temptation, and Ministry in Galilee: Matthew 3–18; Mark 1–9; Luke 3: 1—9: 50. (3) From Galilee to Jerusalem: Matthew, 19, 20; Mark 10; Luke 9: 51—19: 28. (4) The Passion Week: Matthew 21–27; Mark 11–15; Luke 19: 29—23: 56. (5) From the Resurrection to the Ascension: Matthew 28; Mark 16; Luke 24.

8. Leading Ideas. The four Gospels are thus fully characterized by Bishop Alexander: "In Matthew we have Christ's earthly existence freely moulding itself in a predesignated form; in Mark as a strong life; in Luke as a tender life; in John as a divine life. In the first we see Jesus as the Messiah; in the second as Son of God; in the third as Son of Man; in the fourth as the God-man. With Matthew, the chief factor is the conception of prophecy; with Mark, the conception of power; with Luke, the conception of beauty; with John, the conception of divinity. In the first the predominant elements are fulfilments and sacrifice; in the second, acting and conquest; in the third, forgiveness and universal grace; in the fourth, idealism and dogma."

Travelling Impostors.

A preachers' meeting was humbugged by some Zulus who were brought before it some months ago for advertising purposes, and no other. It is our belief that there are more than three hundred quacks and impostors travelling in the United States at the present time, who ought to be in prison. Some are spurious evangelists; others, reformed drunkards; others, the founders of societies with object enough to satisfy the promoters, who have every reason to "thank God and take courage." Up to two or three years ago we used to think there were about two hundred, but many circumstances lead us to think that three hundred is a moderate estimate. The presumption should be against any itinerant applicant for the purpose of addressing a congregation. He should not receive the benefit of any doubt, but the church should receive that benefit. Let him demonstrate beyond doubt that he is a good man and true, and that his cause is a worthy one.—The Christian Advocate.

Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, will tell you that Johnson's Magnetic Oil always gives satisfaction and is the cheapest.

Faith without knowledge is apt to be mixed with much superstition. Knowledge without faith—ah, that is the sin of to-day! But they should go together. Begin with faith, but add to your faith knowledge, and as you grow into the knowledge of the Lord Christ, your faith will expand into a useful life, not only for yourself but for others. These two are joined together in an indissoluble union.—The Ensign

Patriotic Americans of limited means will be glad to learn that the new magazine Blue and Gray (Philadelphia) has been reduced to ten cents a copy instead of twenty-five cents as formerly. This change of price takes effect with the February issue, the first edition of which is one hundred thousand copies If the publishers keep up their existing standard of excellence, it is hard to see how they can fail to reach the circulation of quarter of a million copies for which they are striving.

INFLUENZA,

Or La Grippe, though occasionally epidemic, is always more or less prevalent. The best remedy for this complaint is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Last Spring, I was taken down with La Grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete. It is truly a wonderful medicine."—W. H. WILLIAMS, Crook City, S. D.

"Thought and Said."

BY M. P. M.

"THE LANGUAGE OF ASHDOD."

Just now the "Baptist Union" is discussing two very interesting and important questions connected with the work of young people's organizations. The first of these is the term used to designate us as a "denomination." More and more our people are coming to use the "language of Ashdod" in saying "the Baptist church" when speaking of us as a denomination. The Baptist Union, which is the organ of the young people's societies in the United States and Canada, does well to call attention of the young people to this departure from the language of our fathers. There is no such institution in the world as the Baptist church, although other denominations continually speak of us as "the Baptist church," as though we were an ecclesiastical organization like unto their own. Our very church polity is involved in such an appellation, and it is well to guard our young people from the use of such phraseology, and impress upon them the difference between us and other denominations on this line as well as many others.

Our leading preachers in the North, and some in the South, are using this phraseology, and thus covering up one of our distinctive principles, and I am glad that our young people are being impressed with the right use of words in speaking of denominational affairs. Theology is expressed in our songs, and in many ways which we do not take into account, and we cannot be too careful in the use of words used with our children and young people.

"GIFTS OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE."

Another question of importance now being discussed by the Baptist Union is the question of beneficence among our young people. That they ought to be trained to give, is conceded by all, but how shall they be trained is the question? Shall we train them to give as members of young people's societies or missionary societies, or as members of our churches? It may seem to be of little importance whether they give in one way or another, "just so they give;" but the Union makes the point, and I think that it is well made, "that this giving is to be done as members of the churches, rather than as members of the societies." We ought never to lose sight of the important truth that the churches of Christ are the divinely appointed agencies for giving the gospel to the world, and that no institution can ever take the place and do the work of the churches. Societies of any kind in connection with the churches are "simply hands" for them and "feet for them" with which and through which they are to gather up the benefactions of all the membership, and thus enable her to carry on the work assigned her by the Lord. This is a wise step taken by the Baptist Union, and will no doubt magnify God's institution as it should be, and put these other organizations in the back ground, except as agencies. There is no arguing against the fact of the efficiency of our own young people as collectors of funds when directed in a wise way, and for one I shall be glad to see them utilized, if it can be done without interfering with the efficiency of the churches.

"A JUST COMMENT."

A correspondent in the Examiner, writing of a social gathering of ministers in Boston, says:—

"The only blemish in the meeting was in an exceedingly happy speech by Dr. A. A. Miner, the veteran Universalist leader. It was the old 'gag' about 'water.' The doctor was an honored guest, and thought to please us. When will these excellent and illustrious brethren from beyond take it for granted that every conceivable jibe about water has been perpetrated ad nauseam? And that there is silent condemnation in advance for any horse play reference to the Lord's ordinance in our assemblies? It is high time that every Baptist ceased to grant even the courtesy of a smile to this species of sacrilege. There should be a dignified silence that would chill the joke into ghastliness on the spot."

There are two or three things I want to say on this "comment" in the Examiner. In saying them I am aware that I am exposing myself to the charge already made against me in certain quarters, "of exceeding narrowness;" but none of these things move me. I am not ambitious for "that broadness" which ignores or belittles Christ's word and work. In the first instance, I think those Baptists were in "poor business" when they invited to address them "the veteran Universalist leader." "What concord is there between Christ and Belial?" No wonder Baptists can't prosper in New England; and there is talk of one of the leading Baptist preachers of "Bosting" going over to the Congregational denomination. And why not, pray? If Universalist preachers are to be recognized, surely it can't make much difference whether a man is in one denomination or another. Let such belittling of divine things stop, or give up the distinctive principles of Baptists altogether.

And second, the point of attack is changed so far as Pedobaptists oppose Baptists. They once met us in open controversy, and disputed about the questions that divide us; but that mode of warfare "didn't pay," and so all that has passed away, and they are "courting us to death." They are coming at us from a "social standpoint," and also from the standpoint of "courtesy," and when introduced into our gatherings they do like Mr. Miner did and like Bishop Fitzgerald in Nashville last May before the Convention—get off some "gag" about "water," and thus do what they would not "dare do" in serious earnestness in the same presence—"belittle the Lord's ordinance." A Baptist who will not "rise and stand with uncovered head" when such a personage is "to be introduced" is "voted a boor" by his own brethren and counted very "discourteous." Well, this scribe never rises on such occasions.

The Rest that Remaineth.

In the midst of the cares and toils of life we falter sometimes, and through the very pressure of our weariness our longing reaches forth to the rest that awaits us, as we hope, when the end of earth's activities is reached. A friend who has been foremost in the fight against evil in the world, and whose life has been filled with good deeds, writes that she has come to the point where she can say with Prince Henry:

Rest! Rest! O give me rest and peace!
The thought of life that ne'er shall cease,
Has something in it like despair.
A weight I am too weak to bear.
Sweeter to this afflicted breast
The thought of never-ending rest!
Sweeter the undisturbed and deep
Tranquility of endless sleep!

I know, as I read the expressions of longing, that her better nature, when in its normal condition, would never have voiced itself in such a way. I feel that her overburdened life is responsible for the desire for an eternal sleep, and that her spiritual vision is darkened. I am sure that with renewed strength her languid powers of mind will reassert themselves, and clamor for eternal activity. The human side has conquered the higher hopes and aims, as at times it does conquer, momentarily, with us all.

The rest that remaineth! What is its better significance to each of us? Not, surely, a mere surcease of care and labor, not even a regathering of interest in service; but is it not that perfect surrender to God's will which enables us to accept all that he allots to us, and to feel that when we are truly fitted to the service chosen for us, we get true rest of spirit, though the body may at times groan under a heavy load of care?

The rest that remaineth may surely be begun here, in this life, in the soul; and the process of fitting the real self to God's appointment for it in the life to come may, if we have bowed to his purpose, have become already a leavening power within, and, like the bow of promise, hang above our individuality an arch of beauty, each color in harmony with the whole.—Mary R Baldwin.

There is no excuse for any man to appear in society with a grizzly beard since the introduction of Buckingham's Dye, which colors natural brown or black.

Spoiled It All.

A farmer went to hear John Wesley preach. Wesley said he would take up three topics of thought; he was talking chiefly about money. His first was, "Get all you can." The farmer nudged a neighbor, and said: "This is strange preaching, I never heard the like before; this is very good." John Wesley discoursed on "industry," "activity," "living to purpose," and reached his second division, "Save all you can." The farmer became more excited. "Was there ever anything like this?" he said. Wesley denounced thriftlessness and waste, and satirized the wilful wickedness which lavishes in luxury; and the farmer rubbed his hands, and he thought, "All this I have been taught from my youth up," and what with getting, and what with hoarding, it seemed to him that "salvation" had come to his house. But Wesley advanced to his third head, which was, "Give all you can." "Ah dear! ah dear," said the farmer, "he has gone and spoiled it all."—Exchange.

The wonderful cure by Salvation Oil of Mr. M. S. Culp, a chronic rheumatic, 816 George St., Baltimore, Md., is a miracle.

Picking the Teeth at Table.

The practice of serving toothpicks as a course is no longer observed in polite society. Neither are they used as a sideboard decoration and a centerpiece for the table. Neither are they served along with after-dinner coffee, and it is not polite to pick the teeth at the table; it is rather the act of a scavenger, even if the face and mouth are covered by a napkin, as some people seem to think it correct. Really, refined people suffer pain rather than to pick their teeth at the table.

A person might as well brush the teeth at the meal, and it would be quite as agreeable a diversion. The toothpick is properly an article of toilet, and for the bath-room and not for the dining-room. People do not clean their nails at the table, which would be far more preferable than the opening of cavernous mouths. The time has already come when something should be said about this disgusting toothpick fad. Better go to the dentist and have the holes plugged up with gold and cement instead of prying meat out with a toothpick.—Selected.

God does not give grace until the hour of trial comes. But when it does come, the amount of grace and the nature of the special grace required is vouchsafed. Do not perplex thyself with what is needed for future emergencies; to-morrow will bring its promised grace along with to-morrow's trials.—J. R. Macduff.

Church Etiquette.

The next time your journey leaves you stranded in the great and delightful city of New Chicorkadelphia on the Sabbath day, if you should go to the church of St. Indolence—I can recommend it as having the slowest singing and the softest pew cushions, with a preacher to match, in the city,—you will see the following "Suggestions to Worshippers:"—

"Fall or slide in the pew nearest the aisle. Stay there. Do not sit erect, but lop. Rest one elbow on the arm of the pew; and support the side of the face with the outspread hand.

"Do not rise during the singing of the hymns. The fact that you played tennis or baseball all Saturday afternoon, or walked four or five miles around a billiard table Saturday night, entitles you to a little rest on Sabbath morning.

"Extend your legs as far under the pew as you can without sliding off your seat. Gratefully and politely cover your mouth with your hand while yawning during the sermon. If the minister is looking at you, cover the mouth with both hands, and, at the close of the yawn, bring your jaws together with a cheerful snap.

"After looking at your watch, always turn your head and gaze longingly and earnestly toward the door.

"Do not move if a stranger, accompanied by his wife and daughter, attempts to enter your pew. Permit them to climb over your legs, no matter how much it may annoy you.

"Do not annoy strangers who may enter the church by looking at them, or even glancing in their direction. If they really want a seat, they will find one without the obstructive interference of other people.

"At the close of service, remark aloud, but to yourself, that you are hungry as a shark, and set off for home at a brisk trot."—Robert J. Burdette, in Sunday-school Times.

Social Christianity.

Social Christianity minus the Christianity can never be permanently effective. We have yet to learn—and we know something of the difficulties and joys of mission work in the slums of a large city—that any gospel of art, culture, sanitation, or any other gospel but the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, can offer a lever strong enough to lift fallen men and women into the peace and power of nobler living, or carry any abiding comfort into hearts shadowed by a sorrow that will not flee away.—N. Y. Observer.

Never defer a vital matter. A cough shouldn't be neglected when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it at once.

When Benjamin Franklin was a young man, he applied for a position in a printing office. The manager asked: "Can you set type?" Franklin stepped up to a case, and, in a surprising, short time, set up: "Nathaniel said unto him, can any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, come and see." A position was given him at once. Those who can really do needful things well are in demand, and to be able to show that you can do well is far better than to have ever so many recommendations from ever so prominent people.—Western Recorder.

Beecham's pills cure bilious and nervous ills.

The Bible teaches both humility and self-respect. Nehemiah manifested the former when he gave God the glory of his success, and the latter when he said proudly to Shemaiah, "Should such a man as I flee?" A good text for the Christian who is tempted to do a mean thing.—United Presbyterian.

If a man can by art make of ashes the curious glass, why cannot an omnipotent God, of dust and ashes make glorified bodies fair as crystal?—Lowe.

If we were loved by any for God's sake, we are debtors to God for the honor thus conferred; if hated by men for his sake, he becomes debtor to us.—St. Chrysostom.

Ten Other Eloquent Speakers.

One of the wife and successful business men of Wilmington, the friend of the orphans and of the aged and indigent Baptist preachers of the State, Bro. D. L. Gore, says:

"Yours received. It seems now that State Missions is paying for the drain that the superhuman efforts for Foreign Missions caused. I am not promising, but let me know when ninety-nine others are ready to pay fifty dollars each in ninety days from Jan. 1st, 1894."

The beloved disciple, Rev. Josiah Elliott of the Chowan Association says:

"I thought as you had dropped a line to many of the brethren, that you would remember me, and let me, with the others, enjoy a line from you. Your work is on my heart, and I am often thinking of you in prayer, begging God to bless and direct you in this time of anxiety. I have many things to say, but cannot say them here and now. I have some of the weakest churches in this section, but by the help of God, if I live, they will send you fifty dollars by the first of April. I contribute through my churches. I first state the object, then pray, and take the collection. We do not want ours returned whether you get only half or all the amount. We had rather make another effort and continue to pray and work until the entire amount shall be placed in the Treasurer's hands. This can be done by prayerful work. God bless you, my dear brother: the more I do to help the great work you represent, the more I love you and it, and the more I pray for both."

The quiet, wise and thoughtful friend of every good work, Bro. A. W. Early, says:

"You will please excuse me for not letting you hear from me sooner about the balance due on missions. Business down here is quite dull, and money very scarce, but we must push this matter, and we will help. I think you may rely on fifty dollars from Bro. C. W. Mitchell and myself. We are in business together. Hope you are still receiving encouragements in your efforts."

Bro. H. W. Scott, who has helped Dr. R. R. Overby in his work a thousand times, speaks for Sawyer's Creek church, and says:

"We have called a meeting of the deacons for next Thursday to take the matter in hand, and our conference meets on Saturday when I hope we will make some arrangements to raise a part or all of the fifty dollars asked of us. I have had a talk with Bro. Wood, our pastor, and he is very anxious to do something. I will put my contribution with the amount from the church, and forward it soon."

The church-builder of North Carolina, the wise pastor, the venerable Bishop of Wake Forest, Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, says:

"I laid your appeal before our deacons, and they requested me to make the strongest possible appeal to our people in its behalf on the third Sunday in March. We will raise all we can at that time."

The best known preacher in his section, and the least known in all other sections, the strong preacher, the faithful worker, and the brother beloved wherever known, Rev. G. M. Duke, says:

"I have been reading your earnest appeals for help in State Missions. I am in full sympathy with you in this work and am praying for you. I cannot promise to give fifty dollars by the first of April, but I will do all I can to raise it. May God abundantly bless you in your labor of love, and grant us a gracious success."

Bro. J. G. Mitchell of Newbern, who loves to give, and always has a word of encouragement and a helping hand for the Master's work, says:

"Yours of the 12th received and noted. I will pay twenty-five dollars on the mission debt on the plan you suggest, and hope to be able to make it what you ask for [fifty dollars,] but just now I have some other obligations to meet. May God prosper the Board is my prayer."

Some may think it is time to know what the writer will do. At the first meeting of the Board after the Convention, it was stated that he would, on the Convention's proposition, be one of the one hundred to pay the debt, and so on April 1st his fifty dollars will be paid.

The faithful, courteous and efficient Treasurer of the Convention, and the youngest deacon in the First Baptist church of Raleigh, says:

"Yes, certainly, I want to pay fifty dollars toward amount due on the Board by the 1st of April."

Bro. J. C. Caddell, writing from Wilmington, just after a visit to Lumberton, says:

"Brethren Proctor and Martin say, go ahead and count on them for their share of your distress. You will get the minutes asked for from Bro. Martin, and also the one hundred dollars for State Missions. I have ten dollars for you which was handed me by a brother at Laurinburg."

There are no better people or wiser Baptists in the State than the Lumberton saints. Their success has been wonderful. But with such helpers as E. K. Proctor, Jr., B. Godwin, L. H. Caldwell, W. W. Carlyle, W. I. Linkhaw, Frank Gough, A. E. White, Emory D. McNeill, Profs. Duckett and Toon of the Robeson Institute, and many others, and the consecrated women, Bishop Martin ought to succeed in all of his work. The fact is the Baptists in Lumberton and in Robeson county are "somewhat." The Lord is greatly increasing their efficiency and influence year by year. I have already received five dollars from one of the best women in the Lumberton church through her husband, Bro. T. F. Toon. I first knew Bro. Toon as the beloved Colonel of the Twentieth North Carolina Regiment in the war. How so many good men have come together at Lumberton I do not know. The Lord bless and prosper them more and more.

But I must stop. We are in sight of about three thousand dollars on the Convention's proposition to secure five thousand dollars by the first of April. We must, therefore, secure two thousand dollars additional in the next twenty-four days, or the proposition fails. This should not, ought not, and must not fail. Here is an opportunity to do a blessed work. But remember the money must reach the Treasurer on or before April 1st. Do not send the money to me, but to J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, N. C.

Please do not let your church be behind. Will not the clerk or some brother or sister in every church take this work in hand at once? Cannot each of the many efficient women's missionary societies in the State send us ten dollars during this month? Some individual sisters have agreed to send that much, and some even more than that sum. The time is short.

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

You would like the lamp-chimneys that do not amuse themselves by popping at inconvenient times, wouldn't you?

A chimney ought not to break any more than a tumbler. A tumbler breaks when it tumbles.

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass"—they don't break from heat, not one in a hundred; a chimney lasts for years sometimes.

Pittsburgh. GEO. A. MACBETH CO.

God's Purpose in Us is the Key of Our Purpose in Life.

We do not belong to ourselves. "And ye are not your own." In other words, don't ye know you are not your own? What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?

Do you ask, then, to whom do you belong, and are you not a freeman? Well, that depends upon whom you obey. One thing is true: you are the servants of him whom you obey. If you obey the Devil, you are a servant of his, and you are not a freeman. You are in bondage, and the worst kind of bondage. You are led captive by the Devil at his will, and doing his service without reward or hope of reward.

On the other hand, if you obey Christ, you are his servant, and a freeman, enjoying a liberty that no power on earth or hell can deprive you of. "For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant is the Lord's freeman (freedman); likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant." Then, if a Christian, you belong to the Lord, and are a freeman, notwithstanding a servant. "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself; for whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord; whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's."

But do you ask why you belong to the Lord? The answer is found in the Scriptures, and is as follows: "For ye are bought with a price." And, certainly, that which one buys and pays the price therefor, is his. This none will dispute, for it is a recognized principle both in law and in practice. But we inquire what price did the Lord pay for his people, that they might be freemen? Here is the answer: "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." But do you ask how much of you he bought? I answer, the entire man, soul and body; and that means everything you possess. And truly, every one will admit that the price was ample. "Therefore, glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

Now the way to glorify God is to serve him, for this is his purpose in you; and you serve him best by doing his will from the heart. "Not with eyeservice as menpleasers, but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart, with good will doing service, as to the Lord and not to men: knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, whether he be bond or free."

Hence, the purpose of the Christian life is not to serve self, nor men, nor the world, nor the Devil, but God, doing his will from the heart. It is the will of God that you believe on his Son Jesus Christ. When asked by some, "What shall we do that we might work the works of God? Jesus answered and said unto them, this is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." And as faith without works is dead, being alone, it is evident that to believe on the "Sent" of God is not only to assent to God's truth, but to receive it into the mind and heart, live it in the life, and thus fulfil in the daily walk and conversation the purpose of God in the Christian life. The test of faith in the Christian life is obedience, which is the fruit of unselfish love. There are many examples of this in Bible characters, prominent among whom are Abel, Noah, Abraham and others. Read and note carefully the worthies mentioned in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, and see how they declared their faith by their works. Christ said, "If a man love me he will keep (i. e., do) my words."

DEAR SIR:—Ever since I began to use the Electropoise in our family I have taken frequent occasion to speak to my friends of its wonderful curative powers. We have both the pocket and wall Electropoise, and we would not part with either under any circumstances. I have found that no medicine or drugs will so quickly give relief as the Electropoise, and particularly is this true with a cough, or in case of sleeplessness. The application of the instrument almost instantly stops the cough, and thereafter produces sleep. Ordinarily I decline to give public testimonials, for I very much dislike notoriety in any form; but I take pleasure in recommending the Electropoise, because of the wonderful relief it has accomplished in our family.
Yours truly,
MRS. HOWELL E. JACKSON.
Comment is unnecessary. Shall we mail you a book describing the instrument that cures when all else fails. It goes Free.

Sunday-schools in Country Churches.

Dear Recorder:—The purpose of this short article is to call attention to the inefficiency and to the lack of Sunday schools in our country churches, and to enquire who is to blame for it. The writer has no argument in favor of Sunday-schools to offer to the intelligent readers of the RECORDER. He believes the day has past in most communities in North Carolina when it should be necessary to discuss the importance of the Sunday-school. But one has only to attend the Union Meetings and some of the Associations to hear long-winded discussions of this subject. Nearly every man in the State has heard them, and is convinced. So it is against so much talk and so little action that the writer would protest. To organize and run a Sunday-school in any church needs only the active personal efforts of one or more of its members. Many seeking an excuse for their own indifference and inaction, will gainsay this proposition, but it is nevertheless true, as the experience of most Sunday School workers in country churches will attest. Most children are glad of the opportunity of going to Sunday-school. It is too often the grown folks, the deacons and other leading members of the church, who do not like to go. These constitute the class that must be aroused to the importance of the Sunday-school work, or rather to a sense of their personal duty to it. And who is to do this? The pastors, certainly. If these pastors believe what they so strongly proclaim in their Sunday-school speeches, they should certainly see that their churches organize and maintain schools. It is a plain duty they owe their churches. A church that can have a Sunday school and fails to do so, is hardly worthy the name of church. It is idle for a pastor to deny that he can organize a Sunday-school in most of his churches. Let him but interest himself enough to superintend the organization and see that the most faithful and efficient brethren and sisters be made officers and teachers, and his Sunday-school in most cases will be a success.

It is safe to say that one-half the country churches in three or four Associations which the writer has attended have no Sunday-schools. These churches do little or nothing for any object of the Convention. Some of them pledge as much as twenty-five cents, but fail to pay it. This is pitiable, and reflects not only on the churches themselves and their pastors, but on the whole cause. But if these churches feel that they cannot do anything for the outside world—and many of them are poor and can do but little—they certainly ought to try to do something and keeping up Sunday-schools whereby their spiritual activities may be awakened. Is the pastor who ignores so important an adjunct to the church as the Sunday-school is everywhere acknowledged to be doing his full duty? Let the pastors of the State put forth one earnest effort to increase the number and efficiency of the Sunday-schools and see if it does not mark a new era in the work.

DIED.

MORRISETT—Died at Camden C. H., Feb. 10th, 1894, M. S. Morrisett, in his sixtieth year. He leaves an afflicted wife and five children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his loss. Their loss is his eternal gain. He was a consecrated member and deacon of Shiloh Baptist church for several years.

NEPHEW.

MADDREY—Sister Lula Maddrey died suddenly on Thursday, Feb. 15th. She was about twenty-two years old, and wife of Bro. Neady Maddrey, who was left heart-broken. She was the daughter of Bro. Samuel Pruden. An affectionate mother and devoted brothers and sisters are left with hearts crushed and bleeding. Sister Maddrey suffered indescribably all day Thursday, but said she was going home to be with papa. A large attendance of ladies from Carmel and Seaboard churches attended her funeral, and rarely have we witnessed such deep grief, manifested in sobs and profusion of tears. Oh may our dear Father in heaven comfort the sorrowing.

J. C. FLEETWOOD.

DODD—On February 5th, 1894, Mrs. Angeline Dodd of Wake county, N. C., departed this life. She was the wife of John Dodd. She was eighty years old, and died in full faith that Christ was beckoning her home. Her life was peculiarly that of a Christian, and as her days drew to a close she manifested a firmer and stronger hope. Day by day she grew weaker and spoke but rarely, and principally then in expressing her willingness to die. As the inevitable hour approached, her children, with many friends, gathered about her bedside. She revived sufficiently to bid them an affectionate farewell, and then quietly passed away. Her death was one to be coveted.

The funeral was preached by Rev. O. L. Stringfield, her pastor, at the home of the deceased, and then her remains were carried to the cemetery at Mt. Moriah church and interred.

JOHN D. DODD.

PERRY—Died at his home in Franklin county, near Mapleville, on Feb. 18th, 1894, of pneumonia, Howell Winston Perry, son of Bro. Winston and Sister Mariah Perry. He was born March 18th, 1838. He married Mary E. Uzzle March 18th, 1874. Bro. Perry's death deserves more than a passing notice because of his excellent character. He was in every relation in life an upright man, as son, brother, husband, father, friend, neighbor and citizen. He was free from malice—wished every one well, never saying harm of any one. He professed religion some years ago, but never united with any church, never feeling himself worthy to be among the Lord's people. He died in full hope of eternal life, and was laid to rest in the old Perry burying ground amid a large crowd of sorrowing friends, the funeral services being conducted by the writer.

He leaves a devoted wife and nine children, besides brothers and sisters to mourn his loss. May God bless and comfort them.

G. M. D.

TEMPLE—Bro. Martin Temple departed this life Feb. 21st, 1894, being some over sixty years old. The fearful disease, pneumonia, seized him and he lingered only one week. A short while before his death, raising his hands, he called upon the Saviour to relieve him.

Bro. Temple became a member of Berea church while young, and was never known to be absent from his conference meetings unless kept away by sickness. His life had a sweet influence over all who knew him. He was one of the men whom I never heard any one speak light of. He was honest and just in all of his dealings with his fellowmen. It seemed to give him much pleasure to do a favor for any of his brethren, and all who knew him loved him.

His place either in the church or in the community cannot easily be filled. Truly a good man has fallen, and though the church through him suffers a great loss, we bow with submission, feeling that what is our loss is his eternal gain. He leaves several children and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. God bless them. JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

PRUDEN—Departed this life Monday, Feb. 12th, 1894, Samuel Pruden, aged seventy-three years. Brother Pruden was baptized into the fellowship of Mount Carmel church under the ministry of Elder G. M. Thomson. Seldom do we chronicle the death of such a good man as Bro. Pruden. He was repeatedly requested to allow the church to have him ordained as one of her deacons, but his humility and retiring disposition always caused him to decline. Hospitality, liberality, promptness in attendance at church, among many other admirable qualities, were distinguishing traits of his character. It was the pleasure of his church to frequently send him as their delegate to union and associational meetings. He always manifested great delight in meeting the brethren and ministers of his Association, and ministers from other parts of the State, and when worthy objects were presented he always liberally responded.

For more than fifteen years the writer was actively engaged in securing material for and building and organizing new churches in Northampton county, and in every instance Bro. Pruden gave liberally. In the midst of these many sacrifices, he and wife Mildred (daughter of Bro. Kinchen Stephson) reared a large family, five boys and five girls, all of whom are valuable members of Baptist churches, filling their places well in all the relations of life.

The writer conducted the funeral services, using the text Ps. 37: 37, "Mark the perfect man," &c. His family, the church, and the whole community realize a sore bereavement in the loss of such a good man. For five years he was confined to the house, and almost helpless, but was submissive.

J. C. FLEETWOOD.

ROLLINS—Rev. G. W. Rollins was born August 7th, 1825. The earlier part of his life was spent on the farm with his father in Rutherford county, (now Cleveland). While quite a youth he accepted Jesus Christ as his Saviour, and in the year 1845 connected himself with Mt. Pleasant church. Soon after this he was licensed to preach and was ordained to the full work of the ministry in 1851, and the same year married Miss Malinda J. Jenkins, daughter of Benjamin Jenkins, of Rutherfordton county. There was born to them eight children, five of whom are still living—four daughters and one son.

Rev. Rollins has been in the Master's field for forty-three years proclaiming the gospel. He was several times moderator of the King's Mountain Association, and moderator of the Sandy Run Association ever since its organization until his recent sickness, which commenced in August, 1893. This, with many toils and cares of years gone by, moved his foot-steps toward the tomb. On Feb. 16th, 1894, the man of God, surrounded by his dear wife and children, ceased to breathe. Quietly and peacefully he passed to rest. On the 17th his remains were interred at Concord church, the funeral services being conducted by his devoted friend, Rev. Thos. Dixon, Sr. Rev. Rollins was pastor of Concord church for many years. He was a man loved by all who knew him, and a Christian of broad and lasting influence for good, and who exerted all the influence that God gave him for his cause and kingdom here in the world. He was used as clay by God to anoint the eyes of many who were blind, thus causing them to see. The good he accomplished will live after him. Thousands perhaps are ready to say he was the instrument in God's hand of winning me to Christ. He was a Christian and a model for piety in deed and in truth.

Important to Farmers!

Yes, it is very important to all farmers to plant the best and earliest seed potatoes they can buy. To do this, they must buy the EARLY SIX WEEKS, the earliest now in cultivation. If farmers would plant this potato they could always get their crop in market in time to get seven and eight dollars per barrel. We planted this potato for the last two seasons, and selling our crop for nine dollars per barrel. This potato grows so quick the Esquimau would almost have time to mature a potato crop if he planted the Early Six Weeks. In the South two full crops can be grown in one season. Its size is large and handsome. We have one thousand barrels for sale. One lb. 40 cts.; 3 lbs. $1 00; by mail, postpaid. Peck, $1.10; bushel, $3.00; barrel, $7 00; by freight or Express. Send your order in at once before they are all sold, and give them a trial. Address all orders to the

La Grippe Again.

The United States has never suffered from any disease that has caused such fearful results as has La Grippe. Royal Germetuer has never failed to cure it quickly where used as directed.

Reliable Evidence.

ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 23, 1893.

In January last I had a violent attack of La Grippe. I was advised by a friend to use Royal Germetuer, which cured me in a couple of days. I was again attacked by the 'grip' this month, and profiting by my former experience, I commenced at once with Germetuer and did not have to go to bed. I consider it a specific for La Grippe. L. STUART.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 13, 1893.

About two years ago I had a severe spell of 'grip,' and was induced by my relatives to try Royal Germetuer. It soon cured the 'grip'

SWEETWATER, TENN., June 23, 1893.

My little son had La Grippe; was greatly prostrated, and continued to decline until we gave him Royal Germetuer. He began to improve at once, and soon regained his health.

J. T. BARROW, Pastor First Baptist Church.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor Sunday-school Literature, M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me a second time last spring. One bottle of Germetuer relieved me, as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

Rev. J. W. Howard, Baptist City Missionary of Columbus, Ga., writes Oct. 3d, 18 3: "Some years ago I had an attack of 'grip' which produced catarrh in my head and general prostration. I used Royal Germetuer and it wrought a wonderful cure."

The Home Circle.

From Day to Day.

My days are stairs that lead to life's great end
And one by one I steadily ascend;
Climbing with purpose true the upward road
That brings me to the city of my God.

Sometimes the step is bright with the full sun
That shines in cloudless radiance thereon;
Sometimes a shadow falls upon the way,
But, dark or light, I need not go astray.

One stair is rough, with thorn points all bestrewn,
But shoes of iron tread the nettles down;
And one, so steep, my weary crippled feet
The painful ascent scarcely can complete.

Sometimes it is a slippery step I tread,
And fierce temptations make my soul afraid;
But held in Christ's dear hands, so tender, strong,
The next I mount with courage and a song.

Each step in the long course a history has;
I make a mark as one by one I pass;
A gladsome record here, a tear-spot there,
A rescued soul, a struggle or a prayer.

And on life's mystic ladder to the skies
Bright angels come and go to paradise;
And work grows dearer as the end draws near,
Until I reach at last the golden stair.

And enter through the open pearly gate;
Where, with our King, souls watch for me and wait;
There at the feet I'll cast my trophies down,
And shout the victory which his love has won.

—Mrs. Helen E. Brown, in Exchange.

Happy Homes.

Why are there so few homes where there is complete harmony and constant sunshine? Why is it so rare a thing to find families where hearts are at rest, brows unclouded, and tongues oiled with gentleness and joy as the merry months glide by? Why has the lamp of love gone out on so many family altars? Why has the reality of wedded life fallen so far below what was expected and pictured? How has it come about that so many married people are in what is not too harshly designated as a chronic state of dissatisfaction with each other?

We speak not now of those sad, sad places where the drink fiend has stolen in to ravage or destroy, or where some other form of open sin readily accounts for the lack of peace. In very many Christian homes where the hands of the household maintain a fairly consistent outward walk there is not the settled habitual happiness that might be expected, and is certainly to be desired. Why is it?

Selfishness and thoughtlessness are the two words that destroy the beauty and vitality of the house-tree. Perhaps more than anything else it is just lack of thought and consideration, lack of little courtesies and manifestations of affection. Happiness is a mosaic made up of little stones. Trifles constitute it, and trifles can destroy it. The delicate plant of household harmony and love can be broken by much smaller matters than blows and oaths. It is not enough that the husband is a good provider, and furnishes the family enough of the necessities of physical life. It is not enough that the wife is reasonably economical and indefatigable in toil. Much more than this on both sides is needed. Love seeks ever to express itself, and longs for a similar return of expression. This is perfectly understood and acted upon in the days of courtship. Why should it not be in the days that follow? Is it not of quite as much importance to retain as to obtain? Should there not be an increase rather than a diminution of attention and care after those solemn vows are said which never can be unsaid, but are too often forgotten?

It is undoubtedly true that in a multitude of cases home happiness is wrecked by mere heedlessness. How richly it pays to take pains in these small matters that make up the sum of daily intercourse and common life! We make no question but that most people are much too sparing of commendation and encouragement. All of us need such pleasant words of cheer. It will not spoil the wife if she be raised occasionally, and told what a prize she has proved to be; it will fill her soul with song and sunshine and lighten all her labors. Nor will it hurt the husband if he is made to understand that he is the very best husband in all the wide world. It will make him ashamed not to live up to so inspiring an ideal. What a mistake it is to wait until our dear ones are dead before we seem to find out what they are worth to us, and to tell everybody else their good qualities sooner than we tell them! It is a mistake, also, to presume too much upon affection, as if it were an exhaustless reservoir. It requires perpetual renewal, and by the same means as those which were used to fill it in the beginning. It is of primary importance for the constituting or the continuing of a happy home that there be a multiplicity of those little delicate attentions which spring so naturally from a "thoughtful love by constant watching wise."

Have we uttered truisms? Perhaps so. Yet who of us do not need some gentle reminder along these lines? And young couples especially, just setting out together on the journey of life, might save themselves much misery and a thousand unavailing regrets would they but lay to heart these hints. They can thus keep the cold chill of indifference from creeping over their hearthstone. Even they who have already made the mistake here mentioned may surely turn over a new leaf, have an earnest season of prayer together, and resolve that a different order of things shall henceforth rule in their home.—Rev. James Hedley, D. D., in Home Herald.

Pain and depression of spirit, endured in early life have prepared many to sympathize with the unhappy, and to live a life of benevolence.—Sel.

Was She Selfish?

"I don't see," said Mamie, going slowly to the closet where she kept her hat, "why it is that I don't like almost everything that I have to do. Do you think it's wicked, auntie?"

"Perhaps, and perhaps not. Tell me an instance."

"Well, I've to go up town now on an errand. I wouldn't mind that so very much—not at all, perhaps—only I did want to finish this lovely blue silk for my Flossie. You see she needs it. Isn't it just sweet, auntie?" And Mamie held up her pretty little French doll, with its nearly finished dress, for auntie's inspection.

"Very," said auntie, smiling. "And how she must suffer if it isn't finished so soon as you intended by half an hour!"

"You're laughing at me now," said Mamie, pouting a little. "You know she wouldn't suffer a bit. She couldn't."

"But how about Katy and her eggs?"

"Why, she says she can't get dinner without them," said Mamie, blushing a little; "and she can't go for them herself, as the rest of the dinner would spoil."

"If it were somebody besides Mamie that 'hated go up town' for faithful Katy, what would you call her?" asked auntie.

"Oh, auntie, I should have to call her selfish; but that isn't what I mean to be. I wonder if I am really selfish every time I hate to do things for other people?"

"Better stop and think," said auntie. "Giant Selfishness is a horrid tyrant. Better kill him as quickly as possible."

"I mean to," said Mamie, putting on her hat with a will. The next moment she was trotting gayly down the sidewalk; and nobody would have dreamed that she hated to go.—Young Reaper.

A Curious Method to Take Foul Air Out of a Well.

I saw, says a writer in the Globe Democrat, a curious method used, the other day in Illinois, to take the foul air out of a well. The well was to be cleaned, but the man that took the job was afraid to go down until he had ascertained the quality of the air at the bottom. He let down a lighted candle, and when it descended to about six feet of the bottom it went out as suddenly as though extinguished by a whiff of air. That was all he wanted to know. He was then sure that the well had poisonous gas in it, and took a small umbrella, tied a string to the handle and lowered it open into the well. Having let it go nearly to the bottom, he drew it up, carried it a few feet from the well and upset it. He repeated this operation twenty or thirty times, with all the bystanders laughing at him, then again lowered the light, which burned clear and bright even at the bottom. He then condescended to explain that the gas in the well was carbonic acid gas, which is heaver than air, and therefore could be brought up in an umbrella just as though it were so much water. It was a simple trick, yet perfectly effective.

For Dyspepsia,
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
Dr. G. I. Halbert, Waco, Texas, says: "I have used it in dyspepsia, with good effect."

An Awful Story.

There was once an awful little girl who had an "awful" to everything. She had an awful house in and awful village, which was an awful distance from every other awful place. She went to an awful school, where she had an awful teacher; who gave her awful lessons out of awful books. Every day she was so awful hungry that she ate an awful amount of food so that she looked awful healthy. Her hat was awful small and her feet were awful large. When she took an awful walk she climbed awful hills, and when she got awful tired she sat down under an awful tree to rest herself. In summer she was awful hot, and in winter awful cold. When it did not rain there was an awful drouth. If this little girl does not get rid of this vulgar way of saying "awful" about everything, I am afraid she will come to an awful end.—Selected.

"A crick in the back," a pain under the shoulder-blades, water brash, biliousness, and constipation, are symptoms of disordered stomach, kidneys, liver, and bowels. For all ailments originating in a derangement of these organs, take Ayer's pills.

Fretfulness.

The one canker which ruins and disintegrates many a home is nothing more or less than a fretful temper. It is not cruelty, not indifference, but peevishness. It is the multiplication of a thousand needless rules and irritable injunctions. It is the inability to praise, and the readiness to blame. It is the disposition to ignore a virtue, but never forget a fault. The carelessness of a servant or the thoughtlessness of a child, is permitted to cloud the brightness of a day filled with the beneficence of God. A single dish upon a table under-done or over cooked converts all the wine of life to vinegar. Causes too trivial to be named without shame, are the beginnings of a strife whose angry and turbulent emotions surge and swell throughout the day. Not a line of the decalogue is broken, but the whole spirit of the gospel is violated, and the home, although professedly Christian, is devoid of that love "which is the bond of perfectness."

Gross immorality, judicial sundering of the sacred ties of marriage are not common in such families as read this, but the ideal Christian home, where mutual forbearance reigns, and only kindly words are spoken, is not easily found. Petty ebullitions of temper may not fill the divorce courts, but they do fill the club rooms. Nowhere more than in the privacy of the home is it necessary to remember the apostolic injunction to be "slow to speak, slow to wrath," and to remember that "the wisdom which cometh down from above is first pure, then peaceable." These are the marks of a truly Christian home.—Interior.

He Had Seen It.

A Chinaman came to a missionary to ask baptism. When asked where he had heard the gospel he answered that he had never heard the gospel, but had seen it. He then told of a poor man at Ningpo who had once been a confirmed opium smoker and a man of violent temper. This man had learned about the Christian religion, and his whole life was altered—he gave up the opium and became loving and amiable. "O," said the candidate for baptism, "I have not heard the gospel, but I have seen it."—Selected.

A DISTINGUISHED professor speaking of certain religious aspects of troublous times recently made these statements: "To teach the hollowness of wealth God blows it away in the smoke of a Chicago fire—$200,000,000 for an idea. To show the transientness of life he lets a steamer strike and founder—five hundred dead for a sentiment. He is spreading over the United States, just now, certain lessons in broad, black letters." We do not doubt God's power to do these things; we know his lessons are many and unmistakable; but no one can persuade us that he teaches by the methods implied in the statements of the professor. We do not see the necessity for such ghastly methods, and cannot conceive of a God, who "is love," using them. All powerful and all-wise, and the embodiment of love, he can and does teach us the lessons of life without harming a hair of our heads. Why is it necessary for God to show men that human existence is transient? Is not the fact mentioned in millions of last testaments, whose very existence proclaim it "in broad, black letters"? Not since the builders of the Tower were confounded have men needed to be impressed with life's transientness. And have we not testimony that wealth is hollow? Have men doubted it since Solomon concluded that all was vanity? And which of us will cease to strive for hollow wealth as long as it procures human power and recognition, though a hundred Chicago fires befall. Our God is a loving Father, and though he is jealous of the golden calf of modern men, there are many means that we know and an infinite number that he knows, by which men are impressed with human weakness and mortality, without destruction and death. The Chicago fire took its origin of a woman, a cow, a lamp, combustible material and the winds, it is said. God made them all essentially, but he did not make the woman neglectful. That was human. God made the waters, but when the great deep swallows up human lives, it is no sign of divine interference. A foolish man or a false pilot are the usual cause, and though God made them, no one but a fatalist would think that he sent them aboard the heaven cursed ship. If such are his methods we need no penal institutions, no death penalties. It is time we were discriminating the human and divine—a short-sighted, imperfect, and weak human, and a provident, wise, perfect and loving divine. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." His ways are mysterious, but never cruel nor useless.

OUR attention has been called to the efforts which the National Reform Association is making to have incorporated into our Federal Constitution a "Christian clause"—recognizing Christ as the Saviour. We have heard of people organizing for no other purpose than to be organizing, and we feel that we would be uncharitable to ascribe more serious motives to the leaders of this movement.

We know that the Pilgrim Fathers dedicated their lives to Christianity on Plymouth Rock, we believe that a popular vote would declare our country Christian, and we rejoice that it, and all civilization is more Christian than otherwise. But we cannot but hold from a spiritual and material standpoint that we have no right to recognize such a fact in a constitution, to which all voters must hold allegiance, so long as any voter is unchristian. A Christian clause in our Constitution would not add one jot to the glory of the Saviour, and, on the other hand, it has within it serious possibilities of harm to his cause. It would not make any more Christians, for Christians were never, and never will be made that way. It would be a reproach to all sects that believe that the kingdom of Christ is not of this world, and who would profit by the divine injunction, "Render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's." True, this doesn't mean that Christ is not King of kings, but it does mean that we should discriminate between the heavenly and the earthly. Having disregarded the political rights of the Hebrew and the unbeliever, the tendency would be to more definite discriminations. It would let down the gap for inserting clauses as to various disputed interpretations of the Saviour's will, and eventually the most powerful sect—the Jew and the Christian represent sects—would make the citizenship of this country their own by law. If the clause would remedy a single existing evil, or lead to the conversion of one non-believer, it might meet with more favor. Let Church and State be as far apart as possible until the accomplishment of the divine prayer that "all be one." The day of religious discriminations in our country is dead, and it has prospered well since it died. And our temporary and comparatively insignificant troubles just now furnish no grounds for adding a name to our Constitution, which would not make that name any dearer to the Christian, or more acceptable to the infidel.

WHATEVER may be said as to the relative merits of their respective platforms, one cannot avoid the conclusion that as an organization the Republican party is vastly superior to the Democratic. This is creditable or discreditable, as one regards the use of the party leash for harmony to the sacrifice of honest convictions. The Democracy has been in power now just one year, and only one bill of general importance and acceptance to its voters has been enacted—the repeal of the election laws. We believe it was Gladstone, the great opposition leader, who said that a bare majority was more to be desired than an overwhelming one; that the former was compelled by its weakness to concerted action, while personal differences could easily disintegrate the latter. He is right, and the large and divided majority in the House of Representatives is a testimony to his statement, however strongly to the contrary of the first part of it the small and disorganized majority in the Senate may insinuate. We will have further testimony if the majority in the House is diminished by the next fall elections. We are almost prepared to say that such a result would be salutary. In addition to the burden of unwieldy and disconcerted forces some concession must be made for the inexperience of the legislators. They have been fighting on the offensive for thirty years, and there is not one among them who has had considerable experience as a leader of the opposed. They know how to advance and retreat under fire of superior numbers, but are unacquainted with the experience of taking and holding a fort. There is one thing for which they can render no plausible excuse to their constituents—continued absence from sessions of the House, by which the opposition were enabled practically to control legislation for weeks in succession. It is something that we cannot think of without ascribing unworthy motives. Members of the same party, elected on the same platform, sharers of a common victory, and paid to serve and expected to serve faithfully; their absence is unaccountable. A company of recruits is never perfect in action, and were it left to its own counsel, would never win a battle. Organization and authority are necessities to successful party work, and time is an essential to the development of them both. But a year has elapsed, and it is high time that there were evidences of concerted action, if nothing more.

THE American public is possessed of a decided mania for 'rushing into print.' Almost every one—be his pretensions to good English great or small—likes to see his name in type. There would be no danger were this the end of the matter, for the press is the proper medium of public opinion. But the usual writer—some editors included—aspires to originality in lieu of other attractive qualities; and here lay the danger. There is apparently so little good in things, or, at least, it is so little valued, that people imagine that all of it that is worthy has been exposed, and look for the evil as the only subject of originality; whereas quite the contrary is true. The world is not so bad as they would have us think; times are not so hard, human nature not so perverse, nor our days so full of evil as were those that tried Job's soul. Our point of view influences our sentiments in no small degree, and the view of many of those who express themselves publicly is through a pessimistic perspective—wilfully so, perhaps. For such a view is always more popular, because man's natural state is one of discontent; he hallows the past, is hopeful of future change, but despises the present. It is so much easier to find fault than to see "good in everything;" and a complaining article is much more acceptable than one inspired of optimism. Let one but try to set forth reasons for present thankfulness, and his efforts are disregarded altogether or unheeded; but let him complain of his fellows and his time, and he is read and believed. None of us are perfect, and no human thing exists that is insusceptible of improvement. A fool though a wayfaring man can see imperfection on every hand. Civilized beings are embued with a desire of progress as they ought to be, but no one should set out on a mission of reformation until he is persuaded that he is going to improve rather than retard. The facility with which reformatory articles are written, and the difficulty with which reformations are wrought, are very different things. We do not hold that there are not grounds for complaint or need of improvement, for the contrary is unusually patent. Yet we feel that while our efforts should be to remedy and improve, we have no cause for desperation, but rather for hopefulness. We should bear in mind that making the most of the present is the only and the best human occupation. The press is the palladium of the people's rights, and its columns should be of, for and by them. But one should be sure that his statements are not exaggerated, his sentiments just, his remedies expedient, and his article for the general weal rather than to attract attention, before he uses it to influence the public.

Talks About Law—No. 27.

BY JUDGE R. W. WINSTON.

NUISANCE.

Law-writers have well nigh exhausted themselves in the attempt to define the word "nuisance." Blackstone said that it was "anything that worketh hurt, inconvenience or damage." But it is apparent that too much is embraced in this broad definition. So that, finally, some of the modern law-writers have admitted their inability to fully describe, in a definition, all that is embraced in the word "nuisance."

And yet the law governing this subject is not difficult. Nuisances may be public or private. If the nuisance be a public one, that is, one in which the public, and not simply one, or two, or three individuals are concerned: then it becomes to be and is a crime. But, if it be a private nuisance, that is, a nuisance which does not affect the public generally, but only a few people; it is not a crime, but is simply the subject of a civil action.

So that the only difference between the two cases is one of effect, as Mr. Wood, in his work on this subject, points out. A public nuisance must be one occurring in a thickly settled neighborhood, or where a number of people reside either temporarily or permanently. Let us consider some public nuisances, of which we are given an account in a valuable publication called "The English and American Encyclopedia of Law." Draining filthy water from the back-yard and lot and garden into a brook, flowing through a village, was held in New York to be a public nuisance. Of course, the brook was thereby made unhealthy. So it was held that an unguarded area, so near an open alley as to be dangerous to the public, was a nuisance. So also a pig-pen, which is not properly kept and is set up in such inconvenient parts of the town that it necessarily incommodes the neighborhood, is a public nuisance. So also, under certain conditions, a cemetery in the heart of a town, or a soap-boiler, or a tan-yard, might be public nuisances.

A livery-stable in a town is not per se a nuisance; but if it is located in a thickly-settled part of the town and is badly kept, it is a nuisance.

But everything that inconveniences one is not on this account a nuisance. Let us see: In the year 1881, Mr. Allen proposed erecting a planing-mill and cotton-gin in the town of Henderson. It was to be operated by means of steam. Mr. Dorsey, living very near to the place on which the mill was to be located, about 120 feet, applied to the chancellor for an injunction to stop operations, alleging that the danger from fire would be greatly increased, that the noise would render his dwelling almost uninhabitable, and that the smoke, cinders and ashes would injure the health and threaten the safety of the people in that neighborhood. But the Court quoted an old case and said that "if a man, instead of contenting himself with the quiet and comfort of a country residence, chooses to live in a town, he must take the inconvenience of noise, dust, flies, rats, smoke, soot and cinders, and he cannot complain of the owner of an adjacent lot by reason of soot, smoke, noise and cinders, caused in the use of his property, provided it be used for a reasonable purpose, and the manner of using it is such as not to cause any unnecessary damage or annoyance to his neighbors." So that Mr. Allen went on, no doubt, and built his mill.

So, in the same county, several gentlemen asked the aid of the court to prevent the commissioners of Vance county from erecting a public jail near their property, alleging that the closeness of the jail would greatly injure the value of the same and render that portion of the town less healthy. But the court declined to interfere saying that a jail was not per se a nuisance; but that it might be kept in such a condition as to render it so.

Against a public nuisance one has ample remedy, because the offender may be indicted, and if convicted, may be imprisoned, if he do not abate the nuisance. But not so with a private nuisance. Because in the latter case there can be no criminal case against the defendant.

What is the remedy against a private nuisance, that is to say a nuisance that annoys you and your family only? Generally speaking, it is an action for damages. But if it appears that the nuisance is of such a character that adequate compensation in damages cannot be awarded, or such as will occasion a constantly recurring grievance, which cannot otherwise be relieved against, in these cases the Court of Equity will interpose and abate or tear down the nuisance.

Suppose, for example, that one erect a mill-dam, and that the water ponded thereby sobs and injures the adjacent land; suppose also that the yearly damage is twenty-five dollars, in this case, the nuisance would not be abated, perhaps, if the damages could and would be paid.

But suppose that a mill pond caused sickness in the neighborhood, and that this fact was established by experts or otherwise to the satisfaction of the jury, why the court would no doubt cause the nuisance to be abated. Because compensation in damages would not be adequate, and it would be a continuous nuisance.

A common scold is a nuisance. At common law only women could commit this offence. The punishment therefor was curious. The common scold was taken to the nearest pond and there, being securely fastened to the ducking-stool, she was plunged into the water. To cool her wrath, no doubt.

It is fair to state that the statute in many States has since extended this wholesome law to men as well as women.

If a man bring a horse, cow, or other useful animal having a dangerous contagious disease into the presence of other animals, this is a nuisance. So any indecent exposure in a public place, or the doing any act which shocks and outrages public morals in a public place, is a criminal nuisance. So is loud cursing, swearing, and using indecent language in a public place.

It is laid down in the books that one, in certain circumstances, may himself abate a public nuisance. But it is not safe to do so. However the following seems to be the case when one may so act. It must be a public nuisance; then the person himself, as well as the public, must have been injured thereby. There must be no breach of the peace, and no more must be done than just enough to abate the nuisance. But in this case, as in all others, the safest plan is to let the law take its course.

Christian Assurance.

In writing upon this most important subject, I wish to emphasize only one of its phases, leaving the great theme still open to discussion.

When the Apostle Paul declared unto the Corinthian church the fundamental truths of the gospel, he called its attention to the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, emphasizing that these things had all occurred according to the Scriptures. Moreover, he also implies that these wonderful facts must be accepted upon human testimony, (1 Cor 15: 4–9). And upon this assumption he argues the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. Now, as these historical facts of the gospel are taught so clearly here, as well as elsewhere, to be in perfect fulfilment of the Old Testament Scriptures, it is a natural inference that a critical annihilation of the Old Testament must undermine the New. This point has not escaped the watchful eye of the shrewd skeptical critic. And hence, those who appear so eager to obscure the light of God's truth and to leave the world in darkness, have aimed their most powerful blows at the contents of the Old Testament Scriptures. Some endeavor to explain away all the miracles, making, as much as possible, the records appear utterly unreliable; while others try to get rid of Christ from all the prophetic writings. By such works these men are continually making the blood boil in the veins of honest believers; and not unfrequently do we find many Christians alarmed at the reckless manner in which these unbelievers handle God's inspired truth.

Now the question arises, that if these critics should succeed by their ingenious sophistry in perplexing the mind of the average reading Christian as to the dates, genuiness and authenticity of the Old Testament books, has he not still abundant evidence to assure him of the truth of Christianity? I say, yes! In addition to human testimony as to the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, the true Christian has within himself evidence of the truth, and this evidence is beyond the reach of any unbeliever. In fact, to the mind of a real disciple of Christ many of the moral and spiritual teachings of the Bible are plainly stamped with truth. They do not appear as a mere collection of brilliant fancies coined by the fertile brain of man; but they stand as self-evident. They are like Joseph's interpretation of Pharaoh's dream, or like Daniel's interpretation of the handwriting upon the wall; each of these was accepted, though the latter sealed the doom of him to whom it was given.

Again, the new birth of a believer is also an important testimony to the truth of the blessed gospel. Whenever he reflects upon this mysterious change in his life he naturally feels the force of those words: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof; but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth, so is every one that is born of the spirit." A more careful and extensive examination of his life as he grows older in Christian experience brings him even greater assurance of his acceptance with God. He finds all his struggles against sin so accurately and minutely described by the inspired writers of the New Testament. His longing desire to obtain a Christ-like spirit—his hungering and thirsting for personal holiness is a testimony to God's truth which even staggers the most critical skeptic. It was the confession of an unbelieving critic that the life of Adoniram Judson, with its Christ-like examples, was worth more to the American people than all the money that had ever been given to foreign missions.

But further, the true believer experiences amidst the greatest trials, his deepest sorrows, sweet hours of peace which harmonize perfectly with Paul's description of the justified sinner (Rom. 5: 1–5). Is this not to him at least a strong testimony that the gospel is all it professes to be?

But once more, the continual presence of the Holy Spirit, which is in itself the real test of acceptance with God (Rom. 8: 9), testifies to our exalted position as God's children: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God, and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ," (Rom. 8: 16, 17). This, of course, is our greatest assurance. It sharpens our spiritual perception in the recognition of all other internal evidences of God's grace. Without the Holy Spirit all evidences of the truth of Christianity may become dim to our sight; with it, they all may serve to assure us of immortality and eternal happiness beyond the grave. So let the skeptic go on with his criticisms; let the infidel continue to scoff; for he that is born of God has within himself an assurance of the truth (1 John 5: 10), and this assurance will seal his faith in the blessed Redeemer.

JOS. HYDEN.

Morehead City, N. C.

From Petersburg, Va.

Dear Recorder:—Since I wrote to the RECORDER, events have been chronicled on its pages which have brought to me joy and sadness. I have rejoiced, with a sense of deep personal interest, in each token of the Divine favor upon the great host of the North Carolina Baptists, and my heart has entered, as one bereaved, into the shadow of afflictive providences which, though coming from the source of all goodness, are yet often so hard to be understood. In the death of Col. J. M. Heck, North Carolina and the universal cause of Christ suffered loss. Of that charming family circle, where the graces of vital Christianity bloomed as in their native element, now so sadly broken on earth,—Oh, such sorrow is so sacred that I can but reverently stand without and pray that the Divine Comforter may enter and abide within. The beautiful City of Raleigh can never be quite the same to me.

The RECORDER brought me news of the election of Prof. Brewer to the Presidency of the Female University. Is that noble and beautiful dream some of us cherished so fondly, and then almost despaired of, about to be realized? I devoutly hope so, and that this consecrated, wise and successful educator may find the greatest enterprise of Southern Baptists in his plastic hand, shaping into form.

In this connection, let me testify to the rare excellence of the articles that are so enriching your columns from the pens of Dr. Pritchard, Prof. Poteat, and Judge Winston. One does not expect to endorse everything he reads with pleasure and profit, but I wish to make modest acknowledgment to these distinguished gentlemen.

The great revival union meetings, which began in this city on the first day of the year, still sweep triumphantly on, and all the city is moved as never before in its history. I have been widely published as the leader of these meetings. It would be more accurate to say the governing power is lodged in a committee of three, of which committee I happen to be chairman. It is true the committee adopted, and have strenuously carried out my methods, but no one man can be called the leader. Methodists, Presbyterians, and Baptists have labored harmoniously together, and the blessing of God has come in wonderful fullness upon their joint efforts. It is impossible to say how many have professed conversion. The work has been largely upon the upper classes of society. The preaching has been faithful and fashionable vices have had the tinsilled veil torn away. The city has been convulsed by the power of the truth. Religion and true morality have gained to an incalculable degree. Many converts have gone into Episcopal churches (though the clergy refused to unite with us in the work). This is due to the fact that much of the work has been done in Episcopal circles. The church of which I am pastor (and whose building is used for the night services) has received about forty members, and were the meetings to close now, I could on next Sunday, with present information, make the number fifty. I know no means of estimating the results of a meeting of this character—they go on.

Would I then, fresh from the blessed experiences of the last eight weeks, recommend "union meetings" to all Christian communities? No, indeed! I think it was Walpole who defined politics to be "the science of circumstances." There is such a science (in the sense used), and it is well to regard it. Conditions may not easily justify, but demand such an effort, but be sure that the conditions exist.

THE TESTIMONY OF SCHOLARSHIP.

Some years ago statements were published in the RECORDER to the effect that the people of Greece know nothing about sprinkling and pouring as religious rites; that every church in Greece requires its members to be baptised—buried with Christ. There was another statement in regard to the interpretation of the Greek word baptizo. At that time the statements were referred by the editor of the North Carolina Presbyterian to Mr. T. R. Sampson, a resident of Salonica, who wrote quite a lengthy reply, setting forth that the statements were "as full of inaccuracies as an egg is of meat." In the last issue of the Presbyterian Mr. Sampson's article was republished at his request, as "almost every week brought him one or two letters in regard to it."

While a controversy in regard to the matter will hardly be of general advantage, it may not be unprofitable to Mr. Sampson and our readers, to have our authority for the statements set forth; and moreover, his imputations demand it.

Mr. Sampson practically admits our first statement, when he says the Greeks "are not more familiar with any religious rite than that of sprinkling for purification,—a baptismos of houses and men, called popularly photismos or hagiasmos," which mean enlightening or sanctifying. We had reference to the ordinance of baptism in our general statement; we never imagined for a moment that the Greeks might not have sprinkled for other purposes, as did the Hebrews. Surely, we did not include houses and garden plots in our statement. Mr. Sampson is compelled to say that this sprinkling was called by the Greeks photismos or hagiasmos, although he called it baptismos in the first part of his statement. The question is not what Mr. Sampson finds it convenient to call sprinkling, but what the Greeks call it, and he admits that they do not call it baptismos.

Again, Mr. Sampson says: "I never saw any one (we suppose he means any Greek) immersed, i. e., submerged at all—if buried is with the head left out." We do not feel called on to question Mr. Sampson's eyesight,—for fear that he may be like the deaf judge, who had heard no evidence contrary to what was to his interest to believe. But some testimony that the Greeks do immerse may be relevant. Says Von Colln: "Immersion in water was general until the thirteenth century among the Latins; it was then displaced by sprinkling, but retained by the Greeks." This is the testimony of one of those German scholars, whom Mr. Sampson seems to prefer to any other. Hagenbach, another German, says: "From the thirteenth century sprinkling came into more general use in the West. The Greek church, however, and the church of Milano still retained the practice of immersion." Augusti says: "Immersion in water was general until the thirteenth century, among the Latins; it was then displaced by sprinkling, but retained by the Greeks." Deylingius wrote: "The Greeks retain the rite of baptism," (not of sprinkling, sanctifying—photismos or hagiasmos, but baptismos, mind you) "to this day." Dr. Wall says: "The Greek church in all its branches does still use immersion." Dr. Whitly says: "The observation of the Greek church is this, that he who ascended out of the water must first descend into it; baptism, therefore, is to be performed, not by sprinkling, but by washing the body, and indeed, it can only be from ignorance that this can be questioned." Dr. King holds that "the Greek church uniformly practises the trine immersion," although Mr. Sampson says that practically they do not. Broughton says: "The Greek church differs from the Romish, as to the rite of baptism, chiefly in performing it by immersion, or plunging the infant all over in water." Lastly, the Encyclopœdia Brittanica, a standard authority the world over, says: "The Greek church differs from the Romish chiefly in performing it (baptism) by immersion; or plunging the infant all over in water." Does any one believe Mr. Sampson in preference to this Encyclopœdia, which spent thousands of dollars to find the truth of all matters, and which has been before the world, the German scholars and all others, for a century? It has been corrected and improved; perhaps Mr. Sampson will have it change its utterance in regard to the Greek church. Are all the scholars, whom we have quoted, wrong, and Mr. Sampson alone right? God forbid!

Again, Mr. Sampson questions the meaning of the Greek word baptizo. He says German scholars know more about the ancient Greek language than do the modern Greeks themselves. Do the Germans know more of Greek than did the greatest of Greek scholars, Melanothon? who says: "Baptism is immersion in water." But grant that modern Germans do know more; let him account for the foregoing statements of Von Colln, Hagenbach, and others. The leading scholarship of the world, English, French, German and Greek, declares that the meaning of the Greek word baptizo is "Immerse." And if we thought it worth the space we would quote forty representative (not Baptist church members) scholars on the subject, every one declaring that the word has but one meaning. There are prominent Presbyterians living to day who acknowledge that for thirteen centuries there was but one mode of baptism, and that was immersion. Dr. Schaff, the most learned of modern Presbyterians, who died quite recently, says: "Immersion, and not sprinkling, was unquestionably the original form." Is this some of the "nonsense that has been written on the subject," which Mr. Sampson ascribes to some one, or does Mr. Sampson know what he is talking about? Schaff or Sampson? A scholar or an ignoramus, choose.

Until we had read Mr. Sampson's article we did not know that any one who had investigated the subject to the recesses of a Greek lexicon, doubted the original and the present and the everlasting meaning of the word baptizo. And we are sure every educated preacher in North Carolina will admit that the general practice of Christians of all kinds up to the thirteenth century was immersion—ducking, dipping. The ground of difference is in discrimination between essentials and non-essentials, not interpretation of the Greek text. The latter was abandoned years ago.

In conclusion we desire to acknowledge our obligation to Dr. Edward T. Hiscox for compiling the utterances of distinguished scholars, many of whom are quoted in the foregoing, in his book—"The New Directory for Baptist Churches."

We have not seen anything more pertinent in some time than the following from the Journal and Messenger:—

"It is suggested that those who are doing what is popularly regarded as 'the work of an evangelist' ought not to be satisfied with a single visit to one place, but should do as the apostles Barnabas and Paul proposed to do when they said, 'Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.'"

Evangelists often cite the methods of Barnabas and Paul as models of their efforts. Let them take the apostle's examples throughout, and we are sure their work will be more fruitful, whether it appears so or not.

There are not many Christians who are not more influenced by some preachers than others, and every one seems more influenced by the preacher who first pointed him the way, than by the regular pastor. And for this reason, were there not many others, it would be well for evangelists to revisit the scenes of their meetings, and preach to those whom they have already been the means of converting. Morever, they would learn a little more about their fruits than they do in usual cases; they would not be so certain of numbers, to say the least.

There are too many evangelists in the field already, and we are inclined to agree with a recent writer who said that the main reason is to be found in the fact that of all ministerial work the evangelistic was the easiest. The evangelist finds the sheep and leads them to the fold, thinking that he has done his part; but some one must feed, direct, guard, and comfort them, and this is the lot of the pastor. But Paul and Barnabas could edify and comfort as well as find, and we are glad our contemporary has called attention to the fact.

We have said that there are too many evangelists, and have suggested a reason therefor; let no one, however, think that we do not recognize the need of evangelism. There is such a thing as diversity of gifts,—one is a good minister; another, preacher; another, exhorter; another, instructor; and others, we are happy to say, combine all these gifts, and are good pastors. But where power of exhortation is lacking, though other good qualities are present, there is need of an evangelist, but not of the non committal and indefinite kind. He may excite the emotions, and inculcate vague ideas of morality, and even religion, but his boundary lines are too indistinct to contain a worldly-inclined professor of conversion. Christianity is more than excitement, emotion and sentiment, and those evangelists who depend on these would soon perceive this, if they would take Paul's example and revisit the cities of their apparently glorious work. It is well to be an instrumentality in converting sinners; but no preacher of Christ should forget that he said "Feed my sheep."

Brethren, the first day of April is now only seventeen days in the future, and that State Mission debt must be raised. Bear in mind that if the complete amount—$5,000—is not secured, many of the pledges that have made Bro. Durham and the faithful missionaries happy, will be void. If your churches haven't done anything yet, place the matter before them at your earliest opportunity, and urge them to join in the good work that our columns have been chronicling for the past several weeks.

Some one has said that the prayer meeting is the church thermometer. If Christians are cold and lack interest, it is more apparent in the prayer-meeting than anywhere else; if a church is active, working, and full of faith and love, it can be seen most plainly in the prayer meeting. It happens in this way: Certain people are ashamed to be absent from regular church service, because they haven't a good excuse. But few fear to miss the prayer meeting, because so many apparently plausible excuses may be made. We are sorry the prayer meeting is being disregarded by any. It is the very time for active church work. Some one else than the pastor has opportunity of preaching, of "telling the story." The lay-member is no longer a hearer only. The prayer meeting service may be so varied as to interest the most easily wearied; it is freer than a regular service, and it is often more blessed, in that the motive of those who attend it is one of love, and, perhaps, self sacrifice. And there is so great an opportunity for communing with the Father at these services. It is a blessed institution, and it should not be disregarded so widely as it is. And it is true, it is a good thermometer, for it depends on love, and not obligation.

We have been requested by Hon. T. J. Morgan, Secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, to reply to several articles in the March number of the Home Mission Monthly on the condition of the negro, as understood by Drs. MacVicar, Morehouse, Hiscox, and Secretary Morgan, all of whom recently visited the South, and who have come to the conclusion that "the present statue of the colored people calls loudly and imperatively for serious consideration on the part of Baptists North and South."

We have yet to make the acquaintance of a Northern writer on the negro problem who does not reflect on the South, if his article is intended for Northern readers. The four gentlemen are agreed that the negro is now regarded more kindly by Southerners than ever before. This is very well. They believe that the condition of the negro has improved, but they attribute his improvement to the work of the Home Mission Society. Have they forgotten that there are negro free schools in North Carolina and other States supported largely by the whites? The Home Mission Society has done a great work, but they have by no means done all.

Again, the articles bristle with reflections on the "old South;" they misstate the motives that prompted it to war; they exaggerate the condition of the negro slave, and the freedman in reconstruction times. Altogether there is too much of seeming prejudice in the articles to permit of an unprejudiced reply. However, we commend the work of the Society, if we cannot submit to its opinions. The latter are excusable in men who know very little of the negro, and less about the South.

Some time ago we noticed a statement made in a lamentably personal controversy concerning the number of people who believe in immersion. A writer stated that nineteen of every twenty Christians believed in infant sprinkling. As the statement grew out of a personal matter, and appeared in a Baptist paper, we did not feel called on to refute it. However, it has remained several weeks unquestioned. The author of the statement was either unspeakably ignorant or a very poor calculator. All churches—not established by missionaries—in Asia, in Africa, and about one-third in Europe, immerse to baptize, not as we do however, as they baptize infants by dipping. The information is valuable as a question of interpretation, not of doctrine. In addition to these there are 3,383,160 Baptists in the United States, not to mention those who believe in immersion as the biblical mode. Altogether "more than half the nominal Christians in the world still practice immersion in baptism." (Dr. Hiscox). This is according to a careful estimate, and a very recent announcement, from an authoritative source. We do not see the object of those who misrepresent facts as they are often misrepresented; and charity, and a regard for the churches which they represent, compels us to ascribe ignorance rather than design to the authors of the misrepresentations referred to in this issue. Surely, it is uncharitable enough to expose the truth in such instances.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Several communications are crowded out of this issue.

....Rev. E. F. Jones of Gastonia is this week holding meetings in Lenoir.

....An interesting public debate was held at Bethel Hill Institute, March 11th.

....Rev. G. H. Church, Statesville, baptized six candidates on the 4th inst.

....The Orphanage at Thomasville will want another female teacher April 1st.

....We continue to hear good reports of Bro. M. A. Adams' meetings at Monroe.

....The First Baptist church of Brooklyn, N. Y., recently purchased a building lot at a cost of $76,000.

....Rev. Rufus Ford writes that Rev. P. G. Elsom begins a series of meetings in Newbern, March 21st.

....Rev. T. Bright has resigned the pastorate at Cherryville. He is succeeded by Rev. J. M. Webb.

....The new Southeast Virginia paper, by Doctors Owen and Speight, is to be called the Atlantic Baptist.

....We are glad to state that Miss Fannie E. Heck of Raleigh is almost entirely recovered from her recent illness.

....We were pleased with a visit last week from Bro. H. L. Foushee, the promising young lawyer of Durham.

....Rev. W. T. Jones, pastor of the Second church, Goldsboro, also preaches at Seven Springs, Wayne county.

....Dr. J. C. Hiden of Richmond, Va., aided Bro. Warren of Williamsburg, Va., in a series of meetings last week.

...."Talks on Medicine" by a retired physician, which we began some time since, will be resumed in our next issue.

....This issue is somewhat of a young men's paper,—brethren Moore, White and Hiden contribute excellent articles.

....Rev. Hight C. Moore's book on North Carolina Poets and Poetry is ready for the press. It will, no doubt, find a good sale.

....The Watchman, Boston, was injured by fire on the 6th inst. These Baptist newspaper fires are beginning to assume a serious aspect.

....Rev. J. N. Stallings has accepted a call to Mocksville, N. C. He will serve also the Farmington, Jerusalem, and Eaton's churches.

....The Sunday school of Bro. Van Deventer's Henderson church recently held a successful book reception for the benefit of their library.

....Bro. Jno. E. White will assist Rev. W. F. Watson in a series of meetings in Spurgeon Memorial church, Norfolk, after the Moody meetings.

....We are glad to learn from a member of his church that Rev. Thos. Carrick is doing good work at Randleman. Congregations are large and growing.

....Rev. W. F. Williams, city missionary, preaches in the Fulton Street Baptist church, Richmond, during March, Dr. Whitfield, pastor, being in need of rest.

....A meeting preliminary to the Moody meetings has been started in Bro. Wright's Leigh Street Baptist church, Richmond. Rev. P. P. Bliss is preaching.

... Rev. W. C. Tyree is at Wake Forest College, assisting Bro. Gwaltney in a series of meetings. The prospect is, we are glad to learn, for a successful meeting.

....Rev. W. P. Hamrick began a series of meetings at Henrietta church last Sunday. The new church at this place will be dedicated the third Sunday in April.

....Dr. Cobb tells of remarkable Baptist progress at Pittsboro in another column. His methods might be applied with advantage to certain other difficult pastorates in our State.

....We were very glad to see Rev. J. K. Howell of Rocky Mount in our office last week. He reports his flock in good condition, and some recent minor improvements to his church.

....We have heard with regret of the assignment of Bro. J. B. Bostwick of Asheville, and hope that he is not mistaken in thinking that he will "be on his feet again" in a few months.

....It is stated that revivals in recent months in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Texas, have resulted in 54,000 professions of religion and 49,000 additions to various churches.

....Miss Bessie Richardson, daughter of Rev. J. B. Richardson of High Point, and Mr. A. E. Tate of the same town, were united in marriage on the 14th inst., Dr. Pritchard officiating. Congratulations.

....Bro. W. W. Vass, Jr., son of Maj. W. W. Vass of the First Baptist church, Raleigh, has entered co-partnership in law with Bro. J. N. Holding of this city. The new firm have our best wishes.

....The Foreign Mission Board recently accepted as missionaries for China, brethren W. B. James, R. E. Chambers, C. W. Chadwick and W. W. Lawton, all of whom are Southern Baptist Theological Seminary students.

....Preliminary to the revival meetings to be conducted by Dr. L. G. Broughton next week, night meetings are being held in the Raleigh Tabernacle commencing on Sunday night. Dr. Broughton arrived in the city on Tuesday.

....Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage has decided to remain with his Brooklyn Tabernacle, "as satisfactory arrangements have been made about the debt." If we mistake not, Dr. Talmage has said that the debt had nothing to do with his resignation.

....We acknowledge receipt of a copy of the minutes of the thirty-ninth annual session of the Florida Baptist Convention, held January 10–13, '94, at Plant City.

....While out hunting last week Bro. R. T. Vann of Scotland Neck received a slight wound over the eye from a stray bird-shot. We are glad to learn that it is not serious.

....Messrs. Herbert W. Early, J. C. Howard, J. L. Cornwell, W. J. C. Christain, F. M. Lee and J. M. Holding have been chosen marshals for the next commencement exercises of Wake Forest College.

....Rev. R. W. Weaver's High Point church publishes a very neat programme of church services, together with names of officers, etc., every two months. We thank Bro. Weaver for the programme for March and April just received.

....Dr. J. W. M. Williams, who is at Chapel Hill, is writing a book, which, we learn from the Baltimore Baptist, is to be called the "Teaching of the Holy Spirit." It will be a valuable contribution to Baptist literature, we are certain.

....We return thanks to the editors for a copy of the February issue of The Harrisonian, an excellent college journal, gotten up semi-annually by the young ladies of South West Virginia Institute. The present number is very creditable to the institution.

....Be sure to hear Bro. Bryan's address if he has an appointment near you this week. The program of the next few days is as follows: Louisburg, evening of the 14th; Henderson, 15th and 16th; Warrenton, 17th and 18th; Littleton, 19th; Weldon, 20th; Wilson, 21st.

....We have received a copy of a recent tract by Bro. E. E. Folk, the able editor of the Baptist and Reflector, Tenn. It considers "The First Day, or Sunday, the Christian Sabbath," and can be obtained at ten cents a dozen, or two hundred copies for $1.00.

...."Board or No Board," by Dr. R. H. Graves, which we reprinted from the Religious Herald last summer, has been published in tract form. Those desiring an exhaustive discussion of this important question should send to the Foreign Mission Board, S. B. C., at Richmond, for this excellent treatise.

....Rev. E. A. Oakes has returned to his home at Summerville, Mass., after having held meetings at Kinston, Charlotte and Fayetteville, N. C. His methods were of edification and comfort rather than for exhultation, and we were glad to see his work so highly commended by Dr. Pritchard in our exchanges.

....Bro. Jno. E. Ray, the well known former Corresponding Secretary of our State Board, has recently compiled, with the assistance of two others, a brief historical sketch of the Colorado School for the Deaf and Blind, of which he is superintendent. We are very glad to note the marked success of Bro. Ray's administration.

....We regret to hear of the extreme illness of our aged brother, Rev. Jesse Howell of Chatham county. Bro. Howell is said to be the oldest Baptist minister in the State, and in spite of his years was still a good worker up to the recent snow-storm, during which he received a severe fall. He has served his generation long and well.

....The Western North Carolina Baptist, which has been conducted by its regular business manager, J. D. Boone, since Bro. Wharton retired, announced in its last issue that Revs. M. A. Jenkins and W. H. Rich had taken editorial charge, Bro. Boone continuing as manager. These brethren, we believe, are young men, and we extend to them a hearty welcome into the fraternity.

....Twice lately the Baptist newspaper world has been misled by the daily press; first regarding Dr. Kerr. B. Tupper and the Disciples, and more recently in regard to Dr. Harper's utterances. Newspaper correspondents should not be sent to report religious matters, of which they have no knowledge; and newspapers should not be so anxious to get sensational reports, that the truth is exaggerated to make it acceptable.

...The Western North Carolina Baptist is making efforts to raise a fund for buying Judson College, or, if that is impracticable, to build a new college. Surely one Baptist college is sufficient for our State, and Wake Forest is as good as the best. We would suggest that the fund be applied to a Baptist preparatory school, or given to the Board of Education for the support of Western North Carolina ministerial students.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard has added about ten new subscribers to our list since Jan. 1st, and we wish to commend the following note from him to the attention of all our readers: "Sample copies of RECORDER received last week, and I made haste to scatter them where I expect you to get good returns. I will use them thus as often as you send them. I consider myself an agent for the RECORDER, and know I will be fully paid for my trouble in placing it among my people by the help it will give me in my pastoral work."

....Judge Winston on that troublous subject—"Nuisances," Rev. Jos. Hiden on one of the important phases of "Christian Assurance," "A Prayer-meeting Talk" by Rev. Jno. E. White, a study in the gospel according to Matthew by Rev. Hight C. Moore, "State Aid" by Rev. J. W. Powell, Sir Walter Raleigh's hymn with remarks by Dr. J. L. Carroll, a "Hopeful" view of the State Mission debt by Dr. Durham, a narration of an interesting China trip by Sister Fannie E. Knight, and welcome news letters from brethren W. B. Oliver of Wilmington, L. Johnson of Rockingham, A. W. Setzer, Dr. H. B. Cobb and others should make this issue interesting and instructive to our subscribers.

Hopeful.

I have time this week to say only a few things about the prospects of success on the debt.

IF THE WEATHER

for the next three Sundays (I am writing on Friday morning, March 9th) is good, so that the churches can have their usual congregations, it will be greatly in our favor.

THE CLERKS

of five hundred churches have been asked to aid us this month each in collecting a small definite amount. Some of them have been heard from and more than the amount asked for will be secured. The clerks of our churches are good men; I believe in them, and hope all of them will secure the amount named.

THE WOMAN'S MISSION SOCIETIES

have been asked to aid in this work. Many of them will do so. Some of them have been heard from. If all of them shall do what they can, much help will be realized. These woman's mission societies will not disappoint us.

SOME OF THE PASTORS

have not yet been heard from, but they will do their part. They will each give of their personal means, and do much to bring this work before their churches and to impress their people with its importance just at this time. If it is desirable, a list of the pastors that do nothing on the Convention's proposition can be published later on. I would not like to give it to the public now. They may yet put this object before their people, and do well.

SEVERAL INDIVIDUALS, from each of whom I am hoping to raise fifty dollars, have not given their final answer. But they are good men, are able to do it, and are interested in this proposition. They have a great opportunity.

THE PRAYERS

of many are being presented to God for his help and guidance in this proposition. It seems to be for the glory of the Lord's work that the five thousand dollars shall be in the Treasurer's hand by the first of April. We can all pray for success. Why not do it? Brethren, pray for it. Our God can give us all his cause needs.

THE PROPOSITION

of the Convention is for the money to reach the Treasurer "on or before April 1st," but, as the first day of April falls on Sunday, and, of course, the Treasurer cannot post his books on that day, the time will be extended to Monday, April 2nd. So that if any churches make collections on the first Sunday in April, and they can reach the Treasurer on Monday, April 2nd, it will be counted in the amount necessary to complete the proposition.

SUNDAY, MARCH 19TH, 1894, is the time fixed by the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools for a collection in every Sunday-school in the Convention for Bibles and Testaments. The Board thinks it ought to put 2,000 Bibles (25 cents each), and 5,000 Testaments (6 cents each) into 2,000 families too poor to pay for them, and into the hands of 5,000 bright boys and girls too poor to pay for them.

Will not every school in the Convention take said collection for this object and forward it to the Treasurer at once? Remember this object and the time for the collection.

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

A Word from the Pee Dee.

Everything is moving on quietly in this part of the moral vineyard. The incessant cry of "hard times" has had somewhat of a depressing effect upon the work in our Association; but since people have gone to work, there is less time to complain, and hence more hopefulness.

One great need of our Association is that the churches combine and form compact fields, and settle pastors on the fields. In some parts of this Association this has been done, and the development of these churches has been quite gratifying. In other sections, however, no effort has been made to form fields, but each church acts for itself. As a consequence, some of the pastors live anywhere from twenty-five to seventy-five miles from their churches. Of course, where that is the case, but little, if any development can be expected. Some Baptist churches think it is an abridgement of that glorious freedom and independence which has been the proud boast of the Baptists through all ages, to unite with any other church. We hope, however, that all our churches will be brought to see the advantages of forming themselves into convenient fields, and that a more thorough system of organization can be effected.

Bro. Adams of Wadesboro and Tuttle of Roberdel are quite valuable acquisitions to our Association. The Wadesboro saints are delighted with their new pastor, and he seems well pleased with the church.

Bro. Tuttle, my nearest neighbor in the pastorate, is getting his work well in hand. His people are all charmed with him. The only objection they have to him, says one of his members, is that "he is too big a preacher for the field."

Bro. Kesler is snugly domiciled at Red Springs, just between his other two churches, Spring Hill and Lumber Bridge. He has a very snug and promising field, and Kesler is just the man to wake it up. Red Springs and Lumber Bridge are in the Robeson Association, so that we can only claim half interest in Kesler, but we will be extremely reluctant to give a "quit-claim" to a half interest.

Bro. Martin's folks at Morven have shown their appreciation of their pastor by building him a nice house in their thriving little town. As to whether he has moved into it yet or not, I don't know.

Bro. Boyd was in quite feeble health the last account I had of him. His many friends pray that he may be speedily and permanently restored to health.

The other pastors are doing their work so quietly that I rarely hear from them.

The irrepressible Tom Wright is missionary and colporter for the Association at large. He travels back and forth across the Pee Dee river, preaching sermons, scattering books, and teaching "missions" wherever he goes.

We closed a meeting here last Sunday. The snow came right in the midst of the meeting, and made it necessary to suspend services for several days. Before we were interrupted by the bad weather, considerable interest was developed; but the suspension caused an abatement of interest which was not fully regained. The congregations were large and attentive, and we trust the seeds sown will yet produce fruit. We had no help except a sermon or two preached by the pastors of each of the other churches. As a fitting finale to the meeting, we took a collection for State Missions, and without resorting to any high pressure, raised fifty dollars. According to ability, I do not think a more liberal church can be found in the State. They always cheerfully respond to any call made.

It is very gratifying to me to know that, in the history of the church, not one cent has ever been raised by any questionable means, such as oyster suppers, dime parties, and such like. So may it ever be.

Our dear Bro. Harrison, though unable to leave his room, is as much interested in the Master's work as those who are actively engaged in it. It is refreshing to drop in and spend an evening with him, and see how bright and cheerful he is amid his sore affliction.

Rockingham, March 5, 1894.

The Little Banner Church Again to the Front.

Last year the little Baptist church at Pittsboro made an advance of fifty per cent. on pastor's salary, and increased its contributions to other objects to such an extent that it led all the other churches of the Sandy Creek Association in beneficence. When the Association met in October, the delegates pledged to raise as much during the present Associational year as they did last year, although the financial condition of the country was growing rapidly worse. Although the year has but half gone, the Woman's Missionary Society has more than redeemed the pledges to Home and Foreign Missions; the church has quadrupled its pledge to State Missions; the pastor and sexton have both been paid up to date; the incidental expenses have been paid to date; and the church has in six months raised more money for all objects than it did during the whole twelve months of the previous year, when it led all the other churches of the Association.

This little church numbers less than fifty members, and ten of these were added by baptism during the year 1893. Every member of the church is accounted for, and every member required to be a doer of the word and not a hearer only. Some few of the members have moved away, but they are diligently looked after until they are granted letters to unite with other Baptist churches and the church is informed that the letters have been deposited. More than two-thirds of the members, including the Sunday-school superintendent and all of the ordained deacons, live in the country.

Now, what this church is doing, any village or country church can do, if there exists in it the same sort of brotherly love, unity of effort, systematic way of attending to its finances and firm conviction that churches are organized for the purpose of giving the gospel to every creature.

This church does its business through committees of one.—Each committee of one is authorized to select two men to help him if he wants help or advice, but he himself is held accountable to the church for the work entrusted to him.

The clerk of the church, Bro. Hunter, who is a railroad agent, having been transferred last week from Pittsboro to Aberdeen, has been deputed a committee to organize a branch Sunday-school at that place, although it is in Moore county about forty miles off. We hope that the scattered Baptists at Aberdeen will rally around him and help him to build up a good Sunday-school at that place.

Dr. Blackwell in Portsmouth, Va.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Dr. Calvin S. Blackwell of Elizabeth City, N. C., has been preaching for two weeks in the Court Street Baptist church, Portsmouth, Va.

I do not remember the preaching of any man that has done me more good, intellectually and spiritually, than that of Dr. Blackwell. He is a fine speaker. His illustrations are beautiful and striking. His methods of sermonizing are original, and he presents the gospel in a clear and impressive manner. Those who were wise enough to hear him were greatly edified. He spent the time in my house, except when he was with his wife's family in Norfolk, and he delighted all the members of our household by his polished bearing and genial conversation. The meeting was not very productive of the conversion of sinners. I have long been impressed with the idea that God has retained in his own hands the conversion of human souls, and the longer I live, and the more I preach, and the more I hear preaching, the more I am impressed with this solemn truth: we may work and pray, but God gives the increase—God saves the soul.

Affectionately, A. E. OWEN.

The Blue and the Gray has reduced its price to 10 cts. per copy, $1.00 per year. "Atlanta, a City of the New South," "Recollections of an Army Surgeon" are the features of the March issue, in addition to several good articles and stories.

From Chefoo, China.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—May I tell you of a visit to Litz-Yuan, a village about two miles west or southwest from Pingtu City? A woman from that village, a Mrs. Wang, who is interested in the "good doctrine," came in to see me about two weeks ago and invited me to visit her home. She said she would let me hear from her again as soon as her daughter came home. They sent a wheelbarrow in for us on Friday, Dec. 29th, but I could not arrange matters so as to get off that day. However, on Saturday, Dec. 30th, Mrs. Crawford and I hired a cart (a closed cart drawn by two white mules). I crawled in first: it is literally a crawling process when one, fettered with Chinese winter garments, attempts to get into a covered Chinese cart. I sat down on my feet in the bottom of the cart with a pet (bag) or Chinese quilt under me. Mrs. Crawford sat in the front part of the cart on a package of Chinese garments which she took as a provision against a change of weather. Off we started, the carter walking by the fine large mules and directing their movements by word instead of by rein. He carried a very long lash or whip in his hand, but he seldom used it on his mules, they being obedient to his voice. Well, we moved slowly, but we got there after a while.

We were met almost as soon as we entered the village by an old gentleman who led the animals to the door of the Wangs. The mother, daughter and others were there with smiling faces to meet us. They conducted us into an inner room and invited us to Shang k'ang ba—"Get upon the brick bed." We got up. Mrs. Crawford sat on a bundle of bedding, while I p'an tsi (p'an tay), or sat on my feet. (I can't manage to p'an tsi exactly as the Chinese women do, however).

In a short while other women came in, and Mrs. Crawford was soon telling them the "good news." At first they thought they could not understand her words, because they had not seen her before, and her dialect (the Tung Chow) is somewhat different from this, but after a while they found out they did understand, and some gave very earnest attention to her words. They said they had never seen anybody who knew so much "good doctrine." There are two or three families in that village who meet every Sunday for worship. Some of them are earnestly seeking the "right way." May God make us his instruments in leading them. It did my heart good to hear Mrs. Wang and one Mrs. Yang tell of their love and trust in the Saviour. Mrs. Wang's daughter, too, was a very eager listener. Many others there were who heard, some of them with gladness, I believe. They wanted us to stay with them, they said, and spend the Sunday, but we could not at this time very well stay. The village is near, and we may go often. Some of our missionary brethren will probably go out to see them next Sunday.

Formerly, several men would come every Sunday from Litz-Yuan to worship in the west suburb of Pingtu City. At that time only native men were present at those meetings. (It was before brother and sister League came to the work here). The women met in my home on Sundays. The rooms in which the men met belonged to the compound, at first rented by Miss Moon and afterwards rented by myself as a working place on great temple days when so many country women come into the city to sacrifice or burn to their idols. Since that time I have so arranged my home as to have my work-room connected with my other rooms, though it can be entirely shut off from the foreign parts on public days. After thus arranging my home, I gave up the small compound to which I have referred. It seemed that those men who had been allowed to meet in the rooms which lay against the street, had gotten the idea that the foreigner ought to furnish a chapel for them. So when Bro. League came and rented a home, they came immediately to know what part of it was to be used as a chapel. Bro. League told them he did not mean to have any chapel of his own, that sometimes he would go to their homes to teach them, either on Sundays or work-days, or at night, whenever they would be willing to hear, and that sometimes they would meet him in his guest-room and worship God—that those who worship God in spirit and in truth could worship him anywhere. Furthermore, if they left their homes and came to the missionary every Sunday, there would be no one to lead those of their villages who desired to be instructed but could not come to the city; for instance, the women of their families. They did not like this idea at first, but they are following this plan now both at Saling and Litz-Yuan with good results.—(Written Jan. 8, 1894).

Jan. 6th—Yesterday, Mrs. Crawford and I went to a village seven miles south of the city. This village is called Tsai-'Tsen. It is the home of a man who sells milk in the city and who has been attending services held with the Chinese here. He told Mrs. Crawford that there were women in his village who desired to hear the gospel. Mrs. Crawford and I decided that we would go and see them. The milk-man went before us to let his friends know. They gave us a warm welcome and put us on a warm k'ang, but this time I did not p'an tsi, for we had taken small chairs with us. The room in which we were seated was packed with women and children in a very short while, and Mrs. Crawford was telling them the object of our visit. As soon as those who came in first had seen and heard, the milk-man (at whose house we were) came and drew them out by force, if they would not go willingly, in order that others might get in and hear. The room was emptied and refilled in this way several times during our stay, and a good many heard something of the "right way." They urged us to come again in the first month of their New Year. Some women came in just as we were leaving and seemed greatly disappointed because they had not heard. Mrs. Crawford had gone into the adjoining room, and I was just coming down from the k'ang. A bright young woman said to me in a pleading tone, "Let me feel your hand." I took off my glove and gave her my hand, and her hand trembled in mine as she said, "What will count?" At first I did not understand her meaning. Again she said, "Will a pure heart count?" Her real meaning was, "What must I do to be saved?" The time was short. I tried to tell her who is able to save. May she and many others whom we saw yesterday be taught of him. And may he prepare us to do a work for him in that village whose people had not seen a missionary among them before yesterday. Your friend and sister,

FANNIE S. KNIGHT.

P. O., Chefoo, North China.

From Bro. Oliver in Wilmington.

Dear Recorder:—Perhaps a line or so from this part of the vineyard will be acceptable.

In Wilmington, Baptist affairs move but slowly, yet we are grateful that there is some onward motion, and there appear hopeful indications of more rapid progress in the near future.

The First church naturally is foremost in my thoughts, and of it I shall first give account. We have had a protracted season of refreshing—not by ingathering, but by purging and pruning, so that many dead and useless branches have fallen, and the effect is visible in greater interest and increased effort.

Dark financial clouds have lowered about us for the last year, and these added to our troubles of other sorts, made the prospect rather gloomy; but there are rifts through which cheering gleams of light have come to us, and we are on the up-grade.

Within the last month we have had more than twenty additions, half of them by baptism, and there are more to follow.

The mission at Fifth and Wooster Streets has grown encouragingly and we shall soon have a branch there. Here is where most of our new members have been received. Capt. Dunlap, who calls himself the "Sailor Evangelist," held a number of services at this point, and his efforts were blessed in a remarkable degree. He is a curiosity. I can't quite place him. A very ignorant man, he is yet a wonderful power and gets hold of the crowds who go to hear him. He seems to me a good man, making many blunders, and I would not do him any injustice; but I do recommend that brethren handle him with great prudence.

Work has been resumed on our lecture-room, and we hope soon to have proper quarters for our growing Sunday-school.

Brooklyn church with her accustomed energy has selected a man to succeed Brother Jenkins, but as yet his decision is not known.

Rev. J. T. Jenkins, who has been with these brethren for two years, feels it his duty to devote himself fully to evangelistic work, upon which he will enter next month. He goes forth as a Baptist, and I am sure he will steadfastly contend for the whole counsel of God.

It seems that here is a possible beginning of the solution of the question of State evangelists, and that is a question which will not down until it has been squarely met upon its merits.

Brother Jenkins' past successful experience is a basis for hopeful expectation, and already he is making engagements far ahead. It is probable that he will associate some helpers with him in his new work, but of that I cannot positively declare.

Bro. J. C. Crumpler has resigned his churches in Pender county, and is now in Florida where he expects to locate. The "only Bob Peele" has also given up some of the mission points which he served. His movements for the future are not yet fully determined.

I desire to endorse your position as to the "Basis of Union between Disciples and Baptists," and only to differ by saying you didn't go quite far enough. Will you not give us a critical analysis of it and point out wherein it must prove an unsatisfactory compromise? Such an union is most desirable, provided it can be effected in a manner that will preclude endless strife as to what is our faith.

Fraternally, WILL. B. OLIVER.

Wilmington, N. C.

Our Seminary Letter.

Dear Recorder:—One of the most interesting features in connection with our Seminary is the regular monthly missionary meeting. In some respects, the one held to-day is the best we have attended in two years. In order that we might have a report from the great missionary meeting just held at Detroit, Mich., our meeting was postponed from the 1st till the 6th of March.

Dr. Dargan and four of the students returned from Detroit, overflowing with missionary zeal, and set our meeting to-day on fire with their stirring speeches. The spirituality of the meeting was specially brought out, and the personality of the Holy Spirit emphasized. But the address of Rev. R. J. Willingham was the main feature of our meeting to-day. He spoke principally of the work at home, and the relations of a missionary pastor at home to the missionary on the foreign field. The importance of a forward movement among the pastors and churches was specially emphasized. The pastor at home is a missionary as well as the missionary in China.

Many churches, if rightly developed by the pastors, would bring forth abundant fruit. If Christians were better informed about our mission fields, they would give far more liberally than they do.

This meeting will be long remembered by many of us, and we hope much good will come from it in the years to come.

Four of our brethren—Chambers of Maryland, Chadwick of Texas, Lawton of South Carolina, and James of Virginia—have been lately appointed by the Foreign Mission Board to be missionaries to China. They will finish their studies this spring, and take up their work in China next fall.

Dr. W. H. Whitsitt will lecture in Norton Hall to-morrow evening on "Robert Burns." We all look forward with joy to the lecture to be delivered by Dr. Henson of Chicago in Broadway Baptist church. Our Brother B. W. Spilman of North Carolina will lecture in a few days at Bardstown, Ky. He has delivered his lecture, "Laugh and Grow Fat," at many places in Kentucky, and he meets with much success. It is one of the most entertaining lectures we have ever heard.

We are all delighted that Dr. Sampey, who has been sick for several weeks, is able to meet his classes again.

J. S. CONFRENCE.

S. B. T. Sem., Louisville, Ky., March 6, 1894.

The South Fork Sunday-school Association.

Dear Recorder:—Please allow me space to say a few things about the above mentioned meeting.

TIME OF MEETING.

Some of the brethren are right forgetful sometimes. I would here call to their remembrance the change that was made as to the time of meeting. The body meets in April instead of July as last year. This change was made to benefit the pastors. We hope they will take advantage of this change and attend. Remember the time is Friday before the fifth Sunday in April.

PLACE OF MEETING.

The committee selected Providence 1st as the place. This church is located in Catawba county about two miles from the town of Catawba. Those coming by rail will get off at Catawba. None need complain as to the place of meeting as the committee did the best it could.

TO PASTORS,

The success of this meeting depends, in a great measure, upon the pastors of the Association. Will you not put forth every effort to make the meeting a successful one? You can do much to advance the cause in this way. See to it that your churches send full delegations. Be sure that your delegates have some interest in the Sunday-school work. Try and see how much you can contribute to the success of the meeting.

TO SUPERINTENDENTS AND TEACHERS.

Upon you rests a responsibility. Did you ever realize that you were engaged in a great work? You should have been conscious of it before accepting the work. You can do a great deal for the Master by working in the Sunday-school. Let us, then, combine our efforts and work to the end that we may have a pleasant and profitable meeting.

REPORTS.

In order that the Secretary may keep a statistical record, it is necessary that each Sunday-school make a report to the Association. Let each school make a report as follows: (1) Name of Sunday-school; (2) Name of superintendent; (3) Number of officers and teachers; (4) Number of pupils enrolled; (5) Number of church-members in the Sunday-school; (6) Number of church-members out of Sunday-school; (7) Average attendance; (8) Amount of collections and how applied.

Pastors and superintendents will please see that their schools make reports according to the above. May the blessings of God rest upon the work.

Sincerely, A. W. SEIZER, Sec'y.

Literary.

The March St. Nicholas contains one of the most instructive articles we have seen, "A Lesson in Electricity." The position of the magazine, the first of its class, is well sustained throughout the number.

The Homiletic Review for March is of exceptional strength and interest. Opening the Review Section is a paper by Dr. Newman Smyth on "Labor Problems for Pulpit Discussion," in which the writer points out certain responsibilities and restrictions pertaining to the pulpit discussion of labor problems. "The Decline of the Prayer-meeting" is the theme of a contribution by Dr. Edward Judson. Rev. G. B. F. Hallock writes upon the question of "Pastor's Assistant or Associate," presenting the view that the establishment of such a relation is apt to be fraught with benefit to pastor and church as well as to the associate.

The Ladies' Home Journal is worthy of every woman's support. It will add to the ease and grace of every home. Full of wholesome advice and gentle counsel, in addition to excellent stories and articles, it is always good. The March number is no exception. A daughter of Hawthorne writes of her father's methods, Dr. Lyman Abbott, of "The Church and the Choir," Mrs. Burton Harrison defines the relation between the mother and sixteen-year old daughter, and Stockton and Julia Magruder contribute instalments of fiction. Mr. Howells writes again of "My Library Passions."

The Treasury of Religious Thought for March makes its appearance ahead of its usual time and with a table of contents excellent in every particular. Prof. Howe's portrait forms the frontispiece, and his instructive, noble sermon is the initial article of the number. A view of Cobb Divinity School, Lewiston, Me., is also given, and an appreciative biographical sketch of Prof. Howe. The second article is a characteristic sermon by Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst on "Samaritanism a Part of the Universal Creed." Other full sermons are by Revs. W. W. Taylor, A. B. Vaughan and J. Rabinowitz, with a scholarly lecture on the Miracles of the Gospels by Prof. Leitch, and an Address to Young Men by President Stryker of Hamilton College. The Critical Aspects of Foreign Missions is discussed by Prof. Witherspoon, and Dr. Guyler describes Three of the Famous Hymn Writers he has known.

"Paragraphs"

BY M. P. M.

"THE HOLY ARMOR."

Some one was kind enough to send me a copy of Bro. J. H. Foote's review of "The Methodist Armor," by Dr. H. T. Hudson. It looks as though he had taken a "crowbar to it" rather than "a Foote." Any way it is a very hol(e)y armor—not a place in it where our brother has not "stuck his Foote," and so we have a very dilapidated armor for our Methodist brethren. It was very kind in the brother to send me a copy of the review; it is an expression of sympathy which I very much appreciate. I had been "spoiling for an encounter" with my little Bro. Groome of the Western Carolina Advocate, but could not bring on "an engagement," because the editor was like the Irishman at the battle of Bull Run when reproached for running, said, "Faith, and I had rather be disgraced for a half an hour than to be a corpse the rest of me natural life." By the way, I see that he has consolidated with the Raleigh Christian Advocate like "Jonah and the whale" consolidated. I wonder if he has "got a whale" now that he can trust to fight his battles when his indiscretion gets him into trouble. I hope he has. Our Bro. Foote has done the cause of truth a good service in thus exposing the fallacies and weakness of the "Methodist Armor," and I hope it will have a wide circulation and reading: It is worthy of it. I return my thanks for this balm for my "heated feelings."

"THE ROCK ON WHICH IT WAS FOUNDED."

In the review above referred to, the author, writing on the expression "Upon this rock I will build my church," says that the "rock was Peter's faith and the confession of it," and that upon this Christ built his church. I think that the foundation is too small and narrow for such a noble structure as the church of Jesus Christ. A careful examination of all the words of our Lord will reveal a different foundation—the recognition of Christ's position, character and work. No church can be established as a church except it be established upon this foundation. It will be remembered that Peter said as spokesman for them all "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Of course, Peter had faith, exercised long before to the saving of his soul, and he here made confession, but it was his recognition of Christ's position, character and work that brought forth the statement of our Lord. This underlying principle differentiates Baptists from all other peoples and gives us the right to claim to be the only churches of Christ in the world. Christ as Prophet (or teacher), Priest and King is the threefold character in which he stands in his relation to men, and only those who recognize him in this threefold character can be organized into churches of Christ. This "recognition" is the impregnable and perpetual rock on which the churches are to be founded until our Lord shall come again.

"SOME NEWS ITEMS."

The church here has called Bro. D. M. Austin of Charlotte, and it is understood that he will preach for them, although he has not formally accepted the call. The people here are very much pleased with him and hope for a prosperous union. The church is a very faithful one, and have paid the retiring pastor every cent they promised and more. I have never preached to a people more responsive and generous than these.

I will move next week to Gastonia where I will make home in the future. My correspondents will please take notice.

Last week I spent with the saints at Shady Grove in Iredell county. The name suggests very cool and refreshing rest, but we did not need the "shade" so much as the sunshine, for the roads were very muddy. I went to preach a series of "doctrinal sermons" for Pastor A. W. Setzer, who serves so acceptably the people. It was a great pleasure to preach the old doctrines to these people who came through rain and mud. Bro. Setzer is just starting in the ministry and is a young man of fine promise. He will enter Wake Forest this year and take a course there and subsequently at the Seminary.

Pastor J. A. Hoyle, who is one of the "big preachers" of this part of the moral vineyard, has been "pulled down" very much by that dread epidemic, the grippe. He has not been able to report for duty for many weeks.

Pastor Jones at Gastonia "throws a brand" into the camps of the Pedoes ever now and then, and so they are "looking a leettle out" all the time expecting to hear "something drop."

What I Learn from the Syrophœnician Woman.

(Matthew 15: 21—28.)

A PRAYER-MEETING TALK.

Christ was weary. As a few weeks ago, when Dr. Montgomery, the man who baptised Dies, was on his death-bed, a heart-broken member of his church, wringing the dying preacher's hand in farewell, said, "Oh Doctor! We have let you work too hard." So now on this occasion the Saviour is suffering the weakness of overtaxed strength, and is greatly in need of physical rest. The pressure upon him has been great during the past days of his ministry in Galilee. The crowds have thronged him, and the demands upon his heart and hand have been incessant. Indeed from the beginning, he has steadily grown in popularity. But especially now it is immense among the common people. For just a day or two before, in the sight of a vast concourse, he has performed a most wonderful miracle. He fed five thousand people. They have not forgotten it. So from all quarters, they have precipitated themselves upon him—the sick, the lame, the possessed, and the greedy.

Christ's ministry was a "protracted meeting" all the time. I am sure that if a minute account of his labors at that time had been preserved for us, there would be found an example and zeal in "the Father's business" which would put to shame some of the brethren who, in private and through our papers, complain so much of hardship and over-work, and some of us here who puff and blow over a little Christian service.

But even Christ was not proof against everything. He was not physically a God; and being a man, he must suffer the penalty of over exertion. He needs rest. Hence, we see him departing from his own coasts in search for some retired spot where he may not hear the unending cry of the distressed, the moans of the sick, and escape the flocking of the eager multitude, and where he may give over-spent nature time to recuperate.

He goes across to Canaan, a Gentile province. Here it might have been supposed no reports of him and his power had penetrated. Mark tells us very emphatically of his desire for privacy. "He entered into an house, and would have no man know it." But alas for his rest! His fame has preceded him, and in Canaan, heathen territory tho' it was, there is a beautiful faith, a sorrowing home's distress and an importunate prayer awaiting only his appearance to be thrown upon his already o'erfraught heart. It is the Syrophœnician woman. The incident which followed her approach to the Saviour has become one of the famous scenes in the life of Christ, and as related by Matthew, is so dramatic in its intensity, so pathetic in pitiful entreaty, and withal so illumined by a bright and quick intelligence that this Canaanitish stranger has become a sweet sister to all the thousands who since then have eaten of the crumbs which fell from the Master's table.

And, brethren, in this which I have read to you, and with which you were before so well acquainted, there are two lessons which in learning I have felt blessed myself, and which I ask you to hear, that you also may be strengthened, instructed and encouraged:

1. I learn the blessedness of prayer. The woman is in great need. Her daughter is vexed—not slightly, but grievously vexed. Her home has lost all its brightness. All the light of her daughter's life upon her own is gone. Gloom on the threshold, gloom in the sick-room! What shall she do? 'Till now this question ringing in her brain has brought nothing save an echo of despair. But now in some way she has heard of this Christ, this healer who has been doing so many merciful and wonderful things on the other shore, and she hears, too, that he is at last come to Canaan. Can we believe that she delayed her going to him? And when she has reached him, what then? What can she do? Only this: she can pray, and she does pray. She pours her soul out. "O Lord, thou son of David, have mercy on me." It may have been a weak voice. It may have been choked with tears, and husky and full of faltering anxiety. But it was loud enough. It reached the Divine ear, and brought all of God's power to her side.

Oh, the blessedness of prayer! Brethren, if God is power, this is the lever which moves the power. If God is love, this is the gate which opens it to us. If God is wisdom, it is the key that unlocks it to us. If outside of us and beyond the reaching grasp of these human hands, there are infinite treasures of blessing and good and help, it is by prayer, blessed prayer, they become ours.

It is our weapon. It did not fail Elijah. It will not fail us. Let us grip it fast. It is trusty. Only with it can the throne be stormed, and he that sitteth upon the throne be moved. The onslaught that conquers God is the onslaught of prayer. Poor soldiers are we that we use it so seldom victoriously.

Rob us of prayer, and our God is blotted out. He would become but an unapproachable Moloch, worse than the Baal of the ancient idolaters. And that we rob ourselves of it, accounts for the spiritual paralytics there are in all our churches. Without prayer there is no faith, no hope. We are but slaves of inexorable chance in chains of fate which we cannot break, nor hope to have broken—pitiable captives in the dungeon of a law-racked world. But with prayer we have wings to soar into freedom on and tongues of liberty. The "right of petition" was once a much struggled for principle by the subjects of kings and rulers, and when at last it was won, there was great rejoicing. We are free to go to our King; free to petition for his favor and the bounty of his hand.

We are clothed in the liberty of prayer. Oh, let us use this liberty as this Gentile mother. Your woes, your weakness, your sins, your wants, your perplexity, the sickness in your home, the waywardness of your sons, the wilfulness of your daughters—take them to the Lord, the son of David. He will have mercy on thee and hear thy cry. Take your burden to the Lord in prayer. It is your right to do that. It is an abuse of your liberty as a son of God if you do not do that.

And remember that you have the same warrant for believing that your prayer will be heard that you have for praying at all. If you do not believe in God's readiness to hear and answer, why pray at all? Says Christ, "Therefore, I say unto you, what things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them."

2. I learn how to pray. "Lord have mercy on me. My daughter is grievously vexed," this mother prayed. "On me—my daughter." With what loving bonds do you notice, does she bind her "me" to "my daughter." "Not me alone," we seem to hear her heart saying, but "on me in behalf of my daughter." What is this, if not the truest prayer? The bearing heavenward of two interlocked and inseparable needs on the pinions of one petition; the linking of one's desire to another's distress—one's heart want to another's weakness.

She is married in love and interest to her daughter, and the offspring's sorrow is a common sorrow with the mother. Can we imagine at the feet of the merciful God the incoming of a more welcome prayer than the one that carries a double load? Ah! it seems to me that the Spirit which maketh intercession for us can lead such a prayer as this up to God the Father, not "with groaning which cannot be uttered," but with smile and gladness that some one at last knows how to pray as he ought. Christ knew the power and acceptance of such a prayer. For on the cross in the hour of his great pain, and amid the deepening shadows of a gloom which for a moment left his own heart, it seemed to him, desolate and forsaken, he threw his clinging arm about the cruel, hooting mob for which he was dying, and with his own appealing cry unto God, carried it up to a throne of mercy, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Brethren, are we not sometimes like a nest of young birds each mouth gaping wide for fear it will not get its share of the morsel which the mother-bird holds aloft? When we go into our closets, do we not too much shut "me" up to pray for "me," and shut out a son unconverted, a daughter unsaved, and friends "grievously vexed"? And oftener than that do we sometimes taint our prayers with a family selfishness as did the man who prayed, "O Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, we four and no more." Or, are we like a jar of Egyptian asps in which each strives to get its head above the other, praying for a prosperity superior to another's?

Above everything else the man who talks to God ought to know that he looks behind, every prayer for the motive which inspires it, and that the worth or the worthlessness of a request made to him is measured by its animus. You do but insult him to pray in an unworthy spirit. There are mountain piles of such petitions in heaven to day, if they ever reach so far, trampled upon by indignant angels. God help us to pray as we ought and to learn how to pray from the sweet-spirited prayer of this woman who knelt at Christ's feet in Canaan.

Beecham's Pills sell well because they cure.

A man went into a drug store and asked for something to cure the headache. The druggist held a bottle of hartshorn to his nose, and he was nearly overpowered by its pungency. As soon as he recovered, he began to rail at the druggist. "But didn't it help your headache?" asked the druggist. "Help my headache!" gasped the man. "I haven't any headache. It's my wife that has the headache."—Selected.
